Now the union between men is either formal or spiritual, outward or inward, real or apparent. We not seldom find men in the same family, church or political party who at heart are far apart as the poles. There is, if you please, a mechanical mixture but not real union. Hence when the special circumstances which have brought them together are changed, they follow their hearts and are separated from one another. So also there is a heart union that overcomes differences of race, color, party, condition in life, and all those other things which so often place between men impassible barriers. The outward union is a help to the spiritual, and and the spiritual leads to the outward. First or last a man follows his heart. It is needless to say that the unity for which Christ prayed is that of the heart. He takes no interest whatever in vast crowds drawn together from mere political or social considerations, but when men can be one in him, and one as Christ and the Father are one, then there is a unity over which angels are glad and men astonished.

THIS UNION DOES NOT EXIST.

It may not be a popular thing to say, but it is none the less true, that this prayer is still unanswered. We have union Sabbath schools and union meetings for the promotion of various reforms, but the same persons who attend these union meetings and profess to be greatly delighted at the obliteration of denominational lines in a special work, will stand by the sectarian divisions which have rent the body of Christ into more pieces than the Roman soldiery made of his garments and will "fight till the last armed foe expires" for the every iota in the denominational shibboleth.

We have so many different organizations each calling itself The —— church, that no man in the United States would think of being able to name them. Each of these organizations contains good men; each contains defective men; each is trying to teach men that Christ is the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world, and all ought to be one in Christ. It is as contrary to the Word of God to name the body of our Lord from some man or an accident of church polity as it was for the Corinthians to say; one I am of Paul; another, I am of Apollos, and another, I am of Cephas. Sectarian designations were as good then as they are now, but they are always and everywhere an insult and an offense to the Head of the church. The bride, even among men, takes the name of the husband, but when a church is married to the Saviour some man comes along and salutes her as Mrs. Congregationalist, Baptist, Presbyterian, or, as the case may be. Thus is God robbed of the glory due unto his name.

The causes of division are, generally speaking government, doctrines and rites. So far as views of these different matters are held which are inconsistent with Christian character of course Christians are not permitted to tolerate or uphold them. That is, if a body calling itself a church hold that there is no power of excluding the openly bad from its communion, or that there is no God, or that indecent and foolish rites like those of the Masonic lodge or Mormon church should be practiced, in such a case the true Christian is to come out from it and be separate.

But the differences between the denominations of the present day are not of this description. Those organizations which differ most widely send delegates to each others representative bodies to assure one another of confidence and mutual interest. Now all divisions among persons who are and who believe each other to be real followers of the Lord Jesus Christ are inventions of the adversary who intends to ruin in this way an opposition which he is certainly unable to meet. They come not down from above but are earthly, sensual and devilish.

THESE DIVISIONS ARE A BURDEN.

It needs no argument to prove the above proposition, yet there is great need of illustration to impress upon our minds the great need of prayer and labor for the removal of this heavy, unchristian yoke. The work of the church is local, home mission and foreign. If all those who are working for Messiah's kingdom were one as Christ is one with the Father, there would be needed in each town a meeting house or a number of meeting houses sufficient to accommodate the people, and in each town, State and country two mission societies, one for home and one for foreign work. After these agencies were provided the rest of the money which Christians have to give away could be used in directly preaching the Gospel by missionary or printed page.

Instead of this we find from four to five poor feeble little churches struggling along, trying to live, taxing those who sustain it heavily, changing pastors frequently, and all this for what? To preach that man is lost and that there is One come to save? Not at all. If this were the end there would have been only one church. The object is to promote some form of church government, or some particular shade of doctrine or the belief in some special mode of baptism. And this, dear brethren, while men all over the world are dying for the bread of life, while the hungry are not fed, the naked not clothed, and the poor lett to perish.

Consider our own village. We have here nine church organizations and about twelve or fourteen hundred innabitants. If each church puts up a building worth three thousand dollars, we spend twenty-seven thousand dollars for meeting houses. But ten thousand dollars would build two churches which, well located, would accommodate all the citizens; thus we spend ten thousand dollars for Christ and seventeen thousand for sect at the start. Then if these nine churches pay their ministers five hundred each, four thousand five hundred dollars goes out for preaching. Two ministers at a thousand dollars each could do the work as well and better. It is needless to continue the story. You can tell as well as I. Take out your pencils and see how how God's money is being thrown away. Then let us join our Saviour in the prayer that his people may be one and these stumbling-blocks be taken out of the way.

WHAT RESULTS FROM THIS.

In the first place churches find it impossible to pay, but they want able ministers, so they keep promising to pay and neglecting to do it. Perjuring themselves and often crippling or killing ministers who have relied on their false promises.

In the next place as a shift and device to avoid this perjury they are oftentimes driven into foolish and sinful methods of getting money. There are a number of ladies in almost every congregation who might be properly designated as the festival brigade. It is their duty, year in and year out to aid in keeping up an organization, for whose existence there is no possible excuse, by suppers and sales of various sorts. Excellent persons they frequently are, but their time and energies are so absorbed in this work that they are almost useless, for prayer meetings or Christian work of any description. They must see to getting dimes, quarters and half dollars to sustain "our church" even if the world goes to hell while they are doing it.

Still another of the beauties of this struggle for an existence is the reception of men into the church who are unconverted. One article in the creed of such churches gets to be: "We believe that ability to pay well, is evidence enough that a man ought to belong to our church." Not long since the pastor of a church, at a public service, stated that the church would never go down while it had such friends as certain gentlemen whom he named, none of whom were members of the church, and at least one of whom, had never made a profession of religion. Along with this willingness to receive all who pay, of course comes a tacit agreement to furnish an article in the way of sermons that, if it does not please, will not condemn them. Men of ordinary business sense are disgusted with such poorly disguised attempts at pocket picking and the result is that able men of the world are fast becoming a non-church going class.

And lastly we find a few good and true men in every church who would like to strike hard for the truth, hampered and hindered by the timid and fearful ones who are afraid that the thing which they know ought to be done, will injure our church.

This is true of small churches as well as large ones, and of reforming bodies together with those that openly go with the world.

WHAT ARE THE EXCUSES.

Of course there are excuses enough. Who ever heard a mean thing ask twice for an apologist? Slavery, tobacco, whisky, have had their good men to prove them all right, of course sectarianism will not lack its advocates.

Perhaps the first one is the fact that men differ. This is an unquestioned truth, but it it proves anything it proves altogether too much, for there are no two men who think precisely alike, and if men must agree in every particular before they can walk together as Christian brethren, there will be no churches of any sort. Conduct this principle to its logical conclusion, and you come out where the church did in Scotland. It was torn and troubled and expelled member after member until there were only three left, and they three had a meeting and two turned out one. Next morning a neighbor walking down the street said to an old lady, the only one now left in the church, "Well, auntie, I suppose that you and John are the only Christians there are in town?" The good woman solemnly shook her head and replied: "I'm na sae sure about John." If this reason for sectarianism is worth anything it is good for the old lady, and her stopping place is the only one there is.

But we sometimes hear it asserted that the individual churches are much purer than they would be but for these divisions, because one watches the other. If this is true there is no doubt but that it should be confessed, but it is a most humiliating confession to make. If it be true that the churches are actuated not by love of God but by fear of man, let us own it, repent of it, and put it away. We should be able to say the love of Christ constraineth us. If we cannot now let us speedily be able to do so.

But this statement is untrue. Churches are not purified by rivalry and sectarian zeal. They are corrupted morally and demoralized by that emulation which Paul puts down among the works of the flesh. The mountain brooks are clear because they are fed from springs way up where the snow lies until the flowers of spring time come out; and a man or a church receives real spiritual integrity, not from the watching of men but from the indwelling presence of God.

There are also some who tell us that this cutting up and labelling and parcelling out of Christ's body is all wrong, but that it can't be helped, and that it will only stir up bad blood to mention the matter. I do not know whether the last statement is true or not, but I am sure that if the thing is wrong it will be done away so surely as God does not abdicate the throne of the universe. We do not live in the right age to hear and heed such prophets of evil. We have seen with our own eyes our millions of slaves march through the Red Sea and cross the Jordan, and those who wish to tell us that there is some Jericho whose mighty walls and towers can resist the shout of God's host should wait at least till the rubbish of this one has been taken away, and the crash of its overthrow has died out of our ears. Christ prayed that his people might be one, therefore they will be one. These sectarian divisions are keeping his children apart from one another, lading them with heavy burdens, hindering their communion and usefulness, therefore they will be done away. On the blessed foundation some good but mistaken men have builded wood, hay and stubble; this shall be all burned up.

OBSTACLES TO UNION.

These are, first, existing sectarianism. Possession is nine points of the law and a large majority of Christians were born into churches that were designated just as Paul charged the Corinthians not to designate theirs. This is a heavy stumbling block which must be gotten out of the way and it is one which Christians don't like to take hold of. It is so much easier to reform others than ourselves; to preach to sinners than to get out Achan's silver, garments and gold. But the fact that the labor is a great one should inspire us to lay hold of it with zeal. Were it a contemptible labor we might leave it to the weak; but it interested the Son of God; he prayed for the unity of his people; let us join our labors and prayers with his.

Another great difficulty is the fact that there are so many great (?) men who now head the sects who could not be great men any longer if these were to be abolished. If this matter could be left to the common sense of those who foot the bills we could much sooner make an end. But it is so difficult for the man who lives by blowing steady and clear blasts on the denominational trumpet to realize that he is an obstacle in the way of all that is good. He says, Surely anything which enables me to be a great man must be a blessing to the world. And hence when a spasm of common sense comes over a number of starving churches and they propose to unite so as to divide their burdens and quadruple their strength some sectary, or bishop, or elder, or what-not will, as a rule, be on hand to persuade them that some terrible result would follow if they do the only thing which sensible Christians would think of doing under the circumstances.

Still another hindrance to the prayer of our Lord are those organizations that throw into places where there are already too many religious enterprises just money enough to start another. Thousands of dollars are every year collected from poor men under the pretence of building churches and supporting missionaries among the destitute which serves solely to start a perpetual sectarian strife. If the money were taken and thrown into the fire it would do far more good than expended as it is. Illustrations of this truth might be given almost without limit, but are needless.

WHAT IS OUR REMEDY?

First, last and all the time the study of God's word. If we know the truth, the truth will make us free, and, therefore are my people gone into captivity because they have no knowledge. The Bible teaches us both in its precepts and in its history that God's people are to be one. Not one in the sense that there are no individual peculiarities, but one in the sense that, notwithstanding these peculiarities the grace of Christ will so richly dwell in them that they shall be known only by his name and in his name go out to battle with the host of the Philistines.

Active work for the salvation of men is also a most admirable cure for egotism and the deification of sect. The rule is that those who save men with fear, pulling them out of the fire, are not worshippers at the shrine of a denominational Diana. They cannot be. To save men we must be near the heart of Jesus and his heart holds the world.

And now abideth faith, hope charity, but the greatest of these is charity. Let us pray God to give it us in large measure that we may count him our Father and all who serve our Lord, brethren beloved.

Reform News.

NEW ENGLAND.

THE WORK DONE SINCE NOVEMBER—MORE SELF-DENIAL NEEDED.

WILLIMANTIC, Conn., May 3, '79.

DEAR BRO. KELLOGG:—I have often thought of late of giving (by your indulgence) the readers of the Cynosure an account of the reform work in New England or more especially in Connecticut. I have as often thought that Bro. D. J. Ellsworth should be the correspondent for the Cynosure from Connecticut for two reasons, one of which is, he is secretary of the Connecticut Christian Association; and the other is—he has such a good faculty of putting his thoughts on paper in such a manner as to impress the minds of those who see them.

But I ought not to censure Bro. Ellsworth if he does not do what may seem to me to be his duty, as I am only a fellow servant with him to the same good Master.

The friends of our reform in Connecticut have not acccomplished as much as is desired, still they have not been wholly inactive. At the National meeting in Worcester, Massachusetts, last November, the New England delegates held consultation meetings to devise ways and means for bringing this reform more thoroughly before the people, which resulted in an arrangement with Rev. H. H. Hinman, the indefatigable worker in this reform, to labor among us.

Bro. Hinman commenced his labors in Stafford, Tolland county, and was in that vicinity several days doing some work over the line in Massachusetts. From Stafford he went into Hartford county and accomplished much good by hard labor. He also labored in Litchfield, New Haven, Middlesex, New London and Windham counties and testifies to the willingness of the people generally to receive the truth.

Bro. Hinman also did considerable in different towns in Massachusetts and Rhode Island, but failing in health it it became necessary that he have rest and it therefore seemed best that he should return home to Wheaton, Illinois, for the purpose with the expectation of returning about this time and commence anew in Vermont where the friends are awaiting him.

Brother Hinman has, by the blessing of God, accomplished an amount of good in Connecticut that will not be wholly known until the resurrection morning, and all for a very small amount of money, and I am very sorry to say that that small amount has not yet been fully met.

I would like to call the attention of the friends of the cause to that passage of Scripture found in Heb. 13:2—Please stop right here, dear reader, get your Bible and read the passage referred to, and then, if you please, finish reading what more I have to say.

Dear friends, brother Hinman has had the glorious privilege of visiting some towns in Connecticut where there were professed Anti-masons who appeared glad to have him labor among them and yet they allowed him to pay for his food and lodging while among them. Now while I am willing that Brother Hinman and all other laborers for Christ, shall receive their share of the glory resulting from their labors, I do feel that we Anti-masons who have taken the name of Christ, and are joint heirs with him to that heavenly inheritance, should also have a share in the glory attending this work to the extent at least of giving to God's embassadors food, shelter, and a place to lay the head at night after a day's weary toil for the Master.

Dear friends, ought we not with cheerfulness receive God's messengers around our family board? Please consider the precious thoughts dropping from their lips and finding lodgement in the minds of our children, that shall by the blessing of God be the means of bringing them into the kingdom; or, if already among the chosen ones, be influenced to take a more exalted stand for the truth. How blessed to entertain angels!

Let me say to the friends in the other States of New England, Do not fail to all you can to make Bro. Hinman's labors among you pleasant and remunerative to him as well as profitable to your communities for good. J. A. CONANT.

GOOD NEWS FROM "THE POCKET" OF INDIANA.

OAKLAND CITY, Ind., May 5, 1879.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—Dear brother in the cause of reform. The American Christian Association of Gibson county met last Saturday, and was entertained by Rev. Spencer of the U. P. church of Somerville. Mr. Spencer is a man of more than ordinary talent, and is doing a good work in the interest of the great reform. He proposes to preach the "whole counsel of God" to a benighted people and rest the consequences with Him who hath said, "Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them." Rev. Geo. Wilson of Evansville (Free Methodist) was also present on the above occasion, and showed himself to be a servant of the Master, and not afraid to speak against "the things that are done in a corner." The Free Methodists will hold their next quarterly meeting in Oakland City, beginning on Friday the 16th of May and continuing over Sabbath. The chairman (elder) will be present. Dr. S. L. Cook, State Agent and Lecturer will be with us on Saturday, the 31st of May, 3 o'clock P. M. He will visit Somerville and Ft. Branch before returning north. The doctor is represented as an able lecturer, and we hope the people will turn out and listen to the unfolding of the "mysteries." Yours respectfully. W. L. LEISTER.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

DEAR BRO. KELLOGG:—Leaving Chicago in the evening of April 19th I reached Toledo at about 2 A. M., and was obliged to stay four hours in a chilly depot and get such a breakfast as was sold by liquor-dealers. So far as I could learn there was no other place to procure food in the vicinity of the depot. Stopping at Wakeman, I called on Bro. Creegan, pastor of the Congregational church, who has been much prospered in his church work. He is a subscriber to the Cynosure and feels a warm interest in our reform, a truly good man and true, but who has perhaps fallen into the common mistake of supposing that revolutions can be made of rose-water.

At Berea I stopped with our excellent friends Mr. and Mrs. Smith, who are most untiring and unselfish in their labors. Their latch-string is always out when reformers call. I spoke in the Brick Hall on Saturday evening, the 3rd, to quite a good audience. A company of colored concert singers were present and entertained us at the opening and close with a genuine plantation song. The Congregational pastor was present and expressed to me his sympathy with our views and work, But the lodge rules in Berea, and the churches make no protest.

On Monday evening, May 5th, I spoke to a good audience in the U. P. church at Northfield. It was a great pleasure to know that I had the hearty sympathy of the pastor, Bro. Logan, and of nearly all the audience. A liberal collection gave emphasis to it.

On Tuesday evening I spoke in the Disciple church at Bedford. Here is where Rev. Mr. Brown made his renunciation of Masonry. It had a marked effect on honest minds, and quite a number of his church are earnest workers in this reform. Among them is R. J. Hatheway, who occasionally lectures ably and acceptably. Masonic persecution finally compelled Bro. Brown to leave and he is now laboring in Massalon. The attendance was not large, but respectable and attentive. The pastors of the Baptist and M. E. churches were present, the latter expressing his approval and the former his dissent. He is an Odd-fellow and "don't believe Masons ever took any such oaths."

To-day I take passage on board a steamer at Cleveland for Ogdensburg, N. Y., and hope to spend a few days in northern New York.

Yours for the Lord,

H. H. HINMAN.

ANTI SECRET MOVEMENT IN YOLO COUNTY, CALIFORNIA.

WOODLAND, Cal.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—About two years ago Rev. Henry Cogswell came to Woodland, Yolo county, and delivered three successive and well-directed lectures in the expose of Masonry, as his first effort in California; and I believe the first that was done under the auspices of the National Christian Association in the State. The Woodland lodge was well represented at every lecture. The speaker dealt plainly with the truth, but in such a manner as not to irritate to any distubance of note. The result has been fruitful. Since that time Rev. B. A. Hill has delivered several lectures on the same subject, and Rev. G. W. Townsend organized a Wesleyan Methodist church in the same county, which visibly disturbed some of the craft. Subsequently said church was transferred to the United Brethren in Christ; and that did not help the matter any—still a troubled sea.

The co-operating work of the N. C. A. and church of Christ resulted in the call of a convention to organize a society to be auxiliary to the N. C. A. opposed to organized secrecy, which met in Washington Hall, Woodland, Yolo county, California, December 12, 1878, elected officers and appointed a committee of three on constitution and by-laws to present at next meeting, which was held as per adjournment at Central View school house in Capay Valley, Yolo county, March 27, 1879, at 7:30 P. M.

Rev. D. Shuck, ex-bishop of the U. B. church accepted an invitation to address the convention, and occupied the evenings of first and second days with an elaborate, forcible and effective address on "The relation that Christians should sustain to secret, pledged or oath-bound societies." He discussed at length in seven propositions—too lengthy for publication in the columns of the Cynosure—a sketch of it could not do it justice. I will only give the first with a few remarks.

"Secrecy is not an element in the human mind." He stated in proof that man in his original state acted openly; never secretly; but as soon as sin entered he sought a secret place—secrecy to cover guilt. Also the conduct of innocent children—how frank, open, and free from concealment. Logical conclusion: If man had never known guilt by sin he would never have resorted to secrecy as a principle of action. He gave obligations of various secret orders, pointing out the favorable clauses as a wire to pull the snare over the intellectual, as the blindfold was over the natural vision. Concluding each proposition with force that gave conviction to the opponent, satisfaction to the co-worker and brought into harmony both the radical and conservative anti-secret element—doubling the interest and zeal and giving a complete success to the effort.

Convention met second day (28th) at 9.30 A. M., to consummate the organization. Called to order by the President. Opened with religious exercises. Committee on Constitution and By-laws reported in form similar to the one adopted by the N. C. A. There was no discussion of note before or after the third article of the Constitution, which reads as follows:

"The business and object of this Association shall be to oppose, withstand and remove the evils of secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved; to redeem the administration of justice from perversion and our republican government from corruption."

A spirited discussion on the above article showed and radical a conservative element about equal. Some feeling the binding cord of their obligations, objected to the word expose, while others deeming all things exposed, were ready to adopt the words "oppose," "the evils of," as appears in said article. The constitution and by-laws were unanimously adopted with above article as it reads. Obtained thirty names to the list, four of whom are seceders. Elected permanent officers as follows:

President, Otis Smith, Woodland, Yolo Co.

Vice Presidents, Mrs. S. M. Palmer, Capay, Yolo Co.; Rev. Alex. Musselman, Dixon, Solano Co.

Secretary, Martin Myres, Woodland, Yolo Co.

Treasurer, Phil. Beck, Grafton, Yolo Co.

Above officers constitute executive board. The place was well represented, and some from a distance. All seemed much interested and took an active part in the business of the meeting. Closing on Saturday and Sabbath with preaching by Revs. D. Shuck of Stanislaus county, and A. Musselman of Dixon, Solano county. The composition of the address, the manner in which it was delivered, with the co-operation of those present, corresponding with the religious exercises of the occasion produced a holy zeal in the Christian and a lively interest with the unsaved, making it a profitable time for all present, and I believe it will be as bread cast upon the waters.

Other county organizations are anticipated. Such efforts should be frequent over the State to ascertain and get into working order our elementary force. There seems to be enough of it ready to be brought into line of action to make it safe for any Christian effort by any means to bring the hidden things in darkness to light. In fact we feel quite ready for the work in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, whom they reject.

OTIS SMITH.

FROM EASTERN IOWA, CEDAR COUNTY.

CLARENCE, Iowa, May 3, 1879.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—The good work against secretism goes bravely on in Iowa. The lightning sparks are flashing all over the State, at Elgin, Birmingham, Burlington, and many other points. The friends are advancing against the foe and winning victories for God and truth.

But we of this vicinity have met the concentrated efforts of the crafty crew. Ever since Prof. C. A. Blanchard lectured at Clarence in March, 1878, and Bro. Rathbun followed June with his expositions of the institution, our enemies have manifested a devilish meanness, that I have never seen surpassed, "but the wrath of man shall praise God," for every move they have made has reacted against them.

Correspondence.

ANOTHER REV. MASON GIVES HIMSELF AND MASONRY AWAY.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Some few weeks ago I accepted an invitation from the friends of reform in Northfield, O., to deliver a lecture in the United Presbyterian church of that place, on the subject, "The Religion of Masonry and the of Religion the Bible contrasted."

One of the friends there in the meantime, took it into his head to procure another Masonic witness to the truthfulness of Ronayne's expositions. He therefore sent a decoy letter to the "Rev." Alanson Wilcox of Cleveland, who told us that he had taken twenty-five degrees in Masonry. And it is indeed astonishing to see with what alacrity these "sons of light" give themselves away and bite at any hook however poorly baited.

The following is the letter with the answer, which was received in due time; both of which were given to the public on the night of the lecture:

NORTHFIELD, O., April 5, '79.

Rev. Alanson Wilcox,

DEAR SIR:—A fellow calling himself E. Ronayne was here lecturing against Masonry about a year ago, and worked the first three degrees. And now comes another by the name of R. J. Hathaway of Bedford Disciple church, who is to lecture here soon. He is said to be a pestilent fellow and calculated to do the order much harm.

As you are a Bro. whom we understand to be well versed in Masonry, I would ask, Can you give any information about these men, and especially how shall we manage this coming fellow Hathaway?

Fraternally yours,
J. A. Boyd.

REPLY.

185 Taylor St., Cleveland, O., April 8, 1879.

J. A. Boyd,

Dear Sir:—Yours to hand. Of E. Ronayne I know nothing personally. I heard of his disgraceful work a year ago.

R. J. Hathaway I know. He seems to be a conscientious Christian man—especially inclined to fanaticism on the subject of Masonry. He is verbose, persistent, and ambitious for notoriety, it seems to me.

I have had but little experience in meeting such fellows and my advice may not be worth much. My observation has been that opposition to Masonry only strengthens the institution. It is not pleasant to bear at the time but men are led to look into it, investigate and think, and many that are first roused up as opponents soon embrace it.

Of course in their so-called exposes they fail to bring out the true spirit of Masonry, and fail in other points. Deny then that it is an expose.

If you go and hear, keep cool—do not get angry in discussion. At a suitable time get C. A. Woodward of Cleveland, or some other good lecturer, to address you and the community in the true character of Masonry, without reference to these pestilent fellows.

Another way would be to give him the go by—not to give his meetings influence by attending—not to argue the subject till the storm of us over. Unity of action on the part of the order in this direction would bring the opponents to grief. Encourage the weak brethren by wholesome instruction and you may fear no permanent bad results. Let me hear how you prosper in due time. Fraternally

(Signed) Alanson Wilcox.

Notice 1st. This writer who now calls working the degrees in public a "disgraceful work," told us a year ago that he had "never seen anything in the twenty-five degrees that the most religious or chaste man or woman could take offense at." Is it then more disgraceful to work the degrees in public in order to let the people see its wickedness and folly and thereby escape its snare, than it is to work them in the dark and so entrap men unawares and lead them to perdition? If, as they claim, men must lie to expose Masonry is it really any worse than it is to lie to conceal it? Is it really any worse to repent of an evil and confess the fault than it is to cling to the evil and lie to cover it up? (John 3: 20, 21). "Every one that doeth evil hateth the light neither cometh to the light lest his deeds should be reproved. But he that doeth truth, cometh to the light that his deeds may be made manifest that they are wrought in God."

2nd. If opposition to Masonry only strengthens the institution, and if men who are led to look into it, investigate and think, soon embrace it, why do they so persistently strive to keep us from investigating? Why does he advise to give us the go-bye and not to give our meetings influence by attending? The truth is as he very well knows, very few men of intelligence and respectability when they once have seen the folly of the thing exposed ever permit themselves to be haltered and hoodwinked by them, and all such statements seem, to say the least, very like whistling to keep the courage up.

3rd. Here by the strongest kind of implication he confesses that Masonry has been exposed to the letter but that they fail to bring out the true spirit. Having never himself witnessed a public exposition, he is writing to a supposed Masonic brother who has, and if he really believed that Masonry had not been literally exposed would he hesitate to say so? Would he thus use language that so strongly implies that it had, and then advise him to deny it? If Masonry had not been truly exposed would not that brother have been ready to deny without any instruction from him? In plain every-day English, then, this minister of the Gospel, influenced by the "true spirit of Masonry," has manufactured something untrue, and advised him to tell it, in order to keep his Masonic oath and "ever conceal and never reveal any of the secrets of Masonry." If we only let him alone he will succeed where others have failed, and portray the "true spirit of Masonry" in all its naked deformity. We are told, (1 John iv. 1, 2, 3) to believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God: because many false prophets are gone out into the world. Hereby know ye the spirit of God: Every spirit that confesseth that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh of God," etc. The spirit of Masonry does not assert Christ; it is not therefore of God. The spirit of Masonry as manifested by this Christian minister is a lying spirit; and "all liars shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone." (Rev. xxi 8) The spirit of Masonry which he reveals is an intolerant spirit; he would give his Christian brother the go-bye, and not give his meetings influence by attending. He would pretend to court investigation and then by all the means in his power he would try to shut off all investigation. In fact, the false, corrupt, delusive, intolerant, brow-beating spirit of Masonry in its various forms of wickedness outnumber the evil spirits in the maniac whose name was legion.

4th. "Deny then that it is an expose." In all candor let me ask, is it not about time that Christians and ministers especially, should cease to deny or advising others to deny that which they know to be true, and that which has so often been testified to by so many good and true men? If Ronayne's expose be not true, why for the sake of peace in the churches does not the Rev. Wilcox and others come out with their affidavit and deny it publicly? Ronayne testifies that he has given a true expose. Why do they not impeach him?

5th. That he expects the storm to blow over shows how little he knows of the spirit of this reform. They may answer us by scoffs and jeers and even by silent contempt; they may tell us that Masonry is entrenched in power, and that the great and mighty men in church and state are with them, and that they can not be overthrown, yet we know that every plant which our Heavenly Father hath not planted shall be rooted up and their ancient fraud shall fall. What he calls a storm is but the gentle breeze before the gale, and if these would-be worshipers of Christ and Baal will not heed the voice of reason, then God will answer them out of the whirlwind. The storm shall never cease until Christ shall be all in all and the church shall be purified from this wicked abomination. A poor lodge-be-draggled ministry shall not always be foisted upon our churches contrary to their wishes.

R. J. Hathaway.

P. S.—I learn that the Rev. Wilcox sent a copy of his letter to the lodge at Bedford, and that every hater of Christ in the lodge together with some who pretend to follow him, laud the preacher for his skill in confessing to the exposes and then advising his supposed brother to deny them. R. J. H.

Zanesville, Ind., May 2, 1879.

Editor Cynosure.—The Brotherhood of White Aprons and Cabletows of this place are making a desperate effort just now to regain the ground which they have lost in the last eighteen months. Clubs have been hurled by us and the Masons have howled wonderfully, therefore we know they are hit. It is the opinion of the better thinking part of our community that the wound received by them is a mortal one.

I have before me an article from "Hiram" of this place to the Journal of Ft. Wayne, wherein he says: "If Masonry is pagan worship it was instituted by the wisest king (Solomon) that ever lived or ever will live."

I am sorry to know that I have a neighbor who is so ignorant and basely wicked as to accuse Solomon with any such work as instituting Masonry. I have before me high Masonic authority which says: "Neither Adam, nor Noah, nor Nimrod, nor Moses, nor Joshua, nor David, nor Solomon, nor Hiram, nor St. John the Evangelist, nor St. John the Baptist were Masons. The hypothesis in history is absurd. There is no record sacred or profane, to induce us to believe that those men were Freemasons; and our traditions do not go back to those days. To assert they were Freemasons may make the vulgar stare, but will rather excite the contempt than the admiration of the wise."

Now either "Hiram" of Zanesville or Dr. Dalcho of South Carolina is mistaken regard to this matter, and inasmuch as we are better acquainted with "Hiram" than with the Doctor we prefer to believe that his zeal for his pet institution and his ignorance of history has caused him to make a false assertion.

He says, "Further, George Washington was a Mason." I wonder if it is so! I have read everything on the subject of Masonry that I have ever found, and I have failed to see anything that would indicate the truthfulness of the assertion. He was initiated, that we do not deny. So were some ex-Masons at Zanesville. But that George Washington lived and died an adhering Mason, I do deny. Jonathan Trumbull the second, when aid-de-camp to General Washington asked the General the question, whether he would advise him to join the Masons. Hear Washington's answer: "Masonry is a benevolent institution which may be employed for the best or worst of purposes; but in most part it is merely child's play and he could give him no advice on the subject." General Washington was written to by Rev. Mr. Snyder, who spoke of him as presiding over the English lodges in this country. Washington in reply, dated Mt. Vernon, September 25, 1798, speaks of his illness, "which allows me to add little more now than this, to correct an error you have run into, of my presiding over the English lodges of this country. The fact is, I preside over none, nor have I been in one more than once or twice in the last thirty years."

(Signed) Geo. Washington.

I suppose Hiram and the rest of pin-feathered Masons of Zanesville regard "the father of his country" as a bright Mason. Hiram, after enumerating a host of prominent men, who he says were Masons, adds, "In short, I know of but two prominent men who were not Masons," naming Jeff. Davis and Major Andre. I ask Hiram if he is ignorant of such names as Daniel Webster, James Madison, John Q. Adams, Governor John Hancock, Richard Rush, Chief Justice Marshall, Edward Everett, Millard Fillmore, Wm. H. Seward, and many others might be mentioned.

Now, in conclusion, I want to advise "Hiram" to "buy the truth and sell it not," God has this commodity; Masonry is the opposite. You are bound but you may be delivered; the truth will make you free. You, sir, professing to be opposed to human slavery have enslaved yourself. You have submitted your guidance to the blind; you have surrendered your judgment to other men; you have surrendered the keeping of your conscience to other men. You are a slave. Come out from among the. Be free.

Our Mail.

W. J. White, Worcester, Mass., writes:

"Your paper comes pretty regularly; although I lose occasionally a copy. For several weeks after our late annual meeting I failed to get it. I conjecture that there was a particular desire about that time amongst lodgemen at the postoffice to get such news about Anti-masonry as they could find in no other paper."

Wm. Bowles, West Branch, Pawnee Co., Neb., writes:

"The Masons are in power in Pawnee county as elsewhere."

J. W. Margrave, Horton, Ia., writes:

"May He who rules the universe aid and direct you in all your endeavors to open the eyes of the blind, and advance his kingdom on earth, is my sincere prayer."

S. K. Squier, Nicholson, Pa., writes:

"We have a literary society here of nearly one hundred members. The question of secret societies has come up in our debate. It has been discussed once with much excitement, and is to be rediscussed Friday evening, Feb. 14th."

David Glaspie, Oxford, Mich., writes:

"I have tried to get a number of those who are in sympathy with us, to take your paper, and they say they will think of it. And about all we do is to think. We want a lecturer here to warm up those who are opposed to secretism, but the Masons have all their own way, as no place can be had for a lecture. Masonry is not thriving here at present, however. Some are getting disgusted with the vile thing, and are not paying their dues, so they have the pleasure of being held in contempt by their brethren. May the good Lord hasten the time when all Masonic dues shall be suspended, is the prayer of your friend and fellow-worker."

Rev. D. H. Shelby, Hastings, Mich., writes:

"The Cynosure is what the world needs, and I need it. The Cynosure is to the U. B. church as a breaking-plow to new ground. I am a U B. minister. I shall ever say to the Cynosure, speed on, speed on"

Rev. J. S. Amidon, Corry, Pa., writes:

"I think that the Cynosure is growing better all the time, and that it is reflecting the right kind of light, such as the people ought to have to lead them out of the mists and darkness of lodgery. I hope that some of our lecturers who are passing from West to East and from East to West will stop at Corry, and tell us how the widow's son was brought to light."

I. H. Brown, Bethel, O., writes:

"The lodge is so strong here, the people think they would be marked if they took your paper, but there must be one copy at this office to wake up priest and politician."

Joshua Brink, Clarence, Ia., writes:

"I am very sorry to see Freemasonry getting such a strong hold in the world as it is now doing. I find by a little inquiry that Masons are trying to get all the young men in the county to join the order. And as far as in my power I am willing to work on the contrary side. When I have books and papers that expose Masonry, I lend and give them wherever I think they will do good to my fellow creatures. There are some papers and books that cost but little, that will give much information; something like the leaflet that gives the oath of the first degree of Freemasonry, with a little sensible reading, may do much good in saving the young men from the meshes of the lodge."

W. O. Dinius, Florida, O., writes:

"In a revival meeting I was holding on Bean Creek, a man arose the other night, and publicly renounced his connection with the grange, and added: 'I intend to live with Christian associations hereafter.' He is a man of influence, and it was a telling blow to the grange, which is growing 'beautifully less,' in this place."

Sam'l Witmer, Shaucks, O., writes:

"I have been an Anti-mason all my life, especially since Morgan's murder."

John E. Ashles, Council Bluffs, Ia., writes:

"If you publish a book against secret societies I would like to have it, as I think it would not only prove a blessing to the world at large, but also to those who are already chained in these lodges."

CHAPTER V.

First, or Entered Apprentice Degree

EXPLANATORY.

The first three degrees are termed Blue Lodge, or Ancient Craft Masonry.

Having reference to Solomon's temple, an Entered Apprentice's lodge is termed the "ground floor," Fellow Craft's the "middle chamber," and Master Mason's lodge the sanctum sanctorum, or "holy of holies."

"All the business of this system, except conferring the degree, is done in the third, or Master Mason's lodge."—Morris's Dictionary, Art. Blue Lodge Masonry.

"The Entered Apprentice is the first degree in Masonry, and, though it supplies no historical knowledge, it is replete with information on the internal structure of the order.

"This degree is considered 'the weakest part of Masonry,' and hence, although an Entered Apprentice is allowed to sit in a lodge of his degree, he is not permitted to speak or vote on the proceedings.

"When a candidate is initiated into this degree he is technically said to be 'entered.' "—Mackey's Lexicon, Art. Apprentice.

"Entered Apprentices are possessed of very few rights, and are called upon to perform but very few duties. They are not, strictly speaking, members of a lodge; are not required to pay dues, and are not permitted to speak or vote, or hold any office. Secrecy and obedience are the only obligations imposed upon them."—Mackey's Jurisprudence, page 159.

"Apprentices are not entitled to the honors of a Masonic burial, nor can they join in paying those honors to a deceased Master Mason. In this respect they are placed precisely in the position of profanes. * * * They are really nothing more than Masonic disciples."—Mackey's Jurisprudence, page 160.

Opening Ceremonies.

In each of the three degrees, one rap calls the lodge to order and seats them when standing, and in the opening and closing ceremonies calls up both deacons; two raps call up all the subordinate officers; three raps call up the entire lodge.

CALLING THE LODGE TO ORDER.

The regular time for opening the lodge having arrived, if there are the requisite number present (at least eight, including the Tyler), the Worshipful Master puts on his apron, jewel and hat (usually a stove-pipe hat), takes his seat in the east, and calls the lodge to order with one rap of the gavel.

CLOTHING[2] THE LODGE.

The members put on their aprons, and the officers their aprons and jewels, and take their proper places, as shown on page 56; the door is shut, and the Senior Warden in the west places his column erect on its pedestal, while the Junior Warden's in the south lays across its pedestal. The Deacons take their rods, as shown in cut referred to.

TYLING[3] THE LODGE.

Worshipful Master (one rap—Brother Junior Deacon, you will see that the Tyler is at his post and close the door.

Junior Deacon (opens the door and sees that the Tyler is outside, closes it and answers)—The Tyler is at his post, Worshipful.

PURGING[4] THE LODGE.

Worshipful Master (one rap)—Brother Senior Warden, are you satisfied that all present are Entered Apprentices?

Senior Warden—I will ascertain by my proper officers and report. [If he is sure all present are Entered Apprentices, he answers:] All present are Entered Apprentices, Worshipful.

Senior Warden—Brother Junior Deacon, you will ascertain if all present are Entered Apprentices. [The Junior Deacon, rod in hand, passes around the room, stopping in front of every person he does not recognize, and all such, if not vouched for as Masons by some brother present, must retire to the ante-room for examination by a committee. He then reports:]

Junior Deacon—Brother Senior Warden, all present are Entered Apprentices.

Senior Warden—All present are Entered Apprentices, Worshipful.

Worshipful Master—Brother Senior Warden, you will bring them to order as Entered Apprentice Masons, reserving yourself for the last.

Senior Warden (three raps, all rise)—Brethren, you will come to order as Entered Apprentice Masons. [All make the due guard of an Entered Apprentice, as follows:]

DUE GUARD OF AN ENTERED APPRENTICE.

Senior Warden (making due guard of E. A.)—In order, Worshipful.

Worshipful Master—(one rap, all seated.) [The following catechetical exercise is part of the lectures[5] of this degree.]

Worshipful Master (one rap) Brother Junior Deacon, the first great care of Masons when convened?[6]

Junior Deacon—To see that the lodge is duly tyled, Worshipful.

Worshipful Master—You will perform that duty, and inform the Tyler that I am about to open ——— lodge No. ——— on the first degree, and direct him to tyle accordingly. [Junior Deacon communicates the order to the Tyler, closes the door, turns to the east and reports:]

Junior Deacon—The lodge is duly tyled, Worshipful.

Worshipful Master—How tyled?

Junior Deacon—By a Master[7] Mason, armed with the proper implement of his office.

Worshipful Master—The Tyler's station?

Junior Deacon—Outside the inner door, with a drawn sword in his hand.

Worshipful Master—His duty there?

Junior Deacon—To guard against the approach of cowans[8] and eavesdroppers,[9] to see that none pass or repass, but such as are duly qualified and have permission[10] from the Worshipful Master.

NOTE 2.—"The work of the lodge in each degree is a portion of the secrets of Masonry."—Note Webb's Monitor, page 18.

NOTE 3.—"Tyling is the third step in opening the Blue Lodge. It is done by the Junior Deacon, acting under orders from the Worshipful Master."—Morris's Dictionary, Art. Tyling.

NOTE 4.—"The next step in the ceremony is, with the usual precautions to ascertain the right of each one to be present."—Mackey's Manual, page 12.

NOTE 5.—"From such fragments of the old lectures as have been preserved, it appears that they were uniformly given in a catechetical form, and such is the method in general use in the United States."—Morris's Dictionary, Art. Catechism.

NOTE 6.—"By a wise provision, it is no sooner intimated to the Master that he may safely proceed, than he directs his attention to an inquiry into the knowledge possessed by his officers of the duties they will be respectively called on to perform."—Mackey's Ritualist, Art Opening, page 13.

NOTE 7.—"He must be a Master Mason."—Morris's Dictionary, Art. Tyler.

NOTE 8.—"As Knon, or dog, meant among the early fathers one who had not been initiated into the Christian mysteries, the term was borrowed by the Freemasons, and in time corrupted into cowan."—Mackey's Lex. Art. Cowan.

NOTE 9.—"COWAN. The term is joined with that of eaves-dropper, in designating those classes of impertinent listeners or spies, against whom lodges, at their meetings are required to exercise special vigilance."—Morris's Dictionary, Art. Cowan.

NOTE 10.—"Nor after this is any brother permitted to leave the lodge during lodge hours without having first obtained the Worshipful Master's permission."—Mackey's Ritualist, page 18.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MAY 15, 1879.

Our Weekly Sermon.

A good Baptist pastor in Northhampton, Mass., told me, a few years since, that a brother who had filled his pulpit some Sabbaths before. told him that he, (the minister aiding him) recognized five Freemasons in his congregation, by Masonic signs, while he was in his pulpit in a single Sabbath. The brother gave him this fact as an argument to induce him to join the lodge! The same pastor told me, at tea, that he had that day visited one of his members who had been cozzened into the lodge, and through the Entered Apprentice degree. That brother told his pastor that when the hood-wink fell and he saw himself half nude and haltered, in the presence of the business men of Northhampton, he was more thoroughly mortified and disgusted than in his whole life before.

Now beside its disgusting ritual, Masonry being organized deism, and idolatry without visible images, such churches as the Baptist church in Northhampton must soon be reformed or forsaken. We have received several urgent letters asking for a regular weekly Cynosure sermon, so that people who will not attend churches where Satan's worship is blended with Christ's, may worship God and seek edification in some parlor or "upper room" where the Holy Spirit can fill the place, and Christ "inhabit" the praises of his Israel. Such a sermon we hope to give weekly. It will be a help to fathers and mothers in home instruction and domestic enjoyment; much better than the Hebrew phylacteries and frontlets which yet, by home instruction, made that people the wonder of ages and the instructress of the world.

Dr. Bacon on "Churches and Denominations."

We have received a letter or two requesting us to reproduce Dr. Leonard Bacon's articles on the above subject. This would scarcely be practicable, but we can give a better idea of his teaching by describing the man.

Dr. Bacon is a Puritan in un-Puritan times. Thaddeus Stevens being asked by one why he voted for a measure which fell short of his known principles, replied, "Because I live among men and not among angels." So with Dr. Bacon. His principles are about perfect. But he cannot bring men up to them. If Cromwell's regicide judges who beheaded Charles I., were to rise from the dead, and were now hiding in New Haven, where they once were from British emissaries, and where one of them, John Dixwell, still sleeps unmolested in his grave; Dr. Bacon would be turned to by the New England masses to preach in the largest church, or on the College Common, the first Sabbath after it was known they were there, and he would tell the Americans to shield and protect those judges as the democracy of Christianity, and Congregationalists of politics. He would tell them that Charles Stuart was but a man, though wearing a crown, and that men are amenable to law; and, in times of revolution, to government. He would insist that those judges not only had the forms of law for what they did, for Parliament which commissioned them "has no superior under heaven;" but that in turbulent times they stood for all that makes law venerable; and all that has made the United States to-day the political Mecca of mankind.

He would tell so many of his auditors as could come within hearing of his voice, what Bradshaw told the world,speaking for the Puritans of the time of Elizabeth, (Neal I., 248): that the Holy Scriptures are the only rule of faith and worship; that religious inventions are unlawful; that men ordinarily joined together in the true worship of God, are a visible church; that Christ has subjected no such church to any power without itself; and that the only punishment for such a church, when unsound or corrupt, is "a severe letting alone," which "letting alone" is punishment enough.

The Vermont General Congregational Convention, has lately adopted a resolution aiming aslant at some pastor or pastors among them who are reputed to modify or reject the received doctrine of the punishment of the incorrigibly wicked in the next world, and hinting that said pastor or pastors should cease to be Congregationalists and leave the denomination. Dr. Bacon hints that this is equivalent to resolving that a man reputed to be a murderer ought to convict and hang himself and so save his neighbors or the courts the trouble of convicting and hanging him. He thinks instead of finding one guilty, or accusing a man of violating "historic Congregationalism," he should be shown to have violated the Word of God; not our standards, but the Bible, etc., etc. This is the burden of his doctrine, and it is both reason and Scripture.

I need scarcely say to the readers of the Cynosure, that these ideas of Dr. Bacon are new wine in old bottles; that world-loving and lodge-governed churches cannot receive them. But when Satan's strongholds are pulled down and that wicked one "destroyed by the brightness of Christ's coming and the breath of his mouth;" when the churches have no sect but Christianity; no creed but the Bible; no ritual but the example of Christ and inspired men, and no lawgiver but Christ himself, the age of Puritanism will return without its asperities. And as, in well written music, the tune often travels through jars and discords to end in harmony on the keynote with which it set out, so in that day and hour, Dr. Bacon's ideas of "churches and denominations" will haply be remembered as the "God save America" of our religion; and the regicide judges will have monuments in London near Charing Cross. Perhaps we may yet gratify our readers by giving Dr. Bacon's ideas from the Independent instead of imposing on them our own ideas of his ideas.

The Calcium Light Exposition.

Bro. I. R. B. Arnold has been about three weeks in DuPage county. We should be glad if he could stay as much longer, until every man, woman and child could listen to his wonderfully clear expositions of Masonic philosophy and religion. On Friday and Saturday he lectured to large audiences in the College Chapel at Wheaton, using a powerful calcium light to reproduce in heroic size his illustrations of sun-worship. By this means he united entertainment with instruction in a most agreeable way. The Grecian, Phœnician, Egyptian, Indian and Scandinavian systems of mythology were thus illustrated and their philosophy and tradition explained; and bringing the history down to 1717 it was shown how the same sun-worship was instituted in London under the name of Freemasonry. It was shown how all these systems, though differing in the names and fables of their deities, yet all are a counterfeit of the religion of the true God, in ceremonies, prayers and the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ. We have never seen the relation of these false religions, including Freemasonry, as imitations and counterfeits of the true, more simply and clearly demonstrated and brought down to the comprehension of every one.

There is a great work for Bro. Arnold, and we are glad that he has dropped all other business engagements and is devoting himself to this with great success. Without advertising an onslaught on Freemasonry, which his lectures are not, he yet brings the lodge system and worship, by the necessity of following out his subject, under the blazing focus of his instrument and under the white heat of pure oxygen and of truth it is resolved, and a critical and scientific analysis is accurately given.

Bro. Arnold's work is worth the best notice we can give it for the sake of the truth so clearly enunciated. He is not circulating tracts, or adding to the list of our subscribers, or raising funds for conventions or other reform work; but he is educating the public mind and conscience to avoid the idolatry of the present day, and every Christian and Christian church should pray that he may be blessed in so good a work. We speak for him a cordial welcome and co-operation wherever he may go.

Legislative Trickery.

In their zeal to do honor to Gen. Grant and to raise the tidal wave of a third term Presidency the political strikers are taking a very easy step from the sublime to the ridiculous. To meet him at San Francisco, great excursions are being made up offering temptingly low rates. Thousands will take advantage of the low fare to visit California who care no more for Grant than for a score of other public men, yet the crowds will be used by the wire-pullers and President-makers,—everything will be used to augment his fame. More than this the legislature of Pennsylvania has voted to send a committee to San Francisco to meet Mr. Grant, and that of New York, besides tendering him the courtesies of the State, has passed the following resolutions:

Whereas, The National Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic and the annual meeting of the Army of the Potomac are to be held in the Capitol of this State on the 17th and 18th of June next, at which meeting there will be present a large number of distinguished soldiers of the Union, among them President Hayes, Governor McClellan, General Hooker, General Sherman, General Franklin, General Slocum, and many others; therefore,

Resolved, That a committee of Senators and Assemblymen be appointed to represent the State at this representative assemblage of those to whom we are indebted for the preservation of the Union.

This New York Legislature seems to be a fine specimen of a politico-Masonic assembly legislating in favor of the lodge and the saloon; but without expense to either or to themselves. For more of their work see the extract from the American Wesleyan in another column. These Republican legislators seem to be infatuated with secretism, and their party spirit is more ridiculous than that of Congress itself They give a drilled and secret lodge their permission to violate the Sabbath and the laws of the State respecting it, and to publicly drill and become expert in military maneuver; and then place themselves, the paid and chosen representatives of the people, below the level of this secret and irresponsible lodge by sending a committee to beg the privilege of sitting in its company. These war-meetings are called social for effect. They have become increasingly political year by year. As such they add nothing to the peace and harmony of the nation and should be suppressed by public opinion.

—The determination of our California friends is indicated by the formation of a strong county association in Yolo county. Others will follow and the State Executive Committee, which has nobly struggled against the difficulties which beset the opening of a reform in a new country, will soon grow into a State Association. Friends in Oregon are writing also for lecturers, promising to sustain an approved workman.

—Bro. Stoddard's report this week is the sunshine following the cloud. He has verily wrested victory from the jaws of defeat, and Nebraska may be placed on the grand roll of States in line against the lodge. Another and longer communication from him dated on Friday gives us a view through his eyes of the importance of Nebraska to the reform. It waits for another paper.

—On the 7th page of this paper we reprint a few pages from the new work now in preparation by our publishers, Ezra A. Cook & Co. Further selections will be given hereafter from which all may judge of its importance and obtain a fairly accurate idea of the plan followed by the compiler. The value of the notes from Masonic authors explaining almost every feature of the secret work, may be readily seen, and the very low rate of introduction should speedily bring a large edition into circulation over the country.

—Some time ago in acknowledging a donation to the Illinois State work from Father Kent of Wethersfield, Illinois, his long and honorable record was curtailed by some mistake of the types to twenty-five years. Father Kent is now eighty-five and has always been an Antimason; his father was one before him, and so were all the family. Thank the Lord. We should like to record such facts every day. He remembers when about ten years old hearing his father tell of a Mason who had been divulging the secrets of the lodge, and "the devil came and carried him off," was the story circulated by the Masons to account for his dissappearance.

—The Cincinnati Daily Gazette of a late date tells a brief story of a Masonic funeral, which was made just as ridiculous as Masonry was able. It was, however, good Masonry as was ever made by Pike or Mackey or the Grand Orient of France. The Gazette tells it thus:

"The citizens of Bucyrus witnessed last Friday afternoon a very ludicrous feature of what should have been a very mournful procession. At the funeral of Mr. John Sherwood the Masons turned out, not en masse, for a very small portion of the members of the two chapters were in the procession. When they appeared upon the streets it was apparent that the Mason who should carry the Bible was absent, but a wag at the head of the lodge placed the Scriptures in charge of Joe Peters, a saloon keeper whose general character for piety would not admit him into extreme religious circles. After Joe had carried the ponderous volume for some two miles, his general appearance proved for once he had been made to feel the 'weight of the Scriptures.'"

Bro. James Ferguson is out with a good and strong letter against the lodge. He is a Christian gentleman whose testimony cannot be impeached.

But the richest fruit of Bro. Rathbun's labors is made manifest through Bro. S. E. Starry, late of Springville Lodge, No. 139. His demit is dated March 8, 1879.

The third degree in Masonry was worked at Dayton Chapel on the evening of April 25th, before a full house and with complete success by Bro. Starry. He is a young man of good education, has a good voice and is going to make a master workman in building up the cause of truth and right, and exposing error.

Allow me to say to the State Association, "Together; brethren". Let every friend of the cause be up and actively at work. We hope the Executive Committee will be looking up and reporting suitable places for holding the next State Convention, so that we may be getting ready.

Nebraska in Line!!

SECRETARY STODDARD TURNS DEFEAT INTO VICTORY!

York Co., Neb, May 8, 1879.

At Pursel chapel (U. B.) a State Association was formed last evening auxilary to the N. C. A. A constitution was adopted and the required officers elected. I have but little time to write this morning, but will, D. V., give a more full account for the especial benefit of the friends in this State in time for next week's paper. The importance of our work in this new country can scarcely be over-estimated, and the readiness with which the truth is received is encouraging. Society is in a formative state and the country is rapidly filling up with a class of hard-working, earnest settlers, who are mostly in limited circumstances, but who have brave hearts. This is destined at no distant day to be one of the richest portions of our country. I have talked with men who came here only a few years since, some without a dollar, and some with very little cash, who now own farms of from 80 to 640 acres of as fine prairie land as the sun ever shone upon, some of whom are still living in sod houses and worshiping in churches of the same material.

I have spoken eight times since coming here, twice in very neat commodious wooden houses built by the United Brethren, who are quite numerous in these parts. Bro. Caldwell, who is to take me to my evening appointment fourteen miles away, has announced that the "Ponies are ready," and so I close abruptly with a purpose of more anon.

York City, May 9, A. M.—I spoke here last evening. It was rainy and very dark. The audience was not large but some good was I trust done. I have bought my ticket for Omaha and start in twenty minutes. I expect to spend Sabbath in Iowa. The friends here have agreed on September 30th, and October 1st and 2nd as the time of their next meeting and will go to work at once to get ready. This brings Nebraska into the line of State conventions for the fall and winter campaign. This completes the western programme, except Minnesota, which still has the matter under advisement. "All aboard" and I am off.

J. P. Stoddard.

Married.—In Lawn Ridge, Ill, May 7, 1879, by the Rev. M S. Hall, assisted by Rev. M. A. Crawford, at the residence of the bride's father, Deacon L. H. Wetmore, Rev A. D. Zaraphonithes of Greece, to Frances H. Wetmore.

Grafts.

The Advance in a notice of the "Master's Carpet," says it "it is in the highest degree 'interesting if true.' That it is true we are not competent to affirm. It claims to be a complete revelation of Freemasonry. If it be such as here represented, the system is an abominable imposition. Let the reader be candid and judge for himself. It is at all events a book worth reading."

We presume we would be found in substantial agreement with the writer, as to the principle of secretism, and as to the practices following from it. The Banner's testimony has been given from the first, as occasion has demanded, against secretism, just as it has against every other form of sin. Our work is to enforce holiness, and every deliverance of the Banner is against sin—all sin—not any one particular form of sin only. The Banner would be untrue to its mission as a promoter of holiness, if it should vent all its deliverances against any particular sin. We oppose all sin.—Banner of Holiness in reply to a Correspondent.

The legislature of the State of New York is showing unusual corruption. It has passed a bill which Gov. Robinson (Democrat) has vetoed, allowing street parades of the Grand Army of the Republic on the Sabbath. It has been passed over the Governor's veto, every Republican senator but one voting for the bill. A second bill is being passed by the legislature, which removes the restrictions which the license of intoxicating liquor law lays upon the traffic, so far as it applies to the cities New York, Brooklyn and Buffalo. For this bill the Republican members voted with marked unanimity. There seems to be a very ardent desire, and a strenuous effort put forth to make liquor dealers believe that the Republicans are their best friends, and that however much Democrats may drink and deal in liquor, that the Republicans can show liquor dealers that they have more sympathy for them than do the Democrats. For "our party must beat at next election," no matter about the murders mourned and millions of money squandered—Am. Wesleyan.

I met two friends one night at tea, in conversation about the training of their children—a boy and a girl. The wife complained that her husband left all their training to her; and he acknowledged it, saying that the little time he was at home he didn't want to be drilling at the children,—not an exceptional state of things, we are ready to say. After tea that father says, speaking of Masonry, "it contains the best system of morals extant." And yet that father has sworn to keep forever secret all of these things from the mother and trainer of his children; she can have no opportunity of the "work of the lodge" to train her for this great work. Before this, he said he was desirous of his wife uniting with some church, and maybe would after a while, as an example to their children. If it is only an example he wants, why will not his union with the Masons be enough? It is another of the great mysteries of E. G. A. O. T. U., who has kept it from us, and won't reveal it until we swear we won't reveal, until we find some one else who will swear the same thing, and so on. And from which women are shut out, probably because she couldn't keep the secret from Adam; that is, the secret of how they might become gods.—Cor. Christian Instructor.

What shall be the "coming Sunday?" If Parisian Freemasonry, German infidelity and communism and Irish Catholicism are not shut out or overcome by the diligence of the people of God, the following prophecy of the New York Sun will be fact: "Grand sacred entertainments abounded again last evening. At the Grand Sacred Opera House Mlle. Di Murska warbled grand sacred airs from sundry grand sacred operas. Gilmore's grand sacred band brayed and thumped in a truly grand and sacred manner, and Levy ravished all ears with his grand and sacred cornet. At Steinway Hall the grand sacred Red Hussars from Hamburg excited the devotional feelings of their hearers to the highest pitch by selections from the grand sacred German composers. At the Atlantic Garden a vast congregation listened to the grand sacred melodies of Strauss and Offenbach, and consumed a large quantity of grand sacred beer. At the Volks Garden grand sacred Irish and negro songs were rendered; at Harry Minor's Theater the exercises were varied by the introduction of a grand sacred banjo, and at the National Garden there were grand sacred jigs, grand sacred feats on the grand sacred slack wire, and a grand sacred farce."

Each day, when the glow of sunset
Fades in the western sky,
And the wee ones tired of playing,
Go tripping lightly by;
I steal away from my husband,
Asleep in his easy chair,
And watch from the open doorway
Their faces fresh and fair.

Alone in the dear old homestead
That once was full of life,
Ringing with girlish laughter,
Echoing boyish strife,
We two are waiting together;
And oft as the shadows come,
With tremulous voice he calls me,
"It is night, are the children home?"

"Yes love," I answer him, gently,
"They're all home long ago,"
And I sing in my quivering treble,
A song so soft and low,
Till the old man drops to slumber
With his head upon his hand,
And I tell to myself the number
At home in a better land.

Home, where never a sorrow
Shall dim their eyes with tears,
Where the smile of God is on them,
Through all the summer years;
I know, yet my arms are empty
That fondly folded seven,
And the mother-heart within me
Is almost starved for heaven.

Sometimes in the dusk of evening,
I only shut my eyes,
And the children are all about me,
A vision from the skies;
The babes whose dimpled fingers
Lost the way to my breast,
And the beautiful one, the angels
Passed to the world of the blest.

A breath, and the vision is lifted
Away on the wings of light,
And again we two are together,
All alone in the night;
They tell me his mind is failing,
But I smile at idle fears,
He is only back with the children
In the dear and peaceful years.

And still as the summer sunset
Fades away in the west,
And the wee ones tired of playing,
Go trooping home to rest,
My husband calls from his corner,
"Say, love! have the children come?"
And I answer, with eyes uplifted,
"Yes, dear! they are all at home!"

Read the Bible to Strengthen Faith.

BY D. F. NEWTON.

"Faith is a very simple thing,
Though very little understood;
It frees the soul from death's dread sting
By resting in the blood.

"It looks not on the things around,
Nor on the things within;
It takes its flight to scenes above,
Beyond the spheres of sin."

Beloved reader, do you wish your faith strengthened ten-fold, a thousand-fold!—giving God the glory? Take the Bible, the blessed Bible, the word of God, which "is quick and powerful, sharper than any two-edged sword;" make it your constant study, meditation and prayer; pore over its pages night and day, commit it to memory, drink into its spirit, treasure it up, bring it home to your inmost soul, practically; hide it in your heart, let it be your food, your meat and your drink, a lamp to your feet, a light to your path.

Aside from its quickening, purifying, sanctifying influences, the examples of faith set forth in this blessed volume are calculated to raise our thoughts heavenward, "build us up in our most holy faith," make us perfect, establish, strengthen, settle us." In these examples left on record for our instruction, we see the beauties of faith, the excellencies, the glorious workings of it; its triumphs, its elevating, purifying tendencies; the honor it confers upon the Author and Finisher of it. We see also in this same volume the evils of unbelief; how it dishonors God, brings darkness, misery, and death to the soul. As an example of the saving faith in God, bright and shining, take the case of Abraham, see how wonderfully God honored him for his faith—for time and eternity. "Seest thou how faith wrought with his works, and by works was faith made perfect?" Moses, Joshua and Caleb are living witnesses of humble trust in God; the holy prophets also—Daniel in the lion's den—the three men in the fiery furnace, heated seven times hotter than was wont; the trial of their faith was more precious than gold that perisheth, though tried in the fire, that it might be "found unto praise, and honor, and glory, at the appearing of Jesus Christ." Come near home to the New Testament, saints who received joyfully the spoiling of their goods—trusting in God. Examine carefully and prayerfully the faith of the apostles—especially the faith of Paul, who counted not his life dear to himself, that he might win Christ and be found in him, not having his own righteousness, but the righteousness through faith in God. It was through faith in Christ that he was enabled to fight the good fight of faith, lay hold of eternal life, and finish his course with joy, through much tribulation.

Paul speaks for himself. He tells what his faith led him to endure. 2 Cor. xi. 23-28.

In labors more abundant; in stripes above measure; in prison more frequent; in deaths oft; five times forty stripes save one; thrice was I beaten with rods; once was I stoned; thrice I suffered shipwreck; a night and day in the deep, in journeyings often; in perils of water; in perils of robbers; in perils of my own countrymen; in perils by the heathen; in perils in the city; in perils in the wilderness; in perils in the sea; in perils among false brethren; in weariness and painfulness; in watching often; in hunger and thirst; in fasting often; in cold and nakedness; with the care of all the churches. Total—Our light affliction, which is but for a moment. 2 Cor. iv. 17.

"I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory that shall be revealed in us. Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors, through him that loved us. For I am persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord." Rom. viii. 18, 37-39. All through faith in Christ.

Read, attentively, the eleventh chapter of Hebrews, and behold in living characters the faith of Abel, Enoch, Noah, Abraham, Jacob, Joseph, Moses, Gideon, Sampson, Samuel, David, and the prophets—"who, through faith subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of lions—quenched the violence of fire, escaped the edge of the sword, out of weakness were made strong, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the armies of the aliens. Women received their dead raised to life—and others were tortured, not accepting deliverance, that they might obtain a better resurrection.

"Faith, mighty faith, the promise sees,
And looks to God alone;
Laughs at impossibilities,
And cries, 'It shall be done.'"

Reader, are you weak in faith, tremblingly so? Go to God, to the Book of books, the inspiration of heaven—search the Scriptures. There is no possible way so sure and speedy of securing faith, humble trust in God, a faith that works by love, and purifies the heart, as a careful, persevering study of the Bible, imitating those who endured as seeing "Him who is invisible."

"Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God."

The Dutch Republic.

On the 23d of January last the people of Holland celebrated the 300th anniversary of their national independence. The long struggle in the sixteenth century between Spain and the Netherlands was brought to a crisis, if not to a conclusion, by the agreement called the Union of Utrecht, which was drawn up and promulgated in January, 1579. The political consequences of the act were not seen for some years afterwards; they were not, indeed, fully realized until the following century. But a true historical judgment and a sound national instinct have alike led the people of Holland to date their national independence from the Union of Utrecht and to do honor to the anniversary as the crowning moment of their forefathers' heroic resistance and the harbinger of their coming deliverance.

What gives to the struggle for Dutch independence its special and distinctive significance is the fact that it was the occasion on which the two great religious forces, which in the sixteenth century were striving for the mastery in Europe, first came to a decisive issue. The contest was not so much a political one, in which rival forms of government were contending for the mastery, as a religious one between different systems of belief. It is true the ultimate issue was the establishment of a republic; but the States of Holland would gladly have accepted a monarch if they could have found a Protestant ruler willing to mount the throne. The one thing they would not put up with was the forcible establishment of the Romish faith. Thus the United Netherlands formed from the first dawn of their independence a northern bulwark against the designs of Rome and a stronghold of Protestantism at a time when the whole civilized world seemed doomed to fall again under the yoke of Catholic Spain. This resistance to spiritual domination gave its determination to the revolt of the United Provinces and insured its success. Their commercial prosperity had been established long before, when the discovery of the route to the East Indies round the Cape of Good Hope gave a new direction to the commerce of the world. But the religious struggles of the time, so momentous in their issues, gave to the little confederacy, which at first had so much to do to maintain itself against its powerful foes, the unity of purpose which was needed in order to secure its future greatness. Nothing in modern history is more remarkable, more romantic we might say, than the growth of the Dutch power, with its achievements in war and politics, in commerce and material prosperity, in arts and literature, during the century which followed the establishment of its independence. When William the Silent died in 1584, stricken by the hand of the fanatical Balthazar Gerard, his last words were, "O, my God, have mercy upon this poor people." Long before his descendant, William III., became King of England in 1689 this "poor people" had become one of the foremost in Europe. It had accomplished its own freedom, it was the rival of England in commerce and on the seas, it had withstood and was still baffling the power of France under Louis XIV., its universities were among the first in Europe, its colonies were in all lands and its ships on every sea, its literature had given a Grotius, its art a Rembrandt, to the world. One of the earliest arctic explorers was the Dutchman Barentz; another Dutchman was the first to double Cape Horn and to discover the nearest land to the Southern Pole. In North America Holland had planted a colony in the centre of what is now the United States, and its capital, New Amsterdam, afterwards called Orange, was first called New York after it fell into English hands. In South America the settlement of Guiana, in Africa that of the Cape, in Asia those in India, in Ceylon, Java, Sumatra, and New Guinea, attested the fertility of Holland as a founder of colonies. Dutch voyagers discovered the Australasian world. At home, while commerce flourished, and the wealth of the globe was displayed on the quays of Rotterdam and Amsterdan, Holland became the chosen retreat of European learning and the seat of an abundant and vigorous native art. Many a scholar of European fame, like Scaliger, the prince of letters in his time, and Salmasius, of whom it was said that whatever he did not know was beyond the reach of learning, was called by the public voice to teach in its schools, and the presses of Amsterdam, of Leyden and of Utrecht teemed with voluminous and erudite literature. In Spinoza the country may be said to have produced a philosopher whose writings may be said to have influenced the whole current of European thought; while in art the Dutch school not only created a distinctive style of its own at a time when the artistic impulse of other nations was very nearly exhausted, but laid the foundation of the modern school of landscape. These were no slight achievements for a small nation in the first century of its independent existence; nor has the history of Holland down to the present day been unworthy of its heroic beginnings. If the kingdom has lost many of its colonies, and therewith some of its political weight among the Powers of Europe, it has lost none of the qualities which once gave it pre-eminence. The country is prosperous, contented and well governed, its commerce is as active as heretofore, and though it now has rivals of more powerful calibre, it has by no means fallen behind in the race. Even in literature, though it has to contend against the disadvantage of a language which has lost some of its importance in the world, it still holds its own, and its schools are still among the most learned in Europe.—London Times.

Spring Song.

O hope of the world that risest again
New-born from the clod,
O life that brightens on meadow and fen
With the breath of God,
O daffodils brave whose banners fly
At the snow's retreat,
O sweet warm winds of the south that sigh
O'er the springing wheat,
O birds that tell in the branches bare
Of the summer days—
Read me your lesson; teach me your prayer;
Fill my soul with your praise.

Who Lit the Lamps?

Upon the rocky coasts of Cornwall there stood, some years ago, an old-fashioned lighthouse. It was placed amidst some very dangerous rocks, and was found a great blessing to the sailors passing near the coast, in directing them on dark and stormy nights. Many were the shipwrecks it prevented, and many the blessings that were breathed forth to heaven by the sailors for its guiding and cheering light.

You would have thought that everybody would have been glad that that lighthouse stood upon those rocks, and rejoiced in the good it did. But it was not so.

There was a set of wicked men who looked upon that lighthouse with angry eyes, and often wished some storm would come and sweep it quite away. Is not this, dear child, an awful proof of the truth of the Scripture, that the heart is "desperately wicked?" They longed to see the vessels wrecked that they might gather up some of the spoils scattered about in their destruction, and they therefore hated the lighthouse that thus deprived them of their hoped-for treasures. Oh! how much sin and misery would be unknown if it would but take heed of God's warning: "Thou shalt not covet."

Still the lighthouse stood, watched over by the eye of God, and kept in its perilous position by his all-protecting, powerful arm.

At the time I am writing about, a good man and his little daughter lived in this lonely dwelling; and my story will be chiefly about this little girl.

The lighthouse was so placed upon the rocks, that at low water, when the tide was out, you could walk across to the shore, but at high water nobody could get to it, as no boat could be taken in safety among those breakers and rocks. So all food and other things this good man needed for himself and his child were brought to them, or fetched by them, when the water was low, and the lighthouse keeper often had to go on shore for them. One day he went as usual, leaving his little girl alone in the lighthouse, when some of the "wreckers" seized him, and determined to prevent his going back to light his lamps, in the hope that some ship would be wrecked in the darkness. The poor man was in great distress when he found that he was the prisoner of these wicked men, and begged hard to be allowed to return; but in vain. There they kept him till long after the tide came in, and the dark night had gathered around, and it became impossible for him to return. At last they let him go, and he stood upon the shore in great distress. The night was becoming a very stormy one. The wild winds roared furiously. The rain came down in torrents. The lightning flashed. The thunder rolled terrifically. The sea dashed furiously up the lighthouse, sometimes covering it entirely with the waves. Poor man! what was he to do? The lantern was all dark at the top of his house, and the sailors left without light on this fearful night, near the rocky coast. He could see some ships in the distance, and he trembled lest they should be wrecked for want of his lamps being lighted. He thought, too, of his precious child left there alone. He knew she was too little to do anything; so there he stood in deep distress.

Around him were the savage wreckers, glorying in the success of their wicked scheme, and looking for a large booty by the morning—when all of a sudden, a brilliant light shone forth. It was from the lighthouse. Yes, the lantern was lighted up and its bright and glowing rays shot far across the dark and stormy sea. The wreckers saw it too, and were filled with wonder and anger. How true again is what the Bible says: "The triumph of the wicked is short!" Their life is all disappointment and bitterness of heart. The wages they get is death, and Satan never forgets to pay those who work for him.

But the sailors far off in the ships were delighted as they caught its beams, and the good man scarcely knew how to contain himself, he was so full of surprise and joy as he exclaimed: "Who lit the lamps?"

But about the little girl, for I am sure you are very anxious to hear how she bore the sorrow of that dreadful night. Very distressed indeed was she when her father did not return, as she had expected. She watched the tide come rolling up and covering the rocks, so that there was no way left of getting to the shore. She heard the wind get up, and her little heart trembled as she felt it rock the lighthouse. She noticed the dark night setting in, and saw the storm beginning to rise. As she looked out, she could just catch a glimpse of the ships in the distance, and she knew if the lamps were not lighted they would perhaps, be wrecked. In her distress she began to think what she could do. At last that text out of the Bible, one of her dear mother's last words, came into her mind. "Call upon me in the day of trouble, and I will deliver thee." So down she knelt, and prayed earnestly to God to help her in her trouble. Then rising, she went up into the lantern at the top of the tower, to see if she could light the lamps herself. She saw the long stick with which her father lit them, but she was far too little to reach them; downstairs, therefore, she went, and with great labor dragged up a table, and climbed on to it and tried again, but still she could not reach the lamps. Down again she went to seek for something more to stand on, when her eye fell on her mother's large Bible, which she carried up with great labor into the lantern, and laid it on the table. But now she thought it would, perhaps, be wrong to stand upon the Bible she so much reverenced, and she stopped a little to pray for God to direct her, and help her to light the lamps. Then, climbing up, she stood tiptoe on the book, and to her joy found she could just reach the lamps.

In a minute all the lamps were lighted, and the lantern blazed out to the joy of the sailors in the ships, the surprise and gladness of her father, and the shame and disappointment of the wreckers on the shore.

Such is my little story and it is quite true. As I have told it to you I have been thinking that there are others in danger of being lost, and other wreckers besides those on the coast of Cornwall. In this world of ours people are all in danger of losing their way, and being forever lost through their folly and sin. And there are wreckers in the shape of wicked people who try to injure and destroy those who are around them. And I have thought of the church of God, with the light of truth, as a lighthouse for the world, in which even a child may help to kindle the lamps and save some soul from death.

Look around you, dear child, and see if you can not light some lamps of truth and love which shall help to save and bless, if it be only one of your young companions.—London Tract.

Trust in Our Father.

"Johnny, don't you think you have got as much as you can carry?" said Frank to his brother, who was standing with open arms, receiving the bundles his father placed upon them. "You've got more than you can carry, now."

"Never mind," said Johnny, in a sweet, happy voice, "my father knows how much I can carry."

How long it takes many of us to learn the lesson little Johnny had by heart! "Father knows how much I can carry." No grumbling, no discontent, but a sweet trust in our Father's love and care that we will not be over-burdened. Our heavenly Father never lays a burden upon us that we cannot bear.

Hints about Accidents.

BRUISES, SPRAINS, FRACTURES.

We group these classes of injuries under the same heading because they frequently complicate each other in the same accident, sometimes all three being caused by the same misfortune.

Again, those having the care of the unfortunate one immediately after an accident are generally unable to tell which form of injury they have to deal with, and therefore need to know what remedies are suited to either class of injuries, and, at the same time, what will not do harm to any of them.

Bruises may be produced on any part of the body—are caused by the body's coming in contact more or less forcibly, with some external body—and are always found in the vicinity of the point of contact.

Sprains most frequently occur at or near the ankle, knee or wrist joints, and are generally caused by indirect force applied to the extremity of the limb injured. Fractures are more apt to be found a few inches from the joints, though they are often found near or to extend into the joints. Sometimes they are located at the site of injury (when the violence of the accident is great) though generally they are found like sprains at some distance from the point of contact—as when a person falling strikes his hand against the ground and fractures his arm near the elbow.

The first thing to be done when any one or two of the above conditions occur as the result of an accident, is to place the sufferer in as comfortable a position as possible, where he can have plenty of fresh air and perfect quiet. It is of the utmost importance that all unnecessary persons should be kept out of sight, as not only do they vitiate the air, but by their presence they increase the shock through which the injured one is passing. If faint the head should be placed as low as the rest of the body, and some cold water sprinkled forcibly in the face. Stimulants should not be given unless the shock is very severe, and then they should be administered with care, as all stimulants tend to increase the state of reaction, which is sure to come on in a short time, and which state, unless controlled, is apt to run into inflammation.

When a bone in the extremities is broken, a joint sprained, or a tendon strained, it will generally give relief (and can do no harm) to have the limb stretched as hard as possible by manual strength in the natural direction of the limb. Then place pieces of shingle, covered with some soft material if possible, on either side of the limb and bind pretty snugly. This will specially give relief when it is necessay to remove the patient some distance. Should the injured limb prove to be a lower extremity the other limb makes an excellent splint. If it is an arm place it in a sling, which gives great relief even when the injury is near the shoulder. Broken ribs are best splinted by means of a broad band tightly pinned around the chest. When you are sure that you have a sprain alone to deal with let the joint be placed as soon as possible in a pail of hot water, as hot as can be easily borne, and let hotter water be added from time to time, being careful not to scald the limb.—Christian Union.

Root Culture.

A correspondent of the Ohio Farmer says upon this matter: For the benefit of the many readers of your valuable paper who are unacquainted with the culture of beets and roots generally, and who have no idea of the great value of that crop for stock feeding in winter, I would give you the average result of many years on my own grounds. In arriving at the following figures, I do not by any means give the largest yield, but rather under the medium, in order not to mislead any one; would also say that the figures are actual sums paid at the usual price of labor for plowing, seed, sowing, cultivation, and harvesting one acre of mangel-wurtzel beets:

Plowing the land	$3 00
Drawing out manure	4 00
Spreading manure and dragging	2 50
Ridging the land	1 00
Paid for three pounds of yellow globe mangel seed	1 80
Sowing seed with drill	75
Cultivating five times with horse	6 00
Hoeing three times by hand	7 50
Total	$26 55

Amount of beets raised, 20 tons per acre; cost per ton $1 33, or 4 cents per bushel. Adding to this cost for pulling topping, and burying in heaps for winter ¾ cent per bushel, or 25 cents per ton, makes total cost 4¾ cents per bushel, for an article invaluable to cattle from a sanitary point of view, and, compared to other feed at average prices, worth at least 15 to 20 cents per bushel.

Mangel-wurtzel and sugar beets are the nearest approach to grass, and have a very beneficial effect upon cattle, leaving them in better health in the spring, thus gaining much time and money. I feed beets every day, mixed with a little meal —the latter to improve the quality of the greatly increased quantity of milk obtained.

That Butter Bowl.—If Mrs.—— will take some nice sweet lard, heat quite hot, and before her butter-bowl has been wet, pour it in and wash the inside well with it, pour out and heat again, turn back in the bowl and wash again, and so on, until the lard comes through on the outside, then wash good, and I don't think she will have any more trouble with butter-bowls cracking, at least I never have.

S. J. G., Waubeck, Iowa, writes: I think if Mrs. —— will dry her wooden butter-bowls in the house, never putting them in the sun or wind, she will have no trouble with them splitting. I learned this of a farmer years ago, and in over four years house-keeping have never had a bowl split.

Good Cake.—Two eggs; butter as big as a butternut; four spoonsful brown sugar; one teaspoonful of soda dissolved in one spoonful of water.

Marble Cake.—White.—Whites of four eggs; one and a half cups of white sugar; one half cup of sweet milk; one teaspoonful cream tartar; one half teaspoonful soda; one half cup of butter; two and one half cups of flour.

Brown.—Yolks of four eggs; one cup brown sugar; one half cup molasses; one half teaspoonful each cloves and cinnamon; one half cup of sour milk; one half teaspoonful soda; one half cup of butter; two and one half cups of flour.

—Rev. A. D. Zaraphonithes of Greece, who has been educated in this country at Wheaton and at Union Theological Seminary, New York, through the generous aid of Mr. S. V. White of Brooklyn, was married last week to Miss F. H. Wetmore of Lawn Ridge, Illinois. He expects to return immediately to his native land to engage in the great work of preaching the Gospel. He goes untrammeled by any pledges to mission boards and not dependent on them for help, believing with Bro. Norton of the Elichpoor mission, India, that it is better to go forth on such a work in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ as did Paul. The lady whom he has chosen to be his companion in this great work is commended by all who know her as an earnest and devoted Christian, whose abilities and education eminently fit her for an helpmeet for her husband in the mission to which he is called in the Providence of God. As Mr. and Mrs Zaraphonithes visit Wheaton during the present week to say farewell to friends, we shall say something more in regard to his work next week.

Free Methodist.

—Rev. W. F. Manley conducted the quarterly meeting at the Free Methodist church on Morgan street, this city, on Saturday and Sabbath and administered the communion.

—Superintendent Roberts has preached about 100 sermons during eight weeks' work in San Francisco, Cal. He was expecting during April to begin work at Alameda.

—With the notices of the early camp-meetings, the Free Methodist has an editorial with much good advice in respect to such meetings.

Baptist.

—The Baptist Theological Seminary closed its scholastic year last week and graduated fifteen young men. Among them were Mr. H. C. Leland, formerly from Eau Claire, Wisconsin, who took a stand against the secret fraternities when a student in Chicago University, but is better known from his evangelistic work with Rev. A. P. Graves; and J. K. Wheeler, a graduate of Wheaton. Mr. Leland goes to Grinnell, Iowa, Mr. Wheeler to Marengo, Illinois.

—One-fifth of the population of Richmond, Virginia, are Baptists. There are in the city nine churches of white Baptists and ten of colored ones.

—The New York Ministers' Conference restored Rev. Dr. Fulton to full membership at the last meeting.

—The Baptist anniversaries are all to be held this year at Saratoga, N. Y.

—Rochester Theological Seminary has received a donation of $150,000.

United Presbyterian.

—The Presbytery of Mansfield at its late meeting entertained a resolution which declares that it shall be a standing rule of the Presbytery not to license a young man to preach who uses tobacco unless he have a certificate from a physician that it is necessary to his health. It proposes the same rule, also, to govern in cases of installation.

—It is reported that Rev. Samuel Collins D.D., for eleven years Superintendent of the Board of Publication, No. 55 Ninth street, Pittsburgh, has decided to retire from the position. He has been a prudent and careful officer, and his obliging disposition and zeal in all that pertains to the welfare of the community has made for him many friends both in and out of the church.

—The General Assembly of the U. P. church meets in New Wilmington, Pa., the last week in May.

—Prof. W. G. Moorhead of Xenia Theological Seminary is to address the literary societies of the Indiana State University this year at commencement.

—The Secretary of the Home Mission Board reports a debt of over $17,000 which he hopes may be reduced to $10,000 before the annual report to the General Assembly.

Free Baptist.

—Elder H. S. Limbocker of Reading, Mich., called at the Cynosure office last week. He reports the cause prospering in all his neighborhood.

—The yearly meeting of the Ministers' Conference of the Free Baptist church of Illinois, will be held at Fiat, May 30. The opening sermon will be preached by Rev. W. C. Hulse.

Ministerial Conference. — The Ministers' Conference of the Genesee Yearly Meeting will be held at Byron, N. Y., June 25–27. Opening sermon by Rev. Isaac Hyatt, alternate, Rev. J. D. Smith; General Judgment, Rev. J. M. Crandall; Evidences of Christianity, Rev. C. B. Hart; The Resurrection Body, Rev. C. A. Hilton; God Revealed in Nature; Rev. D. M. L. Rollin; Intermediate State of the Devil, Rev. R. Martin; The True Mission of the Church, Rev. J. D. Smith; Correct Position of the Church on the Temperance Question, Rev. C. H. Hoog; Whom to Encourage to enter the Christian Ministry and by what Means; Rev. Isaac Hyatt.

All ministers of this Y. M. not included in the above are requested to prepare papers of their own selection for criticism.

Congregational.

—At the meeting of the Chicago Congregational Association last week, in Bethany church in this city, the sailor missionary, Capt. Henry Bundy, was admitted to membership.

—Mrs. Maria B. Holyoke, wife of the pastor of the Malden, Ill., church, has again entered the lecture field against intemperance. She is speaking this week in the towns along the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy road in Bureau and Henry counties. Mrs. Holyoke has had large experience and success in this field.

—Pres. J. Blanchard preached last Sabbath to the Tonica, Ill., church, Prof. E. D. Bailey, the pastor, being unwell. Prof. C. A. Blanchard expects to preach in the same place next Lord's day.

—The British Congregationalists in 1878 opened fifty-one new chapels in England and Ireland, and laid the corner stone of six others; spent $895,815 on foreign, colonial and home missions, and had 58 professors and 517 students in eighteen colleges in England, Wales, Scotland and the colonies.

Wesleyan.

—A very interesting private letter from Rev. H. W. Hampe of Burlingame, Kans., formerly of Linesville, Pa., tells of the victory of the Wesleyan brethren of Topeka over the logde opposition; but the strain of this battle together with church building has nearly prostrated the nervous system of the pastor, Bro. G. L. Shepardson. He will rest and Bro. Hampe carries on his work. The letter closes thus: "We intend, the Lord permitting, to establish a book depot of the reform at Topeka, which is a central point. We have now two preaching places in the city and two around it, with a membership of about 65. Two other calls have been made for preaching, one north and one south of the city, and we have a good helper in the person of an M. E. local preacher who is an Anti-mason, and has joined with us. There are signs of a bountiful harvest, and a mighty rain that will sweep away the refuge of lies. To-day we are having a drenching rain all day, the first flood rain that Kansas has had since last summer. May a great spiritual rain soon follow."

Friends.

—The monthly meeting at Cæsar's Creek, O., reports 66 new members received. Nathan T. Frame and his wife Esther were commissioned to preach in Ohio and Indiana.

—In addition to Penn and Whittier Colleges in Iowa, maintained by the Quakers, there are Springdale Seminary in Cedar county and West Branch Academy: also Stanford Seminary, in Marshall county; Ackworth Institute, in Warren county; Pleasant Plain Academy, in Jefferson county, and Bear Creek Academy, in Dallas county, all preparing the young Friends for usefulness in the society and the world. The first college term of Penn College opened on the 23rd of September, 1873, with 101 students. Since the organization of the college there have been, prior to this year, 1,338 students enrolled. The school is conducted by the society of Friends, yet many who are not members have availed themselves of the advantages here offered.

Presbyterian.

—Prof. Francis W. Patton of the Theological Seminary of this city has had a call to the London Theological College. He will not decide to accept until after the meeting of the General Assembly.

—The General Assembly of the Presbyterian church in the United States of America will meet in the First Presbyterian church, Saratoga Springs, N. Y., on the third Thursday (15th) of May, 1879, at 11 o'clock A. M., and be opened with a sermon by the Rev. Francis L. Patton, D D, LL.D., the Moderator of the last assembly. Dr. Stryker of Saratoga, suggests that gentleman will not smoke in the houses where they stop during the meeting of the Presbyterian General Assembly unless they are especially invited to do so.

—The Scottish fast days are losing their hold upon the Presbyterian people of New Zealand, even in Otago, which is Presbyterian to the core. At Dunedin the churches have decided not to observe them any longer, but in lieu of them to celebrate the Lord's Supper four times a year instead of yearly or half yearly.

—As an evidence of the remarkable growth of the Presbyterian church in the South of England, it is interesting to note that whereas but a few years ago there were only twenty congregations in thePresbytery of London, with not a single ministerial stipend exceeding $2,000 there are now no less than seventy-two charges in the same Presbytery, in twenyt-eight of which the salary given reaches $2,000, while in eight instances it ranges from $4,000 to $6,000.

—The Presbytery which has been trying the case of Dr. Talmage of Brooklyn, voted to acquit 25 to 20. Dr. VanDyke of the prosecution intimated that he would take the case before the Synod and General Assembly if necessary.

—The Presbyterian Banner says: "The present graduating class in the Western Theological Seminary in Alleghany numbers twenty-nine, twenty-three of whom have devoted themselves to the home and foreign missionary fields."

GENERAL.

—Bibles are not allowed to enter Russia except through the Holy Synod, but the late war enabled the British and Foreign Bible Society to place 300 000 copies of the book in the hands of Russians while they were out of their native country.

—The Sunday law in regard to trading was enforced in Newport, R. I., last week, for the first time in the last quarter of a century. The markets, news-rooms, groceries and shops have been accustomed to keep open till nine o'clock on Sunday morning.

—The Rev. Dr. Shedd writes from Hamadan, Persia, a very interesting letter about a movement among the Jews of that place. One of the oldest colonies of Jews in the world is found at Hamadan. Their ancestors were carried captive by the Assyrian King twenty-five centuries ago. For months past the colony has been agitated by the question: "Is not Jesus the Messiah?" Four of the chief men, the heads of 1,000 houses (about 5,000), have after long trial, been publicly baptized, and many others are asking to confess Christ. As in the days of the apostles, all the city is moved, and one Nestorian helper is day and night beset with Jews seeking instruction in the New Testament.

—A Zulu prince named Umkwa Cantaba, a cousin of King Cetywayo has arrived at Helsingborg, Sweden, in company with a Swedish missionary, who has converted him to Christianity. He is said to be fine looking. A great crowd turning out to see him, he made the naive remark, "I never knew before that there were so many white men. From their war with my cousin I thought that they were rather a small tribe."

THE RUSSIAN CHURCH.—The European Messenger, in an article on the Russian clergy, says that the total number of persons in Holy Orders in the Russian Empire is about 100,000. Assuming that each clergyman has a family of three persons, the total number of persons belonging to the clergy (exclusive of the members of monastic institutions, who are not allowed to marry) is 400,000. The writer expresses surprise that, although it appears from the report of the procurator general of the holy synod that the receipts of the synod amounted on January 1st, 1878, to about 26,000,000 roubles yearly, nothing has been done to ameliorate the condition of the poor clergy in the rural districts. Of the above sum, 10,000,000 roubles is contributed by the State. Thre are now in Russia 420 cathedrals, 38,302 churches, and 12 408 chapels; and the European Messenger suggests that it would be better to do something for the poorer clergy than to build 423 new churches a year, as had been hitherto the case. The writer says that it shows that the translation of the Bible into Russian was only begun in 1856, and that it was not completed until the beginning of the year 1877. The first edition of 24,000 copies, has been exhausted, and a second is now being published. The total number of persons who entered the Orthodox Russian church in 1877 was 11,299, including 653 Protestants and 1,339 Roman Catholics. The national schools attached to churches and monasteries in 1877 were 6,321 in number, and there were 532 monasteries and convents; while the number of universties, gymnasia and scientific schools in Russia is only 363 in all. In the monastic institutions there are 10,500 monks and 1600 nuns.

News of the Week.

—The ladies of Brooklyn are protesting against the rebuilding of the Brooklyn Theater on the site where so many lives were lost in 1876. They ask that the lot be purchased, surrounded by an iron fence and a suitable monument be erected.

—Secretary Sherman was on a visit last week to his home in Mansfield, Ohio. He was received with great demonstrations, and the speculations on his being candidate for the presidency have received a great revival.

—A fire last Saturday afternoon in the dry house of a large planing mill in this city, burned over some three acres of ground and involved a loss of $130,000 to $150,000. During Saturday and Sunday there were twelve fire alarms, the long dry spell preparing the way for them. During the same time eighteen fires were reported from elsewhere. The woods about Scranton, Pa., are being devoured by fire causing great loss. A $100,000 fire occurred in East St. Louis and one in St. Louis causing a loss of some $160,000.

—Lucretia Mott, in the 87th year of her age, has been elected President of the Pennsylvania Peace Society, and is as able to attend to the duties as she forty years ago.

—Heavy rains in Minnesota Saturday and Sunday, with cooler weather since, remove all apprehensions of drought, and place the wheat crop under most favorable possible circumstances for growth.

—Official return of the vote in San Francisco on the new State Constitution give a majority against the new constitution of 1,215. Returns from the interior confirm previous advices, and the instrument is adopted by a majority of from 6,000 to 10 000. The farmers seem to have voted almost solidly for it. The result has caused much bitterness of feeling in business circles, where it is looked upon to a considerable extent as an attack upon city interests by the interior. There is evident, however, a determination to make the best of what is believed to be the unfortunate issue of an important question.

—A terrible explosion took place at Stratford, Ontario, on the Grand Trunk railroad. A car containing dynamite was being shunted, when it exploded, it is supposed, from a package falling down. A number of men were killed and injured. Fully fifty cars of miscellaneous freight, principally local, were wrecked and reduced to splinters, and more than as many more had their doors and sides smashed by the force of the concussion. Wheels, axles and rails were mixed up in the most inextricable confusion, and pieces of iron weighing several hundred pounds were hurled to a distance of one or two hundred yards, burying themselves several feet in the ground. Where the car was standing the ground was dug up a depth of about twenty feet, and twenty feet around. The freight shed, a large and substantial brick building, fifty yards from the exploded car, was badly wrecked, half of the roof and the end being blown to pieces. The sound in the town was like an earthquake. Almost every house in the town had more or less glass broken. The shock was felt at all the towns within a radius of twenty miles. The loss is estimated at between $700,000 and $1,000,000.

—Private accounts from Russia represent the situation all over the country as beyond description, and that the tendency of the so-called repressive measures is toward revolution rather than peace, as the present annoyance and outrageous oppression of all classes of the population are rapidly spreading the feeling that anything is preferable to the existing state of affairs. It is asserted that the government is really playing the game of the Nihilists, instead of crushing out the spirit of discontent in the empire. The Journal of St. Petersburg says news published abroad about the state of affairs there is untrue. There has been no prohibition against the possession of arms, but persons possessing arms must inform the authorities. All traffic is entirely free and unimpeded. The statements that theaters could not be visited without an official permit, and that the lights in houses would not be allowed after 10 P. M., are ridiculous inventions. The city lives and works in the same manner as heretofore, without excitement, and undisturbed in its daily life and intercourse.

—The Ameer of Afghanistan arrived at Gundamuk May 8. He was met at the frontier by Major Cavagnari and a detachment of the Sixteenth Hussars and Guides. British troops of all arms lined the route to the camp, two and one-half miles distant. General Brown and staff received the Ameer at the end of the line, and a salute of twenty-one guns was fired. The Ameer has announced his official visit to the Viceroy of India, and expressed his desire for the establishment of friendly relations between India and Afghanistan.

—A later dispatch from Lahore announces that Yakoob Khan has accepted all the British proposals. These advance the frontier line so as to give the British the Kajuk Pass, Pisheen Valley, the Korum Valley as far as the Shuargadan Pass, and the Khyber Pass as far as Loarge. The British also gain the right to keep an agent at Candahar. Major Cavagnari will return as envoy to Cabul with Yakoob Khan.

THE EXODUS.

—The Charleston (S. C.) News and Courier says there are two phases of the exodus question in that State. The negroes in many counties are preparing to leave the State, and in addition to this the colored people from different sections are flocking to Beaufort county, the only county in South Carolina which the Democrats did not carry at the last election.

—General Conway, of New Jersey, who has long been identified with the work of improving the condition of the colored people of the South has been stopping at St. Louis for several days in behalf of the charitable and philanthropic people of Philadelphia, to ascertain the condition and needs of the refugees from the South and report to the people East how they may be wisely helped. In an interview last Saturday, he says the exodus is only in its inception, and if it were not for the terrorism exercised over the negroes by the planters and merchants along the Mississippi river to keep them from leaving there would have been 20,000 refugees here now. He thinks, however, this terrorism will wear out after a short time, and the colored people will then begin to leave again. He also says that many more would have left but for the fact that steamboat men have refused them transportation under threats of merchants, planters and others that they would withdraw their patronage if they continued to take the emigrants away. He thinks the negroes in the South ought to come out, but advises them not to leave until provisions can be made for them in the north and west. He says he has already received offers of employment as farmers in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Western Pennsylvania for thousands, and in Indiana alone, he says, homes can be found for 5,000 in twenty days. Owing to the not altogether harmonious feeling among the colored people of this city who have so far done the principle work in assisting the refugees, he thinks a committee of trustworthy and influential white citizens should be organized here. If this were done he says there would be no lack of money to carry on the work; but as things exist now not much assistance can be looked for from the east.

—Advices by steamer Halliday, arriued at Memphis last week, state that several hundred negoes have armed themselves near Carolina and Leoti landings, Miss. Their object is stated to be to seize the first passing steamer that may land within their jurisdiction and compel the vessel to convey them toward Kansas.

Sabbath School.

LESSON XXI.—May 25, 1879.—THE HOLY SPIRIT PROMISED.

SCRIPTURE.—Joel 2:28-32.

28 And it shall come to pass afterward,
That I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh;
And your sons and your daughters shall prophesy,
Your old men shall dream dreams,
Your young men shall see visions:
29 And also upon the servants and upon the handmaids
In those days will I pour out my Spirit.
30 And I will show wonders in the heavens and in the earth,
Blood and fire, and pillars of smoke.
31 The sun shall be turned into darkness,
And the moon into blood,
Before the great and terrible day of the Lord come.
32 And it shall come to pass,
That whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be delivered:
For in Mount Zion and in Jerusalem shall be deliverance,
As the Lord hath said,
And in the remnant whom the Lord shall call.

[From International Quarterly.]

JOEL THE PROPHET.—The name signifies "the man who has Jehovah for his God." The only thing mentioned by the prophet concerning himself is the name of his father Pethuel (chap. 1:1). He was a native of southern Judah, and may be called the earliest prophet of Judah, Amos and Jonah being cotemporary in Judah, and Hosea in Israel. He is supposed to have lived during the reign of Uzziah, King of Judah, and Jehoshaphat, King of Israel, B. C. 810-800, though some writers place it earlier from 860-840 B. C.

The book of Joel is second in the list of minor prophets, which form the "fifth division" of the Old Testament, and were regarded by the Jews as one collection. The style is very pure, strong and sublime, It is a vivid pictorial description of the dispensations. As Micah shared with Isaiah the honor of announcing Christ, "it was reserved to Joel first to declare the outpouring of the Spirit upon all flesh, the perpetual abiding of the church, the last rebellion against God, and the day of judgment." The prophets were given a double sight: 1. Of things temporal and near. 2. Of things spiritual and more remote. The outline of the book of Joel is as follows, viz: Chapter 1, 2:2. The Lord's army sent upon them for disobedience and the desolation of the land. 2. Chapter 2:12-27. A day of restoration and blessing begun. 3. Chapter 2:28-32. The dispensation of the Spirit, and the deliverance of Israel. 4. Chapter 3. A more specific account of the days of Israel's deliverance, or the day of deliverance completed. This prophecy refers to God's ancient people, Israel, but our part is included in chap. 2:28, 29, the dispensation of the Spirit, which began at Pentecost (see Acts 2:16-21.)

There are three predictions in Joel. The first is the plague of locusts and drought, and the removal or reversal of that plague, occupying chapters 1 and 2 to the end of verse 27. The second is the effusion of the Holy Spirit, typified by the refreshing rain (chap. 2:28-32). These verses, according to the Hebrew arrangement, form chapter 3. The third prediction is the day of judgment, typified by the destruction wrought upon the locust scourge, and of the reign of righteousness accompanying and following the judgment. This occupies the remaining chapter.—Cook.

Joel's style is pre-eminently pure. It is characterized by smoothness and fluency in the rhymes, soundness in the sentences and regularity in the parallelisms. With the strength of Micah it combines the tenderness of Jeremiah, the vividness of Nahum, and the sublimity of Isaiah. As a specimen of his style take chapter 2, wherein the terrible aspect of the locusts, their rapidity, irresistible progress, noisy din and instinct-taught power of marshaling their forces for their career of devastation, are painted with graphic reality.—J. F. and B. in Peloubet's Notes.

[From S. S. Union Advanced Lessons.]

POINTS FOR SPECIAL STUDY.

1. The leading events of Joel's prophecy. 2. Their fulfillment. 3. The fulfillment of the promise of this lesson at Pentecost. 4. Its fulfillment in recent times. 5. The principal "dreams" and "visions" recorded in the New Testament. 6. The "wonders in the heavens," etc., recorded in Scripture. 7. Scripture revelations concerning "the day of the Lord." 8. Promises of safety to the saints. 9. How to have the presence of the Holy Spirit.

OUTLINE.

I. The Spirit of God poured out. The time is, as in the previous lesson, the days of Messiah. The Spirit was given in Old Testament times, but the gift was limited: (1) in amount—the light was scanty compared with New Testament times—and (2) in extent, being, as a rule, confined to Israel. Our Lord makes this outpouring dependent on his ascension (John 16:7). In apostolic times we see the two aspects: (a) the Spirit's gifts (1 Cor. 12:9-10); (b) the graces (Gal. 5:22, 23). The extent is "all flesh"—i. e. the human race, irrespective of nationality or condition.

II. The end of the dispensation. Great events in God's providence have, in Bible history, been marked by striking facts in nature. Comp. Ex. 7:17, 20; 19:18, etc. Hence, great judgments in the future are attended, in prophecy, by such signs. All preceding judgments are types of the final judgment, which closes—as Pentecost begins—Messiah's times.

PRACTICAL TEACHINGS.

The points to be made are—

1. God will not fail to have a people, though Israel sins.

2. He will pour out his Spirit on the world.

3. He will introduce another dispensation, with light for all—Jew and Gentile.

4. It will continue to the end.

5. It will be dangerous to disregard its light.

6. All who call on his name shall be his Israel—have their Zion and Jerusalem.

7. But there will be a terrible day for their enemies, as for the enemies of Israel, his son by adoption, and of Jesus, his very Son.

FREEMASONRY EXPOSED,
by CAP'T. WILLIAM MORGAN

THE GENUINE OLD MORGAN BOOK:—repnblished with engravings showing the Lodge Room, Dress of candidates, Signs, Due Guards, Grips, Etc.

This revelation is so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. Thousands have testified to the correctness of the revelation and this book therefore sells very rapidly.

Those who wish to know the character of Freemasonry, as shown by its own publications, will find many standard works in the following list.

No sensible Mason dares deny that such men as Albert G. Mackey, the great Masonic Lexicongrapher, and Daniel Sickels, the Masonic author and publisher, are the highest Masonic authority in the United States.

All the books advertised here are used by Masons, but Duncan's Ritual, Allyn's Ritual and Richardson's Monitor, are not publicly acknowledged as Masonic authority, because they tell too much.

FEMALE MASONRY.

ANNUAL OF THE ORDER OF THE EASTERN STAR.

EXPOSITIONS IN NORTHWESTERN ILLINOIS.

God willing Elder D. P. Rathbun will begin work in Carroll county, Illinois, on Friday, May 16th, and will lecture and work the degrees of Blue Lodge Masonry as follows:

Mt. Carroll, " " 23, 24.
Shannon, " " 26, 27.
Thompson " " 28, 29.

He will work the degrees in Morrison, Whiteside county, June 2nd and 3rd, and it is hoped will work in one or two other places in that county before going back to Iowa.

Topics of the Time.

The excellent management of Mrs. Hayes in banishing wines and all intoxicating liquors from the White House has never been too highly commended. The example of the executive head of our nation in this respect is illustrious, and is a significant honor to the great people whose chosen ruler he is. They should heartily sustain him and make these temperance principles so nobly illustrated truly American. A far different scene was enacted at a banquet given by the Mexican Minister lately. The correspondent of the Boston Times says of this revelry: "Women calling themselves ladies joined with the men in making this ball a scene of debauch seldom equalled even in Washington—noted for its intemperance. Men were seen carrying away bottles of champagne in their coat pockets. Ladies (?) tore the gold and silver skewers from the cold meats, and stuck them in their hair. One man was seen with a bottle of champagne between his heels, a glass in one hand and another bottle of champagne in the other. As fast as a dish was used it was tossed under the table, till the floor was strewn with broken glass and china. The next morning a wagon-load full of the costly broken stuff was carried away from the door."

Our Congressmen too readily follow these foreign customs, for it is said that on the last night of the Forty-fifth Congress the House restaurant sold nearly 3,000 drinks of lager beer.

The Ancient Order of Hibernians held a national meeting in Cincinnati last week, twenty-four States being represented by eighty delegates. This body is composed of Irish Catholics and they very naturally were found before the opening of their convention in the Catholic cathedral attending mass celebrated by Archbishop Purcell and listening to an address by him in which he thanked God that the Ancient Order of Hibernians, though during past years abused, slandered and reviled, had proved themselves to be true men, good and faithful members of society as well as law abiding citizens. He said he had abiding faith in the society and was glad to see that other prominent ecclesiastics in the country were now of the same opinion. There might be nothing remarkable in this but for the fact that these "Hibernians" were a few years ago all over the Pennsylvania coal regions known to the public as "Molly Maguires." As an organization they were Hibernians and were in constant affiliation with the order throughout the country, receiving the passwords annually or oftener, and when arrested for their assassinations were aided in the courts by funds raised by the order in other States. And this is not all, the "Mollies" were well known to their priests and never failed to secure their aid and benediction, though in public they were occasionally denounced. The Romish priests were the friends of these Hibernian Mollies and stood by them in court and on the gallows. Hence the significant reference of Archbishop Purcell, to the abuse endured by the order. Himself, had he lived among a less lenient people, might now be imprisoned for appropriating funds entrusted to him; and could therefore speak to these lodge delegates from full sympathy with their position.

The President's veto of the military interference bill, so called, has thrown Congress back another week. He makes a strong argument for refusing to sign such a bill, which is, from the circumstances, a threat to circumscribe his power. The law empowering the President of the United States to use the militia of the States or the regular troops in emergencies, he argues is ancient and fundamental, on which his predecessors have always relied. Washington, Jefferson, Jackson and others made use of it, and it, he says, should not be suspended or repealed for a single hour at any place in any part of the country. The argument of the veto message had a good effect on the opposition in Congress, and it was hoped that the proper appropriation bills would pass, and some more rational means be adopted of securing whatever good ends the Democratic party may have in view.

The exodus from the South, though for a time seeming to be checked, is only apparently so. The matter has been taken in hand at St. Louis with energy, and preparations made to receive large delegations of refugees and care for them temporarily. The work has been relieved of most of its hastily prepared arrangements and has taken a more permanent form. In Kansas the friends of the black man are organized into a relief force, which includes all the State officers and a number of private citizens of the State. This is known as the Freedmen's Aid Society of Kansas, with headquarters at Topeka. J. C. Hubbard, of that place, is Secretary, and to him all contributions should be sent. Governor St. John, in an interesting letter to Mrs. President Blanchard, of Wheaton, says that one half of the colored people arriving in that State are in a destitute condition, and hardly anything can come amiss for them. The greatest need, however, is for money and clothing. Churches and other societies who can aid these poor may be confident that proper distribution will be made of their donations.

THE TEMPLE OF HONOR.

1. ITS CREED.

BY A TEMPLAR OF FIDELITY.

Satan has many traps set for the unwary feet of the followers of Jesus. One of the most successful is the order of the Templars of Honor and Temperance, commonly known as the Temple of Honor; successful because, while being a counterfeit, it resembles so much the genuine. It is the well executed counterfeit that is the most deceptive.

This order does not forbid the mention of the name of Christ in open temple; on the contrary it sometimes refers to the Redeemer in a vague way in its ritual and manual, and if the calling of Lord, Lord, makes an institution acceptable to God, then the Temple of Honor is the proper place for Christians to assemble. But the words of Jesus are, "Not every one that saith unto me Lord, Lord, shall enter into into the kingdom of heaven."

Although the reading of the Scriptures in open temple, and the prayers and other forms of worship gone through with by the order is conclusively presumptive that it is a religious institution, yet this feature is always kept in the background when it is for the interest of the order so to do. On the approach of a Christian to the portals of the temple, he is assured that the order is not a religion, but simply a moral and temperance society. They profess to make known to him their principles in their "creed," but please note how vague is the wording of the second section. He is addressed as follows:

"Respected Sir:—You are welcome to the threshold of our temple, the sanctuary of temperance and honor. You seek to enter its portals, but before proceeding further justice to you demands that we make known our principles, and to us that they receive your cordial assent. We require of each initiate

1st. That he be of good moral character, of fair repute in the community, and in good health." (They also require what is not shown here, that he be a white person and have five dollars about him.)

"2d. That he acknowledge an Almighty God, to whom we are all accountable."

How truly Masonic is this! It shows whence the latter order sprung. There are three more sections in the creed, but they refer to brotherly relief, keeping the secrets and obedience to those in authority, all of which are beyond the scope of this article.

There is no Christ in this creed, as the reader will notice. As it the order anticipated some objection to this omission a vague reference is made to the Redeemer occasionally in other places, but Jesus is nowhere held up as man's only hope of salvation. Upon this creed as a foundation is built up a religion of their own devising, "another gospel which is not another." This is gradually unfolded before the neophyte in a seductive way until when he reaches the highest degree of "Select Templar" he has the religious philosophy of the order in its completeness Upon his subscribing to the creed, he is assured: "We constrain no man's religious or political opinions; these rest with other tribunals," but as he advances in the order he is made to affirm repeatedly that his faith is unshaken in the principles of the order, which surely does constrain his opinions, religious or otherwise, to be conformable to the principles of the order, whatever they are, and if the principles of the order embrace a religious philosophy (as most certainly they do) his religious opinions are constrained to conform to that philosophy; thus the above assurance as it affects the Christian, is made null and void.

Let us examine briefly this religious philosophy as it is taught in the ritual.

I am well aware that many Christian "Templars" (pardon the anomaly) emphatically deny that there is a religion of any kind connected with the Temple of Honor. The reader will take their denial for what it is worth. We are dealing with facts. Worcester and Webster both define religion in its primary sense, as "Duty to God." With this definition in mind, we will turn to the initiatory ceremony of the Subordinate Temple where near its close the symbol of the order is thus explained:

"On the altar you behold the Holy Bible, and on that a triangle enclosing three inner triangles, typical of our order. The outer triangle is composed of love, purity and fidelity. The three inner triangles represent our duties to God, to our brothers and to ourselves. To God we owe obedience, love and worship."

Again, in the public opening ceremony of the Social degrees occurs the following:

Sister Presiding Templar says.—"Worthy Templars—What is the special object of our association?

Officers and members reply—"To promote the temperance reform.

Brother Presiding Templar says—"Worthy Templars—What are the general objects of our asssociation?

"Officers and members reply: The observance and inculcation of Truth, Love, Purity and Fidelity.

"Sister Presiding Templar says: Worthy Officers—How do we observe and inculcate them?

"Brother Usher answers: By having truth for our aim in all things. So living, we inculcate it by example and urge it upon our friends and associates.

"Brother Vice Templar answers: Love makes the truth beautiful and greatly to be desired, therefore not only with mind, but with heart do we seek the truth in our relations to God," etc.

In accordance with this is the Subordinate Temple lecture:

"Sincerity is the characteristic of a templar, and truth his aim in all things. The vestibule of the Temple of Honor is truth."

In the Subordinate Temple initiation occurs this sentence:

"If the initiatory steps appear complex and tedious, let me remind you that all the steps you have taken are a type of the progress of a human soul from the imperfect up to the true and perfect."

We turn now to the Select Templar degree and quote:

"Let us, while life lasts, act well our part, that when we shall be called from the scene of our labors here to pursue the remaining stage of our journey, we may be found fully tried, approved, selected and prepared to appear before the Great Chief above, in that temple not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."

We will digress here just to say that it was permitted unto St. John the evangelist, to view the glories of heaven, and he declares that he saw no temple therein." Rev. 21:22.

Quotations might be multiplied but sufficient has been give to plainly show the religion of the order, and now as this properly belongs in the creed, let us incorporate it therein, and see how it looks. It will read like this, using as far as possible the words of the ritual:

Respected Sir: You are welcome to the threshold of our temple, the sanctuary of temperance and honor. You seek to enter its portals, but before proceeding further, justice to you demands that we make known our principles, and to us that they receive your cordial assent. We require of each initiate—

1st. That he be of good moral character, of fair repute in the community, and in good health.

2d. That he acknowledge an Almighty God, to whom we are all accountable, and to whom we owe obedience, love and worship as these duties are represented to us by the symbol of the order. The vestibule of the Temple of Honor is Truth, and although we claim Temperance as our special work, yet the attainment of Truth is the main feature of our order, for Truth is our aim in all things; not only with mind, but with heart do we seek the Truth in our relations to God, and inculcate it by example, and urge it upon our friends and associates. The imperfect human soul, coming to our portals, is led step by step in his progress through our temple up to the true and perfect. This perfection is accomplished by adorning our minds with those virtues which shall ornament our souls when we stand before the Judge of all the earth. Thus, acting well our part, we shall be found prepared to appear before the Great Chief above in that Temple not made with hands eternal in the heavens.

That is the creed a professed Christian virtually endorses and subscribes to by endorsing the Temple of Honor. It professes to save by "dead works;" directly opposed to the religion of our Lord Jesus Christ, which demands repentance from "dead works." The one is false the other true. How can a Christian embrace both systems so widely different? Jesus says, "Ye can not serve two masters—ye can not serve God and Mammon."

ALBERT M. PAULL.

Providence, R. I.

AN OPENING AT THE SOUTH.

BY ALEXANDER THOMPSON.

In the topics of the times in the Cynosure of March 20th, the editor notices the charge that no Southern preacher dare raise his voice against the lodge of that section, and in our opinion makes two very correct statements. First, that the evil spirits that once inhabited the slave power seem to have taken bodily possession of the lodges; and second, that the lodge gagged preachers of the North are as much or more to blame than their Southern brethren.

From a residence of eighteen months in the State of Tennessee, and all the observation I could make and information I could glean while there, I became convinced that the the man who would lecture against their secret lodges in the heart of the old secession element of the South, would in all human probability never live to repeat the attempt. We believe that there is not one man in ten thousand of the bravest of the brave who dare today make the attempt of a lecture tour of the Southern States with anti-secrecy as his subject, and we are not sure that it is any one's duty.

Our Lord said, "When they persecute you in one city, flee ye into another," thus seeming to indicate that his servants were not to cast their lives away against an iron wall of unyielding sin. In the old days of struggle between slavery and freedom while there were many noble men found ready to face all the dangers of the Northern mobs and even those of the Middle States, how many were there brave and daring enough to stand before an audience of Mississippi planters and tell them their sins? And so it is today with the lodge, the natural successor of slavery in opposition to free government and republican simplicity. In the old strongholds of slavery it is so strong, so sure and so deadly, that it is almost certain death to assail it; and, as we have already said, we are not sure that it is any one's duty to run such a hazard.

But the South is not all thus. In the mountain regions of Tennessee and other Southern States are to be found a people very poor, in a low state of civilization and morals; but who, nevertheless, are true in the main to our government and hostile to the lodges; a people sadly neglected by our missionary societies, but capable of forming a nucleus from which might emanate an influence that might change the whole South.

Here then seems to be the work of the Associated Churches of Christ, to lay their hands on some good men, amply qualified for the work, and send them into these regions to preach the Gospel and tell the people their sins. Among such a people their lives would be safe and their work respected, and from their mountain home they might descend into the valleys, give a few lectures and return before the storm had time to gather force and burst upon their heads.

Of course, such men would have to draw much of their support from friends in the North and West, as the people on the ground are too poor to do much did every one give to the utmost of his ability; and to secure these funds, and send the men and superintend their work would seem to be the natural and only duty of the Associated Churches. For whoever goes into the heart of the South among the old planters and lectures either against mask lodges, or Masonry, I shall not say he had better make his peace with God, for I cannot conceive of a man not at peace with his Maker undertaking such a work; but I would say he had better make his will and set his earthly house in order for in all probability he would die and not live.

OUR FIRST PRESIDENT AND OUR LAST.

In 1798 the Rev. Mr. Snyder of Maryland wrote to President Washington in great concern inquiring if he was a Freemason; and Washington replied saying that he had not been in a lodge more than once or twice "within the last thirty years." He termed the doctrines of the Illuminati, who were German Freemasons, "nefarious and dangerous"; and said that the founder, or instrument employed to found Jacobinical clubs (French Freemasonry) called Democratic societies, designed thereby to separate the people of the United States from their government. The principles of these secret clubs he declared to be "pernicious."

He also evidently alludes to secret societies in his Farewell Address, as "potent engines by which cunning, ambitious and unprincipled men will be enabled to subvert the power of the people."

In 1879, a gentleman of Pennsylvania, Mr. E. J. Chalfant, wrote to President Hayes to inquire if he was a Freemason. President Hayes replied in a very short note, saying simply that he was not a Freemason.

This was at a time when evidently the foul flood-gates of Freemasonry had broken loose upon the land, and secret societies had become potent engines for intimidating the people and subverting their power.

Not long after this short letter of President Hayes on the greatest evil of the day had been written, he, the President, issued a long veto, virtually in favor of employing troops to oppose intimidation and violence used by secret societies at the polls. But not a word of caution was said against secret societies themselves as Washington had done in his Farewell Address.

Soon after or about the time that President Hayes had delivered this great veto, evidently an ambitious effort to meet an important crisis, he went with his wife to a Baptist church in Washington to celebrate the sixtieth anniversary of the introduction from Great Britain into this country of a secret society, called Odd-fellowship, of which he is a member. This secret society, which is but one of the editions of Freemasonry, was got up in Manchester, England, apparently by leading manufacturers, in order the better to keep ignorant and brutal workmen under their control, the name Independent Order of Odd-fellows being given to it as a means of deceiving them into the belief that they were independent while in reality they were being slyly subjected to the will of their employers.

This secret society, which helps hold up the arms of Freemasonry, now counts a great many voters in the United States; and it was to this body of men that our last President, after or amidst the performance of a great political duty, went for sympathy, cheer and support. And this too, was in one of the Christian churches of the country whose Christian prayers are excluded from the Odd-fellow lodge!

It is hardly possible to make much headway in our reform against secret societies so long as the highest offices of the land are bestowed upon men who sustain such societies. Every secret organization of the country is encouraged in its evil ways, and receives aid and comfort, so long as the President belongs to one of them. Our poor, ill-paid clergymen have but little temporal inducement to purify our holy religion from the foulest stain ever thrown upon it if the political administration of the government is thrown into the scale against them. A political administration that aids in the corruption of religion ought to be held as infamous. No greater mistake could ever be made in the the politics of a Christian country than to suppose that secret organizations can aid the cause of morality or pure religion. They are inchoate villainy, the prima facie evidence of deception and fraud.

Our statesmen have become mere secret plotters. The science of government with them has become one and the same thing with the low and despicable duplicity of the Masonic lodge. The lodge has become their school. It stultifies our politics more than Aristotle stultified the Christian church. Recently it has been regarded as a great and terrible thing to use the little United States army at the polls. A long and wearisome discussion has been held over it; and the papers have loudly reverberated the thunder of the veto in favor of it; and yet the danger to our elections and to our liberties from the regular army, are nothing at all in comparison with the violence done them by the Grand Army of the Republic and its kindred secret associations. Of the great and impending danger from this latter source, not a word is said. Secrecy is the rule, and mum is the word.

Our great American republic cannot be goverened by such hypocrisy as this. It is too patent to deceive men of intelligence and principle, and must be called to a serious, earnest account sooner or later. The longer it is delayed, the more disastrous the reckoning will be.

AMERICAN.

The celebrated Miles-Owen case, which created such a sensation last fall in Salt Lake City, came up for trial in that city April 28th. The jury was examined by triers after the manner of some celebrated juries in the days of Morgan Anti-masonry. In five days the panel was filled and the trial proceeded. Two principal witnesses were Jos. F. Smith, a nephew of the prophet Joseph and officiating priest in the Endowment House ceremonies, and David H. Wells, chief counsellor and chief priest in the Endowment House and personator of God in its ceremonies. The latter refused to answer the questions of the prosecuting attorney and was sent to jail two days and fined one hundred dollars for contempt. The case went to the jury on Monday of last week, and in five minutes the verdict was rendered that Miles was guilty of the crime of polygamy. The next day on Wells' release a procession of 10,000 Mormons conducted him defiantly through the streets, and a general celebration was made in honor of the martyr to Mormonism. The fact of Miles conviction, however, is a severe blow to the polygamists, and if good generalship is used this "twin relic of barbarism" will be terribly shaken.

John Mason once said: "A child of God had rather ten thousand times suffer for Christ, than Christ should suffer by him."

Most men like self-sacrifice in their friends better than in themselves.

It is a very easy thing for a man to be wise for other people.

PENTECOST'S TESTIMONY.

During Mr. Pentecost's successful work in Fall River, Mass., last winter, Rev. M. S. McCord of Providence, R. I., wrote as follows to the Christian Instructor respecting the evangelist's testimony against worldliness and the lodge:

The theater, dances, church fairs, etc., in their bearing and influence on Christian character and consistency were discussed with masterly skill, and yet with the firmness of one conscious of meeting opposition.

It is not my purpose in this brief article to quote at any length from these discourses. A slight extract bearing on the 15th article of the Testimony will suffice. Speaking from the text, "Be ye not unequally yoked yoked together with unbelievers," is the following, as reported by the Providence daily Journal:

"He also made brief reference to the Masonic fraternity. He was a Mason in the sense of once a Mason always a Mason. But he thought the lodge often drew the Christian man away from the prayer meeting, and when the question came between the lodge and the prayer meeting, the lodge carried the day every time. He had not one word to say against the order as an order; but he thought it not only drew upon the Christian's time, but also upon his interest, and that the church of God suffered loss, and the members suffered loss in being less spiritually minded than they might otherwise have been."

Some reflections on this testimony:

1. Thanks for so much candor and discrimination. His testimony is that the lodge in competition with the church "carries the day every time; that it draws upon the Christian's time and interest; that the church of God suffered loss, and the members suffered loss. Is he competent to testify? Is he a credible witness? He bears witness as a Mason.

2. Encouragement not simply to "hold the fort," but to advance upon the enemy's strongholds. I mean to advance upon the church; for here, more strongly than anywhere else, are the enemies of the church entrenched. Here the greatest work is to be done. When such men as Cook and Pentecost lift their voices as they do on these subjects, even in New England, we may reasonably look for a change of sentiment. And this is needed in the church everywhere. A member of the M. E. church and a member of the New York East Conference, less than three years ago, said to me, "two-thirds of our Conference are Masons." Furthermore he said: "All the male members of my church but two are Masons." Out of all the influential Baptist churches in this city of 'Dipperism,' not one as yet could be secured by the State committee appointed by the National Christian Association Opposed to Secret Societies, in which to present the claims of the national movement.

Let me ask the most timorous woman whether there is not a great difference between the sight of a drawn sword in the hand of a bloody ruffian, and of the same sword in the hand of her own tender husband? As great a difference there is between looking upon creatures by an eye of sense, and looking on them, as in the hand of your God, by an eye of faith.

THE SERMON.

JOY OF THE LORD.

[From the Baltimor e*American* is taken the following report of a late sermon by Mr. Moody, preached in the First Presbyterian church, to a crowded house:]

The sermon was on "Joy," a subject, he said, which nobody could find fault with, as it was something they all were after. Paul, he said, in enumerating nine fruits of the the Spirit, puts this second, just after love. There is a difference between happiness and joy. Happiness comes and goes, but joy is perpetual. It flows right on through both the light and darkness. That is a secret joy the Christian has which makes even sorrow pleasant. Nehemiah says the joy of the Lord is our strength, and so it is. If any of you have a real joy you will be sure to communicate it to somebody else. If we just mope along, with solemn faces and our heads bowed down in the bulrushes, we won't recommend our religion to anyone. They will think it makes us miserable. True religion makes us happy, If we are full of the joy of the Lord it flows right out. If we carry smiling faces around with us, we will have gone a long way towards recommending Christianity to the world. We can

as well as with our tongues. I know some people here in Baltimore that it's a pleasure to look at, and whenever I bring any one to them in the meetings, I am sure they are always going to bring them out. I know of one case where a whole family was won to Christ by a clergyman's smile. It would be a good idea if we had more smiling ministers. Children especially and young people are drawn by cheerfulness, and although a child may not know a word the minister is talking about, if he will only look pleasant the child will say he is the best preacher anywhere. My friends, if we have a good Master let's be joyful. You may profess to be a child of God and have none of this joy and peace in your heart, but you can get it if you will. Not until you are full of joy will you have power with either God or man. Christ's disciples had it. There are some people who say they thought they had it ten years ago when they were converted, but they haven't got it now. The fault is in themselves. They can't be happy while they keep on sinning. The first thing to do is to make a full and free surrender of soul and body. It was not until nine years ago that I made a full surrender, and since then I can say there has not been a ripple to my happiness. You can't go to God with provisos that you are not going to give up this or that. Whatever your conscience tells you to give up you must give up totally, and whatever it prompts you to do you are to do without murmuring. If you want to be a Christian and hold on to theatres or dancing you can't expect this joy. These things don't mix. Instead of having to keep the joy, the joy will keep you if you will let it. God loves us and does not want us to give up anything that is essential to our happiness. It would be well for us to bear this in mind. I would rather have my children laugh than cry, but I often have to deny them things for their own good. We must learn to say "Thy will be done" before we can be happy. Shall not the judge of the world regulate our lives? All the fullness of the Godhead is in Jesus Christ. In order to have this happiness right along we must strengthen the spiritual nature and stimulate it with God's word and by doing good. Word and work are the two things that do it all. Through these you may be happy all the time. God's word went right to Jeremiah's very soul, and he was obliged to speak. If a man doesn't read his Bible a good deal he isn't fit for God's service. Many run into teaching before they are sent. With some it is but they never take in a supply of anything to strengthen them. They must fire up with the Bible. More get up sermons all the time shut away from people, and as they never study human nature, they don't know whether their sermons ever hit or not. In order to be happy and do good in God's service, we must study the Word and then work. Working Christians are never troubled with those questions and doubts that are bothering lazy ones. Their joy is full. When Christ went away he didn't take his joy with him. He left all of that down here. When we are full of joy how easy it is for us to get over troubles. There is nobody but whose troubles might be greater. Help somebody else if you are in trouble, and the pit you get them out of will be the grave in which your own sorrow will be buried. Job's captivity was turned just as soon as he began to pray for his friends. In the very act of helping some one else we will be helping ourselves. Go and read for some old man who has lost his eyesight. You, ladies, hunt up some of the hundreds of poor women with large families who never get out of doors, even to church, and repeat over to them the sermon your minister preached on Sunday. There are plenty of ways of doing good. Spread the Gospel If a man or woman is not interested in home or foreign missions it's a pretty good sign they haven't the spirit of Christ in them. Now, if you were only as good at working as you are at hearing, there would be no chance of this work stopping, for it would run itself. But some of you will say you haven't strength. Many persons never make but one mistake, and that is they are so afraid of making one they never do a thing and remain perfectly quiet. Now, if I wanted to be a carpenter, I guess I'd spoil a good deal of lumber before I became one, but that would not deter me. Of course you can't do anything without making some mistakes at first. It's a good deal better to have zeal without knowledge than to have knowledge without zeal. Up, my friends, and go forth in the name of God. He's not going to waste grace, but he'll give it to you as you need it. Don't grumble because you haven't as many talents as some other person. If I haven't as much talent, as some other men on this platform, that is no reason why I should not use what little I have to the best advantage. I've got a work to do, and I'm going to do it. I can't do the work of Dr. Backus, nor Dr. Backus can't do mine. We each do our own. If I can't be a lighthouse I can anyhow, and in great darkness even a tallow candle may give out a good deal of light. Suppose each Christian in these dark days of infidelity was a tallow candle, wouldn't they make a lot of light when they got together? John Wesley said if he had a hundred men who hated nothing but sin and loved nothing but God he would convert the world and he could have done it. There have never been one hundred such men on earth at one time. What you call silent partners in firms here they call sleeping partners in England. The sleeping partners furnish the bulk of the money and the active partners do the work and have the ability. I'm afraid the church has too many sleeping partners. We want more enthusiasm, even among those who shake their heads and think it's a bad thing in a church. The young people won't stay in their churches if you don't get a little more of animal life into them. Be happy, and to be so, know that the service of Jesus Christ is the only thing that can satisfy your eternal soul.

NEBRASKA.

THE STATE MEETING AND OBSERVATIONS THEREON.

A week's experience in Nebraska has convinced me that the anti-secrecy reform work cannot be too early or too earnestly pressed in that State. Masons and their agents, as in other States, largely control the towns, but the great bulk of the population is still free, and may with proper efforts be saved. The land is mostly improved and all taken up as far west as I went, but with rare exceptions the settlers were poor and had neither money or time to devote to lodge purposes, and while their poverty continued they were not sought after by the craft. With the native breadth and wealth of soil in their possession this state of things will not long continue. Already the "dug-out" and "sod house" are being left for comfortable quarters, and men with whom I conversed who came to the State six, seven and eight years ago, with as near absolutely nothing as a human being can have and live, have now, in some instances, whole sections of as fine, improved lands as the sun shines upon, and are out of debt. Many of them have had little time for reading and less opportunity for knowing the facts of secret societies, and hence are peculiarly exposed to the wily arts of the craft.

I was mostly with the United Brethren, and it is due to them and to that church that I should say they have done a noble work in faithfully maintaining their law in this new region. The record of these self-denying brethren would not suffer by comparison with the record of some whose eminence and influence as central figures in the denomination has not always protected them from suspicion that they were not strictly loyal to the laws of their church. Any thing like a doubtful position on the part of their leaders imposes additional burdens on these over-burdened brethren, and gives encouragement, aid and comfort to those who seek the destruction of the United Brethren church.

There is a very encouraging field opened up for tract work; what the common people need is information, and I have the names of nearly a score of ministers who are ready to circulate our literature, but who are not able to buy, and if any of the friends could help them by a special contribution it would do much to encourage and help on the work.

At a meeting held in Persel chapel, York county, on the 7th inst., a State organization was effected and the following brethren chosen as officers of the Association:

President, S. Austin, Fairmount.
1st Vice President, W. P. Caldwell, Dewitt.
2nd Vice President, J. M. Snyder, Loup City.
3rd Vice President, R. A. Bishop, Elmwood.
Cor. Secretary, W. S. Spooner, Kearney.
Rec. Secretary, C. C. Kellogg, Juniata.
Treasurer, D. B. Hotchkiss, Syracuse.
Executive Committee, W. A. Reed, York, and Elvin Austin, Fairmount.

The time of the next meeting was fixed for September 30th and October 1st and 2nd, the place to be determined hereafter. The constitution adopted was that of Iowa with some slight alterations, and those present promised to begin at once the work of enrolling the forces for the fall and winter campaign. The work is now fairly inaugurated and nothing but inefficiency or negligence on the part of professed friends can hinder its rapid progress.

Let me say to you, brethren, God helps those who make an effort, and the surest way to obtain assistance from others who can and ought to help you is to show your faith by your works. You have no heart to help a man who don't try to help himself and you are not unlike to others in this respect. Send your names up to your Recording Secretary; notify your neighbors what is being done; write me at 221 West Madison street, Chicago, so that I can record your name and send you tracts when we can and above all pray at your family altar and in the prayer meeting for God's blessing upon this work; speak of it in the class meeting; keep it before the people and your labors will not be in vain in the Lord.

HOMEWARD BOUND.

LA GRAND, Ia., May 12, 1879.

At Marshalltown where I spent Sabbath, preaching twice, I saw Bro. McCleery and wife at church and also received much kindness from Bros. Gilkison, Miller and their families. I was glad to learn that our friends in Marshalltown have not gone back, and that a commendable degree of advancement has been made. The United Presbyterians have now a small congregation and maintain regular worship in the Y. M. C. A. rooms. The pastor, Rev. Marshall, does not hesitate to speak against secret societies, and preached recently a discourse on that subject which I hear well spoken of by those who heard him. Bro. Marshall is a young man, cool, level-headed, and if the Master spares his life he is destined to make his mark. I had but little opportunity of conversing with the craft, but it is believed by the friends that they learned a lesson by their former rashness which will in future deter them from like acts of violence.

At 11:45 I took the freight train for Cedar Rapids, expecting to have some three hours for business there before the arrival of a Chicago-bound express. Before reaching this station the conductor returned to the passengers their tickets, with the notice that he was ordered back with his "caboose" and we must await further developments at this station. It is one of those Providences which it takes time to explain, and which the "faith living" accept with resignation and even with gratitude.

My present trip has not been so fruitful in apparent results as I had hoped, but looking back, I can see rifts in the cloud, and rays of light relieving the obscurity. When the cloud hangs low and heavy it is blessed to trust. Personally, as a matter of experience this has been to me a most profitable trip, and one long to be remembered. I have been brought into closer sympathy with the industrial masses and know better the peculiar trials and exposures of those who drive back the buffalo and the wolf and plant civilization on the frontier. To sleep and eat and preach in "sod houses" and churches where the "Divine Light" shines and where the doors open right into the "kingdom" to admit penitent, believing souls, makes one feel more vividly the infinite condescension of Him who "spared not his own Son, but freely gave him a ransom for many," and I could hardly suppress the thought that heaven would be brighter and its rest sweeter to these who walk by faith through such trials than to those who sit upon cushioned seats and kneel upon carpeted stools. God knows, and I doubt not every cup of joy whether large or small will be full in "Paradise restored."

The whistle announces an approaching train and I close with the silent prayer that when the summons comes I may be as ready to depart and be with Christ as I am to leave this depot.

BELLE PLAINE, 4:30 P. M., May 12.—Off time and held for further instruction, with little, if any, prospect of leaving this station until the express arrives about 8 o'clock. One little incident occurred on our way worthy of record. A gentleman purchasing a ticket at La Grand, dropped a five and a two dollar bill.

A brakeman passing along picked up the money not knowing to whom it belonged. After the train was under way he entered the car where a number were sitting and asked if any one had lost any money. After examination, one passenger found that he was minus a five and either a one or a two dollar bill. The young man satisfied himself that the claim was just, and handed over the money, remarking, that all he wanted was his own. Such instances are in striking contrast with what is often witnessed, and reveals the fact that some railroad employees are actuated by higher motives than simply money-getting. My acquaintance with railroad men has been quite extensive for the last eight years, and I have yet to meet with an instance where a reasonable request was not met in an affable and equitable manner, but this instance, falling outside the strict line of official duty, is deserving of special and favorable notice. Should any one of our young friends reading this ever be tempted to appropriate what was not their own, I hope the recollection of this incident may help them to overcome the evil thought.

MORRISON, Ill., May 13.

The anticipated delay at Belle Plaine became in due time an actual fact, and made it impracticable for me to stop either at Cedar Rapids or in Cedar county, Iowa, as I had intended. At 2 A. M., I reached this place, and was conducted to the Morrison House, where I hoped to obtain rest. But a foe unobserved in the light soon made me painfully conscious of his presence in the dark. Hastening from his ambush in full force, he demanded my very blood, and would make no concessions until his capacity was filled. I suppose it is the privilege of hotel-keepers to run their business in their own way, but where they persist in inflicting the traveling public with an army of bed-bugs, I consider it the duty of traveling men to apprise each other of the fact, and for one I propose to do my part in extending the information whenever and wherever I find a lodging infested with these unclean creatures. If hotel men must keep dirty houses and have their lodgings infested with vermin, they ought to notify people of the fact so that decent men, who like decent accommodations and are willing to pay a reasonable price for them, may give them a wide berth.

MAY 14th.

Yesterday was mostly spent with friends in Morrison and I was glad to find Aunt Allen comfortably situated among friends and full in the faith. Bro. Sholes and a few earnest workers in Morrison keep the "ball rolling." They expect to have Bro. Rathbun there soon and to "keep it before the people" that Freemasonry and Christian civilization and free government cannot occupy the same ground. I was near to Bro. Browne's principal theatre of action and learned that he had adopted feet-washing and "Triune Baptism" face downwards, as a part of the creed of his no-creed association, or at least practices after this manner.

At Round Grove I found Bro. Stone maintaining the conflict and ready to do his part in routing the adversary. He was about starting on an extended Western tour to visit children and relatives in Nebraska and Dakota. I made here the acquaintance of brother and sister Letcher who were Reformed Presbyterians originally but who now belong to the Congregational church, and who have not "backslidden" from the anti-secrecy principles of their ancestors. Sterling was the next point I reached by freight, late in the evening so as to be ready for the Sterling passenger this A. M. At the Wallace House I found gentlemanly attendants, cleanly apartments and a good bed, all of which was in striking contrast to the experience of the night before. I made a hasty call on Mr. LaCost and lady, whom I married some years since in Byron. Here I saw also Miss Christopher, who has for several years been a teacher in the public school, and whose parents were members of the church in Byron, during the entire term of my ten years pastorate. I am now, May 15th, 7:30 A. M. nearing Creston, where I stop on business until noon, when by the Chicago express, I hope to reach Wheaton and see my dear children from whom I have not heard for weeks.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

LISBON, N. Y., May 14.

DEAR BRO. KELLOGG:—On Wednesday evening, May 7th, I went on board the propeller Oswegatchie, from Cleveland bound to Chicago. The lake was perfectly smooth, and our course was directly towards the setting sun, which soon sank in the lake. Quite a number of passengers were on board, mostly emigrants to Northern Michigan. A most pleasant sail brought us by early morning to Detroit, where we stayed some hours, and considerably increased our freight and passengers. Among them was a medical student from Ann Arbor, Michigan, on his way home to Southern Illinois, via Chicago. He was a young man of excellent mind and manners, but had been made to believe that Freemasonry was an excellent institution, and expressed his purpose to become a member of the order. I had a long talk with him, and read much from Masonic and Anti-masonic works. He was thoroughly convinced, expressed his great astonishment at the facts presented, thanked me heartily for my pains, and promised to do what he could to disseminate light on the subject.

After a lovely ride we reached Port Huron, just in the evening, and I went on board of the cars of the Grand Trunk railroad, I was soon over the river and whirling away through Canada. In the morning we were in the fine city of Toronto, where the train stopped two hours, and where I tried in vain to find a temperance restaurant, and went without my breakfast because I could not. Towards evening we were in Prescott. Here I saw the stone windmill which was the scene of the principal battle in the rebellion of 1837. Soon we were across the majestic St. Lawrence, and at the Ogdensburg postoffice I got news from home. A short ride in the cars brought me to this place, where I have received a most cordial welcome from the Wesleyan, United Presbyterian and Reformed Presbyterian brethren. This is where brother Rathburn lived and labored, and the Masons have not forgiven him. Brother Wheeler here gave his quiet but powerful testimony, which no man dares contradict, although the pastor who took his place is a Freemason. Brother Barlow is also remembered for the strong blows he gave, while Bro. Stoddard is not likely to be forgotten.

On Sabbath, the 11th, I listened to the funeral sermon of a devoted Christian reformer, Bro. James Norway, preached by Bro. Wardner, and in the evening preached in the same place to a fair congregation. On Monday evening, the 12th, I met a goodly number at the R. P. church and had an excellent meeting. The pastor, Rev. Wm. McFarland, is most faithful and earnest in our reform. Last night I spoke by invitation in the M. E. church at Flackville. The pastor, who was absent, is a Mason, but nearly all the members are Anti-masonic. The attendance was good and I hope that good was done. I leave to-day for Vermont.

Yours in the Lord,
H. H. HINMAN.

SHUEYVILLE, IOWA.

THE LODGE TURNED INSIDE OUT.

At Shueyville, Iowa, on the evenings of May 12th and 13th Elder D. P. Rathbun, well known as a seceding Mason and Christian, now in the field as lecturer, turned the lodge of the first and third degrees of Freemasonry inside out. The first evening the audience was large and much interested. The last evening the attendance was good notwithstanding the heavy rain. The meetings were opened by reading the Scriptures, singing and prayer. Remarks were made and Bro. Rathbun was introduced. In this notice but little will be said of points made. The speaker spoke half an hour on the religion of Masonry, quoting from Masonic books. He said professedly good men had come out of the lodge and declared the "institution" bad, and professedly good men now in the lodge declare the "institution" good. So far the testimony is equal. Is there no way of determining who tells the truth? We know of an institution by its own published laws and usages. By these Masonry must stand or fall. This was at once seen to be fair. Mr. Rathbun then quoted from leading Masonic author—proving beyond question the following points:

1. That Masonry is a religion.
2. That it is a false religion, because it takes not the Holy Scriptures as the only rule and guide nor Jesus Christ as the only Saviour of men. He quoted from Mackey's Lexicon, Webb's Monitor, Sickels's Manual, etc, giving the page and section with wonderful ease and correctness, indicating a memory almost infallible. Then a candidate was brought forth "neither naked nor clad" and was in due form initiated as an Entered Apprentice.

At 2 P. M. 13th the people listened to remarks by Rev. I. L. Bookwalter, D. P. Rathbun and others. This was a good meeting for its deep devotional and stirring character. The last evening's work the best of all. There was however some hesitancy in the opening. No one for some time was found willing to be stripped, haltered and blindfolded. Ah! to be thus "duly prepared" and then to be sworn, taking blasphemous oaths, and agreeing to penalties of which, as John Quincy Adams said, "a common cannibal would be ashamed," was regarded as no small matter. How could a gentleman and Christian do it? Well, it was explained thus. The motive gives character to the act. Masonry is a wicked institution. Yet its revelations are denied and even good people cannot believe it

WHAT ARE WE DOING FOR THE HEATHEN.

ST. PAUL, Minn.

"If you cannot cross the ocean,
And the heathen lands explore,
You can find the heathen nearer,
You can find them at your door."

How true the last line of the above stanza; for we find, not only at our doors, but enshrined in the very heart of the Christian churches a heathenism more vile and blasphemous than is thought of in heathen lands, so-called; here we have a miserable concoction of lying legends, heathen mythology, and mutilated fragments of the Bible wrought into a solemn, farcical religion pretending to save the soul, and palmed off upon the ignorant and the wicked as a true plan of salvation. In it, these pagans degrade the Word of God below the level of the heathen mythology, and especially, and designedly, for a purpose, and for the vilest of purposes, tear out from that Bible, and cast away from their plan of salvation, the name of the Prince of Life, to satiate the hate and hellish malice of the Jew who killed him. And to cap the climax of blasphemy these men, known as Freemasons, prowl about in the pulpits, in the churches and in the streets, with a whore's forehead, that cannot blush, telling point blank lies about it. And silly pastors and silly sheep believe their lies to be truth and sincerely advocate their cause even dreading true light on the subject as much as the Freemasons themselves. And besides, this sworn villiany is under the sworn protection of the Christian leaders who jealously guard and defend it against all who oppose it.

Why sir, while a student in the Theological Seminary, other students would say to me, "We know that you are right in regard to your views of Freemasonry, but we must not speak against it, because there are some Freemasons in all the Baptist churches and we cannot get places to preach at if we speak against Masonry." Two attempts were made to get Prof. Blanchard to lecture in the Seminary. The first failed, but the second succeeded and on the evening that Prof. Blanchard lectured the Seminary was almost deserted, and the audience was chiefly made up of students from the University. A subscriber to the support of the Seminary heard of the vote of the students to refuse to allow Prof. Blanchard to lecture in the Seminary on the subject of Freemasonry and thereupon declared that he should withhold his support from the institution. When, in one of our meetings, this was mentioned, popular voices spoke out and said, "Let him keep his money, we do not want it."

If there be any honest Christians in the Baptist denomination it is high time that they know who their leaders are.

The editor of the Baptist Standard, who is the editor of "The Life of Dr. Colver," says the Standard must not speak against Freemasonry because so many Baptist ministers and church members are Freemasons, and that he himself is still suffering persecution from the Freemasons for having said what little he did say of Dr. Colver's Masonic experience in that book.

The Standard could publish the railing accusation against Bro. Austin, casting him out of the ministry without assigning any cause, and stand by and see him assassinated, and probably the assassination came from the same source as the railing accusation. Yet I have not seen one word of repentance or apology in the Standard for its railing accusation.

One of the most distinguished Baptist ministers in this State, pastor of a Baptist church in Minneapolis, and who was a successor to Dr. Colver in a pulpit in the State of New York, was asked to favor the call for a State Convention in regard to secret societies, when he declared that the subject must not be mentioned in his church, that he would not allow it, while at the same time he says he knows how bad Freemasonry is, but there are Freemasons in his church and it would make trouble to mention it there. And he said farther, that he classed Freemasonry with slavery, and as God in his own good time put away slavery, so he will put away Freemasonry; and he thought it as improper to mention Freemasonry in the churches, as it was to mention slavery in the churches. Another, a St. Paul pastor, a three thousand dollar man, says he knows what Freemasonry is, but there are many in his church, and he does not want to get into a fight with it. Another, a German Methodist minister, would like to have a lecture on the subject delivered in his church. He says Freemasonry is bad, but he must first consult his church; and he finds two Freemasons in his church, and therefore his doors must be closed against the truth that would disturb these two sworn secret pagan worshipers for whom he breaks bread and pours the communion wine. Another German Methodist minister consults his flock, and a few say no, therefore his doors are shut against the truth that might deliver souls from sworn secret paganism. Other ministers in the city are sworn secret pagan worshipers and public advocates of their secret plans of salvation. Others merely allow their names to be used by the fraternity to decoy others in. "Cursed be he that doeth the work of the Lord deceitfully."—Jer. 47:10. Surely many are forgetful of the fact that the final decision of the Judge of all mankind will be according to principles of righteousness, (Acts 17:31). Said a minister who is a non-affiliating Freemason, "The degrees of Masonry are to be worked in public in our place, I wish you would come and help." He was asked if he would take part. He replied, "There are Freemasons my in church and therefore I cannot. I have inquired of the Lord about it and I must not come out against it in public." I wonder if Satan has not a great many preachers snared in some iniquity that they dare not let come to the light. And so have men bound together to keep each other secrets under even death penalties, so that men fear to break the obligation that makes them Masons; that is, reveal what they have sworn to conceal, lest the fraternity should not only place their lives in jeopardy, but ruin their characters for this world; and so the poor fluttering fools, not knowing the power of Christ to deliver from every snare, are held in Satan's bondage to Freemasonry and other sins until the judgment day comes when they are to be cast into the lake of fire.

What shall we do? It was a maxim in the days of slavery, "Now is always the time to do right." Let that be our maxim, and from the pulpits warn the people of all their sins as hard as we can, and as if tomorrow would be the judgment day, calling all the while upon God for help to do it in the light of eternity revealed in his word. And this is the royal way of the cross and involves self-denial such as the holy prophets endured according to the eleventh chapter of Hebrews: "Trial of cruel mockings and scourgings, yea, moreover, of bonds and imprisonment."

Verily this rotten age of rotten pulpits is not the time to consult with familiar spirits and demons, or wicked men and hypocrites, as to whether we may confess our own sins, or expose the sins of others committed by the Holy Ghost to our charge. And we may be very sure that the righteousness of God's people cannot "go forth as brightness, and the salvation thereof as a lamp that burneth," until God's people rise in the might of God's spirit above this world where they can see such a loathsome viper as Freemasonry is crawling away and hiding itself for very shame and torment in view of its abominable blasphemies as contrasted with the holiness of God's people.

WILLIAM FENTON.

ARE DEAD SOLDIERS POLITICAL CAPITAL?

There are a few dead soldiers buried in one corner of our village burying ground, and village politicians nurse their graves with great care, decorating them with little flags and with pretty flowers once a year. The spot has become a favorite place for making flowery political speeches.

The rebel politicians do the same thing over the graves of rebel soldiers. The idea is Masonic and pagan, not Christian.

Men who would make political capital out of dead soldiers are too much of the hyena stamp. They prowl around graves more for their own advantage than for the honor of the dead.

A community that allows its politics to become thus brutalized and its dead desecrated, is in a bad way.

OLD SOLDIER.

THE BURIAL OF MOSES.

Two neighbors were discussing Masonry and their talk turned upon the origin of the institution. The Freemason claimed he could trace its history back to Moses, and also added that Moses was a high Mason.

"Well," exclaimed the other, "that last claim of yours with regard to Moses (if true) opens up clearly to my mind the reason of a contention and dispute that we have mentioned in the pages of Holy Writ. The dispute mentioned there has always been a mystery to me, but your light on Masonry has made it clear."

"What do you refer to?" eagerly asked the Mason.

"In Jude, 9th verse, where Michael the archangel when contending with the devil, they disputed about the body of Moses, etc. Now I never before could understand why the devil wanted Moses' body; but I see it clearly since I received your information. Evidently the reason why the devil wanted his body was because he was a Mason."

I would add to the above another fact that might be inferred from such a Masonic claim (and taking it for granted that the devil is also a member of ancient and honorable) if he claimed him, of course he did not want a brother buried in such a quiet manner as Moses was.

OUR MAIL.

F. Bunker, North Royalton, O., writes:

"I think your paper and lecturers, together with Mr. Ronayne, are doing the greatest thing for our country that has been done in a great many years. I want to do all I can to help the work along, but I am so infirm that I can do but little. If I live a few days longer I shall be seventy-two years old. We have a strong society of Odd-fellows in our township, but few Masons. Cleveland is overrun and ruled by Masons, courts and all. I have been on jury for months together, so I have had a chance to know."

J. S. Perham, Brookfield, Vt., writes:

"People appear not to know that Masonry has had a heavy hand in making our national troubles. O, how did ancient Israel fare when they tolerated sin, known sin, in high places? I pray God to raise up from among us, or send us a good lecturer. May God help all Anti-masons in this State to see and do their duty; and may he bless all the lecturers and their families at home. I hope the time will come when we shall have a State convention and organization."

D. B. Heckert, Ogden Center, Mich., writes:

"I am still working for the Cynosure, and I think I will finish up my club before long. I am very much encouraged to think that we have a good correspondent in Washington. I think there is a good opening there for our cause. I am pleased with the answer President Hayes made to the letter addressed to him. Our township voted last election to buy three Masonic books, Mackey's Lexicon, Sickels's Monitor, and Ronayne's Master's Carpet, for the library."

Philo E'zea, Albion, Neb., sends Mr. Job Green's subscription, and writes:

"Mr. Green is one of my old neighbors from McHenry county, Illinois. I reached his place April 26th and we went to Albion, the county seat, where they are fitting up a hall to be used by the Masons and Odd fellows, who have recently been or are about to be organized. The Rev. Mr. Armstrong, a Congregational minister, lecturing for and taking an active part on behalf of the Odd-fellows. The school house was secured, notice of an Anti-masonic lecture by myself was given in the stores and on the streets, and a good attendance was the result. It was evident that the craft was disturbed. An Odd-fellow made himself odious by his interruptions, but finally was silenced until the lecture, which was not very short was closed. Knowing that my time would admit of only one lecture I was determined to put in all the facts and arguments that I could. When I was through this disturber undertook to defend his pet, but I think he lost ground. The county judge finally came to the rescue, and gave himself and Odd-fellowism all away by admitting that he thought I had been a member of the institution, and was perjured."

J. H. H. Woodward, Newport, Ky., writes:

"Hayes has done the first righteous act of his administration in vetoing the Confederate Appropriation Bill. If the negroes remain in the South three years longer, and the rebels elect the next President and carry Congress, slavery will be restored. It is not a thing of the past.

Jacob Markle, Maquoketa, Ia., writes:

"I hope to meet every brother of the Christian Association in the better land."

James Adams, Roberts, Ill., writes:

"I cannot well do without the Cynosure while I am able to pay for it."

LESSON XXII.—June 1, 1879.—PROPHECY AGAINST TYRE.

SCRIPTURE.—Ezekiel 26:7-14.

7 For thus saith the Lord God:
Behold, I will bring upon Tyrus
Nebuchadrezzar, king of Babylon,
A king of kings from the north,
With horses and with chariots,
And with horsemen and companies, and much people.
8 He shall slay with the sword thy daughters in the field:
And shall make a fort against thee,
And cast a mount against thee,
And lift up a buckler against thee.
9 And he shall set engines of war against thy walls,
And with his axes he shall break down thy towers.
10 By reason of the abundance of his horses their dust shall cover thee:
Thy walls shall shake at the noise of the horsemen,
And of the wheels, and of the chariots,
When he shall enter into thy gates,
As men enter into a city wherein is made a breach,
11 With the hoofs of his horses shall he tread down all thy streets:
He shall slay thy people by the sword,
And thy strong garrisons shall go down to the ground
12 And they shall make a spoil of thy riches,
And make a prey of thy merchandise:
And they shall break down thy walls,
And destroy thy pleasant houses:
And they shall lay thy stones and thy timber and thy dust
In the midst of the water.
13 And I will cause the noise of thy songs to cease;
And the sound of thy harps shall be no more heard.
14 And I will make thee like the top of a rock;
Thou shalt be a place to spread nets upon;
Thou shalt be built no more.
For I the Lord have spoken it saith the Lord God.

NOTES.

[From Scholar's Handbook.]

Tyrus, "Tyre," a noted commercial city of Phoenicia, on the Mediterranean sea, northwest of Jerusalem. It was an old fortified city, Josh. 19:24. Its king Hiram aided Solomon in building the temple, I Kings 5:7-12; a daughter of the Sidonian king married Ahab, 1 Kings 16:31; the city was taken by Shalmanezer, and again besieged for 13 years by Nebuchadnezzar, and deserted in 1291 A. D. New Tyre is a poor fishing village, while old Tyre is completely destroyed, a "place to spread nets" of fisherman.

Nebuchadnezzar, "Prince of god Nebo," the greatest monarch of Babylon; reigned 43 years; captured Jerusalem; enlarged his empire; beautified his capital by many magnificent buildings, such as the palace, the hanging gardens, and built vast walls, massive gates; many bricks are found with his name at Babylon; died 561 B. C.

Babylon, "Babel," or confusion, the capital of the Babylonian Empire; one of the oldest cities in the world; of remarkable size; with walls of vast height and thickness, said to be 56 miles in its outer circumference; is now wonderful for its extensive ruins.

Ezekiel, "God strengthens," the son of a priest, taken captive to Babylon 11 years before the fall of Jerusalem, and settled with other Jewish exiles on the river Chebar, and exercised the prophetical office in captivity, and was highly esteemed by his companians.

[From International Quarterly.]

The Prophet Ezekiel, whose name signifies "God strengtheneth," was the great prophet during the Babylonian captivity. His father's name was Buzi, and tradition makes the son a servant of the prophet Jeremiah. He was one of the captives carried away by Jehoiachim, B. C. 599, and settled on the banks of the river Chebar, a stream or canal of Babylon. It was here that God called him to his work (chap. 1:3), and by comparing the "fifth year of Jehoiachim's captivity" (verse 2) with the "thirtieth year" (verse 1), it is supposed that Ezekiel was twenty-five years old at the time of the captivity. Of his personal history we learn that he was married and had a house (chap. 8:1), and that his wife was suddenly taken away (chap. 24:15 18). It is believed that he did not long survive the twenty-seventh year of his exile (chap. 29:17). Tradition says he died as a martyr, and in the middle ages a building near Bagdad was shown as his tomb, but of this nothing is known. He was held in high esteem by his countrymen, and consulted by the Elders on all great occasions (chaps. 8:1; 11:25; 14:1; 20:1).

The place, Tyre, signifying a rock, was the magnificent Phoenician city, situated on the sea, 122 miles north of Jerusalem. It was founded by the Sidonians, according to Josephus, about 1242 B. C. Herodotus says 2700 B. C., but this lacks foundation. In the days of David and Solomon it was famous for its wealth, and it became a powerful rival of Jerusalem. During the attacks upon Jerusalem the Jews were tempted to look to Egypt and Tyre for help, and "against this vain trust they are warned in these seven chapters (26-32), three against Tyre and four against Egypt." 11. Tyre is represented as exulting in the downfall of Jerusalem, as if the population, business and wealth would flow to her. The city was built partly upon the land and partly upon an island, and seemed almost impregnable; but it was taken by Nebuchadnezzar, and subsequently (B. C. 322) it was destroyed by Alexander. Now the prophecy was completely fulfilled, and the rock is a place where the fishermen spread their nets to dry (verses 4, 5).

"Over against this doom of Tyre, thus perished and gone, never to rise in her glory again, the Lord promises to make the land of his own people Israel once more the glory of the earth. So perish the nations and the people that set themselves proudly and defiantly against the mighty God; while to his people there ariseth new joy out of their grief, new light from their darkness, and from every eclipse a new radiance of glory. Who shall say it is not well to take one's lot with the oft-despised people of God? Why should men fear the trials and the darkness that may be for a moment, when their eternal future is so sure and so ineffably glorious."—Cowles.

From the Rochelle, Ill., Register.

Masonic or Anti-Masonic.

LINDENWOOD, Feb. 18, 1879.

To the Editor:

At home, confined to my room most of the time, able to read the Register and weeklies coming to hand, and other mail promiscuously sent, in which I found a card: "Yourself and ladies," which I suppose means myself and wife and daughters who comprise my family, "are invited to attend a Masonic banquet at Masonic hall and opera house, Rochelle, St. John's day, December 27th, 1878." This card might be received by some as a compliment. To me it has no charm. I am looking to a higher and nobler source for enjoyment. A committee of invitation, some twenty-nine in number, well located over a large territory, to see that the card is well circulated among the Masonic fraternity, and the unobserving that rush in like the unthinking horse in battle. Honorary committee, in a milder form, complimentary, whose names are used to draw in the innocent and unsuspecting in the devil's net. Down the line of honorary committee I find it ending with church members, giving their aid and influence by their names in favor of the opera and lodge, which are twin sisters, hence the legitimate outgrowth, a Masonic ball. In better days those church members would not have built an opera and Masonic hall and given their names in influence of them. "By their fruits ye shall know them." Floor managers to see that the Masonic ball is set rolling. Executive committee to see that Masonic execution is done. I suppose this ball was given in honor of St. John the Evangelist, who would blush at the mockery, and those engaged in it should veil their faces and cry unclean.

In both cases of committees the list commences with a lawyer, to whom there is a woe pronounced already. It may be due to the entire committee and managers whose names have been used in connection with the Masonic ball, by the fraternity. If they had been consulted they would never have suffered their names to be lent on the card and go before the world. I know whereof I affirm. In looking over the committees I see a large number of them are married men, men of families, men that should set better examples before the community generally. No wonder Rochelle is running into infidelity! As to Masons transferring dead Masons from the lodge below to above it is mockery in the extreme. God is not mocked. Whatsoever a man sows that shall he reap.

At the last term of court at Oregon parties objected to Masons serving as jurors where a Mason was to be tried, and they were ruled out, which was right. Any man foreswearing himself to protect a brother Mason regardless of the rights of others, should be ruled out and under the juror's bench.

I am talking of Masonry and its fruits. I don't propose to handle the illegitimate child with kid gloves. I don't think much of the child. It were better it were never born. But if the ill-begotten child had to be born he had better been still-born, and buried head down with "no resurrection" inscribed on the slab.

With all the pains taken on the part of the Masonic fraternity in fitting up the opera and Masonic hall for the dance, the large field gone over, the well arranged committee to cry aloud the Masonic ball, the special trains run at reduced fares—all these combined to make the dance a success, it was a failure financially, and will be morally every time.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MAY 22, 1879.

MEN WANTED.—Bro. Stoddard returning from the West on Friday morning wishes to say:

I have just returned from Nebraska and glanced over my letters I find quite a number reported for work and for enrollment in different States. This is a good beginning but I want many more. Let us have before our annual meeting, June 19th prox., more than 640,072 the number of Freemasons recently officially reported. There are twice that number who are with us but we want their names and post-office addresses, men and women who have principles and are not ashamed to be enrolled under the banner of anti-secrecy. Send a card or letter to J. P. Stoddard, Sec. N. C. A., 221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

ENCOURAGING.—We have received a "strictly private" communication in which the writer says: "For years I cease not to spread the Christian Statesman and Christian Cynosure and their workers before God night and day, for his special benediction." This is better, far better than silver and gold.

THE APPROACHING ANNIVERSARIES for the Western States have, with a single exception, been fixed for the time suggested in the Cynosure of January 8, 1879. This is one step in the right direction. Now let the friends agree upon the place and the programme as far as possible, select their speakers and make such other arrangements as they may desire. The President of each Association is, of course, with his executive officers, the proper person to lead off in this matter, but the co-operation of every friend in every State is needed. Friends, we must either go forward or fall back, and now and always is the time to move on. Don't rely on organizations or conventions or resolutions to do the work; but remember that a very important part of the work depends upon your personal individual efforts. Seeing the suggestion to hold the next national meeting in Washington, D. C., a friend in that city writes: "I beg leave to say most emphatically that Washington is the place where the next meeting of your Association ought to be held. Because at that time February or March, 1880, Congress will be in full blast and there will be in this city thousands of people from all parts of the country. 2. Because of the comment that would take place. The press of the country being to a great extent under the control of secret societies, men will publish nothing of the N. C. A., and thousands upon thousands of persons who would gladly contribute to its success are in ignorance of its existence (as I was ten months ago). In my opinion it would attract great attention to the organization which could but result in good." This friend says a suitable and popular hall can be had two days and three evenings for $60 and board from $1.00 to $1.25 per day. He also adds, "I will attempt to have an act passed by Congress forbidding secret organizations." What do you say, friends, shall we go to Washington?

J. P. STODDARD, Sec'y.

"GOD'S PARTY."

A beloved brother writes us urging that we must be or become "God's Party" in politics before we can expect his blessing, and gives us certain Scriptures as a platform, or supplement to our platform. The texts run thus: "Moreover thou shalt provide out of all the people able men, such as fear God, men of truth, hating covetousness; and place such over them to be rulers," etc.

Our reply to this respected brother is:

1st. That we thoroughly agree with him that when of two candidates otherwise equal before the voter, one being a villain and the other upright, to vote for the villain would be clear sin.

2d. The practical difficulties in the way of enforcing the precept, "He that ruleth over men must be just, ruling in the fear of the Lord," does invalidate, weaken or destroy the precept itself. The good man may be utterly incompetent, or sick unto death; or there may be no good men there where the official comes from. This would be a misfortune, a dire calamity, still it would not rescind or set aside the rule. That community must suffer for its wickedness.

3d. The chance of diversity of opinion comes when converting precepts into platforms. Ought Congress to reject the blasphemous, drunken, vicious Representative whose constituency are like himself? Ought good nations to denationalize a bad one, Turkey for instance? What measure of corruption should disfranchise a voter, or cashier an officer? Shall town meetings exclude sinners? and what shall be the standard of exclusion? Duellists, prison convicts and some others have marred or forfeited their citizenship: Shall all outside the inhibited classes be eligible to office? Shall atheists, unregenerate worshipers of false gods, disbelievers in future responsibility for present acts, gamblers and thieves outside the penitentiary, be shut from office and deprived of their vote?

"This light and darkness in our chaos joined,
What shall divide? The God within the mind."

Christians should always vote and do everything else so that they will be "the light of the world" and "the salt of the earth," and if true Christians they will do so.

But the almost endless complicity and complexity of the subject requires great caution and careful consideration, lest men should be censured as guilty who are only mistaken.

But one point is clear, that men who owe and profess supreme and sworn allegiance to one government have no right to be administering another whose interests and laws are liable to conflict. And such in theory and in fact, is the case with Freemasons. The assurance of the lodge master that the oath about to be taken is not a sworn allegiance to another government is a mere word or argument used with the candidate to induce him to swear; and he swears perpetual, unconditional obedience.

THE YALE SECRET SOCIETIES.

These secret fraternities have been holding their anniversaries at New Haven. The Psi Upsilon, May 7th, ex-Gov. Andrews presiding; and the Alpha Delta Phi, whose president is Hon. John Jay, both distinguished names. Gov. Andrews was one of the best "war governors," and Hon. John Jay, son of the signer of the Declaration of Independence, was an original abolitionist; wrote a review of the Mexican war for the extension of slavery, and was leader of the committee of his (Episcopal) church for the trial of Bishop Onderdonk, whom he charged with conduct, for which, he told the House of Delegates, any one of them would have horse-whipped him if the case had been theirs. Henry M. Dexter, editor of the Boston Congregationalist, was Chaplain of this secret order as his long-time co-editor Quint is of two or more others.

It is but few years since Secretary Evarts at the Yale Commencement, publicly advised the disbandment of these Yale secret fraternities, lamenting that they had extinguished and destroyed the old time-honored open societies, Linonia and Brothers; whose rich libraries, magnificent halls, and history, coeval with the greatness of the University, were the just pride of the institution. That same year Evarts was chosen trustee of Yale by nomination, I think, of the Alumni. I wrote to Mr. Evarts and asked him, since he had boldly censured the secret orders of Yale, that he would favor the public with a condemnation of the lodge system which has originated and keeps them up. He returned a courteous answer, without dissenting from my condemnation of lodgery, but stating that his views and responsibilities must lead him to decline entering on a work of reform.

These college secret orders sunk with Masonry and have returned with it to power. John Quincy Adams and Edward Everett took a leading part in their suppression; but their return is like that of the pestilence, walking in darkness, no one knows by whom or for what. Their only business made public by the Connecticut press, is the drinking of toasts, feasting, speeches and "establishing new chapters in other colleges," An annual feast may have charms for the aged men who wish to renew youthful memories and receive honors from the young; but what can be the motive that "forms chapters in other colleges," and keep up a central power over affiliated bodies spread throughout the American colleges? The answer is, The same that keeps up that unintelligible jumble called the Mass, the mummeries of the lodge and the ceremonies of heathenism the world over. Those fraternities have real estate, windowless buildings, etc., in New Haven, worth from $250,000 to $300,000, drawn mostly from parents by the members of these secret clubs. They drink, they carouse, they practice course and brutal hazings or initiations, such as cost young Mortimer D. Leggett his life at Cornell University a few years since. These initiations have been described in detail to me by persons who have witnessed them, and infamous is the mildest adjective fit to be applied to them. And they all have the characteristics of lodge-ceremonies, mingling coarse horse-play and practical jokes with scenic horror and solemn oaths and grave moral lectures and prayers. The son of a very wealthy gentleman in Brookfield, Mass., assured me that he was spared some parts of the rough handling in the initiation through which the poorer students were put without stint; thus practicing the swindling meanness of popish priests, who impose severe penances on their people, to raise money from the rich who buy themselves off. If any friend of Yale College desires, I will give them my authority for these and worse facts which might be stated.

—The Christian Harvester of Cleveland, Ohio, an excellent advocate of Bible holiness, lately published an article on secret societies which we hope soon to reproduce. In the next number the following note showed the effect of drawing the line between the orders and Christ: "A brother writes: 'Miss E. P. was so pleased with the article in the last Harvester on secret societies, that she subscribes for two of her friends.' And probably the same article will scare off two other subscribers. We are content. The truth will prevail." Fear not such losses brother; in the end you will count them gain for Christ.

—We are happy to be able to introduce to our readers a new Eastern correspondent this week, whose position and experience among the leading clergymen of the country permit him to speak occacionally of important matters transpiring at the metropolis of our nation from wide information and with accurate judgment. It is the purpose of the Cynosure to enlarge upon its sources of information and give its readers continually wider views of the great battle field of God, where they may engage in the name of Christ and the assurance of victory.

—The New Bedford, Mass., Evening Standard of the 8th inst., informs us that Rev. Alonzo H. Quint, D.D., the head of the National Council of denominational Congregationalists was elected chaplain of the Massachusetts Commandery of the Loyal Legion at its annual meeting in Boston the night before.

—Last February there was issued with the Secretary of State of Illinois a license to a Bohemian fraternity, called the "Brothers in Cermids." The object of this organization is in lodge parlance "benevolence."

—Secretary Harlow is doubtless as willing to issue this license as he was doubtful about recording the articles of incorporation of the National Christian Association five years ago. Mr. Harlow is a public officer employed by the year at a fixed salary. But last month he spent a week away from his duties at Springfield addressing Odd-fellow gatherings, and besides was weak enough to boast of it.

scarcely possible that the lodge is what Anti-masons declare it to be. Therefore the necessity is upon us to turn the lodge inside out as the only infallible and convincing proof that its abominations are truly revealed. If it is blasphemy for fathers, husbands and brothers to take the awful oaths and say the Christless prayers in earnest in the lodge, cannot we say them outside—though blushing and ashamed for the weakness and wickedness of humanity—with purity of motive to save our dear friends from the despotism and rain of the lodge? A young man finally came forward and the initiation into the third degree was duly effected.

I give it as my opinion that there was not a man, woman or child present that doubted the truth of the expositions, not one. There were few Masons present and they knew the truth was told. Bro. Rathbun understands his business. He said that more Masons had seceded under his expositions in the last twelve months, than under his lectures for the last nine years. Masons cannot evade the truth as shown by practically turning the lodge inside out. Bro. Rathbun is in the field and must do good wherever he goes. He gave a noble tribute to the Discipline of the United Brethren church and to the memory of Bishop Edwards, whose testimony against the lodge yet speaks. Let me invite all friends of this movement to pray for and help Bro. Rathbun. He needs friends and money. He will visit Western, the seat of the United Brethren College this fall and lecture for the students. May the Lord bless him.

Our New York Letter.

THE TRIAL OF MINISTERS.

For the past four or five years some one leading minister has been on trial at this great world center. First came Henry Ward Beecher, the man of the most pronounced opinions in the New York pulpit—for in this regard Brooklyn belongs to New York. For a quarter of a century Plymouth church has been filled from New York quite as much as from the "city of churches." It is proverbial on a Sabbath morning, when a stranger asks any one at the Fulton Ferry the way to Plymouth church, he is told to follow the crowd, and it invariably brings him to the plain brick edifice where Mr. Beecher officiates. Of his trial I need not speak. He was acquitted in the courts and in the Congregational Council. Thousands and tens of thousands believed in him before the trial began no more than when the trial was over. Next came the difficulties of Justin D. Fulton. He came from Boston to Brooklyn to help in building a people's church for the Baptist denomination. The Harmon Place church built or altered over their house of worship and made an auditorium that would seat 2,000 people. From the first Dr. Fulton preached to the largest Baptist audience in New York or Brooklyn. Very shortly after he came the open communionists made war on him and the conflict continued until in self-defense he was compelled to shake the dust off his feet and he went out, not knowing whither he was to go. His friends who invited him to preach Christ stood with him and followed after him, and, purchasing a fine house in a fine location, they have made the Centennial Baptist church a power in Brooklyn. The trouble in the Ministers' Conference which came from his outspokenness is ended. He has resigned from the Conference and henceforth will be free.

THE TALMAGE TRIAL

has just been concluded. The verdict is in favor of T. DeWitt Talmage, one of the kindest-hearted of men, as genial in social life as he is brilliant and erratic in the pulpit. The trial has reached some characteristics in him not hitherto known. It has shown what he has borne, how he has stood for the people, how thoroughly he believes in the free pew system, how he loves the people and how the people love him.

In my heading of this letter I have called attention to the trial of ministers. All have been on trial; the accusers as well as the accused; the prosecutors as surely as the defendants. God wants a kind, a loving, a true and a clean ministry. To be successful they must be without reproach.

In a sermon yesterday on Ministerial Trials and the Trial of Ministers, Dr. Fulton chose his text from 1 Peter, 1: 7—"That the trial of your faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise and honor and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ." The remark is frequently made, said Dr. Fulton, that ministers are only men. Of late the manliness of ministers has been at a discount. The uncovering of small natures in the trial of ministers has not been advantageous to religion nor to the weal of the community. It is apparent to all that the average minister, taken away from his studies and pulpit, from his walks among the sick, the sad and sorrowing, and made a combatant for any cause or for any reason, is not improved thereby. Accustomed to being deferred to and treated with special regard, as his high calling and his exemplary life entitles him to, when he is buffeted, traduced, reviled and scorned, his education, his methods of living render it next to impossible for him to bear patiently the scoff and the scorn of men. Martyrdom would not daunt him. Persecution for righteousness' sake would be welcomed by him, but when it comes from brethren he finds it impossible to tolerate such injustice. In conflict and agitation there is nothing hurtful. There is nothing so healthy for body, mind and soul as that which compels the exercise of the powers of one's being.

A minister cannot afford to be damned by common fame. It is meet that when charged with falsehood, with practices inconsistent with his high calling, he should demand the most thorough investigation, and challenge the most rigid scrutiny. Nor can he afford to rest under any charge that would injure his good name. He is to be an example to the flock. No matter if he be falsely accused, and if he be mercilessly treated, though his brethren may persist in being blind and deaf to justice or appeal, and do all in their power to mortify and degrade him, he must submit for Christ's sake, and show by action and by speech that he will not rest contented under a misapprehension, and that he will bear a bright escutcheon and keep an unsullied character that he may bear the vessels of the Lord's house and minister in the holy place. Ministerial trials are related to success in the pulpit. In the ladder of success the rounds are wrought out of suffering. Like Paul, a minister, though troubled on every side, but not distressed, persecuted, but not forsaken, must stand in the pulpit on God's holy day, among a people that he knows, with a face all aglow with the light of heaven. In speaking of the trial of ministers I do not confine my thought to the two or three brought before their fellows. I speak and think quite as much for those who sit in judgment as of those judged. The accusers are on trial as surely as are the accused. It is essential for Christian prosperity, for the future of the church, that this fact be held in mind. Ministers cannot throw away the garments of salvation and wrangle like men in a court of law, and hold their place in public regard. There is meaning in ministerial trials. There is a time coming when the lessons learned will be of practical advantage.

Thus far the trials endured have softened rather than hardened the natures of the surely great. They have been made to feel the value of friendship, of a good record and of a noble life. Nothing in this world so surely tells in a man's favor as does the purpose to please God and help man. It will appear safe to young men as never before to do right. To sow in the morning seeds of kindness, of fidelity toward God and of devotion to the interests of humanity, makes sure a harvest at evening which enriches the soul and makes the future secure.

Literary Notices.

Wm. H. Brearley of the Detroit, Mich., Evening News, will soon issue a guide book of his annual excursion to the White Mountains, a trip of 2,000 miles for $25.

"A Treatise on the Horse and his Diseases," is the title of a small but comprehensive work well illustrated and we should judge of value to horse owners. Price only 25c. B. J. Kendall, Enosburgh, Falls, Vt.

"Chambers's Cyclopedia of English Literature" is meeting with the largest sale which has probably ever been given to a work having only high literary merit and nothing of the sensational. Volume 2, just received, gives the history and epitome of our literature, from the "golden age" of Queen Elizabeth to 1700, giving in its 416 beautiful pages biographies of and choice selections from the writings of all noted authors of that period, among which are Lord Bacon, Sir Walter Raleigh, Burton, Bishop Hall, John Knox, Milton, Dryden, Jeremy Taylor, and others. The publishers make special inducements to early purchasers, the eight volumes complete being sent to those who subscribe this month, elegantly bound in cloth for $2 50. Specimen pages are sent free on request, or a specimen volume for examination, post paid for 43 cents. American Book Exchange, Publishers, 55 Beekman Street, New York.

—If some men are secretists for glory, others are doubtless for a living. A Mr. Newton died lately at Quincy, Ill., who was a well known regalia manufacturer. In order to increase his business he was a Freemason and a member of seven other secret lodges, and before his death was actively engaged in organizing societies of the "Ancient Order of American Workmen." The more orders the more regalia, hence his zeal.

—A sister of Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Mrs. Esther L. Charles, died about May 5th at Round Grove, near Galva, Ill., aged 64 years.

Dominus Regit.

Sore with the burden of a sad world's woe,
My heart sometimes, in tears doth overflow;
And griefs that love or skill may not allay,
Brood o'er my soul, as clouds obscure the day.
Then, like a starbeam thro' a rift of night,
Shineth this word that puts all fears to flight!"
"God rules. Shall not the Judge of earth do right?"

O, then my crushing burdens I resign
Into the hands of him whose love divine,
Straight thro' the mists and damps of human woe,
Can send a healing beam of light to show
How present suffering, Sorrow's fleeting night,
But fits the soul for heaven's unfading light.
In this God rules, and shall not he do right?

So, weary with my struggling and unrest,
I fold my tired hands upon my breast,
Not mine to question why these hearts must bleed—
Not mine to fathom all the piteous need.
Mine but to rest upon his tender might—
Mine but to trust his love, in him delight,
Seeing he rules who surely will do right.

Sunday Afternoon.

The Majesty of the Scriptures.

I confess to you that the majesty of the Scriptures astonishes me; the holiness of the Gospel is an argument which speaks to my heart, and which I should be sorry to be able to answer. Read the books of the philosophers with all their pomp—how petty they are beside this! Is a book at once so sublime and simple the work of man? Can it be that he whose history it relates was himself a mere man? Is this the tone of an enthusiast, or of a mere sectary? What sweetness, what purity of manners! what touching grace in his instructions! what elevation in his maxims! what profound wisdom in his discourses! what presence of mind, what acuteness, what justness in his replies, what empire over his passions! Where is the man, where is the sage who knew in this way how to act, suffer, and die! When Plato describes his imaginary good man, covered with the opprobrium of crime, yet meriting the rewards of virtue, he paints, trait by trait, Jesus Christ. What prejudice, blindness, or bad faith, does it require to compare the son of Sophroniscus with the Son of Mary! What distance between the two! Socrates dies without pain, without ignominy; he sustains his character easily to the end. If he had not honored such a life with a death, we should have thought him a sophist. They say Socrates invented ethics; but others practiced morality before he taught it. Aristides was just before Socrates described justice; Leondias died for his country before Socrates taught the duty of patriotism. Sparta was temperate before Socrates praised sobriety; Greece abounded in virtuous men before he defined what virtue is. But Jesus—where did he find the lofty morality of which he alone gave both the lesson and example? From the midst of a furious fanaticism proceeds the purest wisdom; among the vilest of the people appears the most heroic and virtuous simplicity. The death of Socrates, tranquilly philosophising among his friends, is the sweetest one could desire; that of Jesus expiring among torments, abused, ridiculed, cursed by a whole people, is the most horrible which one could fear. Yes, if Socrates lives and dies like a philosopher, Jesus lives and dies a God!—Jean Jacques Rousseau.

The Broken Link.

A man who prided himself on his morality, and expected to be saved by it, was constantly saying: "I am doing pretty well, on the whole. I sometimes get mad and swear, but I am strictly honest. I work on Sabbath when I am particularly busy; but I give a good deal to the poor, and I never was drunk in my life." This man hired a canny Scotchman to build a fence around his pasture lot. He gave him very particular directions. In the evening when the Scotchman came in from work, the man said: "Well, Jack is the fence built, and is it tight and strong?" "I canna say that it is all tight and strong," Jack replied; "but it's a good average fence, anyhow. If some parts of it are a little weak, other parts are extra strong. I don't know but I may have left a gap here and there a yard wide or so; but then I made up for it by doubling the number of rails on each side of the gap. I dare say the cattle will find it a good fence on the whole, and will like it, though I canna say that it is perfect in every part."

"What!" cried the man, not seeing the point; "do you tell me that you have built a fence around my lot with weak places in it, and gaps in it? Why you might just as well have built no fence at all. If there is one opening, or place where an opening can be made, the cattle will be sure to find it, and will all go through. Don't you know that a fence must be perfect or it is worthless?"

"I used to think so," said the dry Scotchman; "but I hear you talk so much about averaging matters with the Lord, it seemed to me we might try it with the cattle. If an average fence won't do for them, I am afraid that an average character won't do in the day of judgment. When I was on shipboard and a storm was driving us on the rocks, the captain cried, 'Let go the anchor!' But the mate shouted back, 'There is a broken link in the cable.' Did the captain say, when he heard that, 'No matter, it's only one link. The rest of the chain is good. Ninety-nine of the hundred links are strong. Its average is high. It only lacks one per cent of being perfect. Surely the anchor ought to respect so excellent a chain and not break away from it?' No, indeed! he shouted, 'Get another chain!' He knew that a chain with one broken link was no chain at all; that he might as well throw the anchor overboard without any cable, as with a defective one. So with the anchor of our souls. If there is the least flaw in the cable, it is not safe to trust it. We had better throw it away, and try to get a new one that we know is perfect."

Old Times.

A half century ago, a large part of the people of the United States lived in houses unpainted, unplastered, and utterly devoid of adornment. A well-fed fire in the yawning chasm of a huge chimney gave partial warmth to a single room, and it was a common remark that the inmates were roasting on one side, while freezing on the other: in contrast a majority of the people of the older States now live in houses that are clapboarded, painted, blinded, and comfortably warmed. Then, the household furniture consisted of a few plain chairs, a plain table, a bedstead made by the village carpenter. Carpets there were none. To-day, few are the homes, in city or country, that do not contain a carpet of some sort, while the average laborer by a week's work may earn enough to enable him to repose at night upon a spring bed.

Fifty years ago, the kitchen "dressers" were set forth with a shining row of pewter plates. The farmer ate with a buck-handled knife and an iron or pewter spoon, but the advancing civilization has sent the plates and spoons to the melting pot, while the knives and forks have give place to nickle or silver plated cutlery.

In those days the utensils for cooking were a dinner-pot, tea-kettle, skillet, Dutch oven and frying pan; to-day there is no end of kitchen furniture.

The people of 1830 sat in the evening in the glowing light of a pitch-knot fire, or read their weekly newspaper by the flickering light of a "tallow dip;" now, in city and village, their apartments are bright with the flame of the gas jet or the softer radiance of kerosene. Then, if the fire went out upon the hearth, it was re-kindled by a coal from a neighboring hearth, or by flint, steel and tinder. Those who indulged in pipes and cigars could light them only by some hearthstone; to-day we light fire and pipes by the dormant fire-works in the match-safe at a cost of one hundredth of a cent.

In those days we guessed the hour of noon, or ascertained it by the creeping of the sunlight up to the "noon mark" drawn upon the floor; only the well-to-do could afford a clock. To-day who does not carry a watch? and as for clocks, you may purchase them at wholesale, by the cart-load, at sixty-two cents apiece.

Fifty years ago, how many dwellings were adorned with pictures? How many are there now that do not display a print, engraving, chromo, or lithograph? How many pianos or parlor organs were there then? Reed organs were not invented till 1840, and now they are in every village.

Some who may read this article will remember that in 1830 the Bible, the almanac, and the few text-books used in schools were almost the only volumes of the household. The dictionary was a volume four inches square and an inch and a half in thickness. In some of the country villages a few public-spirited men had gathered libraries containing from three to five hundred volumes; in contrast, the public libraries of the present, containing more than ten thousand volumes, have an aggregate of 10,650,000 volumes, not including the Sunday school and private libraries of the country. It is estimated that altogether the number of volumes accessible to the public is not less than 20,000,000! Of Webster's and Worcester's dictionaries, it may be said that enough have been published to supply one to every one hundred inhabitants of the United States.—Atlantic.

Not Enough.—It is not enough to be dead unto the world. It is not enough to be a corpse. You must be a new creation in Christ. Alive to every good work. Sometimes indolence is substituted for devotion, and the poor victim is persuaded that inactivity is the highest grace. Men sing, "I am resting, Lord, in thee," when the Master is crying after them, "Go work to-day in my vineyard." They sing "Hold the fort," when God commands them to "go up and possess the land." Activity is the first step out of rebellion, and activity is the first step into the kingdom of righteousness. "Out of self into Christ" is the old formula. "Alive unto Christ" involves being alive unto the interests of his kingdom. Your clerk is not alive unto your interest when he simply sits behind the counter and refrains from stealing your goods. Do you live in Christ? Do you live the life you now live in the flesh by the faith of the Son of God, who hath loved you and given himself for you?—New York Observer.

Knocking away Props.—"See, father," said a lad who was walking with his father, "they are knocking away the props from under the bridge; what are they doing that for? Won't the bridge fall?"

"They are knocking them away," said the father, "that the timbers may rest more firmly upon the stone piers, which are now finished."

So God often takes away our earthly props that we may rest more firmly upon divine support. God sometimes takes away a man's health that he may rest upon him for his daily bread. Before his health failed, though he perhaps repeated daily the words, "Give us this day our daily bread," he looked to his own industry for that which he asked God for. That prop being taken away, he rests wholly upon God's providential bounty. He receives his bread; he receives it as a gift of God.

Childrens' Corner.

Barefoot.

O, don't you remember the old hillside farm,
And the farm-house with clapboards so gray,
With the garden of roses and sweet pinks and balm,
And the meadows with buttercups gay?
And don't you remember how in doors and out,
And under the old orchard trees,
The gay, laughing children were skipping about,
With bare feet, as busy as bees?

How we all played together the girls and the boys,
And had houses, and workshops, and stores,
Rag babies, and "eartherns," and just as much noise
As our voices could make out of doors!
How we loved through the pastures and woodland to roam,
To gather bright mosses and flowers!
We thought then, as now, there was "no place like home,"
And no home so delightful as ours.

And don't you remember the pleasant school road,
And the school-house so sunny in June,
With the lessons we learned, and the "mark" that we "toed"—
And how we played "pizen" at noon?
Our sun-bonnets, crumpled, hung over our necks,
The summer wind played with our hair;
While the sun paid our faces its warmest respects,
And kissed our white toes that went bare.

How we climbed the steep hillsides as nimble as goats,
And skipped o'er the ledges in glee;
We mimicked the woodlark and whippoorwill's notes,
And sung with the chick-a-dee-dee.
We waded the brook when the water was low,
And shouted to make the woods ring,
Or played on its banks in the summer's soft glow,
Light-hearted as birds on the wing.

You remember the pond where the geese used to swim,
How we called it the ocean so wide,
And in an old hat, that was minus the brim,
We sailed our rag-dolls on its tide?
And when they had cruised all the wide ocean through,
And outdone both Magellan and Cook,
We drew them home in an old ragged shoe,
And called it a coach-ride they took.

How we danced in the mud with our bare, naked feet,
And played 'twas the Dutch way to churn?
We made us mud-biscuits and plum-cake so sweet,
Without any cook-book to learn.
How we pitied the children whose stockings and shoes
Forbade them to share in our fun!
While we stirred up our puddings, and pastries and stews,
And left them to cook in the sun.

—Youth's Companion.

My First Quarter.

The site now occupied as a railroad station of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton railroad was, over sixty years ago, a brickyard. The owner of this piece of land, with his three sons, made a vast quantity of bricks every summer. The father was thoroughly industrious, but was very penurious. He gave each of his sons twenty-five cents, for spending money, the Fourth of July. One of these, Elisha, kept his money for some time, and was led to attend a missionary meeting. He had heard something would be said about the awful degradation of the heathen.

He determined, before going, that they should not get his quarter, for it was all the money he had. He listened with close attention to a touching recital of the ignorance and cruel practices of the heathen, and of their lost condition. Soon he began to pity, then secretly to pray; then he resolved to give all he had toward sending them the Gospel of Christ. When the collection was taken, like the widow of old, he gave all he had, his twenty-five cents.

On returning home he thanked God that his lot had been cast in a Christian land. Though he had parted with all the money he had, he sincerely regretted he had no more; but determined he would make money and do good with it. For many years he toiled and was frugal in his habits, and honored the Lord with his substance. Thi first sheaf given to God was the foundation, he often said, of all his prosperity.

At the age of forty he received from his father's estate, $30,000, which he carefully invested and continually increased. His habit of continualy giving to the poor and suffering and helping in the missionary operations in different parts of the world, brought rich blessings to his soul. While causing the widow's heart to sing for joy, his own joy in Christ flowed in a continual stream. He often quoted the Scripture: "There is that scattereth, and yet increaseth; and there is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty." Well, he realized the truth of this inspired word.

During the last years of his life he gave away thousands of dollars, reserving for himself only enough for the comforts of life. More than thirty missionaries, some in foreign lands, others among the colored people of the South, have been aided by his liberality from year to year. Missionaries in New York and other cities have been frequently aided by his benefactions, and the writer has many times been helped in his labors among the poor by this excellent man.

Increasing infirmities prevented him from doing much active service for the Master. He often said: "I thank God he has given me a disposition to help the poor." He made friends of the mammon of unrighteousness, and doubtless many will welcome him to everlasting habitations. All his hope of salvation rested on Jesus. In early life he confessed his faith, and labored in word and doctrine, as well as gave of his wealth to God.—Christian Press.

Enough Dime-Novelism.

The Omaha Bee says: "A telegram was received by Marshal Snowdon from a Mr. D——, of New York city, telling him to arrest his son Thomas, who had telegraphed home for money. Policeman Ryan found the boy sitting in the Western Union office crying. He was there awaiting an answer to his dispatch.

It seems that the boy, who is a bright youth, had, according to his own story, been accustomed to read dime novels and sensational stories during his leisure time in his father's store, and becoming fascinated with the thrilling adventures therein graphically depicted, he determined to start out in the world in quest of fortune and adventure. He left home with $42 in money, a portion of which he paid out for railroad fare, and the remainder was stolen from him on the cars in Iowa. On his arrival in Omaha he found himself penniless. Thus far he had had adventures enough to suit him, and becoming convinced that the actual experience of these things is not as pleasant as it is to read about them in print, he concluded to return home. He therefore pawned his revolver, with which he had armed himself, for $2.50, and used the money to telegraph home. His father had been telegraphed to, and the money will probably be forthcoming to send the boy home again. This is but one instance out of the tens of thousands where boys have been led astray by the perusal of such abominable trash as dime novels and weekly illustrated papers. Parents can not be too careful to keep such mental poison from their children, and the publishers who issue it ought to be indicted. It is as dangerous as the vile literature which is prohibited by law.—Little Christian.

Wooden Swearing.—A Sabbath school was assembled for the monthly concert. The lesson was about swearing, and when the children had repeated their verses, the minister rose to talk to them. "I hope, dear children," he said, "that you will never let your lips speak profane words. But now I want to tell you about a kind of swearing which I heard a good woman speak about not long ago. She called it wooden swearing. It's a kind of swearing that many people besides children are given to when they are angry. Instead of giving vent to their feelings in oaths, they slam the doors, kick the chairs, stamp on the floor, throw the furniture about, and make all the noise they possibly can. 'Isn't this just the same as swearing?' said she. 'It's just the same kind of feeling exactly, only they do not like to say those awful words; but they force the furniture to make the noise, and so I call it wooden swearing.' I hope, dear children, that you will not do any of this kind of swearing either." It is better to leave alone wooden swearing and all other kinds of swearing.

Home and Farm.

Leached Ashes.

Leached ashes vary so much in character that no precise estimate of their value can be made. The effect of their application must depend, too, on the kind of soil on which they are used. Heavy clay is likely to be injuriously compacted by liberal dressing of ashes, leached or unleached, unless the land is in sod, in which case ashes spread upon the surface tend to increase the crop of grass. In a case reported to Mr. Billings, where large quantites of leached ashes were spread on a field of a few acres, the soil clayey loam, inclining to muck in many places, there was the appearance of permanent injury from their use. The land broke up cloddy, and there was great difficulty in reducing it to a friable condition, while there was no perceptible increase of fertility. The safest and best use of leached ashes on most kinds of soil is spreading them on old meadow or old pasture. Working them into land on which potatoes are to be planted in the same season is also a good way to use them. Good ashes make a valuable dressing for wheat land and for corn; but the leached ashes are too uncertain in their character to be recommended for such use.—The Husbandman.

Oatmeal Samp.—Put a pint of oatmeal to soak in warm water a few hours before cooking it; just water enough to cover it, then pour this mixture into boiling water, a little at a time, with a good pinch of salt, and let it cook slowly the same as a cornmeal hasty pudding, for half an hour or longer. A pudding can be made of it by using eggs, milk, sugar, raisins and cinnamon, the same as for other puddings.

Cracked Wheat.—Soak it the same as oatmeal, and as it is apt to burn, put it in a little tin pail, and set the pail into a kettle of boiling water; cover closely and let it boil half or three quarters of an hour. Stir this into boiling water, the same as oatmeal.

Sewing or Housework. — The condition of sewing women in Cleveland, Ohio, is being investigated by Christian women. A widow was found, formerly well-to-do, who makes vests at fourteen cents each, and earns $1.96 per week for herself and boy. Two girls make cheviot shirts at four cents apiece, and working till midnight earn $3 00 per week. Heavy overalls are made for the wholesale houses at fifty cents per dozen. Girls earn $2.00 per week at this. Woolen pantaloons are made for ten cents a pair. Honest, reliable girls can get from $4 00 to $5 00 a week at housework reckoning board. Why do they prefer an unhealthy occupation and less wages?

A Strange Poison.—A telegram from Rockford, Mich., April 30, says: Nathan Tuttles, a child eight months old, was poisoned to death to-day by the nurse giving it milk in which a spider had been drowned. Immediately after drinking it the child was thrown into spasms, and died in a few moments.

Tight Boots.—The Elmira Gazette chronicles the death of a boy in that city from a singular cause. The lad, some days ago, had a pair of new boots, which proved too tight for comfortable wear. They pinched his feet, and bruised the skin in places, producing an erysipelas eruption which developed rapidly into a malignant form, and going to the heart produced death.

Over a thousand bags of so-called rice-meal composed of powdered marble and 40 per cent of rice, that was awaiting sale by auction, was lately destroyed by order of the Liverpool magistrates, lest it might be used as human food.

To remove weeds from paths take one hundred pounds of water, twenty pounds of quick lime, and two pounds of flour of sulphur boiled in an iron vessel. Water with the clear part, diluted, and the weeds will not re-appear for several years.

A strawberry grower states that to two barrels of rainwater he put one quarter of a pound of ammonia and one-quarter of a pound of common nitre, and with this solution he sprinkled his strawberry beds every night when blossoming. The result was double the amount of large strawberries to that just adjoining not so treated.

This item appears in the Southern Husbandman: "To destroy bugs on squashes and cucumber vines dissolve a tablespoonful of saltpetre in a pailful of water, put a pint of this around each hill, shaping the earth so that it will not spread much, and the thing is done. The more saltpetre, if you can afford it —it is good for vegetable but death to animal life. The bugs burrow in the earth at night and fail to rise in the morning. It is also good to kill grub in peach trees—only use twice as much, say a quart to each tree. There was not a yellow or blistered leaf on twelve or fifteen trees to which it was applied last season. No danger of killing any vegetable with it."

A Vigorous Reply.

The Republican and Leader of LaCrosse, Wisconsin, lately published the following choice correspondence but refused to print the reply which appears below:

"When Mr. Ralph Martin died, at Centerville, some time since, Rev. T. G. Owen, by request, preached the funeral sermon. In the audience was a man named Hinman, who gets a livlihood by abusing secret societies and especially the Masonic fraternity. He is also a correspondent for a disreputable sheet called the Cynosure, published somewhere in Chicago. Mr. Owen is a Mason. So this Hinman, in order to give the Rev. gentleman a stab, made garbled extracts from his sermon and without adopting its spirit, fixed up a libelous article and sent it to the Cynosure. It was printed in that paper and a few copies found their way to Trempealeau where they have been quietly circulated among the 'knowing' ones. Finally some of Mr. Owen's friends got wind of it, and procuring a copy, showed it to him. In reply, he said he would preach the same sermon to them and let them judge for themselves. This he did last Sunday morning to a large congregation."

REPLY.

TREMPAELEAU, Wis., }
May 17, 1879. }

Editor Christian Cynosure,

MY DEAR SIR:—I handed the accompanying communication to the editor of the Republican and Leader and solicited its insertion, but was refused. I now in the interest of truth and reform ask the insertion of my defense of Bro. Hinman and the article that called it out, in the Christian Cynosure.

Bro. Hinman's communication which gave rise to this discussion was published in the Cynosure of Sept. 17, 1878. Yours respectfully,

D. W. GILFILLAN.

Editor Republican and Leader:

In your issue of May 1st in the column of H. P. Pond, your Trempealeau correspondent, there appeared an article unjustly reflecting upon Rev. H. H. Hinman, a Congregational clergyman at present engaged in lecturing against secret societies, and reflecting also upon a Christian weekly called the Christian Cynosure, published by Ezra Cook & Co., No. 13 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Illinois. I am thus specific so that the writer will know exactly the whereabouts of this "disreputable sheet."

By a diligent inquiry of several individuals who were present and heard this discourse I find that Owen was not misrepresented by Bro. Hinman in his communication to the Cynosure. That he made use of the language therein attributed to him, which placed in any connection would be contrary to the plain teachings of Christ.

Now, one of these three things is true: Either these people are greatly mistaken, and misunderstood the general drift of that discourse, or he omitted some very essential portions of his remarks in his repetition at the Congregational church in Trempealeau, or his Trempealeau audience have become so blinded by the pernicious teachings of the last three years that they are incapable of understanding the plain teachings of the Gospel.

What is the great offence of Bro. Hinman? Simply that he is lecturing against Masonry and its kindred satellites, and is endeavoring to arouse the Christian church to the realization of the corrupting influence of these oath-bound associations; and advising Christian people to come out from among them and be separate, and to stand for the truths of the Gospel as against the false teachings of our modern Baals.

As to the reflection of your correspondent upon the Christian Cynosure, I have to inform Mr. Pond, et al, that I take into my family for my own and my family's reading no "disreputable" paper, and I hurl back the imputation with scorn and contempt. I take two radical prohibition papers which every rumseller and license advovate would pronounce false in their teachings and infamous, because they tell the truth about their atrocious business and its corrupting influence upon society. So the Cynosure speaks every week the plain, unvarnished truth against Masonry—an institution that cannot bear the light of day and attempts to stifle free discussion. So the Bible thunders with its voice in plainest teachings against false religion; as reads the account of the good old prophet Elijah's conflict with Baal's prophets in their efforts to corrupt the true religion and mislead the people.

It is intimated that the copy of the Cynosure that contained these strictures upon the discourse of Mr. Owen clandestinely crept into Trempealeau. Not at all, gentlemen, it came like all other papers through the mail to five subscribers, no one of which are at all ashamed of their part in this matter or in the least regret it, however much of agitation it may stir up.

I have thus discharged a duty which I felt was imposed upon me, to a personal friend who is absent and engaged in the noble work of preaching Christ's Gospel unencumbered by the worst of worldly influences. D. W. GILFILLAN.

—A meteor, apparently about the size of an ordinary foot-ball, passed over Washington Minn., about 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon, and descending east of the town, exploded with a report equal to the discharge of a 300-pounder. The concussion shook the town, and the first impression among the people generally was that there had been a mill explosion. The shock and report were very great. The meteor was plainly visible in its passage through the air, looking like a ball of fire with a long train of vapor behind it. It exploded just before it struck the earth.

—Bro. J. P. Stoddard preached in the Christian church on Western avenue, in this city, on last Lord's day morning.

—The Church of Christ in Ustick, Ill., will hold a grove meeting, D. V., on the farm of Bro. B. P. Baker, one-half mile north of the Cottonwood meeting-house, Ustick, Whiteside Co., Ill., beginning Friday evening, May 30th, and lasting over Saturday, May 31st, and Lord's day, June 1. Friends from abroad who can bring tents will please do so. All are invited, especially those who stand for Christ against secret societies, worldliness, and sectarianism.

—Prof. E. D. Bailey preached on Sabbath for the College church, Wheaton, Prof. Blanchard occupying the pulpit at Tonica. On Saturday the latter attended and spoke by invitation at the Christian Temperance Convention of LaSalle county, Ill.

—Rev. W. R. Roach of Palmyra, Wis., attends the Bible Christian Conference held soon in Canada. He takes an ample supply of Cynosure tracts. Bro. Roach, of whose important work we were made acquainted through the correspondence of Bro. Hinman, has the pastoral care of a large circuit in Wisconsin beside superintending the entire district in which he is located.

—Prof. G. E Foster, late of the University of New Brunswick, has been engaged to deliver a course of twelve lectures in this city, under the auspices of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. He gave his first lecture last Sabbath night at the Union Park Congregational church. His subject was "Reforms and Reformers." He is engaged to speak in Wheaton chapel after leaving this city.

—Rev. W. M. Thayer, of Franklin, Mass., is engaged in compiling a life of Dr. Jewett, and would be glad to receive copies of letters or articles from his pen, or reports of his lectures, with facts, incidents and anecdotes respecting him, to assist in perfecting the work.

—The Leroy, N. Y., Gazette of late date has the following notice of Bro. A. D. Zariphonithes:

Rev. Zariphonithes, an Albinian Greek, and doubtless the only person in America, acquainted with the Albanian tongue, preached in the Presbyterian church on Sunday. Mr. Zariphonithes has at various times passed a number of weeks at the University in his vacations, and is now about ready to return to his native land, where he will visit his family and then take up his missionary labors in Constantinople. We understand he purposes taking a helpmeet back with him, and with that in view has left for Illinois.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

—Rev. J. T. Michael, whose tracts on Freemasonry and the M. E. Discipline were noticed a fortnight ago, graduated at Drew Theological Seminary in 1874, and began to preach with good prospects of success. At the Centennial some of the Cynosure tracts were placed in his hand and he began to investigate the great issues therein presented in earnest. As he became convinced of the truth he proclaimed it, and as a result of trying honestly to do his duty he was left without work by the last conference. He is, however, preaching every Sabbath in different places as the Lord opens the way, and is trying to arrange for a reform convention of members of the M. E. church in his conference. His plan for the present is as follows:

1. Believing that the M. E. church is not in a condition to take proper care of truly converted souls, we will endeavor to provide for the spiritual needs of any who may be saved through our labors by organizing them in societies and governing them by the Discipline of the M. E. church as far as that book will apply to such societies.

2. Believing "that God's design in raising up the M. E. church in America was to reform the continent and spread Scriptural holiness over these lands," and believing that the practice of the M. E. church in many respects is not what it should be and not what its Discipline requires, thus greatly hindering the Lord's work, we will try to get as many names as possible of members of the M. E. church within the bounds of Newark conference who are in favor of holding, some time during the present conference year a convention for the purpose of considering the importance of removing the differences between our Discipline and our practice.

With the aid of the Holy Ghost, we expect to accomplish something. Pray for us.

BAPTIST.

—Rev. Dr. Fulton of the Centennial Baptist church, Brooklyn, withdrew from the New York Ministers' Conference on Monday of last week.

—Dr. W. W. Everts, late of this city, entered upon his pastorate at Bergen Heights, New Jersey, Sabbath before last.

—We find the following incident in the American Wesleyan respecting Dr. Fulton of the Centennial Baptist church, Brooklyn: "Rev. Dr. Fulton in a free and easy way told his experience at the Sunday school Temperance Conference, Y. M. C. A. rooms, Brooklyn. He had become a slave to tobacco. A $5 pipe and $36 meerschaum lay on his study table. He finally determined to forsake the abomination, weeks of suffering following. 'Why are you so cross, Justin?' said his wife. 'Don't you know I've had no tobacco for six weeks?' A kiss was the encouraging response. Sunday came. His tongue was thick and his energy gone. He remembered, as he sat in the pulpit dreading the service, that he had a bit of the weed with him. He prayed inwardly on this fashion, 'Lord, thou knowest that some of this stuff will set me all right, but if it be thy will give me help now to overcome.' He did conquer, and for sixteen years has not touched the polluting poison. The sermon that followed was said to be the best he ever preached. When he went to Tremont Temple he found that fine edifice defaced by the spittle of dirty disciples. When he left, only one out of 900 members used the weed. Now his successor uses tobacco and the people have gone back. Example is the great power in enforcing purity and sobriety. 'Be ye clean ye that bear the vessels of the Lord.'"

WESLEYAN.

—At the next session of the Kansas Ministerial Association to be held May 29, near Chapman, Dickinson county, Rev. J. A. Richards of Ft. Scott. discusses the topic, "Masonic Religion," and Rev. J. T. Kiggins gives an exposition of the 8th chapter of Ezekiel.

—Mrs. C. E. Douglass, wife of Rev. D. B. Douglass, a well known and earnest reformer, but who has for years been a helpless sufferer from paralysis, writes a message from the sick room to the Lockport Conference, to which Bro. H. T. Besse responds very appropriately in the Am. Wesleyan.

—Bro. J. T. Kiggins, president of the Kansas conference is full of energy for the strengthening of the Wesleyan churches in his district. Several new preachers have taken work in that State within the past year, and new churches are being hopefully founded.

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

--During the session of the General Assembly next week at New Wilmington, Pa., Rev. L. J. Crawford, editor and publisher of the News at Sandy Lake, Pa., will publish an "Assembly Daily." The enterprise is receiving hearty encouragement from all, and liberal support and hearty co-operation is cheerfully promised.

--The Christian Instructor suggests that all the pastors and elders of the United Presbyterian church meet in their houses on the evening of the opening of the General Assembly, to pray for a special blessing upon that gathering.

--The railroad lines leading to Western Pennsylvania have very generally given reduced rates to the members of the Assembly.

GENERAL.

—Gov. A. H. Colquitt, of Georgia, left Atlanta on Monday for Brooklyn, N. Y., to attend the Semi-Centennial of the American Sunday-School Union, and deliver the address. Great preparations have been made for the celebration.

—Major D. W. Whittle, beside undertaking the pastoral work of the Chicago Avenue church in this city (of which he and Mr. Moody are the elders), has been conducting revival meetings nearly every evening since his arrival, in other churches on the North Side.

--A New York dispatch says that many efforts have been made during a few months past to induce Mr. Moody to take charge of a permanent religious charge in that city. A number of prominent and wealthy citizens have interested themselves in the movement, and are ready to guarantee its final success. The idea is to secure Cooper Union Hall as the central point, and to establish around it a quadrilateral of four service halls--two in the lower and two in the upper part of the city. During a recent visit Mr. Moody was warmly urged to come this fall. He said, however, that he had decided to labor in St. Louis next winter. The following year it is expected to secure him for New York, and to keep him there at the head of a large company of revival-workers, financially independent of the churches. The movement is purely a lay one. Merchants and business men expect much interest in the project, and are ready to help sustain it.

--The religious liberty bill before the Pennsylvania Senate has failed to receive a constitutional majority. The bill was in the interest of the Seventh Day Baptists, and the principal objection to it was on the ground that such a measure was unconstitutional.

News of the Week.

—Suits have been progressing in the U. S. courts of Chicago for over a week against several architects and building superintendents of the new U. S. custom house and post-office now building. They are charged with causing a loss to the government of some $250,000 in poor stone, etc.

— A trades-union communist meeting was held in this city on Sunday for the special purpose of denouncing the Chicago Times for its rejection of secret society men from its composing rooms. One of the resolutions adopted, reads:

"Resolved, That we will use our utmost energy to impress upon our friends the meanness of the action of the said Wilbur F. Storey, and will oppose, and counsel others to oppose the Times and its proprietor until such time as the Lord in his mercy may see fit to remove this indecent and cruel old rascal from the face of the earth."

—Some of our city school managers have a commendable care for the morals as well as the intelligence of the school children. A Madison street saloon-keeper, recently obtained permission to build a beer garden on State street, just south of Harrison. The place was to be opened Saturday, but a member of the Board of Education, noticing the proximity of the garden to the Jones School interested himself in the matter so far that, at the last moment, the license for the place was refused.

—The Indian Territory seizure by Kansas emigrants is falling through from the combined opposition of Indians and the government. Colonel C. H. Smith, Nineteenth Infantry, has made a report under his detail to investigate the extent and location of the movement. It is postmarked Winfield, Kan., May 9, where he had just arrived at the date of writing. After summarizing the general details of the exodus, and the condition of affairs in Kansas, he states that 200 or 300 people from the counties he had visited (Wichita, Independence, and Coffeyville,) had gone into the territory, and as they have no following will not refuse to return when notified to do so.

—Crop reports from over one hundred points in Iowa show an increased acreage of wheat and corn, and that both of these crops are in excellent condition. The season has been dry which has enabled farmers to plow lands that were not tillable in wet seasons. In a few localities the drought has done some damage, but, as a rule, the recent rains came in time to leave the crops in good shape, but in most sections more rain will be needed within a week or ten days to keep the crops in good condition. Oats and hay will fall short of the yield last year, owing to a decreased acreage of oats sown and the dry season. Other crops promise a good yield.

—The trial of the Chisolm murderers will occur in September. Young Chisolm, now at Harrisburg, Pa., states that he and his mother will appear against the murderers at that time, although their friends in Kemper county have advised them not to do so.

—The New Orleans authorities have ordered the arrest of all persons who peddle berries and vegetables without license. In two days over fifty poverty-stricken unfortunates were arrested and sent to jail. Among the victims were a girl who had walked five miles in the swamp to pick berries, and an old man over 60 years of age, who offered for sale vegetables raised in his own garden. The peddlers, as a rule, were poor people striving to make a few cents by selling berries. The papers pronounce the law and the manner of of its execution, barbarous.

—The accidents resulting from broken rails are much fewer than in former years. It is estimated that the diminution is 50 per cent, due largely to the use of steel rails. In 1875 accidents from broken rails numbered 840; in 1871 from the same reason, 481. The number of accidents upon railroads from all sources was, in 1875, 1,208; in 1876, 982; in 1877, 891, and in 1878, 740. This is an encouraging exhibit of facts in which all feel a personal interest.

—Pliny Freeman died at his home in Ravenswood, L. I., May 12th, in his eighty-second year. He was in early life engaged in mercantile pursuits in New York. For the last twenty-five years he has been connected with life insurance companies.

—In consequence of the refusal of the Faculty of Dartmouth College to allow public reading in the college church, last Friday evening the students assembled before the residence of President S. C. Bartlett and Professor Lord, blowing horns, groaning and singing. Saturday morning there was uproarious demonstration at prayers. Since then, the Faculty have been making an investigation, resulting to-day in the expulsion of two members of the senior class. Much feeling is manifested by the students over this action, and the classes are holding a meeting to consider the matter. Two students, who are supposed to have given the Faculty information respecting the demonstration, were taken to the pump and given a soaking. One of them fired a revolver but no one was injured.

FOREIGN.

—It was announced in the Berlin Reichstag last week that Austria and Russia had consented to become parties to the Anglo-German treaty for the prevention of slave trade on the African coast, but that France and the United States, though asked to do so, were hardly expected to join, as they were unwilling to admit the mutual right of search.

—A rumor that an Italian firm was negotiating in the United States for a supply of 100,000 tons of coal, in place of getting it from England as heretofore, has caused uneasiness in London. A cargo of American coal reached the Mediterranean sixteen months ago, and met with a ready sale, and more than twenty cargoes have been sent over since that time. The English papers apprehend that before long the coal industry of great Britain will have to encounter determined rivalry on the part of the United States. American coal will not be landed in England, but be shipped to ports on the continent which are now dependent on supplies from the coal fields of the United Kingdom.

—A gentleman just returned from Russia says the effects of the policy of repression are hardly noticeable in St. Petersburg. He traversed a large part of the city late at night without interference or question. Sunday, the 4th inst., being a bright day, the streets were thronged with promenaders, happy and light-hearted, apparently, as those in any other continental city. He saw the Princess Dagmar driving through the streets alone in her carriage, and unattended.

—The Russian Steam Navigation Company's vessels will convey 40,000 men and 2,000 horses home from Bourgas, on the Black Sea, between May 15 and June 15. The remainder of the evacuating army will go away by railway.

—A Lahore correspondent reports that fresh difficulties have arisen in the peace negotiations at Gundamug. Yakoob Khan is willing to grant what the British demand, but his position in Afghanistan is so critical that he is himself obliged to demand urgently more than they can grant in return.

—There was a great conflagration last week at Poonah, an important government and military centre, eighty miles southeast of Bombay, India. The government school, Boodwar Palace, law courts, Post-office, police office, and fifty houses were completely destroyed.

—Another disease has broken out in the Caucasus which proves fatal in twenty-four hours. In Derby, which contains 150 houses, several persons died. In Medivricheni, with 200 houses, there are 100 persons dead. Mortality elsewhere is on the same scale.

—Reports from Hungary state that floods have destroyed 300 houses in Kottori. The harvest prospects in that district are ruined. The town of Halas has been inundated in consequence of continuous rains. Much damage was done.

—The sufferings of the Mennonite exodus to Brazil says the Christian Union furnish modern history with one of its most pathetic chapters. Emigrating from Silesia to Russia to avoid the Prussian conscription, they left Russia for Brazil to avoid a similar ukase by the Czar. In the new land of their adoption, however, hunger, plague and death by famine confronted them. After much suffering, over 500 of them—all that were left—resolved to return, and, after perils at sea, were landed destitute on the quays of Antwerp. The generous Belgians housed and fed them for three weeks, and have now voted $5,000 to enable each to exhibit at the Russian frontier a small means of livelihood till work can be found, without which they were refused permission to return to that empire.

CHAPTER V.

FIRST, OR ENTERED APPRENTICE DEGREE.

Worshipful Master (one rap)—Brother Senior Warden, from whence came you?

Senior Warden—From a lodge of the holy Saints John at Jerusalem.[11]

Worshipful Master—What came you here to do?

Senior Warden—To learn to subdue my passions and improve myself in Masonry.

Worshipful Master—Then you are a Mason, I presume?

Senior Warden—I am; so taken and accepted among brothers and fellows.

Worshipful Master—What makes you a Mason?

Senior Warden—My obligation.[12]

Worshipful Master—Where were you made an Entered Apprentice?

Senior Warden—In a regularly constituted lodge of Entered Appentices.

Worshipful Master—How many constitute a lodge of Entered Apprentices?

Senior Warden—Seven or more.

Worshipful Master—When of seven only of whom do they consist?

Senior Warden—Of the Worshipful Master, Senior and Junior Wardens, Treasurer, Secretary, Senior and Junior Deacons.

Worshipful Master—The Junior Deacon's place in the lodge?

Senior Warden—On the right hand of the Senior Warden in the west.

Worshipful Master (one rap, Deacons both rise)—Your duty, brother Junior Deacon?

Junior Deacon—To carry messages from the Senior Warden in the west to the Junior Warden in the south, and elsewhere about the lodge as directed; to prepare and present candidates, and see that the lodge is duly tyled.

Worshipful Master—The Senior Deacon's place in the lodge?

Junior Deacon—On the right, in front of the Worshipful Master in the east.

Worshipful Master—Brother Senior Deacon, your duty there?

Senior Deacon—To carry orders from the Worshipful Master in the east to the Senior Warden in the west, and elsewhere about the lodge as required; to introduce and accommodate visiting brethren, and to receive and conduct candidates.

Worshipful Master—The Secretary's place in the lodge?

Worshipful Master (two raps, balance of officers rise)—Brother Secretary, your duty there?

Secretary—To observe the will and pleasure of the Worshipful Master; to record the proceedings of the lodge proper to be written, transmit a copy thereof to the Grand Lodge when required; receive all moneys paid into the lodge, pay them over to the Treasurer taking his receipt therefor.

Worshipful Master—The Treasurer's place in the lodge?

Secretary—On the right hand of the Worshipful Master in the east.

Worshipful Master—Brother Treasurer, your duty there?

Treasurer—To receive all moneys from the hands of the Secretary; to keep a just and regular account of the same, and pay them out again by order of the Worshipful Master and the consent of the lodge.

Worshipful Master—The Junior Warden's station in the lodge?

Treasurer—In the south, Worshipful.

Worshipful Master—Brother Junior Warden, why in the south and your duties there?

Junior Warden—As the sun in the south at its meridian height is the beauty and glory of the day, so stands the Junior Warden in the south, the better to observe the time, call the craft from labor to refreshment, superintend them during the hours thereof, see that none convert the means of refreshment into intemperance or excess; call them to labor again by order of the Worshipful Master, that he may have honor and the craft profit thereby.

Worshipful Master—The Senior Warden's station in the lodge?

Junior Warden—In the west, Worshipful.

Worshipful Master—Brother Senior Warden, why in the west and your duties there?

Senior Warden—As the sun is in the west at the close of the day, so is the Senior Warden in the west, to assist the Worshipful Master in opening and closing his lodge, pay the craft their wages if any be due, see that none go away dissatisfied, harmony being the strength and support of all institutions, especially ours.

Worshipful Master—The Worshipful Master's station in the lodge?

Senior Warden—In the east, Worshipful.

Worshipful Master—Why in the east, and his duties there?

Senior Warden—As the sun[13] rises in the east to open and govern the day, so rises the Worshipful Master in the east (Worshipful Master rises) to open and govern his lodge, to set the craft to work, giving them proper instructions.

Worshipful Master—Brother Senior Warden, it is my order that ——— lodge No. ——— be now opened on the first degree of Masonry; this you will communicate to the Junior Warden in the south, and he to the brethren present, that they having due notice may govern themselves accordingly.

Senior Warden (one rap)—Brother Junior Warden, it is the order of the Worshipful Master in the east that ———lodge No. ——— be now opened on the first degree of Masonry; this you will communicate to the brethren present, that they having due notice thereof may govern themselves accordingly.

Junior Warden (three raps, all rise)—Brethren, it is the order of the Worshipful Master in the east, communicated to me by way of the west, that ——— lodge No. ——— be now opened on the first degree of Masonry; of this you will take due notice and govern yourselves accordingly.

Worshipful Master—Together, brethren. [All here make the due-guard and sign[14] of an Entered Apprentice, as follows:]

Due Guard of an Entered Apprentice.

DUE GUARD OF AN ENTERED APPRENTICE.

Hold out left hand, with palm up, a little in front of the body, height of hips; next place right hand horizontally over the left, two or three inches above it (see cut).

[This refers to the position of the hands when taking the obligation oft his degree; "Left hand supporting the Holy Bible square and compass, and the right resting thereon."]

NOTE 11.—"The primitive or mother lodge was held at Jernsalem and dedicated to St. John and hence was called: 'The lodge of the holy St. John of Jernsalem.' Of this first lodge, all other lodges are but branches and they therefore receive the same general name." Mackey's Lexicon, Art. St. John of Jernsalem.

NOTE 12.—"It is the obligation which makes the Mason." Morris's Dictionary, Art. Obligation.

NOTE 13.—"The Worshipful Master himself is a representative of the sun." Morris's Dictionary, Art. Sun.

NOTE 14.—"Certain mystic rites, which can here be only alluded to are then employed, by which each brother present signifies his concurrence in the ceremonies which have been celebrated and his knowledge of the degree in which the lodge is about to be opened." Mackey's Ritualist, p. 18.

Discussion on Secret Societies,

BY ELDER M. S. NEWCOMER, and ELDER G. W. WILSON.

This discussion was first published in a series of articles in the CHURCH ADVOCATE and afterward in pamphlet form. The Evangelical Repository reviewing it says; "This pamphlet consists of a series of articles originally published in the CHURCH ADVOCATE, Lancaster, Pa.
Elder M. S. Newcomer, opposes Secret Societies and especially Freemasonry, and Elder G. W. Wilson defends the system. We are free to say that Mr. Newcomer has thoroughly routed his opponent at every point. Mr. Wilson speaks by the book as he is a Royal Arch Mason."

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

BY PRESIDENT CHARLESS G. FINNEY, OF OBERLIN, OHIO

This is a most powerful argument against the Lodge by a truly great and good man who when a young man just before beginning the study of the law and before his convertion, was drawn into this Anti-Christian institution, and as he says on page seven "became a BRIGHT Mason." On the same page he says; "I was completely converted from Freemasonry to Christ." The most of this book was first published in a series of articles in the Independent which created such excitement that the publishers refused to insert the rest of the articles.

This book has already opened the eyes of multitudes to the evils of Freemasonry.

Those who wish to know the character of Freemasonry, as shown by its own publications, will find many standard works in the following list.

No sensible Mason dares deny that such men as Albert G. Mackey, the great Masonic Lexicographer, and Daniel Sickels, the Masonic author and publisher, are the highest Masonic authority in the United States.

All the books advertised here are used by Masons, but Duncan's Ritual, Allyn's Ritual and Richardson's Monitor, are not publicly acknowledged as Masonic authority, because they tell too much.

Notices.

NOTICE.

The fourth annual business meeting of the National Christian Association will occur, D. V., June 19, 1879, at 221 West Madison street, Chicago, commencing at 10 o'clock A. M. A full attendance not only of the corporate members of this body, but of all the friends, is desired. There are many reasons why if practicable you should attend this meeting, some of which are:

1st. You have many of you aided this work by contributing to its funds and you should know how those funds are invested and how the income from them is appropriated.

2nd. You should better understand the difficulties and the necessities of this great work, which can be done much better by an experience at the center than from the outside view.

3rd. Your advice and counsels are needed to aid in shaping future movements. A few men, however wise and sincere, are not equal to the demands of this great cause, and it would not be doing unto others as you would be done by to unnecessarily absent yourself, and then blame others for not meeting your expectations.

4th. You want to see the faces and shake the hands and listen to the voices of one another and the veterans in this work some of whom will soon cease from their labors.

Some States have appointed representatives to this meeting, whom we expect of course to see and we hope others will be represented; but let no man or woman friendly to the cause, stay away for want of an appointment. If you can come, consider that fact a Providential appointment which is the best and highest you can have.

MOSES PETTENGILL, President.
THOS. HODGE, Secretary.

Topics of the Time.

The tax assessor of New York has some strange experiences. He is supposed to do his duty impartially, but finds that his work is regarded by some men with great suspicion. Lately William H. Vanderbilt, the railroad king, was rated with personal property to the value of $100,000. He can buy railroads and last January bought a block on Fifth Avenue for the erection of a mansion which is expected to cost $2,000,000. Yet Mr. Vanderbilt swore before the tax commissioner that he is not the owner of any taxable personal property. Mr. Cyrus W. Field, another railroad president, who has also added three quarters of a million to his fortune through the New York Elevated railway enterprise, was also assessed upon $100,000 worth of personal property. But Mr. Field made the affidavit that he had no personal property in New York subject to taxation. August Belmont, John Roach, the ship-builder, and other distinguished names might be added to the list. While it is hard for small capitalists and traders to understand how these men can maintain their grandeur without some taxable property, the latter are very discreet in their silence on this point; as if it were a secret valuable only so long as it is unknown to the mass of tax-payers. Undoubtedly this is one of the abuses of wealth, and is sheltered only by the assurance that money and repute screen from a charge before the grand jury for perjury.

The six judges who sit in the circuit court in this city are not so unanimously nominated for re-election as six years ago. The success of the Democratic party in the city elections last month has roused party spirit and two tickets will be in the field, while the judges left out by the caucuses are independent candidates. Of the retiring bench we do not know that one is a Freemason, sworn to partiality; of the Republican nominees one at least is such, who during a long service as prosecutor is responsible for the general belief among the criminal classes that by some means a Freemason could as a rule get off without punishment. One of these retiring judges gained an unenviable reputation for his clemency toward murderers, and the daily press are doing great public service in exposing his past career in this respect. But not the least serious feature of this judicial election is the fact that it is fallen into the hands of the political ringsters, and and can hardly escape contamination; no more than when a few years since the politicians took the lead in settling upon the State Supreme bench Freemasons and grangers not beyond the stage of mediocrity as lawyers or as men.

The "May anniversaries" held in New York remind the American churches annually of their responsibility in the way of personal Christian effort only too little. There is a satisfaction in running through the columns of results and remembering how much has been sent from "our church" or town for the various missionary societies. Organizations have systematized, founded, set up the machinery, but there is something beyond this. Organizations have abuses. They absorb a percentage sometimes small, sometimes ruinously large. Their appropriations also are frequently unwisely made. Cases might be mentioned in church building where the organization has been the means of fraud and of disaster to the churches aided; others are known where home mission funds are dispersed by favoritism. Yet these do not so harm the Christian churches as the fact that personal responsibility for the world's salvation is shut out by the cloud of missionary organizations. The sunshine of hearts filled with the Holy Spirit, the dews of Divine grace from answered prayer is too much intercepted; the missionary spirit which is the spirit of Christian reform, the spirit of our Lord Jesus Christ himself, is stifled. This is a consideration too little regarded. All acknowledge the need of union in the great work left us by Christ, and in attaining union have fallen into centralization. There must be a recasting of our forms of missionary work and gifts before they can reach their proper efficiency, and to this end Christ's people should be seeking to learn his mind and to follow his spirit.

—Rev. Isaac Bancroft of Belmont, Wis., says he will be one of a hundred to make up a lecture fund of $500 for that State, or if necessary one of fifty to pay $10 each to accomplish the same object. A good start—let the Wisconsin brethren improve it.

THE FREEMAN'S REPLY TO THE CRAFTSMAN.

BY ALEXANDER THOMPSON.

You ask me, sir, to join the lodge,
To join the lodge, indeed!
And give my noble manhood up,
For fools and knaves to lead;
To wear a bib, and round and round
March with the oath-bound crew;
Or chatter nonsense at your feasts
Like monkeys in review:
To swear by heaven's eternal Lord
To break his holy law,
And listen to a Christless prayer
Without regret or awe;
To stand in heathen temple
And to foul and falsely swear
To partial virtue that protects Alone, Masonic fair;
To brother with the felon thief
And shield him in his crimes,
And help Masonic scoundrels grab
The poor man's scanty dimes;
To tramp on every blessed law
That equal rights bestows;
To know as friends Masonic sots,
And hound and hate their foes;
To swear to do what no man can
And keep God's holy will,
Or let the red Masonic knife
My blood in vengeance spill!

Go, sir, to creatures like yourself,
Who barter truth for gold;
Or those who for a petty place
Have manhood's honor sold.
Go to the dunce who cannot see
The knavery of your clan,
But do not, sir, presume again,
To tempt an honest man.

My grandsire fell at Bunker Hill;
His grandsire to be free
Fled from his dear old English home
To lands across the sea;
And I for four long, bloody years,
Against rebellion stood,
And shall I now be basely leagued
With treason's hateful brood?
Forbid it, heaven, but if the days,
The dark, dark days should come,
When holy Freedom once again,
Must beat her martial drum,
This son of mine, my only son,
This heart that loves him well,
Shall in the battle's fiery front,
Oppose your iron hail;
And ye shall know there yet are men
Who will not bow the knee,
Or barter for the lodge's smile
The blessings of the free.

A PRESBYTERY DOING HOMAGE TO BAAL.

The presbytery of St. Clairsville held its annual session in the city of Bridgeport, on the upper Ohio, on the 22nd, 23rd and 24th days of April, 1879. The opening sermon was preached by Rev. Robt. Dickson, D.D., of Cadiz, Ohio, in the course of which he eloquently discribed the church as a lighthouse on the ocean shore "to warn the benighted mariners of the hidden rocks and treacherous quicksands" which imperil his vessel with its priceless freight. Rev. Robt. Alexander of St. Clairsville, was chosen moderator.

On the second day of the session, Rev. Warren Taylor, taking advantage of a momentary lull in the business of the Presbytery, arose with paper in hand, and said, "Moderator, may I offer a resolution?" "That depends on what the resolution is," brusquely replied the moderator. Mr. Taylor has been heard of hereabouts, and is "spotted" probably in more presbyteries than one. But as the character of the resolution could not be known without its being read, leave was finally granted, and in a calm, clear and unshaken voice, Mr. Taylor read the following:

"As the so-called secrets of Freemasonry are entirely revealed and are accessible to every one, and in view of the evils which that institution is known to have wrought and is now working by disseminating the most dangerous errors in religion, by corrupting private and public morals, and by its unrighteous interference in the administration of civil affairs,

"Resolved, That it is the duty of every minister thoroughly to inform himself on this subject, and when informed to faithfully and publicly declare the truth as he finds it, whether men will hear or whether they will forbear."

The last syllable had not died away from the lips of the speaker, when it was moved and seconded to lay the resolution on the table. Mr. Taylor attempted to say something, but the moderator said sharply "no remark." About one-third of the body voted in the affirmative, but they voted with a promptness, an alacrity and a vengeance which one hears only once in a lifetime. There were one or two feeble nays. The majority did not vote, but silently acquiesced. The vote being taken, however, Rev. Professor Milford of Franklin College, sprang to his feet and said, "Moderator, I protest against this stamping out the man who desires to express his honest convictions on a great subject, and desire presbytery to know that we are not all of one way of thinking on this subject."

Mr. Taylor also entered his formal protest in words following, which was ordered to be placed on the minutes:

"I respectfully protest against laying on the table without remark the preamble and resolution offered by myself in respect to Freemasonry. Because the statements made in the same are true, and the subject is worthy of being inquired into; and it is an act of oppression on the part of the presbytery to forbid all remark on the subject."

Now as the evils referred to in the paper offered are entirely patent to the most casual observer, and as it is perfectly clear to those acquainted with Masonic authorities that Freemasonry is no more nor less than a revival of the ancient sun-worship and Baal-worship, and as these authorities recognize Baal by name as God and the proper object of religious homage, and as the presbytery by its vote, not only consented to the continuance of the evils complained of, but gave its approval to the idolatrous worship of the lodge, the presbytery of St. Clairsville on the 22d day of April A. D., 1879, DID HOMAGE TO BAAL. The Lord grant that it be not laid to their charge.

Will it be said in behalf of this presbytery that "they did it ignorantly in unbelief?" But the very point of this criticism and censure is that they have no right to be thus ignorant. They were not unkindly exhorted to inform themselves on a matter known to be of great public interest and they refused to be informed, deliberately and wilfully closing their eyes to the truth. Such is the infirmity and prejudice and stubbornness even of some good men in this world. It is themselves who are to be pitied and not the man who was so peremptorily silenced.

One member of presbytery said to the writer, "That vote was given more in the fear of man than in the fear of God;" a statement which it is presumed that those who so fiercely voted would not deny. "Put me into one of the priests offices, that I may eat a piece of bread."

During a recess of presbytery Mr. Taylor called the attention of Dr. Dickson to the impressive language of his sermon above alluded to and said, "But here is one man who has surveyed the coast and found where the 'hidden rocks and treacherous quicksands' are, and you tell him, "But you must erect no lighthouse on this part of the coast: for there are giants on this coast who will eat us up if we interfere with their business of destruction and murder." It is proper to say that the Dr. acknowledged the justness of the remark.

I have read in history that once on a time John Knox was called into the presence of Queen Mary and threatened for opposing the errors of Romanism, and when he retired one of the courtiers remarked in astonishment, "He is not afraid;" which the reformer overhearing, he turned and said: "Why, I have looked on the face of mony an angry mon, and they were not able to fray me overmuch; why, then, should I quaken when I behold only a pretty woman?"

Has John Knox risen from the dead? and is his soul still 'marching on?'

Messrs. Editors, if you should see him up about Chicago there please tell him that he is earnestly desired to be at the fall meeting of the presbytery of St. Clairsville in September next. Your truly,

OBSERVATOR.

GEORGE W. CLARK ON THE TOBACCO MANIA.

The veteran anti-slavery and anti-liquor advocate, George W. Clark, delivered a lecture at the English Lutheran church, Danville, N. Y., on Sunday evening, March 31, on the tobacco mania and its connection with the great crime of intemperance. He said that God had made man but little lower than the angels, and endowed him with all the attributes necessary to make him as near perfect as it is possible for a human being to be, and he thought God must feel humiliated to see him defiling his noble body and mind, this "Temple of the Holy Ghost," by rolling a filthy gaub of tobacco in his mouth, thus perverting its fine sensibility of taste; deadening and destroying the delicately constructed nasal organs with snuff; dangling a huge and unsightly merschaum pipe in his jaws, or puffing away with a cylindrical roll of pollution between his lips; whiffing the poisonous smoke into the eyes and nostrils of his fellow creatures, and fouling the pure air of Heaven, which others must inhale; beslavering sidewalks, floors, carpets, spittoons, railroad cars and offices—every place of public resort not only, but the private sanctuary of home, and even the pews in the Sanctuary of God, with his loathsome and disgusting tobacco slobber.

Mr. Clark has lived to see negro slavery abolished, and is now working to the end that all men may obtain freedom from the twin tyrants, liquor and tobacco.

The subject was divided and discussed under the following heads:

1. The divine origin and high destiny of man were first set forth, and these together with the exalted scale which he was made to occupy, forbid his defilement with tobacco.

2. The common use of tobacco is an utter perversion of the weed and an utter perversion of manhood, a vile and degrading habit, and no valid reason can be found in the nature of the weed or in the normal condition or wants of mankind to justify or excuse its use.

3. It is true of nicotine, the active principle of tobacco, as of alcohol, that it contains no nutriment of food element, supplies no waste of the human system, makes neither blood, tissue, brain, bone or flesh.

4. Tobacco is one of the most powerful of poisons, producing even in small doses, deathly nausea, retchings, vomitings, cold sweats, tremors, extreme muscular debility, paralysis and sudden and awful deaths.

5 It causes an unnatural and wasteful discharge of the saliva, interferes with natural and vital process of mastication, digestion and assimilation, fouls and poisons the healthful source of life at the fountain head.

6. It reduces its dupes to the most abject and degrading slavery, the victims of alcohol or opium being no more completely under servile control. It involves an enormous and sacriligious waste of time, labor and money.

7. Tobacco using leads to liquor using. They are associated together. "Take a drink" and "take a cigar," are synonymous terms—they appeal to the same class of animal sensuous appetites.

8. The tobacco mania is an insurmountable obstacle in the way of the progress and final success of the temperance reformation.

9. It is fitting that reform on this subject should begin on this continent, as this deleterious weed is a native of American soil.

10. He closed his lecture with an appeal to the young men and boys of America—if they would possess and preserve well-developed, pure and healthful bodies and minds, live useful and noble lives and enjoy the glorious compensation of such living, not to give away to the everywhere present temptations, and surrender themselves victims to this degrading and destructive mania for tobacco and liquor.

THE TEMPLE OF HONOR.

2. ITS FORMALISM.

BY A TEMPLAR OF FIDELITY.

"Oh, but, my dear sir," says one, "you made a great mistake in fixing up that creed, in supposing that the ritual means literally what its words express. The ritual is but a mere form, a meaningless ceremony, as every Templar knows and so understands it. We must have some form, you know."

Well, let us examine that. The manual of the Templars of Honor and Temperance by Rev. Geo. B. Jocelyn, D.D., Past Most Worthy Templar, 1869, is a book written for the instruction of the initiate, and is, in one sense, the creed amplified and explained. On page 9 we read:

"How beautiful the hall and its adornings! No senseless ceremony meets us; no startling nonsense disgusts us. Listen to our guide: 'From all that intoxicates and weakens you must be severed, and with unflinching purpose resolve to carry out the principles taught within our temple.'"

The religious philosophy of the order is as fully set forth in the manual as in the ritual. See on page 116:

"In labors like these we may toil through the stages of life's varied journey: performing our duty with usefulness to our race and honor to ourselves; and when our heart and flesh shall fail us, may we each be found an approved pillar in the temple on high and eternal."

This passage looks hopefully to a life beyond the grave. But we have a stronger quotation from page 143:

"This is but a type of the sanctuary of the Upper Temple, whose dome rises in the heaven of heavens, that haven of eternal rest, security and happiness, which God has built for the holy and the pure. There when the conflict is over and the victory gained, each faithful [faithful to Temple obligations] Templar shall lay aside his armor and his lance, and, in the midst of his toil-worn but successful companions, receive the crown of immortality, and reign with Him whose presence makes heaven, and whose smile constitutes the bliss of the redeemed."

What more can any religion promise?

In a largely attended public meeting held in Pawtucket, R. I., in the spring of 1875, the Sister Grand Templar (the highest female office in the order) made the remark: "The Temple of Honor is second to no other institution on earth, not even the church;" and assumed further that "all good Templars would meet at last in the Grand Temple above." Grand Temple officers, in speeches following, supported the sentiment, and no dissenting voice was heard.

The following action of the Grand Temple shows that that body also understands and accepts the religion of the order.

Extract from the Records of Grand Temple of R. I., dated June 3, 1875:

"The following preamble and resolutions were introduced by Representative X——:

"Whereas, the sentiment seems to be gaining ground that the Order of the Templars of Honor and Temperance is second to no other institution on earth, not even the church; also, that a Templar, true to his vows and obligations, will merit heaven, therefore

"Resolved, that we, the Grand Temple of Rhode Island, have no sympathy with the above sentiment, believing that the Temple of Honor has received no authority from the Heavenly King to make subjects for his kingdom, nor has it any power to offer to any of its members the heavenly gift of salvation.

"Resolved, that we deprecate the exhibition of the sentiment under consideration in public or in open temple, believing that the publishing abroad of such a sentiment will be most disastrous to our cause.

"Not adopted."

The above resolutions were (counting out the vote of the mover) unanimously voted down. In the discussion following their introduction one of the speakers remarked that if those resolutions were adopted it would commit the order to the belief of the orthodox church, which belief the order could not accept. Another said, the Templar who lives up to those solemn obligations taken at that altar before God and men is as worthy of heaven as any Christian. These may not be the exact words, but the sentiment is precisely the same. Of course the ritual, the manual and the intelligent Templar all must harmonize in doctrine.

"Well," continues my friend, "I don't believe such doctrines, and I am in good standing in the order."

But, my dear friend, you have told the order that you did, that your faith was unshaken in the principles of the order; or words to that effect, over and over again if you have advanced far in the order, and if you have taken the Select Templar degree and attended the funeral of a departed companion, you have heard the Chief of Council say: "Companions, it hath pleased Almighty God to remove from our midst the soul of our departed companion and friend." And you remember the response to that, don't you?

"Yes, I remember," says my friend, "but it is all conventionalism, a wordy ceremony; why it is always performed, no matter what has been the character or belief of the deceased, if he was only in good standing in the order at the time of his death; and you know, as well as I, that in the Council are many who are immoral, unbelievers and even infidels; that these constitute the great majority of the council. You surely cannot think that any one in the order really believes that such people go to heaven."

Well, my friend, here is the response by the officers of the Council. You can judge for yourself whether or no they speak the truth: "He has been called from his labors here to partake of his eternal rest." Now there can be but one interpretation of that sentence, i. e., he has been called from earth to heaven. They who utter the words either believe him to be in heaven or not to be there. If they believe him to be there they endorse the religious philosphy of the order which sends him there. If they do not believe him to be there while proclaiming that he is there, they simply lie. You can take either horn of that dilemma you choose. Either there is a false religion in the Temple of Honor, or else all the Council members are liars. The ritual says, "The vestibule of the Temple of Honor is truth." Does it mean all truth is left in the vestibule, and that in the order proper is only deceit and falsehood?

But it becomes a serious matter indeed when men bring their conventionalities before the Almighty in the solemn form of prayer. Listen to the funeral prayer:

"Almighty and everlasting God, it hath pleased thee to take from our midst one of our dear companions, and to take his spirit, as we trust, to thine eternal rest."

Yet we are told no one in the order believes this,—then they are lying to God, and that is horrible blasphemy. The prayer proceeds to unfold before God the religion of the order in these words:

"May we be more cemented by the ties of love and friendship; more devoted to the sacred principles of justice, truth and mercy which bind us together in one sacred bond of brotherhood, that the brief and uncertain space of time allotted to us here below may be employed for thine honor and glory in removing the wide-spread evils of intemperance, in relieving the distresses and misfortunes of our fellow-creatures, and in preparing our souls for a never-ending eternity."

That is, by being more devoted to the sacred principles of the order they are to prepare their souls for eternity. They tell this into the ear of God, and impiously ask his aid. They do not propose to follow God's plan of salvation—repentance and faith are not taught in the order; they have a better way, they think, a way of their own devising embraced in the sacred principles of the order.

Is all this formalism? Don't they mean what they say? Indeed they do! How can any one think otherwise? 'Tis the doctrine of devils; and Jesus will say unto them in the last day those terrible words, "I never knew you; depart from me ye that work iniquity."

THE SERMON.

POPULAR AMUSEMENTS.

Preached in the College church, Wheaton, Ill., Sabbath morning, May 8th, 1879, by Prof. C. A. Blanchard.

TEXT.—"The people sat down to eat and drink and rose up to play." Ex. 32: 6.

I do not know precisely what the play here mentioned was. So far as I can learn, no one else does, and hence I use this text this morning not so much for what it teaches as for what it suggests.

THE AMUSEMENT QUESTION.

There is a wide spread agitation of what is called, The Amusement Question, throughout the churches at the present time, and this agitation is on the increase. Let us clearly understand what this question is. There are various methods of passing away time which were for many years the peculiar property of persons not Christians and of persons in many cases actually and openly bad. These amusements were dancing, card-playing, billiard-playing, theatre and opera-going and others of like character. Throughout the churches descended from the Presbyterian and Puritan reformers these methods of spending time and money were universally condemned. These stern men who were always willing, and frequently compelled, to die for their religious convictions had neither inclination toward, nor tolerance for these worldly pleasures which had been and still were dear to the careless worldlings and the abandoned and lost, and hence visited upon those who indulged in them the severest censures.

The ritualistic churches did not take the same position. Among them always, as at the present, these and like pleasures were considered open to all who chose to indulge. The king's book of sports lay on the pulpit beside the Bible in the state church of England and it is not probable that skill at cards and billiards together with attendance on plays would lessen the influence of any Catholic, Episcopalian or Lutheran pastor in the world.

Of late the non-ritualistic churches in our cities and large towns have been becoming like their ritualistic neighbors. A prominent Ohio minister said to me not many years since, that there was not a church of any sort, in a town of ten thousand inhabitants which would dare forbid to its members these amusements. And in our great cities it is I fear more fashionable, even among members of churches, to play at cards and attend theaters than to study the Bible or attend prayer meetings. Now it requires neither a prophet nor the son of a prophet to see and say that this mixed state of things will not be permanent. The truth on this matter is one not two. If these recreations are good for Christians in Chicago, they are in villages and country homes as well. There is no reason why they should be condemned in the one place and practiced in the other, nor will this permanently be the state of the case. Truth and error are ever antagonists and the conflict between them is irrepressible, so that we must either concede that those who approve these practices are right and we wrong or else we must in love maintain our principles and seek to bring our brethren to our views.

WHAT DOES THE BIBLE SAY.

Directly, perhaps, nothing. It seems to speak of sports as appropriate to children. The innocent sports of youth are repeatedly mentioned in the Word of God with seeming approbation. Thus in Zechariah 8: 5, we are told that when the Lord returns to Zion and dwells in the midst of Jerusalem the streets of the city shall be full of boys and girls playing. If this verse is to be understood literally or in any other way it does not teach that the sports of childhood are offensive to God.

When, however, we reach the plays of adults a different tone seems to prevail. Without saying that plays are among those childish things that men ought to put away the Book seems to bear hard against them. We have the text, they sat down to eat and drink and rose up to play, and in their play they said that a calf that Aaron had fashioned was the God that had brought them out of Egypt. So also when Abner and Joab sat down on opposite sides of the pool of Gibeon, II. Samuel 2: 13, the one said to the other, Let the young men arise and play before us. Twelve from each side went out and in a moment the twenty-four were warm and bloody corpses. Then when Samson was shorn of his locks and his strength, his eyes dug out, a fetter on wrist and heel, and he, grinding in Gaza at a mill with slaves, the lords of the Philistines said, call for Samson that he may make us sport. Judges 16: 25. They sent for him to make sport and in that sport he slew more than had fallen before him during his whole life.

Thus we find this matter of playing has a bad look in the Bible. It does not sound well. It suggests an ungrateful people reeling in an idolatrous dance; brave young men stabbed to the heart and weltering in blood, and hosts of debased and merciless Philistines gloating for a moment over the eyeless sockets of blind Samson and then rushing with one wild shriek down to the yawning gulf of hell.

When we reflect on the examples of our Lord and the long line of faithful prophets, apostles and martyrs, the thought just expressed is forced more strongly upon us. They were laborers. Their lives were lives of hard, almost unremitting toil. Fears, scoffs, prayers, fasts, journeys, and at lasts persecutions and death were their portion. Perhaps they did sometimes sit down to eat and drink and rise up to play, but if they did we know nothing about it. Perhaps they did sometimes use up their time in making small jokes, but if they did none of them are recorded. Each of them seems to have felt that he must work while the day lasted, because the night was coming when no man can work. Now we are commanded to be followers of those who through faith and patience have inherited the promises. This text does not require us to be, as the world says, long-faced and hypocritically sad; it does require us to be sober, to be vigilant and to rejoice in the Lord! In view of these facts, what should be our attitude toward these amusements, and especially toward the theatre?

CHRISTIANS AND THE THEATRE.

Forget for a moment that men are to labor and not to play; that life is real and earnest and consider this question by itself and on its own merits. To make the matter more complete, allow that your duties are well done; that your devotions are heartfelt and unhurried; the sick are visited, that what you can do for your own growth in grace and for others has been done. Allow still further, that your means are such that you can without defrauding creditors, robbing your family, or stealing from God, pay the necessary expense. Then if you have an opportunity to attend the theatre ought you, as a Christian, to do so? And first, in answering this question remember that we are not speaking of a possible, but of the actual theatre. This institution is not a new one among men, nor are its characteristics hard to discover. It has been in the world for thousands of years, and has been part and parcel of English national life for three centuries and more. Hence to begin by saying that a theater might exist which a Christian might attend without being morally demoralized is entirely aside from our purpose. We do not want an argument on some theater which some worthy man thinks may some time be but to have the one which is unobjectionable pointed out. In the second place we need to remember that the associations and influences of things must be considered in any just estimate of them. Is the institution in question evil? Are its associations and tendencies evil? Are the weak in Christian life and character likely to be led into sin, if stronger ones indulge in these pleasures and gain no harm to themselves? If any one of these inquiries be answered in the affirmative we are instantly forced to the conclusion that children of God are to let them entirely alone, and in reference to these inquiries I wish to submit a little

TESTIMONY.

Mr. J. H. McVicker has been for twenty years the proprietor and manager of the leading and most respectable theater in Chicago. He is reported by the Advance, a paper printed in that city, to have declared that the evil tendencies which have lowered the standard of the drama are past redemption, at least in his time; that the low theaters are better patronized than the respectable ones and that he hopes to be saved from running a Sunday theater, but fears that he will be compelled to do so. I quote sense not words.

My next witness to the character of the institution under consideration is the distinguished actor, Macready. He says in the evening of life: "None of my children, with my consent, under any pretence, shall ever enter the theater or have any visiting acquaintance with actors or actresses."

From the Christian Statesman I take the following extract:

"A writer in the Churchman, the most widely circulated Episcopal newspaper in this country, bears this testimony to the moral influence of theaters:

"'I am not entirely ignorant of what I am talking of. I have been considered a veteran theater-goer. During ten years of my life I rarely missed an opportunity of attending the theater. I have seen all sorts of plays, in all sorts of theaters, both the high-toned and the cheap. I have seen nearly every living American actor and actress of note.'

"Now let us see what this modern play-goer says of the theaters which Miss Anna Dickinson regards as exerting a better moral influence than the churches. Hear him:

"'The great majority of operas, plays and farces are licentious, pandering to the worst passions of the idle and corrupt, setting a premium on vice and sneering at virtue, abounding in oaths and indecent jests. There are said to be a few pure plays, but to discern these, and patronize these only, requires an amount of good taste (not to say religious sentiment) possessed by very few. The theater has in all ages been the first lesson learned by the beginners in vice. It stands at the entrance of a way-station on which are the race-course, the liquor-saloon, the brothel, the gambling-house, and the end--death. When a young man sets out to be a rake he begins first of all with the theater. The theater, by exacting large outlays of money and giving little in return, encourages extravagance. It also compels late hours and waste of time. Its surroundings are the resorts of the idle and vicious. Where the theater is, the bar-room and brothel are usually not far off.'"

These testimonies might be indefinitely multiplied. They are from persons who know the institution thoroughly and who would be prejudiced in its favor if its badness would allow it. Such, however, are its vices that manager, actor and attendant unite in evidence that, if believed, ought to drive every Christian man from it as from a plague pit.

PERSONATION OF VICES.

Another fatal objection to this amusement which has so decided a hold on the public is the fact that actors are required to personate drunkards, thieves, libertines, prostitutes, murderers, etc., etc. Plays which do not deal in these characters and their works have little chance of public favor. What now must be the influence, upon the character of man or woman, of acting as naturally as possible the parts of the vicious and immoral?

"Vice is a monster of such frightful mein,
That to be hated needs but to be seen."

But here we are to see vice clad in tinsel and shining in colored lights day after day and month after month. The man who plays the villain's part successfully will be a remarkable man if he do not take on somewhat of the character he plays, and the admiring auditor will be like the actor. This is not denying that there are brilliant exceptions to this rule but a statement of a general truth that is abundantly confirmed by reason and experience.

DRESS OF ACTRESSES.

This is a fatal objection to these places of pleasure. The dress seems designed not to conceal but to reveal the whole form. The only proof needed for this statement is the class of pictures exhibited in the windows of our great cities.

Persons who should appear on the streets or in a meeting in such costume would be promptly arrested for shameless exposure of person. But this is the costume of the theater. As if the temptations to sin were not strong enough in the poor human heart, the whole power of indecency and art are here united to drag down him who would fain climb up. Is there any man who dare say in the presence of a fact like this which is patent to the mere passer by, that the play house is a fit place for followers of Christ? The actress may have at least a partial excuse in pressing need. It may seem to be, with her, a question of stage or starvation, but the Christian man or woman who sits back in the audience and looks on has no such plea.

A MAN IS KNOWN BY THE COMPANY HE KEEPS.

If the positions above taken are sound, of course it is not needful to say anything else to a Christian. Still there are one or two other things which are true and perhaps should be stated in this connection. The first is that prostitution and liquor selling are twin pillars on which, in great measure at least, the whole structure rests. It has even passed into a joke that the male attendants at theaters go out for drinks between acts, and those play houses from which lost women were excluded were compelled by financial failure to take down the rule and permit them to enter. Now it is perfectly safe to say that any institution which rests upon foundations of this kind ought to come down. And it is doubly safe to say that Christians should be out of the way when it falls.

The second is that the worse plays are the longer they run and that theaters are open on the Sabbath now in almost every great city in our country. It may seem as if these two things should be stated separate from one another but they belong together. When one of the plays of Shakespeare is to be enacted, though defaced by scores of indecencies which that ruder age allowed, the crowd is not large and the piece is put on once twice or thrice and withdrawn. But when the Black Crook, White Fawn, Twelve Temptations, or some kindred piece is played it fills the community and the bill for months.

COME OUT AND BE SEPARATE.

The only thing for a Christian to do is to come out from such things and be separate. If the world will have them let it, but followers of Christ have neither time nor money nor heart for such things. Time for us all is short. Our opportunities of doing good one by one are flitting past. In a few days we must stand at the bar and render up our account. Let us be watchful and busy that when our King comes he may find us ready to meet him.

New England Letter.

INDUSTRIAL SCHOOLS IN NEW ENGLAND.

WORCESTER, Mass.

One of the benevolences of the late Ichabod Washburn of this city, well known as a philanthropist and friend of reform, was the organization and endowment of an Industrial school, to be maintained always at the Mission Chapel. His widow, with most commendable zeal and devotion, assisted by a band of disinterested Christian teachers wisely administer this institution so as best to fulfill the ends had in view by her far-seeing husband.

At its late anniversary interested friends were in attendance, and its annual report was read by Rev. Mr. Cheever, from which it appeared that 150 children have been connected with the school since November 1st; 697 yards of cotton cloth have been cut and made into 310 garment at its weekly sessions, which belong to the makers, beside a package of seven yards of print presented to each pupil out of the avails of the fund. Thirty-three articles of clothing were made by one class. While being taught to sew, the children are also hearing and asking questions, reading and repeating Bible verses and singing holy hymns. The teacher's art, it is said, in reaching and quickening these youthful minds is divine. The friends of sewing schools and of similar institutions will work with renewed courage if they remember that peculiar temptations now surround young people, that society needs constant efforts for its safety, and that moral and religious culture with a habit of industry is the only safeguard against vice and crime. When friends and helpers of youth can be found clothed with that benevolence that does not want to see immediate success, then the worth of every child will be recognized, and its need of moral religious training will be felt and no indifference will be shown to engage in actual labors for its good. In presenting the report of this school Mr. Cheever asked the liberty to say that he did not believe the eye of the all-seeing God looked upon any place or company in Worcester with more complacency than upon this. The disinterested Christian women united in the quiet administration of the practical benevolence first organized and perpetuated by Mr. Washburn, might be assured of their approval of the Master, how little soever their work was noticed by men. Their reward was with them in the consciousness of the good done, and although not without self-denial and toil on their part, as he well knew, they might enjoy the supreme satisfaction of this testimony that they pleased God. He noticed with special approval the interesting class of boys taught by one of the ladies, and thought they would find the lessons learned in sewing as well as in the Scripture and holy song to be among the most profitable of their lives. They would meet many an occasion in the future when they would bless the patience and care that had taught their fingers cunning in the use of the needle, as well as to keep the fear of God before their eyes. Rev. Mr. Merriman followed in a pleasing strain, showing how society was indebted to the needle and thread, and by what thread of influence from the heart of the Saviour, running through a series of consecrated lives like that of the honored founder of this institution, the world would yet be brought back to allegiance unto God. He addressed the boys especially upon the great value to them in the future of the moral and practical lessons they had learned.

Rev. Mr. Caldwell spoke of the pleasure it gave him to look upon the happy faces of teachers and pupils in this school; that when he came there for the first time, a week ago, for information requested by a friend in Vermont respecting industrial schools, he thought it was the happiest place he had seen in Worcester. He believed in the needle for boys no less than for girls, and referred to his own useful experience in childhood, when he was wont to go to school with a little bag for patchwork, thread and needles, as well as with spelling and writing book. The way to keep happy and to wear always the happy faces they now had was to keep the love of God in the heart, and to keep on learning and doing good in their lives. Attention was called to the large quilt suspended on the wall which it was voted to give to a box of clothing for the colored emigrants to Kansas.

Boston is introducing sewing into the curriculum of the common school, and five hundred influential women of New York have recently signed a petition to the Board of Education for the restoration of sewing as a branch of study in the public schools. This surely is a very significant fact. These ladies have given time, thought and money to the solution of the problem which always confronts us in the life of the great city—how can the poor be most wisely assisted and elevated? They are entitled to a respectful hearing, and their advice has weight.

As a majority of the pupils of both sexes will probably have to earn their bread in future years by some sort of manual labor, it would seem that the training of the eye and hand should be as diligently sought as the simple disciplining of the memory. For girls, especially, the acquiring of cleverness and skill in the use of the needle is almost an essential. But mothers do not now, as in former times, give their little daughters daily lessons in this art, and the accomplishment of sewing well by hand is going out of fashion. Among the poor, who particularly need to know how to make and mend, how to cut out materials with economy, and to remodel and get a small garment out of the unworn portions of a large one, there is very great lack of this practical knowledge and ability. Often, when a lady desires to assist a poor woman by giving her sewing, she finds it so clumsily and bunglingly done that she is forced to withhold it. Many mothers do not know how to utilize for their children the wrappings and dresses which others are willing to bestow, but have not time to make over. A few hours weekly spent in learning this household art would be of priceless advantage to young girls who will one day be wives and mothers.

While New England and New York are thus effectively experimenting in forms of practical benevolence and utility, jubilee meetings of the useless secret societies of colleges have been lately held with public addresses at New Haven and Hartford, and an attempt is made to enhance their importance. The course of affairs and the prominence given to secret societies in Europe at the present time, and hardly less so in the United States, give emphasis to the late remark of D'Israeli (Lord Beaconsfield) who says that when a good many years ago he wrote that the world was governed by secret societies, he was laughed at. But people seemed to be coming round to his view now. It will be a happy day for the church and the world when the eyes of men are wider opened to the manifold dangers of the secret societies that have had far too much to do with its government. H. T. Among the Mountains.

Hardwick, Vt., May 17, '79.

Dear Bro. Kellogg:—I left Lisbon, N. Y., on the 15th at 1:10 P. M. and after a rapid ride in remarkably fine cars of the Ogdensburgh and Lake Champlain railroad we crossed Lake Champlain on a bridge near its northern extremity.

We had a fine view of Fort Montgomery near the foot of the lake, a vast stone structure which modern cannon could easily batter to pieces. It is kept by a few soldiers and is a most useless relic of the barbarism of war.

A few miles from the lake we reached the pleasant village of Swanton Falls. A few inquiries and a rapid walk took me five miles to East Swanton where I found sympathy and hospitable entertainment with Dea. Jonas Brown of the Baptist church. Dea. Brown was made a Mason in 1823 and renounced it in 1829. He has fought a good fight and kept the faith, and like Paul is waiting for his crown. The Baptist church here was organized in 1796. In 1829 they adopted a rule excluding unrepentant Masons from their communion and have steadfastly maintained it.

A few weeks since they revised their manual making this change. The terms of communion are changed so that instead of "all members of sister churches" it now reads "all baptised believers," but at Dea. Brown's suggestion there was added "except Freemasons and Odd-fellows."

The pastor expressed his sympathy and a desire to have a lecture. He lent his horse and buggy, and in a few hours we circulated a notice. On the evening of the 16th a fair congregation met in the church and gave most attentive hearing to my talk of an hour and a half. This was followed by a good speech from the minister, and the collection was not forgotten. This first introduction to my work in the Green Mountain Stat ewas most encouraging.

On the morning of the 17th I went to Highgate. This village is on the Micisco river, and about 600 feet above the lake. From here I could see the Adirondack mountains in New York and still more clearly the Green mountains extending from the south far north into Canada. I took the Portland and Ogdensburgh railroad—very rough and crooked—and soon we were in the valley and the mountains were lost to sight. Soon we reached the Lamoille river, swollen and turbid, and sped along among the high hills until suddenly Mount Mansfield rose before us in its grandeur four thousand four hundred feet high and covered with snow. This is the highest of the Green mountains. Other peaks stand around all looking grand, cold and beautiful and all dotted and seamed with ice and snow. The fruit trees were in blossom, the fields were in their finest garb, and the thermometer had for a week stood at a good summer heat, but still we saw a large bank of snow lying by the side of our railroad track. The snow fell to a great depth and lay unusually long. The Green mountains near the northern part of the State divide in two ranges forming a capital Y, and this pleasant village is in the angle between the two ranges, about 20 miles from the Connecticut river and 60 from Lake Champlain.

May 20.—On Sabbath I attended the M. E. church and was instructed by the sermon. Yesterday took a long ride over the hills, and last night met a full audience in the town hall, who gave most respectful attention. Among them were quite a number of Masons. To-night expect to speak here again and then go to Greesboro, Craftsbury, Rygate and other places in the north. Yours for Christ,

H. H. Hinman.

Michigan State Meeting.

Weston, Mich., May 19, 1879.

I wish to call the attention of the friends of our reform to the importance of locating the next annual meeting of our State Association at as early a day as possible, so that the necessary arrangements can be made. The time was fixed at the meeting in Adrian, but the place was left for the executive committee to decide upon.

Friends wishing to have the meeting held in their vicinity will please notify our Secretary, Rev. A. H. Day, at Jackson, as soon as convenient, in order that the committee may have the opportunity to arrange the matter in season. I also hope the appeal of Bro. Day two weeks since for funds to sustain a lecturer will not pass unheeded.

The Cynosure ought to be in the the home of every friend of the great reform it advocates, but I am sorry to say it is not. It brings to us matter and news which other papers will not print for fear of offending the lodge, but to me it is simply indispensable. Its attacks, however, on President Hayes for his second veto I do not agree with. The bill in question had for its animating principle the pestilent doctrine of State sovereignty, which, if conceded, justifies secession and condemns the suppression of the rebellion, which would carry with it the logical sequence of payment of damages to the seceding States occasioned by the war. The doctrine of the subordination of the national authority to State supremacy was in it and the President deserves the thanks of every patriot for promptly crushing it with his veto. Fraternally,

C. Quick.

Bro. Elzea in Glidden, Iowa.

Dear Christian Cynosure:—Will you allow a little space in your columns so the readers will see how the Masons do in Glidden. A few weeks ago Philo Elzea came here and lectured in a school-house near town on Masonry, Odd-fellowism and the grange with good effect. But the farmers are so busy that not many came out, and we thought it best to get a place in Glidden. The next day I got the consent of all the trustees of the Methodist Episcopal church, but when the first bell rang the minister said it would not do to make a disturbance, and one trustee, a Mason, ordered the sexton to lock the door, so we were shut out. But we got a warehouse and brother Elzea talked to quite a number of men and boys for an hour. One Odd-fellow said the remarks about Odd-fellows were every word true. I think we have gained a victory. The people can see what Masonry will do; but if the Lord is willing, I will have Rathbun here this fall. When I have time I can find work for several lectures in different places, for there are a good many true men if they are once aroused. I expect to do all I can to give light on Masonry by giving out tracts and getting people to read.

The Great Excitement in Albion, Iowa.

Four years ago the offices of Albion and the township were held by Freemasons. The justice was a Mason; the pettifogger a Mason; the constable, the corporation officers, the school officers were Masons; five clergy in town, four of them Masons; post-master and deputy Masons. All was quiet then, peace and piety prevailed. The clergy prayed in the pulpit and disowned the Saviour in the lodge.

Rev. Mr. Stoddard and Mr. Ronayne came along and told the people what Masonry is, and exposed the silly mummery and wickedness of the ceremony of the lodge. The fraternity began to squirm. The Masonic clergy told lies, and all Masons were uneasy. At the next election they come out with a "Republican ticket" made up of Masons and Democrats. But the people elected their whole ticket with Masonry left out. Hence the great excitement in Albion. The whole fraternity was aroused. They were mad, revengeful. A Masonic clergyman published the Presbyterian minister (who was not a Mason) as a "bulldozer" and Rev. Mr. Hinman "an old tramp." They have control of the press, they can slander whom they please. Correspondence.

Lodge and Caucus.

Burlington, Iowa, May 19, 1879.

Editor Christian Cynosure:—The Democratic county convention of Des Moines county, Iowa, convened here Saturday for the purpose of electing delegates to the Democratic State Convention, to be held at Council Bluffs next Wednesday. J. A. Wright of Danville, W. M. of the Masonic lodge there, was elected chairman of the convention, and the nine delegates elected are all secretists or under the management of the secretists. The present governor of Iowa is a Knight of Pythias, and all of the paying offices of this county are filled by secretists or men who can be managed by them. There are only about 20,000 Masons in Iowa, yet it is a fact that they, with the help of other secret orders, control and manage both political parties completely, and manage to keep the members of secret orders in nearly all the offices, and thus the dear people are taxed year by year to support the worshipers of Baal.

When will the people open their eyes and see how they have been hood-winked and cable-towed?

Yours, etc., V.

From the Christian Standpoint.

Rosebcrg, Oregon, Apr. 2, 1879.

Editor Cynosure:—The following boast was sent to the printer by the Grand Lodge of Illinois: "1st. That Masonry numbers to-day more than a million votaries, representing the best classes of all the civilized nations of the world; 2nd. That with these are already embraced many of those occupying the highest official positions of all governments; 3rd. That this number is being rapidly augmented and will continue to increase until every crowned head, every prince, every minister, every president and cabinet shall feel and acknowledge her secret, silent influence and power."

What a startling announcement! Can it be that the millions of free American citizens who are not entangled in the meshes of these oath-bound secret orders, will suffer the folds of this hydra-headed monster to be silently thrown about them, and be drawn into the dismal swamp of utter destruction? We hops not. We pray God to avert so direful a calamity.

Let us look at the matter from a Christian standpoint. That Masonry stands opposed to vital religion in the abstract, is clear as sunshine, and yet there are many who say it is as good a religion as they want but when death comes they then say it will not do to die by. I defy the friends of Masonry to point one to a single bishop, prelate, minister or lay member of any Christian church in the world, who is a member of any of these secret orders, and has taken upon him the oaths of secrecy, and who attends the regular meetings of said lodges and makes himself acquainted with, and keeps posted in the signals, signs, grips, passwords and other work of the lodge, who is a holy, zealous, effective Christian. I make the assertion, without the fear of successful contradiction, that not one can be found in the world. There are bishops, ministers and other church members who are active members of said orders and stand high in the lodge; who give their time, money and talents to promote the interests of their respective orders; but where is the effect of their Christian influence in the church? Point it out. Show where through their ministry and and labors multitudes of sinners are being converted. Show any such results as followed and is following the ministry of a Moody and Sankey, and many others that might be mentioned.

Christ says, "follow me." Are those who have their names in the church and hold membership in those secret order doing this? Did Christ while on earth institute any secret order to promote Christianity or for charitable purposes, and bind its members in oaths that had no less penalty attached than that they should have their tongues torn out, and to be cut asunder and their bowels torn out and the ashes scattered to the four winds of heaven, if they ever divulged any secret of the order or failed to perform any of the obligations? We pause for an answer. His language to the apostles and through them to all Christians then and for all time, was, "follow me;" let your light shine before the world that others seeing your good works may glorify God. Was St. Paul a Mason or member of any secret order? Far be it from him. Hear what he says: "So follow me as I follow Christ, for it is a shame to speak of things done by them in secret." If, as Masons assert, the order originated at the building of King Solomon's temple, and is such a good thing, and such a promoter of religion, why did not our Saviour and his apostles belong to these orders?

We see ministers who belong to some of these secret orders who are instant in season and out of season when the interests of the lodge are to be served; but when the church demands their duties they sometimes go and sometimes do not and when they do go, they make as little service do as possible, these are the fruits of secrecy all over the land.

Recently a letter appeared in the Christian Cynosure, from the pen of F. R. Hill of Wilbur, Oregon, in which some things was said that caused quite a flutter among the fraternity. When they are pricked in a vital part they writhe like a serpent when trod upon. There may have been some things said that had been as well left out, and in the main it may have been premature. Be that as it may since it is written it cannot be re-called. This much I can say, Bro. Hill has lived in Wilbur, Oregon, for twenty-five years and raised a respectable family. He has stood as high in the community for integrity of character and respectability as any man, has kept public house for many years, his house has always been open to ministers and their families of all denominations free of any charge.

In conclusion let me say, that it behooves all those who profess faith in Christ, to lay aside every weight and the sin that doth so easily beset us, and run with patience the race set before us. Let all buckle on the armor of God and fight the good fight of faith, and lay hold of eternal life, and this can only be done by keeping ourselves unspotted from the world and following in the footsteps of the blessed Redeemer.

The Decay of State Pride.

A Boston paper comments on the decay of State pride, as evidenced by the deliberate willingness of the State of Tennessee to cheat its creditors out of half their dues.

Now, where a people take pride in Freemasonry, which is a disgrace to humanity, how can they take pride in anything that is just and honorable?

When one looks around to find something weighty to oppose to such disgraceful pride, he discovers that not a few of the first men of the country belong to Greek-letter secret societies, and thus have their mouths stopped as witnesses against secret societies. No one can respect their testimony against Freemasonry, Nihilism, Mormonism, Kukluxism, Socialism or any other form of secret association so long as they are members of secret societies themselves. Human weakness never showed itself in a more mortifying light than where an American citizen in high standing becomes disclosed to the public in the condition of a thief, who is obliged to keep some of his proceedings secret.

If the Right Reverend Doctor So-and-so sets the example of belonging to a secret association, of whatever kind, it is an example and a plea for the low and the vicious to do likewise. With what justice can this Rev. Doctor find fault with the Molly Maguire for belonging to a secret society, which society is the sole cause of the murders committed by him? The example of the high bred, when descending to the lower strata of society, is like the fall of heavy bodies that augments the lower they fall with tremendous force. Our leading men ought to know this, as they doubtless do.

It is too puerile work for full grown men to be engaged in secret societies. Such men make boys of themselves, at a time when the age and the country that we live in demand all the dimensions of complete manhood. For a little sly personal advantage gained by organized secrecy they estop themselves from opposing effective moral resistance against the most threatening danger to our religion and our liberties.

I have recently seen a list of names of distinguished men who belong to the Alpha Delta Phi society; and although these men are among the first of the country, yet if my own name were among theirs, I should feel like a culprit. Is it to be wondered at that State pride should decay?

Who shall Sit on the Bench?

Blackberry, Ill.

The first Monday in June is near at hand, when we are to elect three judges.

The Republicans have called a judicial convention, to be held at Elgin, on the 26th instant. The candidates to be supported at that convention, are Upton, Wilson, Murphy, Kellum and Coon.

They are all Masons except Judge Upton. Judge Cody, being a Democrat, will run independent. He is also a Mason. Shall I say a Christian Mason? or would that be a misnomer? Most probably all of these candidates have taken the Royal Arch degree, binding themselves under a solemn oath, "to aid and assist a companion Royal Arch Mason, when engaged in any difficulty; and espouse his cause so far as to extricate him from the same, if in my power, whether he is right or wrong."

Then there is this clause in the Master Mason's oath, "Furthermore I will answer and obey all due signs and summons sent to me from a lodge of Master Masons or given to me by a brother of this degree, if within the length of my cable-tow." Now can a judge who has taken these oaths mete out even and exact justice? What shall we do at that election? Vote for Masons?

An Anti-Mason.

Our Mail.

John D. Nutting, Albany, Mo., writes: "I think the Cynosure is the best it ever has been. I wish you had been successful in getting the 10,000 subscribers this year. It would have more than doubled the reform work done this year. It is a long fight and a hard one, but so sure as God is on our side we shall triumph."

T. K. Bufkin, Lynnville, Ia., writes: "The work here is slowly but surely progressing, and while I live and am blessed of the Lord in the work my faith and works shall never lessen. I delivered two addresses last fall; one in Grand Valley school house in Shelby county, and one at Hazel Dell, Poweshiek county, and from what I hear they have done much good in opening the blind eyes. May the work go on in the name of the Lord, is my prayer."

John Willdee, Selma, Ala, writes: "Please send by return mail the greatest variety possible of your most pointed tracts against Odd-fellowship. Being a missionary in this place among the colored people, I wish to take a firm stand against any institution that opposes their real ad vancement. The Odd-fellows seem to be the only order in this place that is making much headway among them here. Therefore I want as many tracts as possible on this order. I am well supplied with tracts on Masonry. Odd-fellows meet objections by saying the two orders are dissimilar. Being a member of the Reformed Presbyterian church, and laboring under her auspices, I am compelled to meet this enemy of my race face to face. Should I fail to vanquish him I trust I shall be successful in saving many of the young and thoughtless from his grasp."

A. Shurtleff, Dacotah Territory, sends for the sermon on Masonry by Rev. James Williams and writes:

"Mr. Williams is one of the smartest and most pure men I ever met. He is universally beloved. Has been in the Black Hills the past winter laboring for the salvation of souls. Is now at Elk Point, where he preached that sermon. He will soon return to the Hills with his wife who is a very estimable lady, and five children, to continue his work of love."

B. T. Johnson, Waupun, Wis., writes:

"I think a great deal of the Cynosure, don't like to lose one copy. I remember well the Morgan excitement, but never knew what Masonry really was till I began to read the Cynosure. How can it be that Christian men will willingly go into it."

Geo. McElheny, Darlington, Pa., writes:

"The cause must not be forgotten amid the pressure of the world's affairs. What a manifestation of the power of the Gospel when it shall pluck up by the roots the hidden works of darkness, by the force of divine truth and when the true children of God shall shout and sing, 'Thou hast taken to thyself thy great power and hast reigned.'"

F. W. Merrick, Steuben, N. Y., writes:

"What we need in this cause is more workers. Let every one be at his post at all times. If every subscriber would procure the name of one more the subscription list would be doubled in a very short time. Let every one take it upon himself to procure the name of one more, and the work would move off grandly."

A. Russell, Phoenixville, Pa., writes:

"I, with the help of the Cynosure have kept four young men out of the lodge, and that is worth all the paper cost. I am so paralyzed that I cannot get out to canvass, and have to wait for people to come to me. I am in my 80th year. This place is cursed with secret societies. I want the Cynosure while I can see. My sight is nearly gone."

Alex. Sutor, Brady, Pa., writes:

"Secret societies are not strong here. They have all failed but the grangers, and they are weak. The people here seem to have eyes, but they cannot see any evil or danger in secretism. They seem to think temperance and keeping the Sabbath is all that is required."

Martin Myers, Woodland, Cal., writes:

"I presume by this time you have had a full account of our county association meeting at Central View school house in Capay Valley on the 27th, 28th, 29th and 30th of March last. We had an excellent time and several lodge members resolved to have nothing more to do with secretism. Our society numbers thirty-one, which I think is very good to begin with, and among them are three or four seceding Master Masons, three or four Odd-fellows, and I do not know how many Good Templars. Ex Bishop Shuck of the United Brethren church lectured for us on the Relation that Christians should Sustain to Secret Pledged or Oath-bound Societies. The subject was handled in a masterly and convincing manner. Our organization is completed, and we intend the lodgites shall feel the effects of such a society in their midst. I am trying to do all I can in this reform, for I believe that God is working at the head of it, and that it is the duty of all who love our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ in sincerity and in truth, to be at work with all their might to rid the church and state of this greatest of monsters. Last night was our quarterly meeting. Our presiding elder is a strong and earnest Mason. I and some others would not hear him preach, or take the Sacrament at his hands, and we have resolved never to pay a dollar more to Masonic preachers, or patronize them in any way."

T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind., writes:

"I wish you great success in your work. O, that the church and all the people were alive to the interest of this cause, which is the cause of our country and church, and above all, the cause of Christ."

LESSON XXIII.—June 8, 1879.—THE VALLEY OF DRY BONES.

SCRIPTURE.—Ezekiel 37:1-14.

1. The hand of the Lord was upon me, and carried me out in the Spirit of the Lord, and set me down in the midst of the valley which was full of bones,

2. And caused me to pass by them round about: and, behold, there were very many in the open valley; and lo, they were very dry.

3. And he said unto me, Son of man, can these bones live? And I answered, O Lord God, thou knowest.

4. Again he said unto me, Prophesy upon these dry bones, and say unto them, O ye dry bones, hear the word of the Lord.

5. Thus saith the Lord God unto these bones, Behold, I will cause breath to enter into you and ye shall live:

6. And I will lay sinews upon you, and will bring up flesh upon you, and cover you with skin, and put breath in you, and ye shall live; and ye shall know that I am the Lord.

7. So I prophesied as I was commanded: and as I prophesied, there was a noise, and behold a shaking, and the bones came together, bone to his bone.

8. And when I beheld, lo, the sinews and the flesh came up upon them, and the skin covered them above, but there was no breath in them.

9. Then said he unto me, Prophesy unto the wind, prophesy, son of man, and say to the wind, Thus saith the Lord God: Come from the four winds, O breath, and breathe upon these slain that they may live.

10. So I prophesied, as he commanded me, and the breath came into them, and they lived, and stood up upon their feet an exceeding great army.

11. Then he said unto me, Son of man, these bones are the whole house of Isreal? behold, they say, Our bones are dried, and our hope is lost; we are cut off for our parts.

12. Therefore prophesy and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God: Behold, O my people, I will open your graves, and cause you to come up out of your graves, and bring you into the land of Israel.

13. And ye shall know that I am the Lord when I have opened your graves, O my people, and brought you up out of your graves.

14. And shall put my Spirit in you, and ye shall live, and I shall place you in your own land: then shall ye know that I the Lord have spoken it, and performed it saith the Lord.

GOLDEN TEXT.—It is the Spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing; the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life.—John 6:63.

CENTRAL TRUTH.—The Holy Spirit is the reviving spirit.

NOTES.

[From Scholar's Handbook.]

"Valley," possibly the plain by the river Chebar, where Ezekiel dwelt, and where he had seen the glory of the Lord, (3:22), or it may only mean a valley seen in the vision. It would seem to picture a spiritual reviving of the people.

"Chebar." This is commonly supposed to be the Habor in Mesopotamia, 200 miles north of Babylon. G. Rawlinson identifies it with the Royal Canal made by Nebuchadnezzar near Babylon, and his view agrees with the tradition respecting Ezekiel's tomb.

Revivals.—In Helvetia there was a custom of celebrating the sun's return to heat and power, by putting out all the fires, for some days, that they might be rekindled from the sacred fires in the heathen temple on Tara hill. The people waited for the appearance of this sacred flame, and hastened from it to rekindle the fires on their own cold hearths. So on many a home altar the spiritual fires have gone out. These should be rekindled by the reviving power of the Holy Spirit. If that fire has gone out on the altar of our heart, it is time to relight it.—Adapted from Foster's Cyclopedia.

In the vision of the dry bones there was first a noise and then a shaking through all the plain. Revivals always produce vigorous stirring in the church, and excitement in the neighborhood....Revivals disturb the formalist, the indolent, the lukewarm and the wicked. They produce trouble in the conscience, agitation in the mind, tumult in the emotions, commotion in the sympathies, and vigorous animation in all the faculties.—Bates.

[From International Quarterly.]

THE CONNECTION.—This prophecy follows our last lesson about two years, i. e., B. C. 587 (chap. 33:21). The Bible history is found in Jeremiah and Daniel, chapters 1-5, during the first half of the seventy years' captivity. Jerusalem had been destroyed, and, to the eye of sight, all was dark and desolate. At this time of trial and death the message was given.

THE LESSON.—It is necessary to repeat, and we cannot too thoroughly learn, that the Old Testament prophecies and lessons have a double aspect—one for the people to whom they were spoken, and one for us. This is, in itself, a striking proof that the Bible is one book, and the Spirit of God has directed those who have spoken or written the Word. As we may readily see, this lesson has a plain and direct application to God's ancient people Israel (verses 12-14; 15-22, etc). Of this there cannot be a reasonable doubt. It shows what God will do for Israel, and the bright and glorious promise is fully confirmed by many Scriptures (chap. 39:27-29; Zech. 12:14, etc). But, beyond this, this remarkable passage contains the history of man in his spiritual state, and gives a consecutive spiritual outline of the passage from death to life. This who study it should carefully notice the words, and ask that "the hand of the Lord" may be upon them "to carry them out in the spirit" to show them "the valley of bones," and, above all, to breathe upon them that "they may live;" for "it is the Spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing."

ILLUSTRATION.—"What shall I do to be saved?" "A gentleman went into a factory where they made magnetic compasses. He saw a large number all finished and polished, and, to all appearance, all alike. But some pointed steadily to the north and returned there whenever moved away. The others remained whcrever they were placed—they were dead. What made the difference? The first were magnetized—filled with the power of the earth; the others were not. Whatever our forms, or creeds, or outward morality, we need to be magnetized with the love of Christ, and we shall live in him."—P., in Peloubet's Notes.

Discussion on Secret Societies,

BY ELDER M. S. NEWCOMER, and ELDER G. W. WILSON.

This discussion was first published in a series of articles in the CHURCH ADVOCATE and afterward in pamphlet form. The Evangelical Repository reviewing it says; "This pamphlet consists of a series of articles originally published in the CHURCH ADVOCATE, Lancaster, Pa.

Elder M. S. Newcomer, opposes Secret Societies and especially Freemasonry, and Elder G. W. Wilson defends the system. We are free to say that Mr. Newcomer has thoroughly routed his opponent at every point. Mr. Wilson speaks by the book as he is a Royal Arch Mason."

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MAY 29, 1879.

"SHALL we receive good at the hand of the Lord, and shall we not receive evil?" The "evil" which God's children receive at their Father's hand is such evil as works together for their good. Sorrow for the afflictions of their loved ones and their own, persecutions, troubles of whatever sort, are like a storm of golden hail-stones breaking our windows, by which we gain a thousand fold more in gold than we lose in glass.

TROUBLERS OF ISRAEL.

Rev. Daniel Bailey, who was ordained by a regular council representing five orthodox Congregational churches and their pastors, viz., Blue Island, Crystal Lake, Tonica, Geneva, Big Woods, and also the pastor of St. Charles church, with the independent churches of Streator and Wheaton College, one Free Methodist and two Wesleyan churches, is called to preach at Union, Ill., and has removed his family there and begun his labors.

Rev. C. E. Dickinson of Elgin and a few others are troubling this brother; interfering with the independency of local Congregational churches by sending committees to meddle with their work and telling them that Rev. Mr. Bailey, whose character they do not assail, is not properly ordained.

This Mr. Dickinson, after voting for a strong anti-secret resolution, and voting at the same sitting, for a Freemason as member of Elgin Congregational Association, and for a Knight Templar as member of its standing committee, excused himself in a letter to Knight Templar Boyce of Sycamore for his anti-secrecy resolution by assuring him that the resolution was inoperative and bound nobody, while his other action sustained the lodge.

We respectfully submit to this Christian brother, that such duplicity and "walking craftiness" dishonors the Saviour, and must work detriment to souls. And now to assail blameless and unoffending brethren, and usurp authority to interfere with our local churches in their choice of pastors, for no alleged unsoundness of doctrine or immorality of conduct, is un-Congregational and sinful in the sight of God.

THE UNITED BRETHREN CONTROVERSY.

The church of the United Brethren in Christ is in trouble, but it is the trouble which evermore heralds the triumphs of Christ. The Masonic question opened in 1826 by the murder of Morgan, was swallowed up by the slavery question. The national convention which nominated Wirt and Ellmaker, met in Philadelphia in 1830. The first national anti-slavery convention met in the same city only three years later, 1833. Masonry skulked under the slavery agitation, and grew green amid the deaths of Masons, North and South, shooting each other down; like the genius of the earthquake smiling amid ruins.

Unterrified and unseduced, the the church of the United Brethren stood like a wall of fire against both of these children of pestilence; and Satan, who relied on Masonry and slavery to swamp the United States, is now giving to that church his profound attention. The "Brethren" who were debauched by slavery, though there were a very few, were summarily dealt with and silenced. The lodge has been more successful; and the devil seems resolved to rend the body from which he is sure to be cast out.

The first pitched battle between the sons of light and the sons of darkness in the General Conference, was in Lebanon, Pa., I think, now twelve years ago or more. The defeat of the lodge was overwhelming; enough so, to have stilled any animal but a snake, which will move as long as there is an inch of its length uncrushed.

The present law of the church was drawn up by honest, Christian men. There were two parties, two altars, and two gods, a false god and the true. There needed no more trial or process to eject the worshipers of Baal, than to eject Jeroboam's calf-worshipers from the temple of God at Jerusalem, or to eject a "heathen Chinee" from a Christian church at San Francisco. The United Brother who goes into a Masonic lodge, tries, condemns, and ought to execute himself. All that is needed is the fact of his Masonry; and that fact he confesses and glories in. If he does not; if he confesses and forsakes the lodge, he is, of course, restored. In neither case are forms of trial necessary beyond a simple inquiry into the fact.

The present law, in the shortest, plainest words possible, simply declares lodge members to be out of the church and drops their names. Three papers have been started in the interest of the opposers of that plain, honest law, whose principle rests on the whole of the Old Testament and the New. Moses executed the introducers of new religious ceremonies (Deut. 13: 6), and Paul and Barnabas cried out and rent their clothes at the attempt to mix heathenism with Christianity (Acts 14: 14). The entire exodus from Egypt was a protest against the lodge worships of that day. But the impudence of false worship is as infinite as the pit to which it tends is bottomless.

Rev. W. J. Shuey is publishing agent of the Brethren Printing House at Dayton. When we met there he was reputed to have members of secret lodges working under him on the papers of the denomination. He has lately issued a circular to as many of the ministers as he thinks he can influence, submitting to them the form of a law which he wishes them to vote for at the coming General Conference, May 1881.

This draft of a law has an excellent appearance of opposing the lodge, and probably will be voted for by the friends of secret orders in the church, for the purpose of getting the present law on wheels. The issue of such a circular without consulting his Dayton brethren is irregular and not honest. In the purse-holder and financial agent of the denomination it is a high act of impropriety. The bare suspicion of using the money-power of the denomination to oppose the ground principles of the church must be fatal to its peace; and to do this in the name of the "peace" of the denomination is hypocrisy.

But the law itself proposed by Bro. Shuey is a rambling, complex thing, which carries on its face the provision for its defeat. It begins thus: "Any member of our church found in connection with any such (secret oath-bound) fraternity, shall be admonished." But every member of that church is already "admonished," and if a Mason is so in contempt of the admonition. When the Union and Rebel armies were facing and firing at each other, you might as well "admonish" the man who deserts to the enemy.

The law then appoints four different officers to do the admonishing. This admonition failing to reclaim him, "His name shall, on proper evidence of guilt, be ordered erased from the church record by the society or conference to which such offender may belong. But suppose such "society or conference" should be infected with the same leprosy?

Then follows a long paragraph against "any non-oath bound secret or other secular society" which provides that if a brother shall "suffer his connections" with such "to work detriment to his spiritual condition and welfare, and the neglect of the plain duties of his several relationships to the church, he shall be dealt with as in cases of neglect of duty, according to Chap. 4, Sec. 2 of Discipline."

Such a law needs no comment. Its obscurity and complexity would ensure its own defeat. It actually shelters those lesser secret orders which Masons got up after Masonry fell, to pilot the lodge back into popularity and power. The plain import stripped of bungling verbiage is: Take Oddfellows, Good Templars and others into the churches and if they are careful to keep up an outward compliance, so as not to neglect "the plain duties of their several relationships," keep them there. But if otherwise, try them; not for joining secret lodges, but "for neglect of duty."

It is hardly conceivable that a man of Bro. Shuey's talent and intelligence should not see that such a law is a surrender of the United Brethren church to the minions of the lodge; to put Samson asleep on the lap of Delilah till shorn of his locks of strength he is left

"Eyeless in Gaza at a mill with slaves."

All joy that the Religious Telescope contains a thoroughly Christian answer to this false "circular" written by Rev. Halleck Floyd and endorsed by the precious brethren, Dr. Davis, Prof. Tobey, Pres. Allen, Rev. Wm. Dillon and Rev. W. C. Smith. God will surely bless these brethren for their fidelity to the worship of his Son.

"THE ABOMINATION OF DESOLATION STANDING WHERE IT OUGHT NOT.

Will the readers of the Cynosure ponder the following insult to the Lamb of God. The description is taken from the Inter-ocean of May 23d inst. If Knight Templarism is Masonry, the pageant below is an insult to the Jewish lodge in this city, all whose members are Jews but one. If it is not Masonry, then it is an attempt to deceive the people of this country by pretending that Masons worship Christ, whose name they cut from his Bible. On any theory, they have drunk the devil's communion from human skulls and have neither part nor lot with the children of God:

CELEBRATION OF THE FEAST OF THE ASCENSION BY THE CHICAGO KNIGHTS TEMPLAR IN GRACE CHURCH.

Yesterday the Feast of Ascension was worthily commemorated by the Knights Templar of this city, by the ritual of the order, in the asylums and by attending divine service at Grace Episcopal church.

At 5 P. M. the three commanderies, Apollo, No. 1; Chicago, No. 19, and St. Bernard, No. 35, left their headquarters, and, uniting, marched along Wabash avenue to Grace church. Along the route the white ostrich plumes, red belts and shining swords of the Knights attracted the curious, and the sweet strains of the military band drew those who were not curious to follow the Knightly cortege.

At 5:30 the procession arrived at the church, the seats of which were already filled by a large congregation. The beautiful fane was further decorated by numerous banners, pendant from the arches by crosses, triangles, emblems of the Trinity, and other significant designs in fragrant exotic blossoms. The altar was arched with twelve candles, typical of the apostles, one being unlighted, referred to Iscariot. To the reverberant tones of the organ the Knights of Apollo Commandery entered, under command of Sir Norman T. Gassette, from the east door and formed on the right nave of the church with swords drawn and crossed at the points, the celebrated "arch of steel." Then, with the processional hymn "Onward, Christian Soldiers, Marching as to War," was sung by the cathedral choir of twenty or thirty voices, and accompanied by organ and band, there entered under the "arch of steel" the grand procession, in the following order: 1. Cross Bearer. 2. Choir of Grace church. 3. Officiating clergy, including the Rev. Canon J. H. Knowles, the Rev. Dr. Clinton Locke, officiating clergymen. 4. The Most Eminent Sir Vincent L. Hurlbut, Grand Master of Knights Templar of the United States. 5. The Commander and other officers of St. Bernard Commandery. 6 Standard bearer with "Beauseant." 7. Sir Knights, by twos, of St. Bernard Commandery. 8. Officers of Chicago Commandery. 9. Standard bearer with Beauseant. 10. Sir Knights, by twos, of Chicago Commandery. 11. Officers of Apollo Commandery. 12. Standard bearer with Beauseant. 13 Sir Knights, by twos, of Apollo Commandery.

The Knights being installed in the pews of the two center divisions, the order was given, "Uncover," whereupon off went every plumed chapeau. At the command, "To your devotions, Sir Knights," every Templar knelt and joined in the "Our Father," which was monotoned by the choir. The versicles, psalter, and lessons were those appointed by the Common Prayer Book for Ascension Day. The singing of the choir was good, though the little boys' voices in the psalter went a trifle wild and at times discordant in the "Anglican" chant, which was rushed through in quick time. The Anthem was, however, sung with excellent effect, and constituted the feature of the musical part of the service. At the recital of the Apostles' Creed the swords of the Sir Knights were unsheathed and brought to a "present," to signify that what they then said with their lips they would be prepared to defend with their swords, and after the Creed the order, "Return swords," with the clash of hundreds of weapons, was a novel sight in a church. The hymn "The Rising God Forsakes the Tomb" was sung by choir and congregation with excellent effect.

The address by the Rev. Dr. Clinton Locke was listened to with close attention by the congregation, which, constantly increasing, had by this time occupied every seat in the large edifice. The reverend Templar commenced by relating the incident of the Roman sentinel who was found at his post when the ruins of Herculaneum and Pompeii were uncovered. This was emblematic of fidelity to duty. The order of the Temple, he said, was a symbolic one—while the real significance of its signs and emblems was known only in their asylums, the outer meaning of the symbol was exemplified in the deeds done for religion and morality. The speaker then referred in words of glowing eloquence to the conclave of 1880, when 10,000 Knights would march through the streets of this city. He would see in this Knightly array the triumph of the faith of Jesus Christ. for every man in that army has sworn a most solemn oath to defend the religion of. Christ against every foe. In an allusion to the insignia and regalia of the order, he showed the strong witness which Templar Masonry bore for Christianity. The Beauseant, with its mingled black and white, symbolized the struggle between good and bad. The presence of the Knights at the church on Ascension Day was a living proof of their regard for the creed and the Great Founder of the Christian religion. In concluding a long and eloquent address, he reminded the Templars of their obligation to let their light so shine before men that thereby they might glorify the Father in heaven.

After the address, the Commander of Apollo No. 1, Sir Norman T. Gassette, arose and stepped forward to the sanctum, and, on behalf of his commandery, presented a beautiful processional cross to the cathedral choir. The presentation address was an admirable one. The cross was received by the Rev. Canon Knowles in a few well chosen words and thanks.

The hymn, "Soldiers of Christ, arise," was then sung, and the Rev. Clinton Locke pronounced the benediction. The Templars then formed outside the church, and, with splendid evolutions of forming in phalanx, triangular and other difficult, but attractive, maneuvers, preceded by their band, returned to their commanderies.

A Letter from Joseph Cook.

His opinion having been asked by a minister of the United Brethren church, who believes in tolerating some forms of lodgery, Mr. Cook wrote as follows in answer to the question whether there was as much propriety in excluding members of secret societies from the church as slaveholders? The letter appears in the Telescope:

17 Beacon Street, Boston, }
October 12, 1878. }

Dear Sir.—I have no objection to the publication of my letters to yourself. As to your final question, I should say the answer must depend on the circumstances of each case as it arises There have been secret societies such that the church had as much right to oppose them by excluding their members from church-fellowship as she had to oppose slavery by excluding slaveholders from church-fellowship. Of other secret organizations, as much as this could of course not be justly said. The church must judge what the organized secrecy covers. I can understand why Romanism usually refuses to administer the sacraments to Catholics who belong to secret societies which have oaths that bind their members in the confessional. In any case where loyalty to a secret, oath-bound organization is regarded as of paramount authority over the loyalty due to a church from a member of it, I think the church has a right to prevent its own self-stultification by refusing admission to persons pledged thus to follow higher power than hers. Your truly,

Joseph Cook.

Under the circumstances this is a remarkable letter. Of the two evils which Mr. Cook is asked to compare, one is yet powerful in church and politics, the other has no longer an honorable apologist. Yet it might be said very justly that there were no doubt slave-holders who might as properly have been received to church fellowship as secretists. Mr. Cook very plainly affirms the doctrine of disfellowship toward the lodge of whatever name, and of the application of this rule the church is to be the judge. As stated by him the effect of his principle would ultimately lead to ths position of entire separation as held by Moody, Pentecost, Finney, the Cynosure, and the Wesleyans, United Brethren, etc., etc. When loyalty to the church and to the lodge are set in opposition, and the character and principles of each understood, the whole problem is solved. The answer of Mr. Cook is an endorsement of the lodge-excluding churches.

Help for the South

Bro. Tapley, from whose work at Columbus, Miss., we have good reports, needs more help from friends at the North. He is a seceding Mason and therefore more obnoxious to the assaults of the lodge. Christian friends, you who have an offering for the extension of Christ's pure Gospel, aid him. Send your missionary money direct to the place where it is needed. He asks us for a tract especially prepared for the freedmen, and the matter is in the hands of the tract committee. Bro. D. W. Boxley, a teacher in the Reformed Presbyterian mission at Selma, Ala., writes urgently for tracts These brethren must be sustained. Read the following from Bro. Boxley's letter:

"We have here among the colored people who have recently established an Odd-fellow lodge and a Masonic also. We want to give the young people light on the evils of these cursed associations, before they are enticed into them. I find it too true that where men have joined these secret orders, it is next thing to impossible to get them to come to Christ, and they scarcely ever attend church. I find also that many who are nominally Christians, who are members of our Christian churches are becoming more and more lovers of the world and the company of the profane rather than lovers of Christ and his people. Oh, that Christian people would become more awake to the danger of these wicked associations, that they would "cry aloud" against them and "spare not," as they did thirty or forty years ago against the great monster slavery; that the Lord would come in his mysterious way and deliver his people from the power of the craft most dangerous to Christianity and civil liberty.

If you have any tracts for free distribution they will be gladly received and profitably used among the young colored men of this community.

College Anniversaries.—At Wheaton the exercises of commencement week open with the Baccalaureate sermon on Sabbath morning, June 15th; followed by the address before the Society of Inquiry in the evening, the anniversary of the literay societies Monday evening, and of the Alumni Association Tuesday evening. Commencement day, Wednesday. The Board of Trustees meet on Tuesday at 10 o'clock A. M. A fine class is to graduate, and the exercises of the week will resemble a jubilee over the remarkable success achieved for the institution in paying off the entire debt to the last penny, which a year ago was over $23,100. All of the friends of the institution are cordially invited to come up to the approaching anniversary.

—Of Westfield, Rev. W. C. Smith president of the Board, announces that the Board of Trustees will convene in their annual meetings in the college building on the 7th of June, at 7 P. M.

—At Hartsville, Ind., a class of four graduate this year. Commencement occurs in June.

—Otterbein University has a class of nine graduates this year. Commencement exercises open on next Sabbath, June 1st with Baccalaureate sermon by Rev. L. Davis, D.D., of Dayton; graduating exercises on Thursday, June 5th. The fall term opens August 13th.

—The Union Biblical Seminary Dayton held its annual meeting during the early part of May. Two young men: J. H. Crider of Chambersburg, Pa., and D. A. Mobley of Hartsville, Ind., graduated. Dr. L. Davis, John Dodds, Esq., and Revs. W. Dillon, J. Kemp and Halleck Floyd were elected an executive committee for the ensuing year. The faculty was continued the same as last year: Rev. L. Davis, D. D., Prof G.A. Funkhouser and Prof. G. Keister. Rev. S. M. Hippard was continued the general agent of the institution, and Rev. E. H. Caylor and J. L. Morrison were continued as soliciting agents.

—A remarkable feature of the Knights Templar performance last Thursday in this city, was that the worship assumed to be paid to Christ was performed in an Episcopal church and three Masonic Episcopalian ministers took part, one of whom, Mr. Knowles, is "canon" of Bishop McLaren's cathedral church. He received from the lodge leader a present of flowers in the form of a cross. The hymn sung on the occasion was like a blasphemy when we remember the character of many of these Masons. It reads:

Onward, Christian soldiers,
Marching as to war,
With the cross of Jesus
Going on before.
Christ, the royal Master,
Leads against the foe;
Forward into battle
See his banners go.
Onward, Christian soldiers,
Marching as to war,
With the cross of Jesus
Going on before.

—The new Mayor of Chicago, Carter H. Harrison, if reports be true, is an adopted son of Freemasonry, and moreover a very obedient one. His name was not reported on the lodge rolls in 1875, but he is a member, we understand, of Garden City Lodge, No. 141, and a short time before his nomination for mayor he was rushed through into the higher degrees. One of his first and most important nominations was that of Theodore T. Gurney, late Congregational deacon and now Grand Master of Freemasons of Illinois, and so Grand Master of Mayor Harrison. Master Gurney has thus an opportunity for Masonic tactics on a different field and more dangerous to the public. One of his first movements was to increase the tax certificates of the city to 90 per cent. of the levy, but being universally opposed by the banks this measure will be dropped. Chicago is likely to have enough to complain of for the next two years from the management of her Masonic officials.

The Prairies.

These are the gardens of the desert, these
The unshorn fields, boundless and beautiful,
For which the speech of England has no name—
The prairies. I behold them for the first,
And my heart swells, while the dilated sight
Takes in the encircling vastness. Lo! they stretch
In airy undulations, far away;
As if the ocean, in his gentlest swell,
Stood still, with all his rounded billows fixed,
And motionless forever—motionless?
No—they are all unchained again—the clouds
Sweep over with their shadows, and beneath,
The surface rolls and fluctuates to the eye;
Dark billows seem to glide along and chase
The sunny ridges. Breezes of the South!
Who toss the golden and the flame-like flowers,
And pass the prairie-hawk that, poised on high,
Flaps his broad wings, yet moves not, ye have played
Among the palms of Mexico, and vines
Of Texas, and have crossed the limpid brooks
That from the fountains of Sonora glide
Into the calm Pacific—have ye fanned
A nobler or a lovelier scene than this?
Man hath no part in all this glorious work:
The hand that built the firmament hath made
And smoothed these verdant swells, and sown their slopes
With herbage, planted them with island groves,
And hedged them round with forests. Fitting floor
For this magnificent temple of the sky—
With flowers whose glory and whose multitude
Rival the constellations! The great heavens
Seem to stoop down upon the scene in love—
A nearer vault and of a tenderer blue,
Than that which bends above the eastern hills.

The Assaults of the Devil.

Even in Job himself we have complaints enough, murmuring enough, but in Job we have the true life, and therefore at the last he is more than conqueror. In this case we see really all that the devil can do. What is it in his power, as given by God, to inflict? Bereavement, poverty, pain, humiliation. God has given him these four great dogs to set upon thy life; they will bite thee and gnaw thee, but they cannot kill thee, true child of God. The devil has only one soliloquy: his is really the poorest intellect in the universe. He says, "I have got Job on my hands, what shall I do? Are there any new tricks? No. Well, then I must try the old ones. Let me see. I will kill his sons and his daughters, and will take away his flocks and his herds, and I will give him boils; I will cover him with loathsome disease, and I will make his life disagreeable, and in every way I will plague him and torment him; and I will do it now." That is

THE DEVIL'S BRIEF PROGRAMME.

He cannot add a line to it if he could fill his hell by the doing of it. Beyond his chain he cannot go. Thou knowest, poor soul, what he can do—bereavement, poverty, pain, humiliation; sit down, count the cost, add it up line by line, item by item, and when thou hast done so, know the sum total, and ask whether the grace of God is sufficient to meet an exigency such as that result brings before thy view.

Our afflictions may be to show God's grace! I will try during this 1879 to take that view of my difficulties, cares and sorrows. Great battles may be fought in our little lives: I will therefore every day think that God is fighting out some case along the line of my experience, and that my behavior may have something to do with God's own satisfaction. I have been managing myself many years and have failed; to-night I resign the administration of my own life, and I ask the Almighty to work His will in me and through me without any suggestion, much less any interposition from my side. The sorrow, it is bitter; it must have been soaked—soaked in the bitterest aloes that the devil could pluck from the foulest trees; but God's grace is sufficient for me.

Where is your difficulty? On the brink of it is the devil. Is yours a home difficulty? God and the angels are waiting there, saying, "We have a great fight going on in this house: here is a poor life worried—worried—and we are waiting to see whether the devil's position or God's grace shall get the better." O poor man, poor woman! I pray for thee—pray for me. Is yours a business difficulty? Honest, honorable man you know yourself to be, but things have got twisted, and you cannot—cannot—cannot disentangle them. God is saying, "I tied the knot—I allowed the devil to tie it—and we are both waiting here to see the result of thy fingering."

Try, wait, try again, pray, hope—ah, there! a touch did it at last: and the unravelled string lies before thee, a straight line. What is your difficulty? Health? What is yours? A secret sorrow that cannot be put into speech, that no speech is fit to utter? It is a great battle that is being fought out in thy life: fight it sedulously, daily, constantly, lovingly. Ye have heard of the patience of Job: let the memory of that patience encourage you to toil on, suffer on; say in your degree, small indeed, "I must work to-day, and to-morrow, and the third day I shall be perfected." (Luke xiii. 32.)

Bibles in Church.

Worshipers need the word of God in their hands. When it is read there is a benefit in opening to the place and reading with the leader. The impression of the eye doubles that received through the ear alone. When the text is announced, to find and read the passages fixes it better in the memory. More than this. There is the opportunity to glance at the connection. Many valuable thoughts relative to the sermon may thus spring up, and the exercise will not interfere with attention to preaching. On the contrary, the use of the Bible thus will help to hold the mind open and on the alert. Thought is swifter than utterance. Thus the mind may take in the words of the speaker, and yet catch many auxiliary suggestions from the open Bible.

There are still other uses of the sacred volume at church. A short responsive reading of one of the Psalms is a very appropriate exercise. It fulfils the direction, "Let all the people praise the Lord." There are occasions when the earnest pastor desires to hold a Bible reading. If books are habitually present he will be able to do so at any time. Thus he may increase the value of the instruction given his people.

Then, too, if Bibles are in church they will more surely have a place in the Sabbath school. We are very sure that no school can do its best without the sacred volume at hand. Although publishing and editing lesson helps, yet we are very frank to say that we regard the Bible as the most important document to have in the school.—Church and School.

Something for Plain Girls.

No woman likes to be ugly, and she who is born a beauty is fortunate indeed. But let not the plain or ugly girl despair of acquiring a sufficient amount of beauty to render her attractive. Do not let a foolish fear, a silly shame, or worse still a superstitious prejudice against what is called vanity, prevent you from trying to improve your looks, if you are not naturally a beauty, or from trying to preserve and place at the best advantage the charms which you already possess.

When a woman loses a desire to please, she loses half her charms. Nothing is more conducive to beauty than cheerfulness and good-humor; and no morose or unhappy woman can be good-humored and cheerful. Then there are vast numbers of ill-tempered women who are ill-tempered because they are ugly. They do not know what is the matter with themselves; neither do their friends know. But the incessant neglect and indifference with which they are treated finally does its work of embittering their feelings until the effect upon their moral character is most pernicious.

Every woman ought to understand that nothing short of deformity can make a woman utterly unattractive, provided she will study her points; and points of attractiveness every woman has.

A thoroughly refined, graceful manner can be acquired by any woman, and is a powerful charm. The best grace is perfect naturalness. Still, you must study yourself, and form your manners by the rule of that art which is but a carrying out of the law of nature. But if it is your nature to be forever assuming some unpicturesque, ungraceful attitude, pray help nature with a little art. If you are stout, avoid the smallest chair in the room; and be sure, if you sit on it, not to lean back in it with your hands folded in front of you, just below the line of your waist, especially while the present fashion lasts. If you are thin, do not carry yourself with your chin protruding and your spinal column curving like the bowl of a spoon. Do not wear flimsy materials made up without a ruffle or puff or flounce, to fill up the hard outlines of your bad figure, so cruelly defined by the tightly pulled back draperies. Study the art of dress.

We once knew a very plain woman who dressed so tastefully that it was an absolute pleasure to look at her. If you have been moping until you are sick with the thought of your own ugliness, be up and doing. Forget your disappointments; forget the past and the sneers of your own family over the mistakes that you have made. There are still friends to be won; there is work to be done. Rouse yourself, and cast off the enervating distrust of self, and the moral cowardice which forbids you to assert yourself.—Young Woman's Journal.

Nature against Skepticism.

Rev. Thomas Starr King, for years one of the ablest preachers on the Pacific coast says: If I were in danger of becoming skeptical, I believe that a fresh and vivid appreciation of the scientific revelations concerning our globe would appal me into faith. To think of this ball whirling and spinning about the sun, and to be an atheist! its covering less in comparative thickness than a peach-skin, and its pulp a seething fire, and to feel that we are at the mercy of the forces that lash it like a top around the ecliptic, and of the raving flames that heave and beat for vent; not more than an eighth of its surface inhabitable by man; seas roaring around him, tropic heats smiting his brain, polar frosts threatening his blood, inland airs laden with fever, sea winds charged with consumption; hurricanes hovering in the sky, earthquakes slumbering under our feet; the conditions of life dependent on the most delicate oscillations of savage powers over which the wisest man is as powerless as a worm—to think of these and not have any confidence or belief in a power superior to these pitiless forces, not to have an inspiring faith that the land was made for human habitations and experience and is sheltered by a ceaseless love from the hunger of the elements! Why, I could as easily conceive of a person making his home unconcerned in an uncaged menagerie, as of a man at rest in nature, seeing what it is, and not feeling that it is embosomed in God! Go to nature, my brother; go to the unroofed universe; go to the awful pages of science, not to learn your religion but to learn your need of it—to learn that you are homeless without the sense of God as overarching you by his power, pledging his care to you, twisting the furious forces of immensity into a protecting tent for your spirit's home.

The Christian will find his parentheses for prayer even in the busiest hours of life.

Living on a Farm.

How brightly through the mist of years,
My quiet country home appears!
My father, busy all the day
In plowing corn, or raking hay;
My mother, moving with delight
Among her milkpans silver bright;
We children, just from school set free,
Filling the garden with our glee!
The blood of life was flowing warm
When I was living on a farm.

I heard the sweet church-going bell
As o'er the fields its music fell.
I see the country neighbors round
Gathering 'neath the pleasant sound;
They stop awhile beside the door,
To talk the homely matters o'er—
The springing corn, the ripening grain,
And "how we need a little rain."
"A little sun would do no harm,
We want good weather for the farm."

When autumn came, what joy to see
The gathering of the husking bee,
To hear the voices keeping tune,
Of girls and boys beneath the moon,
To make the golden corn ears bright,
More golden in the yellow light;
Since I have learned the ways of men,
I often turn to these again,
And feel life wore its highest charm
When I was living on a farm.

Little by Little.

Charlie and Lucy were sitting one evening on their uncle George's knee.

"Uncle," said Lucy, who was a dear child, "what did the minister mean this afternoon at church when he said, that "the man who despises small things shall fall by little and little?"

"Well, Lucy, my dear," replied uncle George, "I think you will understand me better if I tell you a story. Many years ago I was visiting at Panama. This is a place which you will find on your map, south of the United States and Mexico. I remained here for many months. Near my hotel was a very large wharf. Year after year the ships had come up to it, and had unloaded their cargoes. It was built at very great expense, and every person thought it entirely safe. Merchants often permitted thousands of dollars' worth of goods to remain on it over night. It was the custom of the wharf superintendent to examine it every month. Now, while I was there the report was spread that some little insects were eating away the wood. He looked at the place, but said it was of no consequence; that there were only a few insects that could do no great harm. Month after month passed, and still these little creatures eat away at the wharf. They did not seem to be numerous, and but little attention was paid to them. One day, as I was looking out of my window, I heard a dreadful crash; and behold, the whole immense wharf had fallen into the sea. Sixty or seventy persons were killed, and an immense amount of property was destroyed—all by the work of these tiny insects. Afterward it was found that they had been eating for years at the wood. Had they been stopped at once no harm could have come; but the superintendent thought them too small to notice — he despised them because they were so small.

"Children," said uncle George, "be careful of little things. Whenever you discover a bad little habit, kill it at once. If you do not it may kill you. Ask God, for Jesus' sake, to help you, and he will; for he has promised to hear those who ask him."—S. S. Visitor.

Each in His Own Way.

All great works are done by serving God with what we have on hand. Moses was keeping sheep in Midian. God sent him to save Israel, but he shrank from the undertaking. We sympathize with Jethro's herdsman, alone and a stranger, owning not a lamb that he watched. He had nothing but his shepherd's rod cut out of a thicket, the mere crabstick with which he guided his sheep. Any day he might throw it away and cut a better one. And God said:

"What is in thine hand? With this rod, with this stick, thou shalt save Israel." And so it proved.

"What is that thou hast in thy hand, stranger?" "An ox goad with which I urge my lazy beast." Used for God, Shamgar's ox-goad defeats the Philistines.

"What is that in thine hand, David?" "My sling with which I keep the wolves from the sheep." Yet with that sling he slew Goliath, whom an army dared not meet.

"What is that in thine hand, disciple?" "Nothing but five barley loaves and two little fishes." "Bring them to me; give them to God." And the multitude was fed.

"What hast thou, Dorcas?" "My needle." "Use it for God, and those coats and garments keep multiplying, and are clothing the naked still."—Bible Student.

Ruined.

Some months ago John S. Morton was sentenced in Philadelphia to ten years' imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary. As he left the court room, his friends—for the most part fashionable and wealthy men—surrounded the judge, clamorously demanding that he should be driven to jail in a carriage instead of a prison van. This little incident and the story of the prisoner are worthy the attention of young men beginning commercial life.

Only a short time ago Morton was a leading citizen of Philadelphia; not a leader after the fashion of Tweed or Fisk, but a refined, cultured gentleman, the descendent of a signer of the Declaration of Independence, and of a long line of judges and honorables, energetic in business. He was one of the foremost projectors of the Centennial Exposition, was president of the great permanent exhibition, and his name was brought before the people as a candidate for Governor of Pennsylvania.

He had everything which could give a man a solid, honorable footing in the world, but unfortunately he fell into the society of a clique of fashionable people, of the sort who would think the riding to prison in a van a worse disgrace than the crime which drove him there. In his haste to gain money and to vie in splendor with these friends, Morton was led to dabble in stocks, then to gamble in them, and finally, in order to make up his losses, to issue fraudulent stock in a railway company of which he was president, to the amount of two millions of dollars.

Now, boys who read such stories as these are apt to think of themselves as of an entirely different order of human beings from these gigantic swindlers; yet the shop boy who sells a lot of damaged goods to an unwary customer, or the lad who cheats in a game of marbles, are each in their degree guilty as was Morton, and afoot on the same broad highway. Deception and fraud permeate every part of our commercial system, and they generally meet a temporary success. The shopman who cheats in his master's interest usually is promoted, just as Morton with his ill-gotton gains was able to live like a prince; but retribution is sure, even in this world. The tricky clerk is known and avoided as a tricky merchant, and John S. Morton, with shaved head and convict's dress will meet old age in a prison cell.—Youth's Companion.

The Thunder Storm.

Frank, a boy from the city, had been picking raspberries in the woods. As he was on his way home, a violent storm arose; it began to rain, to lighten, and to thunder fearfully. Frank was very much frightened, and crept into a hole in an old oak tree, not far from the roadside. He did not know that the lightning is very apt to strike a hollow tree. But all at once he heard a voice that called: "Frank! Frank! come, O! come out quickly!" Frank jumped instantly from the tree, but scarcely had his feet touched the ground than the lightning struck the tree, and the thunder crashed frightfully. The ground quaked beneath the terrified boy, and it seemed as if he was standing in the midst of fire. But he was not hurt at all, and he exclaimed, with raised hands, "That voice came from heaven! Thou, O dear Lord, hast saved me!" But once more the voice was heard, "Frank! Frank! do you not hear me?" He looked around him, and discovered a peasant woman who was calling. Frank ran toward her, and said, "Here I am; what do you want of me?" The woman replied, "I did not mean you, but my own little Frank; he was watching the geese, yonder by the brook, and must have hidden himself somewhere from the storm. I came to take him home. See! there he comes at last, out from the bushes." Frank, the boy from the city, related how he had taken her voice for a voice from heaven. Then the peasant folded her hands devoutly and said, "O! my child, do not thank God any the less that the voice came from the mouth of a poor peasant woman. It was he who willed that I should call your name, although I knew nothing about you."

"Yes, yes!" said Frank. "God served himself by your voice, but my escape, nevertheless, came from heaven."

Always remember, dear children, that your safety depends not on accident or chance, but it proceeds directly from your heavenly Father, and that not a sparrow falls to the ground without his notice.—From the German.

Face Speech.—"I didn't say a single word," said Annie Barton to her mother, who was reproving her for her unamiable temper. "I know you didn't, Annie, but your face talked." What volumes our faces say! Some speak of love and kindness, some of anger and hatred, others of pride and rebellion, and others of selfishness. We cannot help our faces talking, but we can make them say pleasant things, and all should try to have them do so.—Youth's Companion.

We spend half our lives in making mistakes, and waste the poor remainder in reflecting how easily we might have avoided them.

Home and Farm.

Simple Hints Worth Remembering.

Repairing Tin-ware.—Those who live in the country often find it difficult to have small articles of tin-ware repaired when necessary, and are frequently put to great inconvenience through long delays. But a little experience will soon teach them to be quite expert in mending for themselves. With a sharp knife scrape all about the hole or leak until it becomes as bright as new tin. The solder will then readily adhere. Sprinkle on a little powdered rosin, heat the soldering-tin—which no family should be without—hold it on the rosin to melt it. Do not have the iron so hot that the rosin or solder will adhere to the iron. If one has no soldering iron, heat any smooth piece of iron (the knob on the top of a shovel or poker will answer), or hold a lighted candle under the spot, after sprinkling the rosin on top, and the work can be accomplished. But, having once felt the need of a soldering-iron, or learned how easy it is to make such repairs, no housekeeper will be long without one.

Washing Dishes.—If, before wetting greasy dishes, they are sprinkled with corn meal, or rubbed off with a small whisk broom kept for that purpose and dipped in a dish of corn meal, it will leave the dish-water much cleaner and nicer for washing other dishes. The meal with which they are rubbed is not wasted, as it is just as good for the pigs or chickens.

The Eyes.—It is very trying and injurious for most eyes to read, write or sew with the light coming in front of one. If the light comes in over the shoulders it will greatly preserve the strength of the eyes, besides adding greatly to comfort.

To Utilize Old Linen or Cotton.—Boil cloths that are too much worn for their legitimate use five minutes in a pint of milk and one ounce of powdered ammonia. As soon as taken out, wring in cold water. Be careful not to let them remain a moment in the water. Dry before a fire, not outdoors in the wind. Keep cloths thus prepared to polish plate or silverware. First wash and wipe the articles quite dry, then rub briskly with these cloths. The combination of milk and ammonia in which they were boiled will produce a beautiful deep polish like new silver. Dust them off with a soft chamois or a dry, soft towel before using.

Cut-Flowers.—We have seen it stated that choice cut-flowers can be preserved a long time and look perfectly fresh, by dipping them, when first cut, in the whites of eggs. Let them dry, and repeat the process several times, having fresh whites each time. We have never tried this and cannot vouch for its reliability, but it is worth trying.

The Use of Soda.—There has been much said by good common-sense people, as well as by physicians, against the use of much soda or saleratus in cooking. There is no doubt that it is of great injury to health when used as constantly as it is by many cooks. Physicians very generally agree that its frequent use debilitates and relaxes muscular strength, and is peculiarly injurious to the digestion, and greatly weakens the tone of the bowels, often ending in acute inflammation. Dr. Alcott has no hesitation in expressing his belief that the habitual use of soda is one great cause of the great mortality, particularly among the young, from bowel complaints. The coats of the stomach and bowels are so weakened by the use of this alkali that they have no power to resist the debilitating effects of the intense hot weather.

Closing Cracks in Cast-Iron Stoves.—If finely pulverized clay and a little salt are mixed with an equal quantity of wood-ashes, sifted through a fine sieve, and made into a paste with water, and then filled into the cracks of a stove when the stove is cold, it will effectually stop the cracks. It makes a cement that will not pull off or break, and soon assumes, after being heated, a great degree of hardness. This can also be used with good results in setting the plates of a stove or fitting the pipe, making all the joints perfectly tight. This is a useful hint for country house-keepers, who cannot always get repairs done on short notice.

Preserving Eggs.—A French pharmacist offers the following discovery for preserving eggs; namely, to use a solution of silicate of soda, which, being of a very glutinous or adhesive character, is kept in a liquid state by adding a little tepid water. Simply dip the fresh eggs in this and then dry them. When thoroughly dried and completely covered with the silicate solution, which any druggist can furnish, the eggs can then be put away, and will keep, it is stated, for more than a year without injury.

Small holes in white walls can be easily closed without the assistance of the mason by taking equal parts of plaster of paris and the white sand used in the family to scour with. Mix with water to a paste and apply immediately. Smooth off with a flat knife or piece of wood. This mixture hardens very quickly and therefore only a small quantity should be prepared at a time.—Christian Union.

Learn about the Pulse.

Every intelligent person should know how to ascertain the state of the pulse in the health; then, by comparing it with what it is when he is ailing, he may have some idea of the urgency of his case. Parents should know the health pulse of each child—as now and then a person is born with a peculiarly slow or fast pulse, and the very case in hand may be of that peculiarity. An infant's pulse is 140; a child of 7 about 80; and, from 20 to 60 years, it is 70 beats a minute, declining to 60 at fourscore. A healthful grown person's pulse beats 70 times a minute; there may be good health down to 60; but, if the pulse always exceeds 70, there is a disease; the machine is working itself out, there is a fever of inflammation somewhere, and the body is feeding on itself; as in consumption, when the pulse is quick, that is, over 70, gradually increasing, with decreased chances of cure until it reaches 110 or 120, when death comes before many days. When the pulse is over 70 for months, and there is a slight cough, the lungs are affected.—Ex.

The Work at Sugar Grove Church, Pa.

Cameron, Marshall Co., W. Va., May 21, 1879.

Editor Christian Cynosure.—I wish to give your readers a brief account of the Christian Association of Southwestern Pennsylvania. As the name indicates, our field of labor is right in the very southwestern corner of the State, so near the line that our most convenient post-office (Cameron) is over on the West Virginia side. Morally, physically and socially, the country is somewhat rough, and though well-nigh monopolized by the lodge as it is, I am inclined to think that its contion in that respect is not worse than many more polished communities.

The Anti-masonic sentiment of the community had been floating in rather a nebulous form till February 27, last, when, according to previous announcement, a number of us met a Sugar Grove church and organized by electing Hiram P. Moss president, and Joseph Houston secretary. I attended, prepared with a constitution and platform, and having addressed the meeting at length, I was followed by Mr. Houston in some excellent remarks relative to the state of our country consequent upon the prevalence of the numerous secret clans. We have met every other Staturday at 2 P. M. ever since. Determined that the ball which was at last rolling should roll on, we determined to have the opportunity of listening to the Gospel, preached by a man neither cable-towed nor cowed by the lodge. Such a man we could not find available to us in the denomination which most of us preferred (Presbyterian), ao we called Rev. D. B. Turney, Methodist Protestant, to the field. Mr. T. is known to the readers of the Cynosure. He was on hand in time to be present at our second regular meeting, and though somewhat travel worn, having come with his family all the way from southern Illinois, went to work at once in earnest.

The few secretists present at Mr. T.'s first address, with slight exceptions, listened in sullen silence. But at our next regular meeting came the tug of war. One Entered Apprentice Mason, one Odd-fellow, and one man, an advanced Mason and full-fledged Odd-fellow, the last a justice of the peace, with a flock of rude boys and jacks, evidently present on purpose for mischief, showed themselves determined to browbeat and bully us right out. Mr. T. did most of the speaking. The enemy waited till the hot shot from Mr. T.'s battery began to pepper them past their endurance. They then began to talk loud to one another, contradict the speaker, make mouths at him and in many ways to act out the spirit of the lodge. But their zeal in the cause of their grand master, Satan, much exceeded their knowledge, for at every thrust the enemy's dagger was caught on the point and turned upon him. The secretists finally, willingly or unwillingly, conceded the truth of every important assertion that had been made against the lodge. Our meeting lasted from two P. M. till six, but some time before its close the enemy fled. But though we had gained one important victory, the war was not ended.

At our next meeting the enemy did not appear, but made inquiry anxiously of some children going home from the meeting, if many were there. Having failed to accomplish their object by staying away, the opposition were present next day (Sabbath) to disturb the preaching; and particularly at night service, the conduct of several was outrageous, one Odd-fellow and one Mason loudly contradicting and abusing the preacher while delivering his sermon in the house of God. The Odd-fellow dancing and singing bawdy songs in the house as the congregation was leaving after the benediction. One of the men named above as acting the ruffian, is our justice of the peace, the same man who so outraged law and justice in a case brought before him between a brother Mason and poor old Mr. Whitlatch, an account of which was published in the Cynosure March 8, 1877. How can Masonry be divine when its spirit having entered into a man makes him a child of the devil? Let the column of reform move on.

Jonathan W. Moss.

—Rev. J. P. Stoddard preached in Geneva Lake, Wis., on Sabbath and lectured in the same place on Monday evening.

—Prof. C. A. Blanchard attended and spoke at the services attending the burial of Mrs. Humphrey of Blackberry, Ill., on Sabbath afternoon.

—Rev. G. W. Bainum, late of Bunker Hill, Ill., has accepted a call from the Independent church of Streator, and has removed his family to his new field.

Wesleyan.

—Bro. C. F. Hawley of Wheaton, who is now devoting nearly his whole time to evangelistic work, is expecting soon to commence Gospel labor in southwestern Missouri, commencing at Brookline, Greene county. Rev. C. Powers, stationed there, keeps the fires of Christian reform burning in that part of the State, while Bro. W. M. Love answers with his signal fire from Baker in St. Clair county.

—The editor of the Fort Scott, Kans., Herald, himself a high Mason, gives this voluntary and just tribute to Bro. Richards' work in that city:

"About two years ago the organization of the Wesleyan Methodist church was begun in this city by Rev. J. A. Richards. The growth of this organization has been very rapid, and it now has about 105 members. It has sprung up under adverse circumstances, peculiarly so, for the membership is composed almost exclusively of working men and the poorer class in our midst. Considering the hard times and the difficulty of procuring work, the career of this organization has been marvelous. To run a church successfully requires almost as much money as to run a printing office. Yet this little church has made great progress. Its services have been held in the hall over Walrath's store, and the economy which it has been compelled to practice has gained for it the appelation of the "cheap church." But perseverance has met its just reward and by the middle of June it will hold its services in its own building located in East Fort Scott, which is nearly completed. The building is of stone 30x60 feet with a bell tower 8x11 feet. The tower is 30 feet high, and the edifice presents a very neat and attractive appearance. About $1,000 has been paid on the building, and a small debt, of a few hundred dollars only, has been incurred. Other congregations could have as readily raised $20,000 as this church could the one thousand which it has paid on the new building. Such laudable efforts to promote the cause of Christianity deserves recognition at the hands of the public. We do not know what attempts are being made to raise the small indebtedness of the church, but it strikes us that Christian people should feel it a duty to assist this organization without being asked. The official board of the church consists of Rev. J. A. Richards, pastor; C. Gipple, supt. Sunday school; H. Kreuger, class leader; A. V. Hamlin, clerk. The stewards are Messrs. Gipple, Kreuger and D. Hedges.

—Rev. L. N. Stratton, editor of the Am. Wesleyan, is to begin a course of Anti-masonic lectures in Seneca county, N. Y., May 1st. He has three more courses in process of arrangement. Knowing the weakness of "making faces," Mr. Stratton proposes to rivet every position he takes with "proofs as strong as Holy Writ"—proofs that no fair and honest man will deny. Proofs as strong as those on which twenty-one Mollie Maguires were hung.

Congregational.

—In addition to the reasons for usurping authority over the churches of Union, Riley and Garden Prairie by Messrs. Taylor, Dickinson, etc., mentioned on the editorial pages, it should be remembered that the church at Union is heartily and by testimony pledged to Christ and against the sham worships of the lodge. With an earnest pastor the position of this church would be a standing rebuke to the hypocritical action of Elgin Association, of which it is a member. The first named of the above ministers is not likely to be better pleased than the other with the Union church testimony, since the clerk of his church in Wheaton is chaplain of the Good Templars lodge, and his church in Prospect Park is opened to Odd-fellow celebrations.

—We regret to learn that the lodge influence is working mischief in other Congregational churches, but more seriously than at Union. There the enemy is without, in the others within. From several pastorates we fear that those who have pledged their allegiance to Christ and his church have given themselves over to the harlotry of the lodge until the churches are dying and the minister who would be faithful to his Master finds his work hedged in and his usefulness largely destroyed.

—The College Springs, Iowa, church whose steadfast position against the lodge abomination is being maintained under Bro. Avery, as under the former pastors Barker and Phillips, has exerted with the Wesleyan and United Presbyterian churches of the place a great influence for good in the community. A few demitted Masons live in the place, who have twice scoured the neighborhood to get together enough to warrant the opening of the lodge. Eight is the largest number they have been able to influence. The best members of the Odd-fellows lodge have left the order, and those who remain are not altogether of a character to add to the happiness of society. The College Springs brethren have other and wider fields than their own neighborhood to conquer by the word of their testimony. We rejoice that they have a willingness to enter it.

—Reports from some of the Congregational churches of the South are not hopeful. The First Congregational church in New Orleans, Louisiana, has sold its house of worship. The people keep up no service and have turned over their Sunday-school library to a colored school. At Chattanooga, Tenn,, the white church is absorbed in the Presbyterian North. At Memphis, Tenn., it yet holds its house of worship, but does not keep up service.

—Rev. J. D. Baker, now pastor of the Danville church, Iowa, has received additions to his church at every communion during the past year. A revival during the winter largely increased the numerical and spiritual power of the church.

THE BRETHREN (Dunker).

—An old minister of this interesting people writes thus on their denominational name: '"The Brethren' was our original name. The world has ever refused to accord it to us. About half a century ago, to avoid nicknames, as 'Tunker,' 'Dunker,' etc., our annual meeting adopted 'German Baptist.' But the body or brotherhood would not accept this as our cognomen. Neither do I think that we will consent to 'Triune Baptist.' 'The Brethren' is sufficiently distinct and I think will be maintained.

FREE BAPTIST.

—The yearly meetings of the Free Baptist churches will be held as follows:

Michigan, Capac, May 30.
Illinois, Fiat, May 30.
Minnesota Y. M., Spring Brook, June 13.
Minnesota Southern, Mapleton, June 20.
Southern Illinois, Cairo, May 23.
St. Joseph's Valley, East Gilead, May 23.
Union, Lebanon and Smyrna, June 11.
New York and Pennsylvania, Adrian, June 6.
Iowa Northern, Waterloo, June 6.
New Hampshire, Laconia, June 10.
Susquehanna, Virgil and Dryden, June 20.
Ohio and Pennsylvania, Cleveland, O., June 27.
Maine Western, South Cornish, June 17.
Genesee, Byron, N. Y., June 27.
Ontario, Iona, June 19.
Ohio, Springfield, Clifton, Ave., June 6-8.
Central New York, Jonhsburg, June 27.
Wisconsin, Ithica, June 27.
Kentucky, Paducah, May 30.
St. Lawrence, Parishvillle, June 27.

GENERAL.

—The meetings conducted by the evangelist Pentecost in Minneapolis are crowded. He rejoices in the increasing interest and many conversions, and having attacked the theaters, church, strawberry and ice cream festivals, fairs, and other similar entertainments, he proposes to "fight it out on this line." He preaches every night except Saturday, in Plymouth church, with noon prayer meetings and 4 P. M. Bible readings in other churches.

—The General Synod of the Moravian church will assemble at Herrnhut, Saxony, on Monday, May 26th. This gathering has an interesting feature in being the only synodical body of the kind in Protestant Christendom, the entire church throughout the world, in its home provinces and its missions, being represented in the General Synod. The Church of Rome is the only other body of Christians in which such organic and actual union is upheld. The delegation from the American Province left Philadelphia on May 3d, in the steamship Ohio, and was composed of Bishop Edmund de Schweinitz, the Revs. C. Nagle, C. B. Shultz, E. A. Oeter, August Schultze, H. Reusswig, Edwin G. Klose, and C. C. Lanius, from the Northern District, and Bishop Emil A. de Schweinitz and the Revs. E. Rendthaler and R. P. Leinbach, from the Southern District.

—A sudden check has been placed upon the work of the missionaries of the American Board in Austria, and the outlook is far from hopeful. At Prague the Govornor has issued a special edict limiting the religious exercises of those not connected with the State churches to simple family devotion, at which not even invited guests are allowed to be present. Rev. E. A. Adams has been forbidden, under pain of fine or imprisonment, to hold any more religious gatherings in his own house, or even to attend any religious services not connected with the established churches of Austria. Similar prohibitions have been placed upon other workers. An appeal is to be made to the higher authorities, with what result remains to be seen.

—Dispatches from India state that the cholera has appeared in most of the cities of the Punjaub. The cholera in Peshawur is threatening to raise an obstacle to the prompt withdrawl of the troops from Afghanistan.

News of the Week.

—Heavy rains in northern Illinois on Sunday gives general rejoicing to the farmers. The season has been remarkably dry and cold.

—It is officially announced that Secretary of War McCrary has resigned and will retire from the Cabinet in the fall.

—The legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill passed the Senate and was sent to the President without the signature of the presiding officer of that body last week. It will be vetoed for reasons similar to the case of the army bill. Attorney General Devins holds that supervisors and deputy marshals are necessary to free elections, and the bill is loaded with a clause abolishing these officers.

—The statement is made that more candy is made and eaten in this country than in all the rest of the world combined. Boston manufactures about 5,000 tons annually, New York about 7,000 tons, and Chicago does a large business in the same field.

—Clinton, Iowa, has been visited by a destructive conflagration, originating last Thursday in the lumber dry house of C. Lamb & Sons, spreading quickly over the adjoining lumber yards, and destroying several million feet of lumber; also a number of buildings. Loss abont $200,000.

—In the colored convention last week at Richmond, Va., a committee of three was appointed to go to Washington to consult with leading Republicans upon the best course to pursue in their efforts to secure the amelioration and improvement of the condition of the colored race. The Committee on Grievances made a report, setting forth at length the wrongs and grievances of the colored people and submitting a second resolution, recommending the colored people of the State to organize societies for the purpose of petitioning the legislative and judicial departments of the State for full recognition of their rights as citizens, and if such rights be not fully accorded, that they are advised to emigrate to other States or Territories where there is no distinction on account of color.

FOREIGN.

—A Berlin dispatch says Herr Von Forckenbeck's resignation of the Presidency of the German Reichstag shows that the Liberals have been beaten on all hands by the Conservatives and clericals. Bismarck's star is in the ascendant. It is rumored that a proclamation of clemency relative to the enforcement of the Folk law will be issued on the occasion of the Emperor's golden wedding.

—A correspondent who has just traversed the Danube from Giurgevo to Buda-Pesth, telegraphs that the Danube is very high. A short distance above Baselas, where the Austrian shore becomes low and flat, the flood extends a great distance inland. Between this point and Belgrade the river is from five to fifteen miles wide. At Belgrade it is fully twenty miles wide. Nearly all the Austrian villages between Pesth and Baselas have water in the streets. The riverside inhabitants informed the correspondent that the water is already within two feet of the highest point recorded and is still rising. The floods continuing so late in the season must cause great damage to the crops. All the grain and other produce in Roumania, Bulgaria, and Austro-Hungary not within reach of the water are looking finely, and promise a bountiful harvest.

—The Viceroyal Council of India was specially summoned for May 19th to consider the draft of the Afghan treaty. The Ameer has agreed to such terms as will secure the chief objects of the British policy. A correspondent at Simla states that among the principal points in the agreement with Yakoob Khan are the British command of the Himalaya passes, with sufficient territory to constitute a scientific frontier, the appointment of a British Resident at Cabul, and the control of the foreign relations of Afghanistan.

—Another Indian mutiny is threatened Dacoity, or robbery by armed gangs, is assuming large proportions in the Deccan, especially in the Poonah district. For some time past bands of dacoits have been scouring the country, committing daring attacks on houses and villages. In their remarkable manifesto to the Bombay government, threatening another mutiny, and to put a price on the head of the governor unless the distress is relieved, they inform the government that unless extensive public works are at once opened and employment provided for the people, native trades encouraged, taxes reduced, and salaries of highly paid Europeans cut down, they will not cease to plunder, and will extend to Europeans what they have hitherto confined to the natives. They will kill the governor of Bombay, hang the judge of the court of sessions, murder and rapine throughout the country, and engage in the massacre of Europeans. The manifesto ends by warning the governor that unless he at once complies with these requisitions, the price of 1,000 rupees will but on his head. The government, which was at first inclined to leave the matter in the hands of the local police, is now taking more energetic measures. A considerable number of troops patrol the country, and a reward of 1,000 rupees has been offered for the capture of the leader.

—As far as known the popular vote last week stood 166,824 for aud 138,692 against the re-establishment of capital punishment in Switzerland.

—A dispatch to the London Times from Calcutta says that the report that 20,000 to 30,000 persons died from cholera while returning from a religious fair is repeated. A series of strikes is threatened in Calcutta. Gangs of malcontents at Poona have written to the Bombay government threatening to raise another mutiny and to put a price upon the head of the governor unless the distress is relieved.

—A tramp bill has been passed by both houses of the Pennsylvania legislature, which provides that a man who goes about begging and has no residence or occupation in the county in which he may be arrested, can be committed for trial as for a misdemeanor, and on conviction may be sentenced to jail or the workhouse for a term not exceeding twelve months. If a tramp enters a house without the permission of the owner or occupant, or displays a dangerous weapon in a threatening manner, he may be convicted of felony, and sent to the penitentiary for a term not exceeding three years.

OPENING CEREMONIES. ENTERED APPRENTICE DEGREE

(Concluded.)

Sign of an Entered Apprentice

SIGN OF AN ENTERED APPRENTICE.

Made from due-guard by dropping left hand to side, and at same time raise right arm, with hand still open, and draw hand quickly across the throat, the thumb being next to the throat; then hand drops to side.

[The sign is termed the "penal sign," and refers to the penalty of the degree.]

Worshipful Master—(one rap.)

Senior Warden—(one rap.)

Junior Warden—(one rap.)

Worshipful Master (removes his hat)—Brethren, before declaring the lodge open, let us reverently invoke the blessing of Deity.

[Either the following or similar prayers are offered by the Worshipful Master or the Chaplain:]

OPENING PRAYER.

"Most holy and glorious Lord God, the Great Architect of the Universe, the giver of all good gifts and graces! Thou hast promised that, 'Where two or three are gathered together in thy name, thou wilt be in their midst and bless them.' In thy name we have assembled, and in thy name we desire to proceed in all our doings. Grant that the sublime principles of Freemasonry may so subdue every discordant passion within us—so harmonize and enrich our hearts with thine own love and goodness—that the lodge at this time may humbly reflect that order and beauty which reign forever before thy throne. Amen."

Worshipful Master—I now declare ——— Lodge No. ——— opened in form on the first degree of Masonry.

Worshipful Master—Brother Senior Deacon, arrange the altar. [S. D. steps to the altar, opens Bible at 133d Psalm, and lays square and compass on it, both points of compass under the square.]

Worshipful Master—Brother Junior Deacon, inform the Tyler. [J. D. gives three raps on Tyler's door; Tyler gives three; J. D. one and Tyler one; door is opened, and J. D. whispers, "The lodge is opened on the first degree;" then closes the door and turns to the east.]

Junior Deacon—The Tyler is informed, Worshipful.

Worshipful Master—(one rap, all are seated.)

[In a "called," or "special communication" for "work" (initiation) on first degree, the lodge now proceeds with initiation; but at a "stated communication" the Worshipful Master at once proceeds to open on the second, and then the third degree, when, after the business is transacted, if there is "work" on the first degree the lodge is reduced down to that degree.

ANALYSIS OF CHAPTER V.

Masonry Sun-Worship—Slavery—Anachronism—Anti-Christ—Divorcing our Globe from God.

The men at Apple-Tree Tavern, in 1717, were not the real contrivers of lodgery, but the "god of this world" (2 Co. 4: 4), who is the god and contriver of all false religions.

Sun-worship was the parent idolatry, and Freemasonry, as seen in this chapter, is sun-worship; the same which adulterated and destroyed the true worship of God in the days of Ezekiel (chap. 8: 16).

The three lodge officers, who virtually are the lodge, each represents the sun, rising, shining, or setting. No idolatry ever claimed that the visible idol was the real object of worship; but that which was represented by it was the real deity. The Master and each Warden represents the sun, and the Master is called Worshipful; and the sun is worshiped in each of the three. The Entered Apprentice degree opens Freemasonry in sun-worship.

Notice, too, that each of the three speaks of the one below him as his officer. The principle of the system is sworn obedience to superiors, unknown as well as known; so that each gradation is a new degree of slavery, each being compensated by lording it over the next below him, till you get down to the Masonic masses, who, in the theory of the order, are thus slaves of slaves.

Notice, further, this chapter proves Freemasonry a historic falsehood. The words, "Where two or three are met together" (Mat. 18 : 20), quoted in the opening prayers, were spoken by Christ one thousand years after the pretended origin of the order in the days of Solomon.

Notice, again, the Senior Warden answers the Master that he came "from the lodge of the holy Saints John at Jerusalem." This is an anachronism and fiction, or falsehood. Mackey says (Lexicon, p. 426): "The primitive" (i. e., first) "lodge was held at Jerusalem, and dedicated to St. John," who lived over a thousand years after Solomon, the pretended first Grand Master! How then could that lodge be dedicated to one born ages after it was formed?

Lodge idolatry has, therefore, been invented since Christ, and is an opposition, or rival worship, or anti-Christ.

But why should Satan devise a wearisome round of senseless ceremonies?

ANSWER: All false systems of religion have, and must have them. Since Satan cannot satisfy minds, he must busy them. Hence beads, pilgrimages, kneelings, crossings, the bark-mill round of lodge ceremonies; and all traditions, idolatries and religious contrivances on earth are human substitutes for the atonement, Satanic devices to induce souls to lose themselves in mysteries and rest in ceremonies, and so keep them from coming to God through the only Mediator, Jesus Christ. Thus they divorce our globe from its God.

CHAPTER VII.

THIRD, OR MASTER MASON'S DEGREE.

OPENING CEREMONIES.

[A large portion of the opening exercises, which are always observed in opening on either degree, are given in Chapter V., while this opens with the form of passing from second to third degree.]

The third degree is termed "The Sublime Degree of Master Mason."[20] It is also termed "The Summit of Ancient Craft Masonry," because all the degrees above the three Blue Lodge degrees are of modern origin.

Not until the candidate has received the third degree is he entitled to take any part in the proceedings of the lodge; has no vote; is not entitled to claim either Masonic relief[21] or protection, or a Masonic burial, or even to join in a Masonic funeral procession.

Worshipful Master (one rap)—Brother Senior Warden, will you be off or from?

Senior Warden—From.

Worshipful Master—From what? [See Appendix, Note d.]

Senior Warden—From the degree of a Fellow Craft to that of a Master Mason.

Worshipful Master—Are all present Master Masons?

Senior Warden (rising and making a personal observation of those present)—All present are not (or are) Master Masons, Worshipful. [Senior Warden remains standing.]

NOTE 20.—"Initiation makes a man a Mason; but he must receive the Master Mason's degree and sign the by-laws before he becomes a member of the lodge."—Constitution of New York (See Chase's Digest, page 250.)

NOTE 21.—"None but Master Masons are entitled to membership, Masonic burial, or the general charity fund of the lodge."—Chase's Digest, page 251.

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

BY PRESIDENT CHARLESS G. FINNEY, OF OBERLIN, OHIO

This is a most powerful argument against the Lodge by a truly great and good man who when a young man just before beginning the study of the law and before his convertion, was drawn into this Anti-Christian institution, and as he says on page seven "became a BRIGHT Mason." On the same page he says; "I was completely converted from Freemasonry to Christ." The most of this book was first published in a series of articles in the Independent which created such excitement that the publishers refused to insert the rest of the articles.

This book has already opened the eyes of multitudes to the evils of Freemasonry.

Capt. Wm. Morgan was Mr. Greene's neighbor in Batavia, N. Y., and a member of the same lodge with him at the time of the great excitement in 1826. The titles to these chapters are sufficiently exciting to give the book a large sale:—"The Storm Gathering;" "Abduction of Morgan;" "Attempted Abduction of Miller and his Rescue;" "What became of Morgan;" "What Morgan Actually Revealed;" "Confession of the Murderer;" "Allegations against Freemasonry, etc."

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion.

A club of ten for a year each from Wm. R. Morley, Brush Creek, Iowa, who writes: "I expect to send some more subscriptions in a few day," is a pleasant item for our readers.

Several send two subscriptions for one year each and one of these A. Osgood, Lostant, Illinois, writes: "I have the promise of a number of subscribers."

Burke Scott, Marengo, Ind., is collecting a club. Joel H. Austin, Burlington, Iowa, writes: "We shall do all we can for the paper."

H. M. Woodford, Waverly, Iowa, extends the time of his offer to furnish the Cynosure for one year each to all in Bremer county, up to one hundred who will pay him fifty cents; also to any ordained minister in the State of Iowa up to twenty-five who will send fifty cents with name and address written plainly. Remember this rare opportunity and improve it promptly.

Those who wish to know the character of Freemasonry, as shown by its own publications, will find many standard works in the following list.

No sensible Mason dares deny that such men as Albert G. Mackey, the great Masonic Lexicongrapher, and Daniel Sickels, the Masonic author and publisher, are the highest Masonic authority in the United States.

All the books advertised here are used by Masons, but Duncan's Ritual, Allyn's Ritual and Richardson's Monitor, are not publicly acknowledged as Masonic authority, because they tell too much.

NOTICE.

The fourth annual business meeting of the National Christian Association will occur, D. V., June 19, 1879, at 221 West Madison street, Chicago, commencing at 10 o'clock A. M. A full attendance not only of the corporate members of this body, but of all the friends, is desired. There are many reasons why if practicable you should attend this meeting, some of which are:

1st. You have many of you aided this work by contributing to its funds and you should know how those funds are invested and how the income from them is appropriated.

2nd. You should better understand the difficulties and the necessities of this great work, which can be done much better by an experience at the center than from the outside view.

3rd. Your advice and counsels are needed to aid in shaping future movements. A few men, however wise and sincere, are not equal to the demands of this great cause, and it would not be doing unto others as you would be done by to unnecessarily absent yourself, and then blame others for not meeting your expectations.

4th. You want to see the faces and shake the hands and listen to the voices of one another and the veterans in this work some of whom will soon cease from their labors.

Some States have appointed representatives to this meeting, whom we expect of course to see and we hope others will be represented; but let no man or woman friendly to the cause, stay away for want of an appointment. If you can come, consider that fact a Providential appointment which is the best and highest you can have.

MOSES PETTENGILL, President.

Topics of the Time.

The Russian Consul in New York must have been surprised the other day at receiving a warning from some one pretending to represent a Nihilist committee in this country. He might reasonably expect to escape the tribulations here that beset his own nation from the secret orders. There is an inclination to regard the threat as serious and put the case in the hands of the police. "If true," says one paper, "it is a crime for which the offender ought to suffer as severe a penalty as American law allows for such an act." Very well, let it be punished. A score or two of honest men who have been treated the same way by American lodgemen will remember the precedent and use it. If the Russian Consul expected freedom from such attacks in America he had not read the late expression of the English premier in reference to the Nihilists: "When, a good many years ago, I wrote that the world was governed by secret societies, I was laughed at. But people seem to be coming round to my view."

Last week President Hayes had the pleasure of sending in another veto—this time to the bill appropriating funds to the legislative, executive and judicial departments, which reached him loaded with a clause repealing that part of the election laws which provides for the interference of government officers to prevent frauds, protect the supervisors of election from violence, and the punishment of those guilty of fraud or violence. The election laws are acknowledged constitutional, since a portion of them are left—providing for the appointment of supervisors of Congressional elections. The veto message is a plain, matter-of-fact document and does not go over ground already argued in previous messages. The question is: 1st, whether such frauds as are detected by the supervisors shall be punished, and those officers protected; and 2nd, whether the national authorities should have the matter in charge. The validity of the law is unquestioned and its usefulness in practical operation has been repeatedly demonstrated, especially in the city of New York. The President gives a substantial array of facts on this point; and candid men of every party must also acknowledge the force of his argument on the constitutionality of the present law, and the necessity of the veto. It is in the power of a few such men in the opposition to close this costly quarrel, vote the appropriations and go home. A. H. Stephens and a number of his party, most of them from the South, it is said are willing to do this. No doubt this method of "bull-dozing" attempted by Northern Democrats upon the general government has failed, and there is nothing left them but to acknowledge the fact.

The Republican convention in Cincinnati last week for nominating a candidate for governor of Ohio, is believed to have a national significance among politicians. This is perhaps exaggerated from the lively interest taken in the nomination by Pres. Hayes and his cabinet, which was partly from personal reasons. The prominent candidates were Foster, an able politician and former Congressman, and Taft, a Cincinnati judge and for a time Grant's Attorney General. Hayes got the governorship away from Taft in convention four years ago, hence there is little cordiality between them; and Taft is, moreover, looked upon as a representative of the Grant wing of the party. The Democrats hold their convention soon, and have talked of nominating Senator Thurman, whose election in Ohio would assure him the nomination to the Presidency; for the political mathematicians say that the vote of Ohio will give us the next President. Secretary Sherman is the only Republican in the State able to compete with the Senator, and there was much calculating the political chances before the convention. But the dextrous politician shook hands better than the polite judge and Foster was nominated on the first ballot. If elected he will make an able governor, and Mr. Sherman will not have run any risk in his race for the Presidency.

Pope Leo XIII. has already gained some repute as a reformer upon the customs of his predecessor; but if the truth be told, his reformations are necessary to his treasury. Pius IX. was notorious as a financier, as the servant girls of Europe and America could attest; his successor does not reach the sympathies that control the pocket. He has therefore been compelled to retrench the expenses of the Vatican, refuse to keep up pensions, and cut off supplies from the bishops who are not supported at home. These are reforms from necessity; but a correspondent at Rome writes to the Christian Union that the Pope has condemned "our Lady of Salette," a French fraud who had set up a shrine near Naples, which he has ordered destroyed and all the images connected with it. If he continues to exercise his power against these superstitions he will deserve the name of reformer, and his priests will give him a reformer's reward.

The first international convention on an inter-ocanic canal between the Atlantic and Pacific closed in Paris last week. This is the first meeting of the kind, and its conclusions are looked upon as final. Eminent engineers discussed the different routes from every point. Three were considered practicable, known as the Panama, the Nicaragua and the Atrato routes. The estimated cost of these routes is respectively, 140, 180 and 206 million dollars. The American delegation favored the latter. They had more carefully surveyed the ground under the orders of our government, and presented the most complete report, but the partiality of the French members of the convention for the Panama canal carried the vote in its favor. The work of organizing a company and raising funds may now be expected for this great commercial undertaking, to which the Suez canal cannot compare in difficulty or importance.

Governor St. John of Kansas ably presented the case of the colored refugees for the sympathy and substantial aid of every patriot in conversation with a press correspondent. No stronger appeal could be made, no more forcible argument, than in this extract from the interview:

"During the war," said the Governor, "if a Union soldier who had been taken prisoner made his escape he could always depend upon the negroes to help him on his way to our lines. Nobody ever thought of asking a negro if he sympathized with the North; the color of his skin certified to that. No matter how ignorant he might be, he always knew enough to be friendly to 'Massa Linkum's boys,' and he never missed an opportunity to help them when they were in trouble. An escaping prisoner, skulking through the woods and swamps to elude his rebel pursuers, knew he was safe whenever he saw a black face, and I never heard of a case in which such confidence was misplaced. Now these poor colored people are seeking a refuge with us in the North. They have borne oppression as long as they could stand it, now they come to us with just as much confidence as the escaping prisoners went to them, and the people of Kansas do not propose that they shall be disappointed."

A Cloud of Witnesses.

At a clerical gathering in a neighboring city the following sharp testimonies were uttered, after listening to a review of the revelations of Masonry:

No. 1. I know Masonry to be bad enough from its influence in my parish.

2. I have had extensive revivals in a ministry of over forty years, but never knew a Mason to be converted in one of them.

3. Sorry any of my people are Masons.

4. 'Tis a blasphemous concern; an obstruction to revivals. Religious Masons have no spirituality.

5. 'Tis a gigantic swindle. If you fail in one requirement, you lose all benefit of past payments.

6. I am profoundly convinced of the wrong of the system.

7. The lodge is no place for a Christian.

8. Impenitent Masons are hard to approach. They say Masonry is good enough religion for me.

9. I know the affirmations of that book are true; I have been through the mill myself. 'Tis all of the world, the flesh and the devil, through and through.

10. Brother F. has not gone to the bottom of this iniquity.

11. How can you believe a seceder after he has perjured himself, by revealing what he has sworn never to reveal?

12. If in spite of his horrid oaths and the danger he incurs as well, he nevertheless, for conscience sake, confesses his deeds, he is all the more to be believed. Renunciation is not perjury but a Christian duty.

13. A system of tomfoolery.

14. I will never be a Mason.

15. Masonry is opposed to the kingdom of Christ. Hence ministers should inform themselves of its wickedness. The church is enough for all Christians; and in all respects better than Masonry.

16. Masonry is destructive of Christianity.

17. If I am a Mason, you say I must lie if I speak the truth; so I will be silent, but I could tell you more than is in that book.

18. I want to get around the corner out of sight for very shame, when I see Masons marching through the streets with their shirt tails hanging out in front.

19. I know good and moral men among Masons.

20. Moral men and so-called good men, were accomplices in the murder of William Morgan. Sworn to do it by their horrid oaths. David was a good man; did that make the murder of Uriah any less a murder? And is the wickedness of Masonry any less wicked, because a few good men have been fooled or betrayed into it?

21. I am glad to be among ministers who are opposed to Masonry.

22. The revelations of Masonry are true. Anti-masonic books are true. Ronayne's works are true. No honest man can listen to his lectures without feeling and believing that he is revealing the truth, and what he knows is the truth. I have heard him. There is no Christ ni the lodge.

A few kept their jewel.

Church Covenants and Specific Sins.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

It has been a time-honored custom in Congregational and other churches to put into the church covenant a promise to abstain from certain forms of sin regarded as specially dangerous to the prosperity of the church and the spiritual growth of the believer. The clause would read about as follows: "You promise that you will read the Bible daily; that you will maintain secret and family prayer; will keep holy the Sabbath day; will not buy, sell, nor use intoxicating drinks nor indulge in dancing or gaming."

Now there is reason to believe that a very general change has taken place in this respect, and that the churches in revising their covenants omit all mention of these forms of evil, and all such specific promises. The Congregational ministers I meet tell me so, and on examining quite a number of manuals of churches in northern Ohio I found that in every instance this omission had been made.

The reason is obvious. By the testimony of Pres. Finney and our reform movement the churches have been brought face to face with Freemasonry. They know it to be as truly sinful as any other form of evil against which they have testified. No reason whatever can be given why men should be prohibited from dancing and drinking and yet tolerated in the abominations of the lodge. If it be said that some who were true Christians have practiced the one, this is equally true of the others, and in order to escape the dilemma thus presented they have taken out of their covenants all reference to specific sins.

The practical effect is equally obvious. There has been a large increase of folly and sin. Dancing and gaming are practiced by the members of the orthodox churches to an an alarming extent, while the progress of false doctrine both in the laity and ministry has gone hand in hand with the decline in spirituality and morals. That this is not universally true I am glad to admit. There are ministers and churches who stand in the gap, and are valiant for the truth; but it is not less true that a refusal to bear testimony against any prevalent and popular sin carries with it a tacit endorsement of every other form of sin, as consistent with orderly church membership; and is a practical repudiation of the morality of the Gospel as the code of the churches.

Should Masonic Oaths be Kept or Broken.

BY REV. ISAAC HYATT.

Especially as there are Masons giving evidence of integrity and Christian character, I do not wish to speak uncharitably of them or their connection with the order; but simply to show that Masonic oaths are sinful, and whenever taken ought to be renounced with penitent confession to God and man.

With uplifted eyes gazing upon the glory of heaven, we often ask, "Who shall ascend into the hill of the Lord? or who shall stand in his holy place?" And when Jehovah sends back the answer, "He that sweareth to his own hurt and changeth not," we may justly pause and consider well our act before breaking any promise, covenant, or oath we have taken.

Let us pause before this Scripture and learn its true meaning. Does it teach that if we have sworn to do a wicked act, we must do it to enjoy the favor of God? Mark well its utterance. It does not say he that sweareth to the hurt of truth, justice, civil and religious liberty and changeth not, shall have a seat in heaven and hear the sweet music of angelic song. But it does say, he that sweareth to his own hurt and still adheres to his engagement, does a noble act for which he shall be permitted to enter the joy of the Lord and stand among the redeemed in glory.

Albert Barnes in his interpretation of this passage says:

"If the thing itself is wrong; if he has made a promise, or pledged himself to do a wicked thing, he cannot be under obligation to do it; he should at once abandon it; but he is not at liberty to violate an agreement simply because it will be a loss to him, or because he ascertains that it will not be, as supposed, to advantage."

According to the sentiment of these words no one ought to keep a promise or oath that necessitates wrong doing.

Rev. A. J. Howe, D.D., professor in Bates Theological Seminary, Lewiston, Me., says:

"When men have become bound by solemn oaths to commit crime, they have no right to do it. They are under the highest obligation to break that oath and stop the progress of sin. The oath is sin, to execute it is sin, to abrogate the oath is a virtue."

The late Joseph Haven, D.D., L.L.D., professor in the Theological Seminary, Chicago, Ill., and in Amherst College, says on this topic:

"Suppose, for example, I have promised to do what is in itself unlawful—to commit crime, to lie, to steal, to commit murder, or in any way to violate the laws of society or the laws of God—am I under obligation to keep such a promise? Unquestionably not. There can be no obligation on any man to do wrong. It is a contradiction of terms to say that a man ought to do what he ought not to do. In case the unlawfulness of the act contemplated was known at the time of the promise was made, then the promise itself was a guilty one, and the sooner it is broken the better. The guilt of such promises, it has been well said, lies not in the breaking, but in the making.

"In the case the unlawfulness was not known, but the thing promised was, at the time, supposed to be lawful, this supposed lawfulness was manifestly an implied condition of the promise; and a failure of the condition implies a failure of the obligation. The promise is to be taken in its plain and obvious intent; and if there was no intention to do a wrong act, no promise to do a known wrong, of course there is no obligation in the promises.

"This was the case with Herod, whose promise was to give his daughter whatever she might ask; but who in making that promise, had no thought of her asking what she did. In taking the life of John the Baptist under such circumstances, that ruler committed the crime of murder in order to avoid breaking a promise which in reality he never made; and which, if made, he had not only no obligation, but no right to keep. In like manner a promise obtained by any misrepresentation or fraud on the part of the person receiving the promise, is not binding, when such fraud or misrepresentation is discovered, inasmuch as the condition on which the promise was made proves false."

Dr. Wayland, late President of Brown University; Dr. J. J. Butler, Professor in Theological Seminary, Hillsdale, Michigan; Dr. J. Fullonton, Professor in the Theological Seminary, Lewiston, Maine, with others of equal repute for learning and piety, advocate the same doctrine. Mr. Wayland says: "The duty of every one who has placed himself under any such obligation is at once to confess his fault, to declare himself free from his engagement, and endeavor to persuade others to do the same."

And certainly the teaching of these holy men is established by the Scriptures. For most assuredly they teach to render acceptable service to the Lord we must separate ourselves from all alliances with sinful associations and break all contracts with iniquity. 2. Cor. 6: 14–18.

Moreover they teach that to receive pardon we must repent, making such confessions as the nature of our sin demands with faith in our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

In the light of these truths let us proceed to the examination of Masonic oaths. May the Holy Spirit enlighten our minds and the love of God pervade our hearts, that we may perceive their true character, learn our duty, and receive strength to do it.

[CONCLUDED NEXT WEEK.]

Secret Societies not for God's People.

The most or all of the secret orders of the day are founded and carried along on worldly principles. As such the sanctified are compelled to judge them.

They each have a partial list of good morals, but are in no wise true and proper religious societies. And some of them admit or condone things against common morality and religion. Let us briefly consider these bodies, from the standpoint of holiness.

1. Whatever they may be to the unsaved, to the holy they are unnecessary. They are bolstered out of proportion by their secrecy; but the srnctified find no charm in mere secrecy. A holy taste palls on such a diet. It is a base basis, with an unreal superstructure.

2. The unconverted may require them as social pastimes. We do not. We do not eschew sociability with our neighbors, but a secret hotbed for it is unnecessary. The temperance organizations, untrue to their stated mission, are frequently the scenes of quarrels. And surely, if a man wants a wife—a sanctified companion—it is unnecessary to go to the lodge to find her. Of some of the more serious orders it may be said, that even if holy men do not utterly discard them, there is such an unholy social atmosphere connected therewith, and the ceremonies and regalia are so repugnant to their feelings, that they rarely or never go near them.

3. If the irreligious think they have time for these weekly conclaves, the purified certainly have not.

4. If the worldling wants to make a savings-bank of a lodge, or use it as a life insurance company, the sanctified have no need; they are already insured for both worlds.

5. Many of these orders are composed to a great extent of immoral men. It is not so much matter what they do, if they only do not injure each other. In this view, they are really dangerous to general society and to good government. Justice has frequently been thwarted because criminals were unlawfully aided by members of the lodge. And in the church, ministers are, in many cases, appointed to their work by the favoritism of Masonry, rather than by merit. So we have good reason to believe.

6. The oaths taken in secret orders are not fit to be taken. This is so simply because they are unknown to the candidate who is to take them. In courts of justice the oath is well known. It is doubtful if any general description beforehand of these secret obligations is sufficient, in any lodge. In some of these orders the oaths may well be termed horrid in their terms. They are also taken outside of civil authority, and are unnecessary, irreligious, and even profane. Having had experience in Masonry, we know whereof we affirm.—Christian Harvester, Cleveland, Ohio.

"Sublime Indifference to His Defection."

These are the very words used by the Congregational organ of Vermont, referring to a man who announced a belief in un-Congregational doctrines, and still goes on preaching in Congregational pulpits just the same as if nothing had happened.

Now this is the fault of the age: It is to say one thing and do quite another. It was the fault of the Pharisees. Whence does this bad habit come? It is utterly void of principle, of Christianity and of manliness. It pervades our politics; it pervades our business; our social life; our religion.

We Anti-masons have insisted that this doubled-facedness comes from the teachings of that devil's church, the Masonic lodge. That church has become the ruling church in the United States.

No scholar, or really pious man can thoroughly examine into the character of the Masonic lodge without being convinced that it is a wicked burlesque on the Christian religion. The respect which it pays to the Christian religion is like that which Herod, the Roman soldiers, and the ministers of the Pharisees paid to the Saviour at his trial before Pilate. It is blasphemy enacted as a farce. Its reverence is a mockery, its spirit infidelity expressed in allegory and symbols. It is infinitely more wicked than any personal sin ever committed. It teaches the art of doing seeming good deeds for the purpose of accomplishing bad ends, thus reversing the providence of God which overrules bad deeds for good ends. The personal errors or faults of a Congregational preacher are infinitely less harmful than the wickedness of Freemasonry. It is a wilful relapse into paganism, blindfolding the eyes to shut out the light, while it gives to compasses and squares and leather aprons the attributes of God.

The Vermont Congregational editor is very fervid against a preacher who entertains ideas of religion differing from the usually received doctrines of the Congregational church. He says that such a preacher is "sublimely indifferent to his defection." But he says nothing about a man who, while outwardly professing Congregationalism, is secretly practicing the abominable, idolatrous arts of the Masonic lodge. He is almost indignant against a preacher who is sublimely indifferent to the purity of Congregationalism, while he himself is stultifyingly indifferent towards the encroachments of Freemasonry on the purity of the Christian religion.

Reader, do you suspect the secret of this stultifying indifference? The editor of the Vermont Congregational organ is said to be a Freemason, who, as editor, teaches religion and honesty, but as a professor of hidden arts teaches burlesque and knavery. He wears two faces himself, but refuses them to others. He has a Grand Lodge above over which he holds the keys, like the Pope, and into which he admits a select few of Jews, infidels, rumsellers and bad defective Christians, while he objects to a preacher abolishing a lodgement below for other classes of men who do not belong to the Masonic lodge.

Thirty or forty years ago there was no community in the world that stood higher for moral integrity, political honesty, social confidence and generous manliness than Vermont. It was Anti-masonic to the very core. But no community can long preserve these qualities if it allows itself to be governed by such teachings as those of the Vermont Congregational editor. He could not teach such stultifying sophistries, nor could the political leaders of the State practice them, as they have done of late years, if nine-tenths of the people did not remain "sublimely indifferent" and apathetic towards them, as they unfortunately do. No people who suffer themselves to become subordinate to the Masonic lodge can long preserve their liberties. Their sovereignty plays fast and loose: it is enthroned upon two stools, between which it must come to the ground.

VERMONTER.

Force of Instinct.

BY ENOCH HONEYWELL.

Fifty-five years ago a certain two-year-old boy saw his mother planting a favorite bean which she told him had very peculiar properties in it, and extoled its inherent virtues so lavishly that he resolved to take such measures as would solve its hidden mystery. So when his mother was out of sight he dug up and broke open the wonderful bean, and all his marveling curiosity vanished at once like a morning dream, and the boy was at rest.

This same useful and native propensity is just what God implanted in man for a noble purpose, when he breathed into him the breath of life and thus made him a living soul.

This soul, when it realizes its native birth-right, knows that it has a divine right, not only to solve every mystery within its reach, but to help dis-solve every giant vice that Satan sends into either high places or into dark places.

Now, fellow citizens, this serious question—this national question—yes, this Gospel question—stands out boldly before us, clothed in all its heavenly authority and demands our practical answer; namely, shall we any longer either stupidly or wilfully withhold the knowledge of danger from our grown boys? and thus cause them to ignorantly pay $15 or $50 to "most worshipful masters," and to "grand high priests," to first blind fold them and then lay Masonic light before them. Now you and I can give them all that light free, and let them read it with their eyes open. We now let our innocent sons get roped into dens, where they are bound for life in horrible death penalties to never tell—even their loving wives—what crimes or conspiracies are there perpetrated.

My friends, let us like true fathers, tell our sons just what is done in those sly dens—for we know it by the testimony of thousands of good ex-Masons. Then our boys will not pay $15 to get the puzzling bean broken open—this bane of Gospel law—for it would then contain no supposed mystery, except to the ignorant.

The present mayor of Hoopeston, Ill., can tell you who broke open that bean, and also that that boy was never again cheated by a boasting bean merely because it pretended to be bloated with mystery.

The Sermon.

FAITH AND WORKS.

Preached in the College church, Wheaton, Ill., Sabbath morning, May 25th, 1879, by Prof. C. A. Blanchard.

TEXT.—"And Jesus seeing their faith said unto the sick of the palsy: 'Son, be of good cheer, thy sins be forgiven thee.'" Matt. 9:2.

We cannot too strongly emphasize the need of a living faith in God and his word. Men are constantly falling from social eminence and intellectual power to shame and ruin because they lack it. It is only by faith that one lays hold of an arm that is strong enough to bear him up amid the billows of life's ocean. There is no other fountain which can supply the thirsty soul in the great desert of the world. Our danger just at present is, not the lack of persons who profess to have this confidence, but of those who really have it. This is a point on which self-deception is easy, and deception of the world possible; but God is neither deceived nor mocked and without faith it is impossible to please him.

His penetrating eye glances down through creed and confession and outward show to see the heart. If this is right, all is right; if it is wrong, nothing is so. We look sometimes at good, upright men of the world; men who are kind to their families and neighbors, who pay their debts and hold a full open hand to the poor; who are first-rate fellows and it seems as if their lives must be pleasing to God. At least more pleasing than the life of some poor man, who, a victim to every vice, wrecked and a ruin body and soul, staggers blaspheming down to the horrible pit. And perhaps if human lives were isolated and alone such would be the case. Considered simply as pictures the first is far more pleasing than the last. But in their results who dare say that such is the case. We are not alone. We are links in the great chain of humanity. We take hold of the past and the future. What the past has been (largely) we are; what we become, the future will be. No man liveth unto himself and no man dieth to himself. We live to God or Satan; and as we live, others will. Hence we can see that any life which has not its source of action in a living faith in God is a bad life. If it be base and sensual, it is repulsive to God and man. If it be outwardly all right, but inwardly selfish, it may be agreeable to man, but it is offensive to God; for what is highly esteemed among men is an abomination to him. We need often to remember that man's influence for harm is gone when he gets to the bottom of the ladder. It is while surrounded by wealth and friends and imitators that he he is powerful for evil. Without faith it is impossible to please God. You may have all but this one thing; you may be admired, praised, worshiped by men, but so long as you lack it you cannot please God.

FAITH EVEN IN THE WEAK PLEASES HIM.

Parents do not rejoice in their children in proportion to their strength, but in proportion to their love. The stalwart, broad-chested young man who is so wise and so capable that he does seem able to treat his father and mother with civility, is not the one who pleases his parents best. It is the one who is much weaker in body, perhaps in mind as well, but who is strong in his trust and love, to whom the love of their hearts goes out in ceaseless streams of affection. Now God is our Father, and when we humbly adore and trust him, no matter how weak and helpless we are, his strength supplements our weakness, his wisdom supplies our lack, and he is pleased with us for our faith's sake. The Lord taketh pleasure in them that fear him, in those that hope in his mercy. As Moody says, we make a great mistake in trying to get great and strong enough to do the Master's work. It is not strength which he wants but trustful weakness. Bethlehem, little among the thousands of Israel gives birth to the Leader and Captain of God's great army. The jaw bone of an ass is a rude weapon but in the hands of Samson it was fearfully destructive. Gideon's host was stronger at three hundred than at thirty-two thousand. Luther came from a miner's hut; Zwingle was born in a shepherd's cabin; Melancthon's home was a blacksmith shop, and the greatest of all the presidents of the United States, and he whose fame will longest withstand the gnawing tooth of time, was cradled in the rude cabin of a Kentucky poor white. God chooses the weak things to confound the mighty. Great is the power of a humble faith.

FAITH WITHOUT WORKS IS DEAD.

But while all this is true and much more that you can easily imagine, and which it would take long to say, it is also true that God requires us to be co-workers with him. If I pray for the coming of his kingdom but fail to exert myself, his kingdom will surely come, but it will not be in answer to my prayers. The Greeks had it right: The wagoner must put his own shoulder to the wheel before he cries to Hercules. We must not pray that God will destroy all systems of evil and be afraid to say, and to say so that men will understand what we mean, dramshop, lodge, sectism and tobacco. These and all other strongly entrenched evils laugh at generalities and at a faith that is content with them. It is the specific indictment that ploughs them through and through.

A court that should issue a general order to all thieves and murderers, to the effect that they should inflict upon themselves the penalties due to their crimes, would possess the wisdom of Solomon compared with those good brethren who imagine that they are to overturn the power of Satan over men by general denunciation of sin.

So if I pray for bread I must labor. True faith is industrious, energetic and busy and kind. Paul says that if he has all faith and no charity, it would do no good, and this is true, but no one ever had faith under such circumstances. Faith and works go hand in hand through the world. They are Siamese twins. If you kill faith, works will die; if works is feeble, faith will be in poor health. The men who say that they have faith and do nothing are mistaken; they have neither one nor the other.

CHRIST READS THE HEART.

In the preceding chapter two men are said to have come to him, one saying, "I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest." The other, "I will follow, but suffer me first to go bury my father." The Lord did not hesitate, he saw that the first was a shallow case, and that the other was more tenacious but slow to move. He checked the first and spurred the second. The son of man has not so much as fox or bird, he said to the one; Let the dead bury the dead but go thou and preach the gospel, to the second. So in this case he saw that it was no foolish curiosity, nor wavering hope that had led those men to tear up the roof and let down the friend. It was a genuine Jacob trust that knew an answer was possible and earnestly struggled for it.

But the Lord saw more than the sick man. He saw more than the trouble; he saw the cause of the trouble. A man called to the bedside of the sick feels the pulse, looks at the tongue, tests the lungs and asks all about the symptoms. The great physician made no inquiries, but at a single glance read the whole case and its causes. He saw the long years of sin; the refusal of restraints, the disregard of parents, the neglect of temperance, and then the melancholy wreck of a man that lay stretched on the cot before him.

Seeing the man's trouble and its cause, he desired to relieve the pain and distress, but more to take away the causes that induced it, and hence while men would have been considering the relative merits of outward and inward applications; of blood purifiers, movement cures and electricity, Jesus forgave his sins. Thus did he at once lay the ax at the root of the tree instead of attempting to remedy a bad matter by half curing it. Some physicians give large quantities of opium under one form or another. Others endeavor to cure cancers by outward applications. This is not the method by which Christ heals men. He makes present relief a subordinate, ultimate health the principal aim. He first forgives the sin and then heals the palsy.

ALL THINGS EASY TO GOD.

Another blessed truth clearly taught here is that one thing is quite as easy to God as another. To say one thing is like saying another and to say is with him to do. How this thought should quiet our complainings. Have you come to God with your trouble and asked for help which has not come. Is it money you want, or health, or friends, or success. One thing is as easy with God as another. But all things being equally easy he will give to you the very best that you will receive. He will not relieve a present want and leave you staggering under a load of sin. Beginning away down in your heart, perhaps there is already the washing and cleansing that is the answer to your prayer. Oftentimes there come up to overshade our lives vast clouds like that which this morning filled all the heavens. We pray, "Lord take away the cloud." But so long as we gaze it keeps its inky blackness and now and then gusts of wind dash the heavy drops of rain in our faces. At last we tire of looking at the storm and turn our eyes upon our hearts. We find a growing hatred of sin, a growing love of God and man, we submit to the will of our Divine Master and we finally say, "Lord, stay by me, and I care not how thick the clouds may be." But no sooner have we said the words than looking up we find the clouds all gone, the sun shining and the birds singing from every tree. Oh storm-tossed and afflicted one, thy prayers are neither unheard nor unheeded. The one who listens to the ravens when they call and who gives ear to the young lions when they cry and seek their meat from God, surely marks every sigh and treasures every tear and gives you better than you seek; sins forgiven first; hearts sanctified and then temporal blessings; this is the order of God's providence.

BELIEVING AND WORKING.

These men at their home believed that Christ was able and willing to cure their friend. This was faith and it was a commendable thing. They had good reason to believe this, but so had, and so have multitudes of persons reasons for believing, who still refuse to do so. Believing however, wrought no cure, they had faith, but this faith was valuable only when it led to appropriate works. They carried him to Jesus. He was in the house; a crowd was around the doors; it looked as though for the present at least their mission was a failure. Not so thought they. Up to the top of the house they clamber and then tearing up the roof, lower their friend before the Lord. Here we have faith and works. The answer comes not precisely as they had expected, but it comes and the paralytic takes up his bed and walks out of the house before them all.

Note second, that Jesus saw their faith, that was the thing that interested him. Not their faces, nor their apparel, nor their words or works but their faith. Just so, reading our hearts to-day the thing which is his first and great care is to know that we have faith in his love and power. As there goes up from our hearts some petition to his throne, the question which he asks is: "Believest thou that I am able to do this?" If he sees a "Yea Lord" written within us he will answer, "Son, be of good cheer thy sins be forgiven thee," and when the time has come he will also say: "Be it unto thee according as thou wilt."

God gives his children the best he has. One difference between people of culture and those who, ignorant and rude come to wealth and social position is evidenced in nothing more clearly than in dress and gifts. The man who is born to power is easy about his place; he takes it as a right and is not anxious to assert it. The plebeian who by greedy and avaricious years or some sudden turn in fortune's wheel is placed on the pinnacle betrays his low birth and nature by every move. The first is quiet, grave and sober in attire. The gifts which he gives his children will be solid, useful and not always showy. The second will be loud and extravagant in attire and deal in pinchbeck and flimsy flashing gifts to his children. Now God is a king. Not a king of yesterday who shall be toppled from his throne to-morrow, but a monarch whose wide domains stretch from side to side of the vast universe, and whose reign extends from everlasting to everlasting. Perfectly able as he is to reach out his hand and take from earth or air or stars the thing that he wishes, he gives his children in every case the very best thing which they are qualified to receive. The wise parent does not give an infant a hammer and a looking glass, and God gives not always what we want, but, if we are his children, he gives us always what we need. No good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly. This is a text which is to be taken literally and in its widest scope. There is nothing which will tend to the eternal well being of his children which our Father keeps back from them.

WE NEED TO REALIZE THIS.

We know that these things are true but many times we fail to derive from them the comfort which they should bring to our hearts. We do not realize them, We think that we love God and walk uprightly, but it seems as if God kept back many good things from us. If we fully understood that he had given us everything that was best for us at the present, and that he would continue to do so until the very end of life, what would become of these troops of jackal anxieties and cares that now howl around our path and follow at our heels? They would hurry out of sight and hearing as wolves from the abodes of men when morning streaks the east. Our troubles are the result of distrust. God keeps those in perfect peace who put their trust in him, but those who make any created arm their confidence are doomed to disappointment. When Jesus sees our faith he says, "Son, be of good cheer." When he sees our unbelief he says, "He that doubteth is condemned." Since then God so delights in the loving confidence of his children, let us trust and rejoice in him more and more fully until we shall see him in his glorious beauty and reign with him forever and ever.

Reform News.

Among the Mountains.

Albany Vt., May 26, 1879.

Dear Bro. Kellogg:—A second lecture in the town hall at Hardwick was fairly attended, though the Masons all kept away. The present and former pastors of the M. E. church were present, and evidently sympathized with us in our work. Much credit is due to Bro. F. F. French, who has stood alone here a valiant soldier for the right.

On the 22d I took the cars for Greensboro; did not meet the man who was to take me to my appointment; started on foot, took the wrong road and walked over eight miles to get less than three. Weary and footsore I met nothing but resistance and abuse. There is a strong Masonic lodge here composed of the worst men in the vicinity, and all the people submit to their rule. There is a United Presbyterian church here but its members do not live in the village, and the pastor was gone. The Congregational church once had a rule excluding Masons, but this they afterwards modified so as to require any Masons who belonged to the church to attend the social and church meetings rather than the lodge, when both were at the same time. It was intimated that a certain Mason would join the church if this was repealed. For his sake it was repealed, and he did not join, but one of the best members withdrew. Good Dea. Cummins sent for some copies of Finney on Masonry, which he gave away and sold a few. For this he was arrested for peddling without license, and fined one hundred dollars. It cost him two hundred. Good pastor Wiley raised up a standard against the deism of the lodge and they drove him away. The present pastor says he is opposed to secret societies, but was afraid to pray in my meeting. I spoke in a very dirty hall to a few people, but I felt that the Lord was with me and good was done. I found a a friend who kindly entertained me, and next morning walked five miles through as grand and beautiful scenery as I ever beheld.

Greensboro village is at the foot of Lake Beautiful (rightly named) and here the water tumbles down into Lamoille River and runs a rapid course to Lake Champlain. As I walked over the hills, the snow-covered mountains rose up before me, and the fields were smiling in all the glory of spring. What a grand and beautiful land! Yes, Jesus will possess it. His kingdom will come and his will be done here, as it is done in heaven.

At East Craftsbury I met a most kind reception from pastor J. C. Taylor of the Reformed Presbyterian church, and though his family were sick he did everything to aid me and make me comfortable. In the evening I spoke in the church to a small but attentive audience, nor did brother T. forget the wants of the future. By his kindness I was taken to South Albany, where, at the house of Rev. Wm. Ellis, pastor of the Wesleyan church, I got about as near the top of the mountains as people often live, and had a grand view of Mt. Mansfield, still robed in snow. Bro. Ellis and his people are in hearty sympathy with our work and were glad to have me spend the Sabbath, preach and lecture. He wished to take his team out of the field and carry me six miles to West Albany, but I resisted and walked There I found welcome and rest with Rev. F. Pearce, one of the earliest subscribers for your paper. Here Rev. Mr. Chapin, pastor of the Congregational church, kindly invited me to preach on the religion of Masonry on Sabbath at 6 P. M., and the pastor of the M. E. church consented to read the notice. Accordingly I stayed till Sabbath morning, went to S. Albany, preached twice in the Wesleyan church, returned and spoke to a good, large and attentive congregation in the Congregational church. A number of Masons, and more who wished to be, were present, and though I had aimed to be as careful and conciliatory as possible, yet their wrath was greatly stirred. I had profaned the Sabbath and the house of God. They were terribly shocked, and it is the young pastor who is considered as especially to blame. It was voted that I lecture again tonight, but it is possible that the church will be closed against me. Nevertheless good seed has been sown and will grow. On Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, D. V., I shall speak in the Wesleyan church at S. Albany, and go from thence to Rygate and so southward.

Yours in the Lord,

H. H. HINMAN.

ELDER RATHBUN AND THE MOURNERS OF FAYETTE COUNTY, IOWA.

ELGIN, Iowa, May 27, 1879.

It is human to mourn the loss of departed friends, especially those we love. Love for kindred "fellows" and associations is not confined to any one class of society, but extends to all humanity. The "bandit" used to many a foul deed at midnight, feels and mouras the loss of him who was brother in his crime. And although the people rejoice to know that society is at last freed from his midnight schemes of villainy, yet those who clasped his hand and called him brother comment upon his departure with sadness. Under similar circumstances and with alike feeling do "mourners" (Masons) go about the streets of some of the towns of Fayette Co., Iowa. And while the people rejoice at the expesure of (Masonic) wickedness and the unveiling of schemes of villainy which have caused the land to be "filled with violence," and the people to say "there is no God," the mourners "who have committed fornication and lived deliciously" with her (the lodge), and "which were made rich by her," "weep and mourn" and bewail her fall. The setting-maul of Jebulum in the hands of D. P. Rathbun brought her from a "living perpendicular" to a "dead level," and the anxiety and grief of her friends is intensified by the fact that over her grave is inscribed in letters too plain to be unobserved, "No Resurrection."

On the evening of May 5th Bro. Rathbun worked the third degree here in Elgin. A good audience was present, and although he had worked the degree here before more good was accomplished by the repetition than was accomplishd by the first exposition, the people being better prepared to receive the truth. Several of the fraternity here are quite free to acknowledge the truthfulness of the expositions, and are a severe "thorn in the flesh" to the "faithful" who endeavor by all lawful Masonic means (which includes lying and deception of every degree and character) to "always conceal and never reveal."

The evenings of May 6th, 7th and 8th were spent at

BRUSH CREEK.

The cause has some staunch supporters here, among whom are the pastor of the U. B. church, Bro. R. D. McCormack, in whose house the lectures were given; and Mr. Morley, who is well known to the readers of the Cynosure.

The expositions were well attended, the interest good, and the truth kindly received. There is a Masonic lodge here with a membership of about forty, so we are informed. Bro. McCormack is a live, out-spoken man, who looks well after the affairs of Christ's kingdom. The position he took after witnessing the working of the degrees was truly straight for truth and is truly commendable to the true Christian minister. To "have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them" is to be governed by God's word and not by the world.

Bro. Rathbun's work here was excellent, and the fairness with which he presented his subject was sufficient to convince an honest unprejudiced mind.

On the evening of the 9th we took our way to

VOLGA CITY.

This is a perfect hot-bed of secresy. The majority of the male population are either Masons, Odd-fellows or Workingmen; so we are informed. Bro. Rathbun worked the 3rd degree in the Union church to a full house. The fraternity were well represented, none attempted to reply. All were "speechless."

The pastor of one of the churches here is a Mason. He has a son, a bright lad, who, being more desirous of "light" than the parental stem, attended the exposition. At its close he approached Bro. R. and said, "Sir, do you say that every man who is made a Master Mason has to pass through what the candidate has passed through tonight?"

"I do, sir."

"Well, sir; I shall go to father and put the question squarely to him whether or no he did."

Now which is the highest obligation resting on this minister, to the lodge or to his family? How will he answer the boy?

The fraternity did not seem to realize the situation until after the lecture and now the mourners go through the streets "casting dust on their heads, weeping and wailing," saying, If that man ever returns to further disturb our quietude we will certainly cast eggs at his perjured form and cause him hastily "to depart from our coasts," and will shout at his retreating shadow, "What city is like unto this great city!" For "no man buyeth our merchandise any more," and "in one hour is so great riches come to naught."

Leaving at low twelve in a carriage we hastened to return to Elgin, a distance of 18 or 20 miles, in order to meet the engagement at on Saturday evening. Here Bro. Rathbun lectured to a fair congregation in the school-house. After exposing the teachings of the institution in regard to its religious character, and while attempting to show its inconsistency with Christianity, he was assailed by—it is the truth—a--believe me and cast no reflections—a woman!! who instantly gave him to understand that there we two sides to the question. The thrusts she gave him were more than his feeble heart could bear and so quietly saying, "I have never quarrelled with my own wife, and grace helping me, I never will with another man's," the lecture closed. On Sunday evening he delivered a lectured on the Religion of Freemasonry, in the U. B. church in Elgin. Bro. Zabrisky, the pastor, is a zealous worker for the Lord, and is in full sympathy with the refrom. As may be expected the minions of the devil with their pack of lies are arrayed against him.

A great amount of good has been accomplished by Bro. R's labors here. Brethren don't be afraid of agitation. God bless Bro. Rathbun.

BRUSH CREEK AGAIN.

May 26, 1879.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I wish to inform you and the readers of the Cynosure that the people of this place have been favored with a visit from Rev. D. P. Rathbun. He came here May 6th as previously announced, and in the evening he lectured on the subject of speculative Freemasonry, also working the first degree. This meeting was held in the United Brethren church, it being filled to its utmost capacity, hundreds sitting in the pews while there were crowds remaining on their feet, the masses looking and listening with eager interest to catch every word and see every sign given by the speaker, except an occasional croaker who would sit in a corner his face hidden for shame. Thus passed the first evening's exercises, and as the crowd was dispersing many were heard to say, "If that is Freemasonry I want nothing to do with it;" while others thanked God that Freemasonry with its evils and horrid oaths was being exposed to the world, thus making its evils plain so the good everywhere may become disgusted with it.

On the evening of the 7th at a very early hour persons were seen coming from every direction for a distance of twelve miles. The church was packed literally full and it really seemed as if the people far and near were intent on hearing the truth with reference to the God-

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

SHILOH, Ia., May 27, 1879.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I see in the Cynosure of last week that Washington, D. C., is spoken of as the place to hold the next National Convention oft he N. C. A., and Bro. Stoddard asks, "What do you say, friends?" I will assume that I am one of the friends referred to and will answer to the question, I say hold it at Washington city if at all possible. I think the reasons assigned by the friend in that city are good and sufficient to take the city at that time. Trusting in God and going forward in the name and strength of the Captain of our salvation we have nothing to fear. I think that the conventions should be held as far as possible in the cities, the larger the better. Now I would insist on an answer to Bro. Stoddard's question at once from all interested, so that that matter can be settled as soon as possible, and the work of preparation entered upon early, and by the help of God it might be the best convention we have held.

JOHN DORCAS.

MY EXCUSE.

I see in the Cynosure of May 8 a communication from Rev. J P. Stoddard in relation to my delinquency, etc., relative to the Nebraska State meeting. Will you permit me in reply to give the following facts: I attended the session of the East Nebraska Annual Conferences U. B. in Christ, April 3, etc., 1879, and on the 4th of April arranged with Rev. S. Austin and others to return to Kearney the next week, and to communicate to Bro. A. immediately the names, etc., of lecturers and speakers to be in attendance; he to engage the hall and advertise the meeting. Monday morning, April 7th, I was taken violently ill at the house of W. H. Frast, Clay, Co., and was barely able to meet the quarterly meeting April 12th, and only reached home Monday, April 14th: found a letter from Bro. Stoddard and a card from Elder Rathbun. I answered Rathbun and wrote a letter to Austin immediately as the following card will show:

FAIRMOUNT, Neb., May 6, 1879.
BRO. SPOONER:—Bros. Stoddard and Rathbun came, but I had not got your letter as you put it in the office without direction and so it went to the dead letter office and only reached me after the convention, etc. Yours,

S. AUSTIN.

The above happened in this way: I live some eight miles from the postoffice, and in this instance had no letter envelopes, hence I wrote some dozen or more letters and took them to the office, bought envelopes and in directing them inadvertently put that letter into the postoffice as stated.

I attended the quarterly meeting Sunday, April 28th, some thirty miles from York intending to be at York, and on Monday morning at the house of Joel Ward, in Hamilton county, I was taken violently ill and remained so for several days. I sent a card to the address of Bros. Austin, Stoddard and Rathbun, to York, stating this fact and offering to be financially responsible to more than my full share and bidding them God speed. I fear they did not get it.

I ask a place for this and will say in behalf of Bro. Snyder, that I saw him a few days since on my way home and he says circumstances beyond his control prevented his being present. He joins me in a determination, God willing, to do better next time.

Yours,
W. S. SPOONER.

"MORGANIZE HIM."

THE TRUE SPIRIT OF MASONRY.

LEESVILLE, Mo., May 21, 1879.

Having often to meet the charge, "You are only a book Mason," and wishing additional Masonic evidence to the contrary, I had a friend write to the secretary of Worthington Lodge, No. 69, Worthington, Ind., and tell him of my course here in regard to Masonry, and ask him if such a man as John V. Baker ever took the degrees in Worthington Lodge, and also what should be done with such a person. Here is his reply:

WORTHINGTON, May 12, 1879.

I received yours a few days ago, and I have taken some time to examine the records of the lodge, and I find that John V. Baker was duly initiated October 11, 1867; passed Nov. 8, 1867, and raised Dec. 13, 1867. His name appears on our books up to Jan. 1, 1869, since that time I can find no account of him on the books. Some of our members think that he moved away and did not let the lodge know where, and his name was dropped to save Grand Lodge dues.

The answer to your last question, the verdict is here, to Morganize him.

I will state that I read your communication in open lodge and was directed to answer as I thought best after searching the record.

DANIEL RIGGS, Secretary
Worthington Lodge, No. 69, F. & A. M. Masons.

This is a verbatim copy of the secretary's letter and shows the true spirit of Masonry referred to by Rev. Wilcox in his letter to friend Boyd which you published lately. I thank God that our lecturers have none of this spirit and therefore they will never bring out the true spirit of Masonry, but will content themselves with simply exposing its spirit and workings, that others may be kept from the influence of its spirit.

JOHN V. BAKER.

A CORRECTION.

WILBUR, Oregon, May 14, 1879.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—I sent you a short communication last March, in which a statement was made in regard to the death of one of our best citizens, I. B. Smith. I was informed to-day by his brother, who was in attendance at his last moments and heard his last words, that no such expression was made by him as I reported. Also that my informants were not present at the time and that they got their information from the common talk in the community. "To err is human; to forgive, divine," and it affords me pleasure to correct any error, and to add that it was no intention on my part to misrepresent any one. I am also informed that the ill-feeling in the lodge was a business affair against the Master and two other members of the order. Hence his request to be buried by the citizens and his choice of ministers to officiate at his funeral was Rev. Hull Tower, an aged and much honored local minister of the M. E. church. I will add my main object was to admonish those who believe they can work out their souls salvation by strict adherence to the laws and rules of the lodge, as I know many who believe this doctrine to be safe, and if I have awakened a proper interest on this point I shall be more than satisfied. F. R. HILL.

THE BANNER OF HOLINESS.

A letter was sent lately to that paper in which the strangeness of what seems to be like a marriage or union of holiness and Freemasonry was questioned by the correspondent. (For reply see Cynosure, May 15th.) For a Mason who has not renounced Masonry, and confessed the sin; and turning from it, warning others; for a Mason that does not do this, and do it with such unmistakable clearness and certainty as to remove all doubts, is apparently very much like those who said of Jesus, "We know thee who thou art, the Holy One of God." They were confessing Christ. Jesus stopped them, and made a public expose of their wicked worthlessness, and told them to come out of their habitation. Let Masonic devils hold their peace, and come out of the human souls, and we shall then have no uncertain sound.

First pure, then peaceable. What we want is God's order—not peaceable, and then pure, not holy, and then pure. To hold to Christ and preach holiness on the one hand, and to Masonry on the other, seems like the poor sailor in the storm, whom the captain observed praying awhile to God and then awhile to the devil, and when the captain called his attention to the strangeness of his conduct, answered that he was not exactly certain into whose hands he should fall, and he thought it a good plan to be on good terms with both of them.

The Banner says that "when occasion has demanded," its testimony has been against secretism. Now that is a very vague term. It appears that a sixteen degree Master Mason preaching holiness is enough to quiet the demand for the Banner's utterances against this Christ-denying religion of Baal. "Our work," says the Banner, "is to enforce holiness." Here is what perplexed its correspondent to know how to graft holiness on to Masonry, as it appears in several instances. It may be a secret, but the correspondent wanted to know how it was possible that the pure religion of Jesus Christ could be grafted on to a stock of heathen Baal. I do not know as it can be done. But we are told by way of a quieting panacea that these men have left the Masons, they attend the lodge no more. I suppose when occasion does not require. We are not informed that Masonry has left them, and until they so forcibly enter their protest against it, as to make it let go of them, we are ready to say to their professions and preaching of holiness, "Lord increase our faith."

The Banner says, "We oppose all sin, not any particular form of sin only." This reminds us of the soldier who in battle fires wild, and his comrade seeks to steady him, and points in the right direction where the strength of the enemy is, and receives the reply, "O, never mind, I don't fire at anything in particular; I fire at all alike; I oppose all fighting, and all fighting is sin; I want peace." He fires into the air and everywhere, and the enemy laughs. For his weapons do not reach their vital parts.

In proof of this, a sixteen degree Knight Templar, to whom I made the remark that I had sent an article to the Banner on this subject. He laughed and said, They won't publish it. (He is an advocate and reader of the Banner.) Said he, "their business is to advocate the doctrine of holiness. O, they preach against Masonry occasionally, when they think it necessary, but they are not one idea men; they don't make a specialty of it, and stir every body up. If you would preach against it as they do I would not care any thing about it. But you have filled the country with your tracts and that contemptible Cynosure; and that wasn't enough, you couldn't rest until you had the degrees worked, and I tell you I don't like it much."

Now here is a great personal sin in the oaths and abominations of Masonry, and men and the devil do not like to be stirred up on it. We have in the ministry of the Prophets and of Christ and the Apostles the clearest examples of making a special point of individual sins, and that too in such a forcible, pointed, persistent manner, that it made the individual sinners feel their sinfulness, which in many cases led to a true and hearty repentance. Let the Banner if it is not competent (like the Advance) to affirm the wickedness of Freemasonry, let them no longer be ignorant of the devices of Satan. It is high time to awake out of sleep. The judgment is nearer; and God has said, "Cry aloud, spare not, lift thy voice like a TRUMPET, and show my people [holiness; No ! ! !] their transgressions, and the house of Jacob their sins." JOEL H. AUSTIN.

ILLUSTRATIONS FROM THE COURTS.

PAW PAW, Ill.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—In your last issue D. Countryman's letter appears at, in which he stated that the last court in Oregon, Illinois, the Masons were rejected from the jury. The fact rejoices me much, since it is an instance unheard of before. If this course is faithfully carried out there is more hopes of justice being done in the future.

But what induced me to write is the fact that one of his name, now dead, would, in all probability have been living to-day, and we have reason to believe as a good citizen, if it had not been for Masonry.

The facts in the case are these, as I am informed by a truthful man then living in Rockford, where the case occurred. Mr. C. being in the cattle business, was charged with having cattle that did not belong to him, and the sheriff and his posse being after him, he fired over his shoulder into the crowd, the shot taking effect on the sheriff, who was a Mason. He had a summary trial, and was condemned to be hung on short notice. When the time came a load of Masons came from Chicago to see that he was executed, showing that if the Governor had sent a reprieve they would take the matter into their own hands. Countryman confessed on the gallows that he had no desire to hurt anybody, but his object was to make a consternation in the crowd, that he might not be taken. Now these are the man's dying words, and it is plain that if he could have had a fair trial he could not have been convicted for more than manslaughter.

But my informant said there was another case in the city and about the same time. A certain hotelkeeper's son had a spite against a certain Irishman in the place. As he was standing in the bar-room he saw this man coming along the sidewalk. He, being prepared, said to the bystanders, "Now if you want to see an Irishman die come out here." He accordingly went out and knocked the man down with a club and literally beat his brains out.

Now see the difference in the treatment of the two; the one guilty unwittingly of manslaughter, the other of wilful, premeditated murder, calling witnesses to see it. The young man had a trial and was sentenced to one year's imprisonment, and was pardoned out before the year was gone; and consequently restored to citizenship, enjoying all the rights of the peaceable and law-abiding. Now why all this in the same place and tried by the same court? Only because one was a member of a clan bound together by oaths with horrid penalties, murder and treason not excepted, though they deny it stoutly. But we know that the system was born in lies, reared in lies, and sustained by lies; but, thank God, the thing is weakening daily. Let all take courage that are laboring in the good cause of God, for it appears to me that it is like the letting out of waters that have been long pent up. The leakage may be small at first but like some of the dams in New England, a little dropping in the evening, yet before morning the little fissure has become a chasm and the flood sweeps all opposition. The Lord grant that it may be so in this much needed reform. J. C. Noe.

LESSON XXIV.—June 15, 1879.—THE NEED OF GOD'S SPIRIT.

SCRIPTURE.—Zechariah 4:1-14.

1. And the angel that talked with me came again, and waked me, as a man that is wakened out of his sleep.
2. And said unto me, What seest thou? And I said, I have looked, and behold a candlestick all of gold, with a bowl upon the top of it, and his seven lamps thereon, and seven pipes to the seven lamps, which are upon the top thereof:
3. And two olive trees by it, one upon the right side of the bowl, and the other upon the left side thereof.
4. So I answered and spake to the angel that talked with me, saying, What are these, my lord?
5. Then the angel that talked with me answered and said unto me, Knowest thou not what these be? and I said, No, my lord.
6. Then he answered and spake unto me, saying. This is the word of the Lord unto Zerubbabel, saying, not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord of hosts.
7. Who art thou, O great mountain? before Zerubbabel thou shalt become a plain: and he shall bring forth the headstone thereof with shoutings, crying, Grace, grace unto it.
8. Moreover the word of the Lord came unto me, saying,
9. The hands of Zerubbabel have laid the foundation of this house: his hands shall also finish it; and thou shalt know that the Lord of hosts hath sent me unto you.
10. For who hath despised the day of small things? for they shall rejoice, and shall see the plummet in the hand of Zerubbabel with those seven; they are the eyes of the Lord, which run to and fro throughout the whole earth.
11. Then answered I, and said unto him, What are these two olive trees upon the right side of the candlestick and upon the left side thereof?
12. And I answered again, and said unto him, What be these two olive branches which through the golden pipes empty the golden oil out of themselves?
13. And he answered me and said, Knowest thou not what these be? And I said, No, my lord.
14. Then said he, These are the two anointed ones that stand by the Lord of the whole earth.

CONNECTED HISTORY.

This lesson refers to the fifth of some eight or ten "night visions" recorded by this prophet, and which chiefly form the first part of the Book of Zechariah. These visions represent God's protection and blessing of his people, and his judgment on the wicked. They belong to the time immediately preceding the completion of the second temple by Zerubbabel. The last parts of the book (chaps. 9-14) belong to a period from 10 to 20 years later, and after the temple was completed and dedicated.

NOTES.

Zechariah "Jehovah remembers," a priest born in Babylon, returned while young to Judea, where he prophesied. He was for a time a co-laborer with Haggai. He encouraged the rebuilding of the temple; later he comforts the people with promises of future blessings, even in trials.

Zerubbabel "born at Babel," or Babylon, of the tribe of Judah, and leader of the captives, who returned from Babylon to Jerusalem 536 B. C. He restored the true worship, and, aided and counselled by Haggai and Zechariah, rebuilt the temple, which was completed about 520–515 B. C.

"Book of Zechariah," written and probably arranged by the prophet himself some time after the prophecies were announced. It has been divided into three parts: (1.) The visions, chaps. 1-8; (2.) Word against Damascus, etc., chaps. 9-11; (3.) Word for Israel, chaps. 12-14. Some have tried to maintain that this book was the work of two different prophets, the first portion only being by Zechariah, but their views have not gained support.

"Olive," one of the most common trees of Palestine. The fruit and the oil of the tree are among the most important products of the country. The olive leaf was an emblem of peace, Gen. 8:11; of prosperity, Ps. 52:8; and of beauty and strength. It grows to a medium height, with knotty, gnarled trunks, ash colored bark, and dusty grey green leaves.

"Candlestick." That seen by the prophet probably resembled the one in the temple. For a description of that made by Moses, see Ex. 25:31-37; 17:24.

[From International Quarterly.]

"The Prophet Zechariah, the son of Berachiah, and grandson of Iddo, was probably of the priestly tribe (Neh., 12:4), and returned from Babylon when quite young, with Zerubbabel and Joshua. He began to prophecy about two months after Haggai (Zech. 1:1; Ezra 5:1, 6, 14; Hag. 1:1)," which was the second year and eighth month of Darius, the father of Xerxes (the Ahasuerus of Esther.) These two prophets were the first after the captivity, and did much to encourage the rebuilding of the temple. The work was begun B. C. 536, but was stopped when Cyrus died. In the year 521 B. C. Darius became king, and Haggai and Zechariah doubtless inferred that under a new king they would be permitted to resume the work. It was accordingly recommenced under the lead of Zerubbabel and Joshua; and, although it was interrupted for a short time by Tatnai and his helpers, it was completed B. C. 515. The history of the times is found in Ezra (chaps. 5, 6).

The Book of Zechariah is divided into five parts. 1. Chaps. 1-6; The introduction is given in chap. 1:1-6; then follows the visions which picture Israel and the nations, closing with a promise of Christ the branch. 2. Chaps. 7, 8, contain the true view of their fasts and solemn convocations. 3. Chaps. 9, 10 give us the humbling of Syria, Philistia, Tyre and Sidon; with the salvation of the remnant, and a gleam of the coming day. 4. Chap. 11 is a picture of the Messiah, the staff of Israel, under two aspects, their beauty and their strength both in turn broken, and they given for a time to the false shepherd, Anti-Christ. 5. Chaps. 12-14 tell us of the day of the Lord, when his enemies should be scattered; and blessings shall follow, when the land shall be purified.

Compare with Ex. 25:31-37, Rev. 1:12, 13, 20. What was the first thing at creation? (Gen. 1:3.) What is the first thing in the Gospel? (John 1:4, 5). How does the soul receive light? (Ps. 119:130). What is the order in Ps. 27:1? What did Jesus say in John 8:12? What in Mat. 5:14, 16? (It should read lamps; Christ shines through his people.) What is taught in Rev. 2:1? Phil. 2:15? How was Christ the light of Israel? How is he the light of the soul?

[From Am. S.S. Union Advanced Lessons.]

POINTS FOR SPECIAL STUDY.

1. The time and circumstances under which Zechariah prophesied. 2. The condition of the temple at that time. 3. Obstacles and discouragements in the way of rebuilding it. 4. The golden candlestick in the tabernacle and the temple. 5. Meaning of the two olive trees. 6. Obstacles now in the way of the church. 7. Need of the Spirit of God. 8. Agencies through which the Spirit acts. 9. Meaning of "the headstone." 10. Encouragements for the completion of the spiritual temple. 11. The Bible readings.

PRACTICAL TEACHINGS.

We may learn from this:

1. God has a church in the world. His church is costly in material, living souls; and in workmanship, by God's Spirit.

2. She encounters in all ages much opposition from the world, the devil, and the very evil in her own members. It is like "great mountains." (See Mat. 21:21)

3. But her strength is not in herself but in God. His Spirit is in her (v. 6). That is her power; that gives success to her efforts.

4. But that power is by appointed means. The two anointed ones, Zerubbabel and Joshua, stand for the kingly and priestly offices, which are the channel of blessing to the church. Jesus is in his own person the king and priest (Zech. 6:13; comp. Mat. 28:20).

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JUNE 5, 1879.

Congregationalism and Masonry.

In 1846 the General Congregational Association of Illinois unanimously advised churches to "have no fellowship" with secret societies. In 1866, at Ottawa, Illinois, the Association declared its judgment that Masonry is "hostile to good citizenship and true religion," and "earnestly advised" a separation from it, and in Aurora, 1870, the Association resolved, that the time had come for a united, wise and energetic movement among all disciples of our common Lord and Master to resist the encroachments of the various secret orders. That "movement" was inaugurated at Pittsburgh in 1868, two years before, by the National Christian Association.

But while these and similar resolutions have been affirmed at Farmington, Jacksonville, Rockford and other places, the lodge has been steadily gaining a complete power and mastery over the denomination, as proved by the following facts: The organization of a National Congregational Council with a Freemason of 32° as its only permanent officer, elected and re-elected three times in succession. Rev. F. P. Woodbury has officiated as chaplain or preacher for the Knight Templars in his own church at Rockford, Illinois. Last year the General Association met in Galesburg, Illinois. Some sixty or eighty Congregationalists petitioned the programme committee to provide an essay on secret societies, and Bro. H. Avery, then of Tonica, and others, were suggested to write the same. The petitioners were refused their request. This year, 1879, the Association met in Princeton and the programme committee reported an essay on "The Church and the Lodge" by the Rev. Mr. Anderson of Quincy, Ill., a Freemason. Rev. Mr. Huntington of Oak Park arose and wished to know if there was to be a discussion on secret societies. He had heard enough on that subject and wished, if there was to be discussion, to vote against hearing the essay. Rev. E. F. Williams of Chicago, assured brethren that Mr. Anderson was not to discuss "the Church and the Lodge," but only to elucidate their workings. This satisfied Mr. Huntington and others, so the essay was voted to be the order of the day for Wednesday of last week. The press and private letters assure us that the essay contrasted the church and the lodge throughout to the disparagement of the church. Discussion was prevented the first day; and as the papers contain no notice of discussion to the close of the meeting, the presumption is that it was suppressed. That is, the Association had no objection to "discussion" for the lodge, but against it. So the General Association of Illinois, this year, voted to hear a Freemason, and did hear him at length in favor of the lodge, after last year, by its programme committee, refusing the request to have the lodge discussed by a minister who was opposed to it. Last year also the same body, meeting at Galesburg, voted to tax their church members pro rata, to pay the claim of Dr. Quint, the Masonic secretary of the National Council, their portion of the sum of $5,000 expenses of said council!

The decline and final disintegration of this venerable denomination is sure to follow its coalition with the lodge. From its year-book it appears to have but little above three thousand churches; and it has now several hundred more ministers than there are churches. Between one and two thousand ministers are now out of employment as preachers of the Gospel. Many of these ministers without charge go into their State and local associations and vote to suppress discussion on Masonry.

Unless by the merciful interposition of God, a reform can be inaugurated, the absolute disintegration and destruction of this body of Christians as such is only a question of time.

The only sign of hope is that it is always darkest before day. The lodge will as surely go down as Christ's Gospel will prevail. But the fate of this or that church depends upon the course which that church pursues.

The Lodge Achan in the U. B. Camp.

We gave last week a hastily written editorial on a review by Rev. Halleck Floyd, endorsed by others, of a circular issued by Rev. W. J. Shuey, agent of the United Brethren printing house. Bro. Shuey replies to that review in an almost three column article in the Telescope of May 28th and gives notice of two more articles to follow. A leading editorial in the same paper reviews with approbation the administration of the finances of the church for the last fourteen years or during Bro. Shuey's agency.

We feared that the money of the denomination would be, directly or indirectly, brought to bear on the question of duty presented by the lodge; and this editorial is not the first article in that excellent paper which has excited these fears. If this should prove to be the case the conflict will be terrible.

We propose to notice this discussion so as to keep our readers informed of its progress and results. It has sprung, of course, from the aggressions of the lodge. Preachers and others desiring worldly advantage have sought it by joining the lodge. Of course they wanted no discussion. The less said about Masonry the better they were pleased. The "agitation," in cases of church discipline, however, is always caused by the sin. This agitates the mind of God and all good men who know it. But Bro. Shuey, in this, his first article, represents himself as standing neutral while "two conventions were held, one by each party." The third one, held in Dayton last May, in which simple nullification of the anti-secrecy law was declared, he says he was opposed to, and voted against its occupying the church in which he is a trustee; though we have heard or read nothing from him before condemning it.

But now this brother comes into the arena as a peace man, condemning agitation and in theory condemning the secrecy and anti-secrecy parties alike for causing it. I say in theory, for he in fact launches his censures against those who are opposing the lodges. These he mentions by name and the whole drift of his article is to cast on them the reproach of the secrecy agitation. So pro-slavery men acted in the slavery controversy. They said they were opposed to slavery, and in the sense of wishing it did not exist, they were. But they neither said nor did anything to remove slaveholding from the churches but condemned those who did. They were opposed to slavery "in the abstract" but they actually and in fact did oppose those who opposed slavery. They said the abolitionists went "too fast and too far," while they themselves went at no pace and nowhere, to remove the evil.

Again, Bro. Shuey says the strife in the U. B. church is "about words and methods." Then why issue his circular? Why does he not cease striving? But this is by no means true and he is in grevious error if he believes it. The struggle is to get and keep lodgery out of the U. B. church.

If the law written and proposed by Bro. Shuey in his circular were to be adopted and pressed by the anti-secrecy party as the present law is, the pro-secrecy men would raise the same hue and cry about "preventing the progress of the church in cities," "ultraism," "radicalism," etc., and if true to his antecedents, Bro. Shuey would join them in censuring the "radicals" as disturbers of the peace and prosperity of the church, for executing his own law. But the anti-secrecy men, under Bro. Shuey's law would have a host of enemies within their camp. Adopt it and in less than one year the lodge would send into the Brethren church Odd-fellows, Good Templars, grangers, and other subordinate and subsidiary creations of Masonry enough to block discipline and revolutionize the body. To suppose a member of one secret order will discipline another, is to suppose what never did and never will happen. This Bro. Shuey must and probably does know. It is to hope the pot will discipline the kettle because the kettle is black. It is a moral solecism.

When accused in like manner the Abolitionists used to reply, "What do the slave-holders care about harsh language if we will let them have their slaves and not molest them in the churches?" or, as Weld used to phrase it, "let them have their niggers." And what do Freemasons care about the wording of the law if they have got to give up their Masonry? Nothing; absolutely nothing. All those who do, actually, for conscience' sake quit the lodge always join the radicals; and those who wish peace with Masonry will rail at any law against it.

There is something worse than arrogance in such language as this of Bro. Shuey: "Seeing that both parties were determined to keep the church in a distracted condition I was convinced," etc. And, further on, he somewhat tauntingly says, "Is it not a fact that neither party enforced the law of 1869? Is it not also a fact that neither party enforces the law of 1877?" Now we respectfully submit to this brother that if secretism is so strong in the church of the United Brethren as to defy discipline and block it, the lodge is the Achan, not the defects in the law against it, and to class together and condemn alike secretists and their opposers as troublers of Israel, betrays an insincerity which will satisfy the lodge with Bro. Shuey and make them regard him as their champion.

There is much more candor in the two points which he makes against the present law. The first is: "The want of discrimination between oath-bound secret societies and the minor orders." But the place to discriminate between Masonry and Sons of Temperance is in the execution, not in the law. Neither of these orders are mentioned by name in the present law. It is common to claim that the minor orders are not "secret societies within the meaning of the law;" and to enlighten ensnared members requires patience and implies labor. But Bro. Shuey, I hope from inattention, misstates and misrepresents the law. For it does discriminate between Freemasonry and the temperance orders, allowing members of the latter to be borne with a whole year. (See Sec. 7, present law.) But he objects to "inflicting the same penalty" on Freemasons and Sons of Temperance. The answer is that joining secret temperance orders is in contempt of Christ's example, whose reform measures were all open; and above all it helps, shelters and disarms argument and opposition to Freemasonry. And while the Brethren church is in death-grapple with the Masonic lodge, as Bro. Shuey shows that it is, to give it aid and comfort by joining a "minor" order which has borrowed all its ideas from the lodge but its pledge, is to be guilty of moral treason to the church, as Bro. Shuey well knows.

But his second difficulty with the present law is, "Its provision for self-execution," by which, he doubtless means section 3. "If any member or preacher be connected with a secret society, and does not discontinue such connection within six months, his failure to do so shall be regarded as a refusal to comply with the condition of membership (Con. art. 2, sec. 2), and his severance from the church shall be recorded on the church records." Bro. Shuey exclaims against this refusing to "trust our people with the execution of this law;" which he thinks an outrage, making the law unpopular. But he has just before said that "our people" had not enforced the laws of 1869 and 1877; and if he was, as he pretends, in favor of excluding Masonry, he ought to rejoice in a law which would be self-executing and exclude it. But the truth is the execution of the law is entrusted to the membership and pastors of the church. They must first legally find a brother to be guilty of lodge membership; and that he has held that membership six months after the law was passed. Is not this "finding" executing the law? and trusted to "our people?" This attempt to cast odium on a good law by popular appeal therefore falls. After his guilt is found what more "execution" remains but to record his exclusion under the law?

We fear Bro. Shuey means by "trusting our people with the execution of this law," trusting the local societies to make the law and fix the penalty; that is, to have no explicit conference law on the subject, but leave the local societies to deal with the question; when he knows and says there are many of them which would receive Masons, nay, who have received Freemasons, and keep them in defiance of the law. This, we need not say, is to break down the whole frame-work and constitution of the United Brethren church and allow Freemasons to walk into it wherever local societies will receive them.

Such seems to us the truth, suggested by this unhappy case. We hope and pray that Bro. Shuey may be led by the Spirit of God to review and reverse his course. And we would suggest to all the "Brethren" whom we reach by this writing that they hold monthly prayer meetings for the purity and peace of their church, and the deliverance of the church and nation at large from the curse and leprosy of the lodge.

—Friends in Michigan will please notice that after the 15th inst. Bro. E. Mathews of Brooklyn, Michigan, will be prepared to lecture whenever sent for, and in any part of the country, we take it. So that if his work is desired in other States let him be sent for. Bro. Mathews is a workman who uses no untempered mortar. He is pulling down lodges and building up churches wherever he goes.

—Secretary Kimball of the New Hampshire State Association, writes approving heartily the State convention plan suggested by Bro. Stoddard, and promising that the friends in that State will do all they can to prepare for their meeting. Bro. Hinman expects to begin work in the State about the middle of June. Let every reader of the Cynosure in New Hampshire read Prof. Kimball's word to them in another column, and give a cheerful support to Bro. Hinman.

—We are pleased to see an editorial in the last Telescope on the letter of Joseph Cook published the week previously, in which the error of its correspondent, in interpreting Mr. Cook as in favor of admitting the minor orders into church fellowship, is pointed out and the correct inference drawn that the great lecturer entirely supports the United Brethren church in its restrictive law.

—The readers of the Cynosure who are acquainted with Elder Parker Hurless, and they are not few, will read with a degree of astonishment of the attempt to cast him out of his denomination, which has few more zealous supporters. Verily in the words of the Worcester address: "The sword of an atheistic philosophy is roaming through the land." Its edge is keen against every faithful watchman in the churches of Christ. But after this time of trial in which "many shall be purified and made white" they shall rejoice because by these tribulations they have been made partakers of the sufferings of Christ.

dishonoring fraternity. Bro. Rathbun first lectured for a time after which he worked the third degree; during which time the crowd was wrapped in profound astonishment to think that persons calling themselves men, and that too, Christian men, would stoop to so low and degrading a performance.

On the eighth instant before sundown the people began to come in, so as to secure seats for the evening, and in this I will not attempt to describe the crowds of people that congregated at an early hour who listened with eager attention to a very able lecture delivered by Elder Rathbun on the religion of Masonry. His labors here gave perfect satisfaction to the friends of truth; and we will ever hail him with joy.

May 26th, 1879.

The reputation of this place for beauty and cleanliness does not exceed the facts. It is already a favorite resort for invalids and pleasure-seekers, and as its real charms become more widely known it is destined to become more and more popular. It is really beautiful for situation and would not suffer in comparison with many of the better known "resorts" of the East.

I arrived here at about 8 o'clock P. M. on Saturday, where I was met by Bro. Grossman, who conducted me to his house. I found myself among friends and my every want supplied. I preached in the Baptist church in the forenoon and in the M. E. church in the evening. Owing to the rain which prevented people coming in from the country, and to other causes, doubtless, the audiences both morning and evening were small; but a beginning was made, and I trust some good done. The fraternities here are not numerically strong, but as in many other places they succeed in keeping down discussion and carrying their points by strategy. Bro. Grossman, who has the full sympathy of his active, intelligent wife, and who is cool, well-posted, and ready for a round with their champions at any time, is a thorn in the flesh of the Masonic beast, and by his timely efforts has saved several who were on the threshold of the secret den.

To night I am to speak in the Opera House, and Bro. Grossman is now out distributing tracts and notices. I am anticipating a fair audience and a good time, since the Lord reigneth, and it is in his cause we labor, and in his name we meet.

May 27.—The above anticipation was realized in the presence of a fair audience, who listened attentively for near two hours and retired without any demonstration on the part of the secretists, who were represented by their orator and other leading men of the lodge in the place.

Notice to the New Hampshire Brethren.

Our New England lecturer, Rev. H. H. Hinman, who has been doing good service in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut and Vermont, has notified me that he will be ready to work in New Hampshire about the middle of June. Only $27 is yet pledged to defray the expenses of this work. Any one who wishes to further the reform in New Hampshire can send me money or pledges at once. If friends in any place desire Bro. Hinman to visit them and lecture, please notify me at once. Bro. H. is a humble Christian minister, gray-headed in the Lord's service, patient, apt to teach, gentle, courageous and wise. It is a rare chance for us to advance pure Christianity and to assist in exposing the false worship of the Masonic lodge and the folly of all secret societies.

We have now, even in New Hampshire, plenty of witnesses of the highest character that Masonry is fully and truly exposed, and as exposed no Christian man can hold up his head and justify it before a civilized community. Let us open the way for Bro. Hinman to show the people the folly and wickedness of secret lodges. All the Christian public need is light in order to bring into utter contempt and abhorrence the false worship, the false ways and the folly of Masonry. Let us encourage Bro. Hinman and pray that God would abundantly bless him in the good work to which he is called. Not a day is to be lost if we would make the most of this providential opportunity for doing good.

Friends of pure Christianity in New Hampshire, please write me at once, stating what you desire in reference to lectures by Bro. Hinman and what you can do toward defraying expenses.

I have invited Bro. H. to be present at the New Hampshire Free Baptist Yearly Meeting, June 10–12, at Laconia, where I hope to meet many of our friends for consultation. The Lord is wonderfully opening the eyes of the people to the evils of secrecy, but we are agents in his hands. Let us not shrink from his work. The harvest is plenteous but the laborers are few. Let us pray without ceasing.

S. C. Kimball,
Sec. N. H. C. A.

Wisconsin Friends, Attention!

The undersigned, having consented to act as Secretary of the Wisconsin State Christian Association, opposed to secret societies, until the next meeting, in place of W. W. Ames, gone to Texas, takes this method of calling the attention of the members of the association to the fact that the time of our anniversary is but three months away, and as yet no place of meeting has been decided on.

It is time that this matter was taken in hand. Will the friends immediately look this matter up and send their suggestions to me at Menomonie?

In order to a successful meeting several things are necessary. First. A place in some town or city where we have friends, from which a live committee can be chosen, who will work up a good local interest; see that a good hall or church is secured; that the matter is thoroughly advertised far and near; and the delegates from abroad are welcomed and well cared for. Second. A good programme for business and other exercises should be provided, having an eye to the best interests of our reform. Third. If the place chosen should not be central to the whole State, it should be to some portion of the State where an impression might be made, and it should be easy of access to all likely to come. Fourth. A general interest felt in the matter by every friend of the cause in the State, so deep that earnest prayer be offered to God for the success of the meeting; earnest efforts made to attend, and a liberal financial support given to it.

Suggestions from the friends promptly sent to me will be gratefully received by

J. L. Barlow,
Acting Secretary of the W. S. C. A.
Menomonie, Wis., May 28, 1879.

JUNE.

I gazed upon the glorious sky,
And the green mountains round,
And thought that when I came to lie
At rest within the ground,
'Twere pleasant that in flowery June,
When brooks send up a cheerful tune,
And graves a cheerful sound,
The sexton's hand, my grave to make,
The rich, green mountain turf should break.

A cell within the frozen mould,
A coffin borne through sleet,
And icy clods above it rolled,
While fierce the tempests beat—
Away! I will not think of these—
Blue be the sky and soft the breeze,
Earth green beneath the feet,
And be the damp mould gently pressed
Into my narrow place of rest.

* * * * * * * * *

And what if, in the evening light,
Betrothed lovers walk in sight
Of my low monument?
I would the lovely scene around
Might know no sadder sight nor sound.

I know that I no more shall see
The season's glorious show,
Nor would its brightness shine for me,
Nor its wild music flow;
But if, around my place of sleep,
The friends I love should come to weep,
They might not haste to go.
Soft airs, and song, and light and bloom
Should keep them lingering by my tomb.

SPECIAL ANSWERS TO PRAYER.

Rev. Newman Hall, pastor of Surrey Chapel, London, gives the following instances of answers to prayer from his own observation: "The writer's brother, when superintendent of a Sunday school, felt a strong impulse, one Saturday evening, to call on a member of his Bible-class whom he had never visited before, and to inquire if he was in any need. He found him very ill. Though the mother and sister seemed in comfortable circumstances, he felt constrained to inquire if he could aid them in any way. They burst into tears, and said that the young man had been asking for food which they had no power to supply, and that on Monday some of their goods were to be taken in default of the payment of rents. When he knocked at the door, they were on their knees in prayer for help to be sent them. By the help of a few friends the difficulty was at once met—but the timely succor was felt to be the Divine response of prayer."

"With that brother, the writer was once climbing the Cima di Jazzi, one of the mountains in the chain of Monte Rosa. When nearly at the top, they entered a dense fog. Presently the guides faced right about and grounded their axes on the frozen snow-slope. The brother seeing the slope still beyond, and not knowing it was merely the cornice, overhanging a precipice of several thousand feet—rushed onward. The writer will never forget their cry of agonized warning. His brother stood a moment on the very summit, and then the snow yielding, began to fall through. One of the guides, at great risk, rushed after him and seized him by the coat. This tore away, leaving only three inches of cloth, by which he was dragged back. It seemed impossible to be nearer death and yet escape. On his return home, an invalid member of his congregation told him that she had been much in prayer for his safety, and mentioned a special time when she particularly was in earnest, as if imploring deliverance from some great peril. The times corresponded! Was not that prayer instrumental in saving that life?"—Am. Wesleyan.

NIHILISM IN RUSSIA.

The attempt on the life of the Czar some time ago, taken in connection with the recent assassination of Prince Krapotkine and the attempted killing of General von Drentelin, attracts renewed attention to the secret order which now keeps the people of Russia in a state of terrorism. A brief sketch of the rise and progress of this dreadful society will, therefore, be read with interest. The birth of free ideas in Russia dates from a few years previous to the accession of Emperor Nicholas I., in 1825, at which time a secret society was formed, under the name of "Decabristy" (Decemberists), called after the month in which a revolution occurred at St. Petersburg. Citizens of St. Petersburg remember that terrible day, December 19th, 1825, as one of dreadful carnage. All the principal streets of the capital were red with the blood of the victims. The principal leaders of this secret society were Pestel, Rylieff, Bestuzuff Roumin, Mouravieff Apostol (all of whom were hanged), Osgareff, Bakouin, Hertzen Iskander, Satin and Toutchkoff. Though many members of the society were hanged and thousands sent to Siberia by Nicholas I., many escaped or were unsuspected, and continued their work. The object of the secret organization was to dethrone Nicholas I., in order to form a constitutional government, with Constantine Paulovitch (an elder brother of Nicholas I.) at its head. Followers and members of the secret society established a journal in London, called the Kolokol (the Bell), whose proprietor and editor was the famous red revolutionist, Hertzen (Iskander), who died in Switzerland a few years ago, an exile and under the death sentence of his native country. Hertzen's ideas were exalted, although he some times carried them to extremes. Possessing great power of language he acquired much popularity and a powerful influence over Russian youth, who received, secretly read and hid his journal as some sacred relic, believing in Hertzen as in God. The most remarkable of his productions published in the Kolokol were "Letters from This Side." They contain minute accounts of the most secret affairs of the imperial government, as well as the Czar and his family, together with the editor's views and hopes of the future of Russia. His sympathizers and agents penetrated the seclusion of the households of the highest circles of Russian society as well as the private chambers of officials. Hertzen's chief objects were to bring about a representation of the people, to sweep from the face of the earth every member of the Czar's family, the titled aristocracy and the priests, and to make an equal division of all lands. These letters contain much valuable historical material, from the fact that their statements are true to the smallest details. His influence continued strong in Russia until 1858.

The boldness and fascination of his writings, promulgated everywhere, though secretly in Russia, had a tendency to encourage the formation of new societies under various names, such as "Young Russia" (Molodaia Rossia), "Land and Freedom," and others, all having a common sympathy and purpose with Hertzen. Leaving in the background many of his opinions and views as belonging to a past generation, these societies advanced and adopted new ideas more in accordance with the new era of which they believed they saw the dawn. These ideas were first expressed through two popular journals Sovremiennik and Ruskoie Slowo, which were suppressed about ten years ago by the Russian government, and some of the writers sentenced to hard labor for life in the mines of Siberia. Among these were Czernyshevski, who wrote the celebrated Russian romance, "What to do," Mikhailoff (a poet) and others. The principal leaders of Nihilism at that time were Czernyshevski, Mikhailoff, Antonovitch, Dobroluboff, Pissareff and Neitchaieff. Switzerland gave up the last named person in 1870, on the demand of the Russian government, under accusation of being one of the assassins of Ivanoff, a member of the Nihilists, who attempted to betray their secrets. They had had opportunity to spread their Nihilistic ideas through these journals under most favorable circumstances, as during the interval between 1858 and 1872 comparative freedom of the press existed, which had never been the case previous to that time. On June 7th, 1872, an order was issued from the Czar giving power to the Minister of the Interior to punish any undue freedom of the press. Since then there has been nothing but persecution. The above men (except Nietchaieff) were well known and distinguished writers, exercising a powerful influence in the conversion of the opinion of the Russian youth.

The sympathies of the women were so far engaged that they became willing to make great sacrifices to show their total disregard of the existing customs of society. They cut off their long hair, and many entered professions. Many studied successfully, and became doctors of medicine. As such stand prominent the names of Souslova, Tagantzova and Pavlova. Following recklessly the examples of men, they affected contempt for the mere ceremony of marriage, and entered into the relation of man and wife without the performance of the legal formalities, declaring their intention of renouncing every timeworn custom as a trammel upon the freedom of thought and action. They ridiculed the old notion of their parents, pronouncing them "Otstaloi." They declared that they were no longer satisfied to be only well-dressed dolls, with painted faces, but demanded the rights which men enjoyed, and the same opportunities of knowledge; to have position everywhere, and to be useful members of society. "We shall resist our oppressors as enemies to the improvement and progress of women." Tourganieff, in his novel of "Fathers and Sons," attempted a contrast of the old and new generation, struggling for the defence of their respective opinions. But his story does not by any means afford a clear comprehension of the subject. It required a more powerful hand to represent faithfully the shadows and lights of the past and present of the social and political life of the Russian people.

Following this work appeared a series of letters by Oknerouzam (Antovitch), published in the journal Otscherki (1864), under the title of "Confessions of a New Generation in Russia," seemingly prepared for the purpose of showing how little Tourganieff really understood, and how poorly he had portrayed the true picture of the direction and progress of opinion among the liberal men of his country. He applied to these representatives of new ideas the name Nihilists (from the Latin word nihil, nothing), conveying the idea that they believed in nothing, and from that time the name has been retained and applied. There existed, and still exists, even in private life a terrible struggle between the old and new representatives. Children adopting the new ideas go to the extreme and disregard all respect or regard for the old order of things. They hold in contempt their parents, who retain cherished beliefs, and consequently the most bitter enmity often exists among those of the closest ties of relationship. Czernyshevski, in "What to Do," presents with great cleverness his opinion of the young generation of Russia. From 1870 the Nihilists began to take decided and important action. The young men spread themselves through the different provinces, propagating the new ideas among the peasantry, presenting them with books and instigating them to revolution. Young ladies, even of the highest ranks of society, dressed themselves as peasants and sought menial employment that they might instruct others in their peculiar views. Tombovskoei, a wealthy princess, and moving in court circles, was discovered among peasant washerwomen, with a like object. In the schools the young girls nearly all became converts, and no restrictions, no persecutions, have been able to arrest the rapid growth of Nihilism.—N. Y. Herald.

The Eyes of God on Little Folks.

"Never do a wicked action,
Speak no sinful word;
When you think there is no danger
You'll be seen or heard.
God's eye ever is upon you,
He is always near,
Knowing every word and action—
Cease that eye to fear!"

The eyes of God are everywhere, in every house, field, room, company, alone or in a crowd—always upon you; and they are eyes that read hearts as well as actions.

Recollect you have to do with an all-seeing God, who never slumbereth nor sleepeth, who understands your thoughts afar off, and with whom the night shines as the day. You may lock the door, draw the blind, shut the shutters, put out the candle—it makes no difference. God sees you. You may go away, like the prodigal, into a far country, and think that there is nobody to watch your conduct; but the eye and ear of God are there before you. You may deceive your parents or employers, tell them falsehoods, be one thing before their faces, and another behind their backs, but you cannot deceive God. He knows you through and through. He heard what you said to-day. He knows what you are thinking of at this minute. He has set your most secret sins in the light of his countenance, and they will one day come out before the world to your shame, except you take heed, repent, put away your sins. God never sleeps, never slumbers. "His eyes behold, his eyelids try the children of men." God looks from heaven, his high and holy habitation, and beholds the evil and the good, even afar off. Read the one hundred and thirty-ninth Psalm. Every thought is known to him. Beware how you sin in thought, word or deed.

"Now I See It"—A True Story.

The imperial city of St. Petersburg is one of the most magnificent in the world. Its spacious streets and gilded spires and numerous palaces have a most imposing effect on strangers. The population is upward of three hundred thousand. I lived among them thirteen years, and received nothing but kindness from every class in the community.

Almost every family keeps a crowd of servants; now and then you see a Tartar coachman, or hear of a Flemish cook; but the persons employed are chiefly Russian peasants, who come to the metropolis from all parts of the empire, in hope of getting higher wages than they can earn at home. Among them was Erena, a deserving, intelligent young woman, who came to live with us in 1827.

All went on well until what is called by the Greek church Ash Wednesday. This is the first day of Lent, and then begins the long fast, which many of the Greek church observe as if it secured the salvation of their souls. Besides the rigid fasting, they go to church two or three times daily, and in "Passion week" many of them go there four times a day.

Erena was a strict observer of the Greek ceremonies, and she was determined to perform them. Her mistress spoke to her of the impropriety of going out so often, but she replied:

"Do you wish me to lose my soul ma'am?"

"No," was the answer; "far from it; I wish your soul to be saved. But your fasting, praying and going to church will not save your soul. There must be something more than all this. The Lord Jesus Christ is the Saviour of sinners, and it is by faith in him alone that sinners are saved."

"Ah," said she "that is your religion, but I have been taught differently, and I must attend to my religion."

The next day her mistress said to her:

"Erena, I wish to teach you to read; would you like to learn?"

"Oh, yes. ma am, I should be delighted to learn."

So the work of education commenced; and in the course of a few weeks she could make out an easy lesson very well. Then she was supplied with a Russian Testament, which she studied diligently whenever she had a little leisure.

One Sabbath, when we went to chapel, her mistress left Erena in charge of our children, and said to her: "I recommend you, Erena, to read the tenth chapter of Acts?" and she soon began to read. As she proceeded she found that Cornelius fasted and prayed and gave alms. "Ah, this is delightful!" she thought. "This man was of our religion; he kept the fasts." But when she found that an angel was sent to him to tell him what he must do, this staggered her. She was astonished and seemed disappointed; and on our return home she came to her instructress, and with an inquiring countenance said:

"I wish you would explain this to me ma'am; I don't understand it. Here is a very good man who kept the fast, and prayed to God and gave alms; but that was not enough? Now why was it not enough? I never was taught to do anything more. Tell me, why was the angel sent to him?"

Her mistress answered: "Do you think God would send an angel to you, or to us, or to any other person, unless some important end was to be answered by it?"

"Ah," said she "I did not think of that."

"Very well, then; read the chapter through, and examine every verse, and you will find out why the angel was sent to him."

She returned to her room and read the chapter attentively until she came to that beautiful verse where Peter says of Christ: "To him give all the prophets witness, that through his name whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins." This was enough. "God who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, shone into her heart, to give her the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ."

The scales fell from her eyes and she saw in a moment the way of salvation. She could read no more. She arose, and running to her mistress, clasped her hands and exclaimed: "O, ma'am! now I see it—now I see it—now I see it! It was not by fasting that he was to be saved; not by giving alms that he was to be saved; but by believing on the Son of God. Now I see it." And from that day the change was glorious. She became one of the most active, devoted and perhaps useful young Christians that we had ever seen.—Selected.

Spend your evenings at home, boys. You may make them among the most agreeable and profitable of your lives, and when vicious companions should tempt you away, remember that God has said, "If sinners entice thee, consent thou not."

The Boy Shepherds of Nebraska.

One pleasant day we rode twenty miles over the Laramie plains, from Laramie City to the Little Laramie river, where we found a prosperous sheep raiser from Nebraska, named Edward Farrell. There were no neighbors for miles around, with the exception of a nephew of Motley, the historian, who had left his father's pleasant home, near Boston, Mass., and located a sheep ranch close by here. The Farrells gave us a most hospitable reception.

We bade them good-by late in the afternoon, turned off to the right of Sheep Mountain, and, entering a narrow plain between high ranges of hills, spurred forward our jaded animals, until the gathering shadows warned us we could proceed no further with safety. At daybreak we spied a large flock of sheep in a corral close by a rude cabin or dugout, in which were two boys, sons of Mr. Frarell, twelve miles or more from home, they had been tending a flock of 2,300 sheep during the entire season. They shot their game with an old rifle, did their own cooking, and lived entirely alone with their dogs and two ponies employed in herding the sheep. They alternated in watching the sheep, which were driven into the corral every night as a protection against bears, wolves and other wild animals. An antelope which one of them had shot the day previous, was suspended near the door of the cabin.

You will be surprised when I tell you that these lads, entrusted with the care of over 2 000 sheep, and living here in this remote, secluded spot, were only eleven and thirteen years of age. It is astonishing, the early self-reliance which these frontier children display, and the skill which, as mere urchins, they attain in herding sheep.—Advance.

A Venerable Goat.

In the grazing State of Colorado, where often a flock numbering from two to three thousand is managed by one man, the shepherd is assisted by the "flock leader." This leader is generally no other than a large Mexican goat. One of these curious sheep captains, a useful old fellow twenty-four years of age, is thus specially mentioned in a St. Louis paper: "The famous 'stag' Christo has a history in the Far West. This venerable goat was brought from New Mexico many years ago, has been a leader for several different flocks, and now in his old age, though so decrepit as to travel at times with difficulty, has no idea of surrendering his leadership but is invariably found at the front when necessary. The whole expression of his countenance, his dignified bearing, even his walk, and the firm manner in which he plants his front feet, indicates that he realizes his responsibility and feels his importance. Old Christo shows an intelligence at times which is little less than human. For example, he sniffs the approach of wolves from afar, and often when the unsuspecting sheep and lambs are sleeping in fancied security he wakes the ranchman to make known the approach of the enemy. When no herders were sleeping with the sheep, he has recently, upon two occasions, taken the entire flock around the ranchman's house in the middle of the night, to arouse him and secure protection from the advancing wolves. —Ex.

Home and Farm.

Farm Notes.

It is calculated that potatoes planted five inches deep will produce thirty per cent more than those planted two inches.

If the cattle have tramped the meadow, harrow it. If it is baked, harrow it. If the grass is thin, harrow it. If you want a good crop, harrow it.

As a remedy for snakes put in hogs. Hogs are impervious to snakes. Their poison has no effect on them. On the contrary the hog eats the snake and grows fat. Try hogs.

All interior fences should be portable and easily removed from place to place, and removed entirely and stored away when not wanted. Every farmer has long lines of fences, which, for half the time, are no use whatever.

Corn is the best feed for pigs, and may be fed in the ear, while soft, but when hard, should be ground fine and wet with hot water, or otherwise cooked. It has been proved by experiment that corn thus fed will make from one third to one half more pork than when fed unground.

Pasturage is the most profitable crop the farmer can have. More pasturage and less corn should be the motto of many a western farmer. Blue grass and orchard grass furnish the best winter pasturage, and may be sown early in spring, in connection with clover and timothy which they will finally exterminate.

Make your homes attractive by the cultivation of flowers and every desirable evergreen. Put them out in the spring. They will grow while you sleep, and soon your homes will become almost irresistably attractive. Cultivate mind and heart as well as the soil, and soon well-directed industry will afford a comfortable competency to even the poorest in our land.

In building a new barn, I would study to put in all the windows I could possibly get in, of course not making a greenhouse of it, but as many as most folks put into dwelling houses. It is so much better doing the work in a light barn than in a dark one; cattle are more easily taken care of, and more quiet and better contented in a light place than in a dark one.

Small farms well tilled have many advantages—less wages to be paid for help, less time wasted, land better tilled, more raised to the acre, near neighbors, good roads, schools and churches. Let all surplus land be sold off, and extra efforts made to make that which is retained doubly productive, and this will be a long stride in the road to making the farm pay.

Unfinished fences, which allow cattle to go where they please, are very common leaks. So are ditches which are caved in and the earth washed away, and doors and gates without hangings. If one pursues farming as a business, it will pay to follow it in the best manner, and the good judgment of the intelligent farmer will lead him to stop all the leaks, great and small.

Military Chapel, Methodist Episcopal, Antioch, Miss., March 23, 1879, Thos. Brownlee, pastor.

Hopewell Missionary Baptist church, Lowndes county, Miss., April 6, 1879.

—Last week appeared an article on the re-established work of the Sugar Grove church in south-western Pennsylvania. We learn further that none of the surrounding churches co-operate with Bro. Turney or his people. Nevertheless, their testimony is not in vain, and individual Christians are beginning to rally to the standard here set up by the Holy Spirit. An old Baptist brother, who, though in heart opposed to the lodge, yet had taken no public position has spoken; the courage of the Sugar Grove church animated him to preach a "rousing" discourse on a recent Sabbath.

UNITED BRETHREN IN CHRIST.

—The wife of Bishop Castle died at Philomath, Oregon, April 27th. She had suffered from lung disease for a long time.

—The Christian Radical, Elder Parker Hurless's paper, of May 8th, states a remarkable case, being in short an attempt by the lodge and its sympathizers to drive him from the church in which he has long and ably held an important office. The following is the statement:

Bro. Grimm, as pastor of the Polo charge last year, was appealed to for assistance in working up a case against the editor of this paper. As a Christian duty Bro. Grimm lent a hand to investigate some foul reports. Finding it impossible to get evidence to make a case, and discovering what he conceived to be a plot against me, he, as a man of honor and principle, declined to lend his influence to what was abhorrent to his conscience. Annual conference not only sustained him, but expressed further confidence in him by electing him presiding elder.

That is the main part of the disappointment.

For this and its accompaniments, the pastor (?) and some of his flock (!) have withheld Christian fellowship and recognition from both the presiding elders, and almost entire official recognition from Bro. Grimm, with a persistent, dominant and Christless spirit.

We have thus far been virtually driven from the altars of our own church, and our children frequently insulted and also friends. Explanations and offers of reconciliation were without effect. At last the bold and scandelous plot was consummated, which was to play the farce of preferring charges against both presiding elders, calling up what they, or some of them, had investigated and found to have no evidence to support them.

With the energy of despair they raked up the ground back to the year 1875, and came forth with so-called charges, to bear the hope that the real animus of the movement, namely, the dregs of pro-secrecy handed down from a former administration would not be discovered.

The charge that is the mainspring of all, accuses me of attributing their course to my position on the secrecy question. They propose to punish me for that, and punish Elder Grimm, one of our most conscientious and excellent ministers, for standing by me.

The wholesale untruthfulness of the charges and the unscrupulous illegality of the proceedings places the matter where it does not merit attention.

J. Watson and H. Boon, lay members, sign the charges. Who and what are they? The former, it is alleged, while a member of the church here a few years since, without the knowledge of his class, joined the Odd-fellows, and then secured a letter from his class without informing the members of his sneaking conduct. This was done on the eve of his departure for Iowa. We have no knowledge of his repentance since.

H. Boon, as a trustee refuses to permit anti-secrecy lectures in the church here. He borrowed money of the lodge and labored to influence Freemasons against me.

Rev. Dessenger's position may be seen by his remark that he would not have Christian Cynosure in his house.

This pro-secrecy faction would close my mouth forever, and would not spare my excellent brother who presides over the other district.

I have always been on the one side of this question. With all my faults, and no doubt they are many, I have endeavored to be true to the church and its sacred principles, willing, as I often did, to defend those principles when threatened with eggs, tar and feathers, and even death; and when it cost money and "bread and butter" to do so.

—A new church numbering thirty-one members has just been established at Coatsburg, Ill.

—Rev. John Kemp of Dayton, well known as a devoted member of the Summit St. U. B. church, and an able member in the councils of his denomination is lying in a critical condition from a severe attack of sickness. Bro. Kemp is a man full of zeal for the church of Christ, laboring for its extension and purity.

LUTHERAN.

—The Standard of Columbus, O., under "editorial correspondence" publishes the following very interesting letter, which shows that the great question of separation between Christ worship and devil worship has gone gloriously through a prominent Lutheran church, and the victory remains with the people of God. The name of the church is not given by the Standard:

DEAR STANDARD:—We have abundant reason to glorify God through Jesus Christ our Lord. He bestowed an unspeakably great blessing on both congregations committed to our charge. The blessing consists in a final triumph over secret societies. By the guidance of God through his Holy Word my two congregations made a public and clear declaration against secret societies. Both declared that according to God's Word and our Lutheran confessions, which are contained in the Book of Concord, no one can be or become a member who belongs to a secret society having religious tendencies.

The members of the congregations knew long ago that their minister was opposed to secret societies, but the other denominations, outsiders and the secret societies themselves, of this place and vicinity, did not know this as a general thing until we publicly announced that we would at stated times show that the teachings of the secret societies are contrary to the Word of God. This made no small stir among the people, as the reader can easily imagine. All sorts of threats were pronounced against us. The members were told that their minister would ruin the congregations, and the best thing he could do would be to keep silent and say nothing about secret societies. They asserted that if he would preach against them they would challenge him publicly to debate the question of secret societies. We knew very well that they were not in earnest; their only design was thus to silence us. We testified against them as was given out, and the great excitement that was blazing all around us soon died away. The congregations were also satisfied; only one member belonged to a secret society, and he said nothing, as far as we know.

Not very long after this one of the members informed the minister of his intention to join the "Order of the Knights of Honor." This he did to learn what we thought of the society, at the same time giving us the general laws of the Knights of Honor to read. We read these laws and told the member that we were decidedly opposed to his membership in the order, and that if he would join he could not be a member of the congregation. The matter was brought before the congregation to which said member belonged, and the result was, that both congregations made the aforesaid declaration. Not one of the entire charge now belongs to a secret society. This is certainly a very great blessing. Praise be to the Lord for it to all eternity! The victory was gained through the Word of God. Our charge is now smaller than it was in numbers, but we have reason to believe, stronger in faith.

As nothing has been said yet in your columns of the Knights of Honor, we would call attention to it in particular, and warn against it most emphatically. We consider it one of the most dangerous secret societies to the Christian church. The order is only three years old, as stated in their constitution and general laws, of which we have most in our possession; hence, it is not much known yet. They pay a benefit of two thousand dollars when a member dies to his widow or whom he designates. This is a great inducement to many to join, as the cost depends upon the number of deaths in the order. Their religious teachings are worse, if possible, than those of the Odd-fellows or Freemasons. In their moral teachings they are also inferior to them. This is plain from their constitution and general laws. G. M.

—The Church Messenger calls our attention to an error that unintentionally crept into our religious notes, and which we cheerfully correct. The error was in saying that six German Methodist churches with their 1,000 members was "said to be the largest Protestant influence among the 100,000 Germans of the city." The Messenger says: "The Lutheran church, which first received, and still rightfully bears the name Protestant, has from three to four times as many German churches in Chicago, and among them single congregations numbering as many members as all the "German Methodist churches" put together. It also exercises a much more extensive Protestant influence among the 100,000 Germans of that city, than the German Methodists do."

—A Conference was held in Grace Lutheran church, Thornville, Perry Co., Ohio, April 30th and May 1st, for the consideration of the following Theses on Secret Fraternities:

1. Secret societies are religious.
2. Their religion is Anti-Christian.
3. Therefore a Christian has no right to belong to such and to fellowship with them.

WESLEYAN.

—Dr. A. H. Hiatt of the College church is preaching to the Wesleyan brethren at Wheaton for a few weeks.

—The Missionary Society and the Publishing Association of the Wesleyan Methodist Connection of America, will hold their annual meetings for the election of a Board of Directors for each corporation, Wednesday, June 11, 1879, in the committee room of the Wesleyan publishing house, Syracuse, N. Y. All persons who are members of the Wesleyan connection, and have paid, during the past year, the sum of one dollar to either of these societies, is eligible to vote and hold office.

—The New York and Syracuse annual conferences have voted a recommendation to the General Conference to so alter the Discipline as hereafter to submit all constitutional changes to the vote of the local churches as well as to the General and yearly conferences.

—The Michigan camp-meeting to be held in June will be attended by Thomas K. Doty editor of the Christian Harvester, Cleveland, O., (see article from him on 2nd page). The Free Methodist says he has lately gone to the Wesleyans from the M. E. church and adds, "When men of that stamp leave the M. E. church it loses genuine Gospel salt."

FREE METHODIST.

—Bro. E. Mathews expects to dedicate a Free Methodist church at Jefferson, Jackson county, Mich., on the 15th of June; after which he will be at liberty to lecture.

—A class has been formed in Bay county Michigan, under the labors of Bro. F. A. Smith. A revival during April resulted in the conversion of twenty souls.

—Thirty-two camp meetings are to be held by the F. M. churches in different parts of the country from the first of June to the last of August.

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

—Rev. W. H. French, D.D., of Cincinnati is taking a two month's visit and rest in California. He has been nine years in Cincinnati. Dr. French was secretary of the last National convention held Farwell Hall, Chicago.

—B. F. Waddle, D.D., an aged and highly esteemed minister of the U. P. church in Kenton, Ohio, died May 16th.

—The general committee of Home

Missions of the United Presbyterian church, met in Mercer, Pa., on Wednesday, May 21, at 2:30 P. M. Rev. J. G. Carson, D.D., of Xenia, Ohio, was elected permanent chairman. At the conference of the first evening, there was a full attendance of delegates and of visitors. Rev. J. P. Robb of Iberia, Mansfield Presbytery, was chosen to preside in the conference. Rev. W. T. Meloy, D. D., of Chicago, led in the discussion which was interesting and vigorous. The committee limited the appropriation to $40,000, with a reservation of $3,000.

—There are ten U. P. ministers who were ordained over fifty years ago; among them are Dr. Donald McLaren of Geneva, N. Y.; and Dr. David Goodwillie of Ohio, staunch friends of Christian reform.

—When the U. P. church was organized in Lincoln county, Tenn., one of the applicants for admission was a Mason. The minister explained the position of the church, showing wherein membership in the lodge was held to be unchristian. The brother promptly gave up his Masonry for the fellowship of the family of Christ. His name is J. F. Montgomery.

PRESBYTERIAN.

—At the meeting of the Presbyterian General Assembly at Saratoga the following was reported as the condition of the missionary work in that church:

Receipts for the year, $427,631; expenditures, $441,834; deficit, $1,523, which, added to the debt of last year, makes the present debt $62,523. Expenses reduced at home and abroad at the beginning of the year $15,000.

Force of ordained missionaries at present: Indian tribes 3, Chinese in California 2, in China 9, Siam 2, Laos 3, India 4, Persia 6, Syria 2, Siberia, Chili and Mexico 1 each. Among Indian tribes are 1,351 communicants, the majority being Nez Perces. In Mexico are two missions —Northern, with 5 churches and 250 communicants, and Southern, with 62 places of meeting, 22 church organizations and 3,010 communicants. The mission at Bogota is flourishing. Brazil has 15 churches, 955 communicants, 140 added last year; contributions here $2,533. In Chili missionaries are subject to much persecution, yet still have 4 churches, with 200 communicants. Western Africa has 2 missions, Gaboon and Corisco—the former has 9 stations and 254 communicants, latter 3 churches and 355 communicants and 4 schools. Syria is in a very satisfactory condition—working force 140, churches 12, preaching places 66, communicants, 716. In Persia there are 18, native pastors, 45 preachers, 3,300 communicants. Contributions from here $1,581. In India there are 3 missions, Lodiana has 13 churches, 504 communicants, Furrukhabad 18 churches, 318 church members, Kalapoor 3 churches, 58 members. There are 18 schools with 5,970 boys and 1,786 girls attending. Siam has 4 churches, 133 members, and several large schools. China: Shantig Station, working force, 38; members 588. Pekin, missionaries and helpers, 44; stations, 27; members, 734. Canton, 30 missionaries and assistants; 310 members. Japan, 11 churches; 27 stations; 632 members. Churches have been established for Chinese at San Francisco, Oakland, Sacramento and San Jose, and there are several hundred church members and Sunday school scholars.

GENERAL.

—The model for the monument to Luther, which is to be set up in Eisleben, the birthplace of the great reformer, commemorating the 400th anniversary of his birth, is now completed, and has been sent to be cast. The monument represents Luther clad in a long gown and wearing a barret. With his left hand he holds the Bible to his breast, and with his right he hurls away the Papal Bull. The pedestal of the statue is square, with a design on each side; the foremost showing an angel with a shield bearing the name of "Martin Luther," trampling on a recumbent devil, while the other three sides represent scenes in Luther's life. The first shows him arguing with Dr. Eck; the second, in his study translating the Bible; the third, with his family and Melancthon.—S. S. Herald.

—Of Geddes, the missionary, it was said in the New Hebrides: "When he came, in 1846, there was not a Christian; when he left, in 1872, there was not a heathen." Was a grander record ever made concerning a man, or concerning his life-work!

—The London Missionary Society one of the oldest and largest of all missionary organizations, is supported chiefly by the Congregationalists of England. Its last annual report shows that the receipts for the year, for ordinary purposes, were larger than during any previous year. They amounted to $546,740. The society also distributed through its missionaries $53,325 for the relief of the sufferers by famine in India.

—Not including the Reformed Christians of Poland, there are 4,680,000 Protestants in Russia. There are 350,000 Lutherans in the Petersburg Consistorial District; in that of Moscow, 247,000, and 53,000 Reformed. In the District of Reval there are 380,000; the Districts of Risol and Oesel contain 900,000. In Courland there are 630,000. This gives a total of 2,560,000. Of this number 1,700,000 are German. Besides there are 350,000 Lutherans in Poland, and 1,770,000 in Finland.

MASONIC RELIGIONS.

—The dedication of the great and elegant Roman Catholic cathedral in New York city is announced for Sabbath, June 26th. Most elaborate ceremonies and processsions and masses and music are in the programme. Admission will be by tickets. A front seat will be five dollars, a back seat three dollars, and for general admission to either the morning or vesper service, without seat, the fee will be one dollar.

—"Think of a single image," writes Dr. Dean, the venerable Baptist missionary of Bangkok, "one hundred and sixty-seven feet long, in human form, covered from his crown to his toes, each of which are three feet in length, with gold, lying in an edifice high and costly, built alone for this idol occupant. And then, think of hundreds of other temples in this city alone, with their mammoth images, and thousands of smaller idol gods, before which are daily being made incense offerings and human prostrations and unmeaning prayers; and then think of the ignorance of the people who regard all this expenditure of money and daily service a meritorious offering."

News of the Week.

—A dispatch on Saturday from Atchison, Kan., says: A terrible storm of wind and rain passed over northern Kansas and southern Nebraska last evening. It extended through nearly the whole northern tier of counties of this State, but was most violent between Blue Rapids and Centennial stations, on the Central Branch railroad, about thirty miles apart. The storm moved in a direction a little north of east, and passed into Nebraska through Richardson county. The town of Irving, ninety miles west of this place, was nearly destroyed. At that point the storm took on the part of a cyclone, and leveled everything in its path. About forty buildings were destroyed, fifteen persons killed, thirty to forty wounded. A report comes from Brookville, Kan., at least 75 miles southeast of Irving, the town where the most destruction took place, that a most terrific wind storm passed over the country northwest of there Friday afternoon, doing great damage to farm property and killing several people.

A cyclone also struck the outer edge of Kirksville, Adair county, Mo., Friday evening, demolished about a dozen houses and badly damaged several others. Several persons were severely injured and one woman being reported killed.

—William Lloyd Garrison, the great anti-slavery reformer died on Saturday, the 24th ult., at the house of his son-in-law in New York city. At his funeral Samuel May, Oliver Johnson, Wendell Phillips and other prominent agitators of anti-slavery were present and spoke.

—At Island Pond, Vt., last week 27 children were poisoned by drinking from a brook into which dead animals had been thrown. On Friday there had been nine deaths. Others cannot live. Potato tops, poisoned by Paris green, which were thrown into the brook, are regarded as the cause of the poisoning rather than the carcasses of dead animals. Terrible distress prevails in the town and work is suspended. The farmer who allowed the carcasses to be thrown in will be arrested.

—Gen. Conroy of New Jersey, who is taking a deep interest in the colored exodus advises chartering a steamboat to take off the parties waiting on the banks of the lower Mississippi. General Chalmers has written to the governor of Mississippi advising him, in case a steamboat is sent down the river to arrest every one on board of it. The white people, he declares, will "resent such an invasion of their country, and consider any such movement incendiary and dangerous." Mr. Chalmers had a part in the Ft. Pillow massacre and naturally forgets that the negro has a right to come North if he wants to.

—The Washington House, of Hagerstown, Md., was burned last week. Before the alarm could be given the fire had gained such headway that the flames rushed up the stairway, completely cutting off all escape. There were upwards of sixty persons on the register, besides the regular boarders, nearly all of whom were compelled to escape by climbing down the porch pillars. Several of those who escaped in this way sustained serious injuries by falling, and two persons were burned to death.

FOREIGN.

—A stream of lava is again pouring from Mt. Etna in Sicily, accompanied by great clouds of ashes and vapor. Wednesday night a number of brilliant balls of fire were thrown to a great height, and burst aloft like rockets emitting fiery showers. A stream of lava is flowing apparently in the direction of Randazzo, but the exact line has not yet been verified. During the whole of Wednesday night loud reports like the rolling of artillery was heard. Later reports say that the town of Abio is destroyed. The lava stream from this mountain in 1669 undermined and carried off great hills on which were vineyards and cornfields. It destroyed twenty towns and villages and, after a run of fifteen miles, poured into the sea a fiery current six hundred yards wide and forty feet deep.

—A telegram from Maritzburg, South Africa, dated May 14th, says: On the 11th of May a great battle took place at a point between Thringpost and Sanhawalla. A powerful Zulu chief named Matcona, with all his people, numbering some thousands, had resolved to surrender to the British. He was joined by Dabal Manzi, Cetywayo's brother, who commanded the Zulus at Gingiholovo, and the remnant of that army, its chiefs having kept away from Cetywayo since their defeat, through fear. When nearing Thringpost they were unexpectedly intercepted by a powerful force, supposed by Cetewayo, coming from the northward. A fearful conflict ensued, resulting in great slaughter of the Zulus who wished to surrender, and they were dispersed and driven back.

—The governments of Chili and Peru in South America are at war. Last week it was reported that a naval engagement had taken place off Iquique, Peru, between the Chilian wooden vessels Esmeralda and Cavadonga and the Peruvian armor-plated frigate Independencia. All three vessels were sunk. The Esmeralda was originally a Spanish gunboat. The Independencia was the most important vessel in the Peruvian navy. Her armament consisted entirely of Armstrong guns, namely twelve 70-pounders and two pivot guns. The latter were 100-pounders.

OBITUARY.

ALICE KOHR, born November 14, 1852. Died May 27, 1879, aged 26 years, 6 months and 13 days. Was united in marriage to C. W. Kohr, June 17, 1875. She was a member of the Moravian church from her youth, but shortly after her marriage joined the United Brethren in Christ with whom she lived a consistent Christian until called to join the church triumphant. Her sufferings were great for some time, but she bore all with Christian patience. I visited her a short time before her departure and heard her express a willingness to go and join the friends gone before. It was her pleasure to entertain and care for lecturers in the anti-secrecy reform. She left one child, a little girl nearly three years old to mourn with her husband. May the consolations of God rest on Bro. Kohr and his child in their severe trial, which is brightened by the hope of meeting their loved one in heaven.

THIRD, OR MASTER MASON'S DEGREE.

Worshipful Master—Those below the degree of Master Mason will please retire. [If the Junior Warden found all were Master Masons this notice is not given. Any Fellow Crafts present advance in front of the altar, make the due-guard and sign of a Fellow Craft, and retire.]

Worshipful Master—Brother Senior Warden, as a further evidence, you will cause the brothers Senior and Junior Deacons to approach the west, receive from them the pass, cause them to proceed upon your right and left, collect the pass from the brethren and convey it to the east.

Senior Warden—Brothers Senior and Junior Deacons, you will approach the west and give me the pass of a Master Mason. [Senior and Junior Deacons, rod in hand, step to the altar; then together to the Senior Warden in the west, and whisper in his ear, "Tubal Cain." Then the Senior Deason crosses to the right, or south side, and the Junior Deacon to the north side of the room, collecting the pass from each in order, except the Worshipful Master and Wardens; when they meet in front of the Worshipful Master, the Senior Deacon crossing to the north and the Junior Deacon to the south of the Master, when they face each other, and the Junior Deacon gives the pass to the Senior Deacon, and he to the Worshipful Master.]

Worshipful Master—The pass is right.

Senior Warden—(one rap, Deacons resume their respective seats.)

[The following, with the first two questions and answers in this chapter, belong to the "Lecture" of this degree.]

Worshipful Master—Brother Senior Warden, are you a Master Mason?

Senior Warden—I am.

Worshipful Master—What makes you a Master Mason?

Senior Warden—My obligation.

Worshipful Master—Where were you made a Master Mason?

Senior Warden—In a regularly constituted lodge of Master Masons.

Worshipful Master—What number constitutes a lodge of Master Masons?

Senior Warden—Three[22] or more.

Worshipful Master—When of three only of whom do they consist?

Senior Warden—Of the Worshipful Master, Senior and Junior Wardens.

Worshipful Master—The Junior Warden's station?

Senior Warden—In the south, Worshipful.

Worshipful Master (two raps)—Brother Junior Warden, the Senior Warden's station?

Junior Warden—In the west, Worshipful.

Worshipful Master—Brother Senior Warden, the Worshipful Master's station?

Senior Warden—In the east, Worshipful.

Worshipful Master—Why in the east? [See Appendix, Note b.]

Senior Warden—As the sun rises in the east to open and govern the day, so rises the Worshipful Master in the east (Worshipful Master rises) to open and govern his lodge, set the craft to work, and give them proper instruction.

Worshipful Master—Brother Senior Warden, it is my order that ——— lodge No. ——— be now opened on the third degree of Masonry; this you will communicate to the Junior Warden in the south, and he to the brethren present, that they having due notice th ereof may govern themselves accordingly.

Senior Warden—Brother Junior Warden, it is the order of the Worshipful Master that ——— lodge No. ——— be now opened on the third degree of Masonry; this you will communicate to the brethren present, tha they having due notice thereof may govern themselves acccordingly.

Junior Warden (three raps, all rise)—Brethren, it is the order of the Worshipful Master, communicated to me by way of the west, that ——— lodge No. ——— be now opened on the third degree of Masonry; take due notice thereof and govern yourselves accordingly.

Worshipful Master—Together, brethren. [All rise, face the east, and led by the Worshipful Master, make the due-guard and sign of a Master Mason, as follows]:

Due Guard Master Mason.

DUE-GUARD OF A MASTER MASON.

Extend both hands in front of the body, height of hips, palms down, thumbs nearly touching each other. [See cut.]

[This refers to the position of the hands when taking the obligation of this degree; "both hands resting on the Holy Bible, square and compass."]

Sign Master Mason.

SIGN OF A MASTER MASON.

Made from due-guard by dropping left hand and drawing right hand across the bowels, to the right, thumb toward the body, height of the hips. [See cut.]

This sign is also termed the "penal sign," because it refers to the penalty of the degree; having my body severed in twain, my bowels taken from thence, etc

Outside of lodge the usual way is to give the SIGN WITHOUT DUE-GUARD.

Draw right hand across body as just described.

[The due-guard in each degree refers to the position of the hands when taking the obligation of that degree, and each of the signs is called a "penal sign," because it refers to the penalty.]

Worshipful Master—(three raps).

Senior Warden—(three raps).

Junior Warden—(three raps).

Worshipful Master—Accordingly I declare ——— lodge No. ——— open in form on the third degree of Masonry.

Worshipful Master—Brother Senior Deacon, arrange the altar. [Senior Deacon steps to the altar, opens the Bible at the 12th chapter of Ecclesiastes, and on it places the square and compass, both points of the compass above the square.]

Worshipful Master—Brother Junior Deacon, inform the Tyler. [The Junior Deacon steps to the Tyler's door, informs him that the lodge is opened on the third degree, and reports:]

Junior Deacon—The Tyler is informed, Worshipful.

Worshipful Master—(one rap, all seated.)

(In a "called" or "special communication" for "work" on the third degree the lodge may now proceed with initiation, but if it is a "stated communication" the minutes are read and business transacted in regular order.)

ADMISSION OF VISITORS.

"The right of visit is one of the positive rights of every Mason."—Mackey's Jurisprudence, page 206.

"In Mississippi, South Carolina, Michigan and a very large majority of American Grand Lodges, the doctrine of the absolute right of visit is inculcated, while the contrary opinion is maintained in Maryland, California, and perhaps a few other States."—Mackey's Jurisprudence, page 205.

Same book and page: "In the jurisdiction of Ohio, it is held that every Mason in good standing has a right to visit lodges when at labor."

"By ceasing to be affiliated he loses his general right of visit."—Mackey's Jurisprudence, page 208.

Note 22.—"The Lodge of Master Masons is traditionally completed by three. This, however, has no reference to the working details of the lodge in which the seats of all the eight officers are required to be filled."—Morris's Dictionary, Art. Master Mason.

History of The Abduction and Murder
Cap't. Wm. Morgan,

As prepared by Seven Committees of Citizens, appointed to gain the fate of Morgan.

This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons, abducted and Murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offence than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife, and no candid person after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable FREEMASONS, in the Empire State, with others were concerned in this crime.

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

BY PRESIDENT CHARLESS G. FINNEY, OF OBERLIN, OHIO

This is a most powerful argument against the Lodge by a truly great and good man who when a young man just before beginning the study of the law and before his convertion, was drawn into this Anti-Christian institution, and as he says on page seven "became a BRIGHT Mason." On the same page he says; "I was completely converted from Freemasonry to Christ." The most of this book was first published in a series of articles in the Independent which created such excitement that the publishers refused to insert the rest of the articles.

This book has already opened the eyes of multitudes to the evils of Freemasonry.

Gain in year	441

The gain since March first, 1879, or the gain for the spring has been fifty-nine. A gain of five hundred nearly in the year ending June 1st should lead us to thank God and take courage. Each year for the last four the Cynosure has made progress towards becoming self-supporting, although it has not yet reached that point.

Shall we not do our best to keep the list growing through June, July and August, and when the fall opens be prepared for a more successful canvass for the paper than any ever recorded. Our mark will remain at 10,000 subscribers until we reach it. How soon that number is secured depends largely on the efforts of those who read the paper. Veterans are falling; close up the ranks and move forward.

Last week a club of ten was received from Wm. R. Morley, Brush Creek, Iowa. This week he sends eight more, thus completing a fine club.

D. P. Rathbun, Clarence, Iowa, sends five subscriptions for one year each and one for six months.

John Lautz, East Wheatland, Ill., sends five subscriptions for one year each.

Aaron Lewis, Malvern, Iowa, sends two subscriptions for 13½ months each.

One lady adds a name to others previously sent and writes that she is trying to raise the number to ten. Will not all who are not able to canvass for the Cynosure in the fall and winter do all they can to extend its circulation in the summer time?

Supplements and subscription blanks will be sent free for canvassing purposes to persons applying for them.

Books and Tracts sent week ending May 31, 1879.

By Mail.

LITERARY NOTICES.

—The Evangelical Repository opens its fifty-sixth volume under the management of Prof. Robert Stewart, D.D., with much improved appearance, and new type from cover to cover. May this sterling representative of the United Presbyterian brethren have yet a youth of a hundred years.

—Vick's Monthly for June is a cheerful visitor to many homes, and its hints for the gardens, yards and flower-beds make it of great value to every one who has a spot of cultivable land.

—The North American Review for June opens with a poem by Voltaire, hitherto unpublished. Gen. Garfield writes on "National Appropriations and Misappropriations," discussing the question of a liberal or restricted policy in public expenditures. In "The Stagnation of Trade and its Cause," Prof. Bonamy Price brings the light of financial philosophy to bear on mining and railroad adventures. Other articles are "The Education of the Freedmen" by Mrs. H. B. Stowe, "Secret Missions to San Domingo" by Admiral D. D. Porter, "Sacred Books of the East" by Max Muller of Oxford, "Evolution and Theologies," "The Pacific Railroad," and a letter from Hon. John Bright on the question of protection in commerce.

—Anastarta, Langhorne's satire on the frauds of our national Capital is furnished for 25c instead of $1 as advertised awhile since. The first price was set with the expectation of illustrating the work. It is a lively piece of writing and those who follow the progress of affairs at Washington will read it with zest. Agents wanted, apply to M. Langhorne, 708 E. Street, Washington, D. C.

—Mr. Rufus Blanchard, the well-known map publisher of this city, has issued in attractive form the first part of a narrative of the "Discovery and Conquests of the Northwest with the History of Chicago." Mr. Blanchard's studies for many years in the early history of this great section of our country have furnished a rich and rare volume. The journeys and discoveries of Marquette, Hennepin and LaSalle read like a romance, while those portions of our more familiar history connected with the French and Indian wars, Braddock's defeat and Wolfe's expedition to Quebec are attractively written. No student of history can afford to overlook this work. Published by Rufus Blanchard & Co., Wheaton, Ill.

Discontinuances.

Unless we receive orders to stop the paper sooner, we continue the Cynosure a full month after the time expires. Those wishing their paper discontinued are requested to notify us AT THE TIME THEIR SUBSCRIPTIONS EXPIRE.

Those who wish to know the character of Freemasonry, as shown by its own publications, will find many standard works in the following list.

No sensible Mason dares deny that such men as Albert G. Mackey, the great Masonic Lexicographer, and Daniel Sickels, the Masonic author and publisher, are the highest Masonic authority in the United States.

All the books advertised here are used by Masons, but Duncan's Ritual, Allyn's Ritual and Richardson's Monitor, are not publicly acknowledged as Masonic authority, because they tell too much.

NOTICE.

The fourth annual business meeting of the National Christian Association will occur, D. V., June 19, 1879, at 221 West Madison street, Chicago, commencing at 10 o'clock A. M. A full attendance not only of the corporate members of this body, but of all the friends, is desired. There are many reasons why if practicable you should attend this meeting, some of which are:

1st. You have many of you aided this work by contributing to its funds and you should know how those funds are invested and how the income from them is appropriated.

2nd. You should better understand the difficulties and the necessities of this great work, which can be done much better by an experience at the center than from the outside view.

3rd. Your advice and counsels are needed to aid in shaping future movements. A few men, however wise and sincere, are not equal to the demands of this great cause, and it would not be doing unto others as you would be done by to unnecessarily absent yourself, and then blame others for not meeting your expectations.

4th. You want to see the faces and shake the hands and listen to the voices of one another and the veterans in this work some of whom will soon cease from their labors.

Some States have appointed representatives to this meeting, whom we expect of course to see and we hope others will be represented; but let no man or woman friendly to the cause, stay away for want of an appointment. If you can come, consider that fact a Providential appointment which is the best and highest you can have.

MOSES PETTENGILL, President.
THOS. HODGE, Secretary.

If a Christian's cross is heavy he has not to carry it far, as there is one ever willing to take the heavier end.

Topics of the Time.

One of our esteemed exchanges published lately the notice of a school reader. a book prepared especially for Southern schools,and made up of selecticus from Southern authors, only. The Catholic press are all the while advertising new school books prepared by some priest, because the books used generally by Protestants were not sufficiently partizan and deferential to the papacy. Such attempts to warp and prejudice young minds excite a just indignation at the advantages taken of innocence and weakness. Senator Blaine drew the other day a scathing illustration of this display of sectional malice when he called attention to an arithmetic from which Southern youth are gaining their knowledge of mathematics, which may well be termed "mixed." He quoted from it this startling problem: "If ten cowardly Yankees have two days' start, and make eight miles a day, how long will they run before being overtaken by five brave Confederates who are pursuing them at the rate of ten miles a day?"

The election for judges of the Circuit and Supreme courts last week was something of a surprise in its results in this city. It was made a party affair entirely, and the Democratic nominees were elected by large majorities, the highest vote being 30,000 and the smallest 15,000, which was cast for the Masonic Republican nominee. McAllister, whose conduct on the bench has been the subject of so much denunciation by citizens of every class but the criminal, was re-elected by a large majority. In the twelfth circuit, concerning which there have been inquiries in these columns, Judges Upton and Wilson, free men as respects the lodge, were elected, and Kellum, said to be a Mason. The result of the election in Chicago, together with the change in the party character of the municipal authorities, has, it is said, given the thieves hope of plenty of business, and the word has been passed around in the fraternity throughout the country that Chicago is all right. As a result we are told that professional blacklegs have flocked hither who are unknown to the police. Last Saturday came the first startling blow from this criminal class. The treasurer of the Illinois Central railroad sent $10,000 to bank by two messengers about 2 P. M. They were assaulted in the open street, pepper was thrown in their eyes, they were knocked senseless, the money seized by two men who drove off in a buggy brandishing revolvers at all who undertook to interfere with their flight. It is needless to say that under the circumstances such robberies are to be expected, and the city will learn by severe experiences that there are other qualifications needed in a mayor and bench of judges than Freemasonry, communism and sympathy with murderers.

France has curiosities and monstrosities in politics as well as we. The sentiments that animated the dreadful bosoms of the leaders of the Revolution of the last century are not wholly obliterated. Last April six thousand voters of Bordeaux elected as their representative to the Chamber of Deputies, Blanqui, a man in appearance small and grey, a conspirator against social order and the government since 1832, and who has lived most of the time since inside prison walls. During the siege of Paris in 1870, he incited insurrection and urged on the communists for which he is now in prison. The sentiments of this strange conspirator against his fellow mortals are as shocking as his life has been unfortunate: "I have no theory, I am not a professor of politics or Socialism; I am a man if action. What exists is bad; something else must take its place, and gradually things will become what they ought to be. The revolutionary party will apply the necessary reforms. First and foremost, France must be unchristianized. She must be rid not only of Catholicism, but of Christianity." No wonder the Chamber of Deputies last week refused to recognize the election, and Blanqui will be left to proclaim his infidelity where it will do the world little harm.

Professor Foster, Francis Murphy and Miss Willard, will be astounded to learn that they are rejected from the temperance ranks—and that by a National Convention representing millions of capital, millions of patrons, and employes by the hundred thousand in our country, meeting last week in St. Louis, and patronized by a high functionary under the appointment of President Hayes, namely, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. Among the resolutions of this influential body we read:

WHEREAS, It is a fact established by general experience that by the popular use of fermented malt beverages in place of distilled liquors, the cause of temperance is advanced; therefore,

"Resolved, That members of this association make every effort, individually and jointly, to disprove and repel the unfounded and malignant accusations of so-called temperance reformers, and to disabuse the public mind of all misconception regarding the popular use of fermented malt beverages."

So the brewers of the United States put themselves forward by resolutions in a national meeting as the true friends of temperance; and our godly women and earnest men, who think themselves willing to spend all for the rescue of their fellows, are but pretenders and malignant accusers! By what arguments do these brewers of swill maintain their case. In short that temperance is not prohibition, but moderation. By their reasoning a moderate use of opium, or arsenic, or any other poison is good for the individual; or in community moderation in theft, suicide, arson and murder will make us a happier and a better people. They propose to carry out their ideas at the representative elections, and as a matter of "duty and self-interest," extend the power and influence of their organization. The whisky ring, beer ring, and lodge ring are so joined that they form part of one chain, and the time may be on us soon when their interests and work will be joined. Such resolutions we cannot afford to pass unmarked.

—Next week and for two weeks following we will publish some full and explicit receipts for cooking given and used by Miss Matilda Lees Dods, late of Edinburgh, Scotland School of Cookery, and a full graduate holding a first-class diploma from South Kensington College, London, England. Miss Dods prepares the food in the presence of her audience, and when cooked, passes it around for their examination. We think that the ladies will be much pleased with them.

—Our thanks are due Rev. L. I. Crawford, editor of the Sandy Lake, Pa., News, for copies of the Assembly Daily published by him during the sitting of the United Presbyterian General Assembly at New Willington, Pa. Next week we hope to give a report of this important meeting.

The Blasphemy of the Higher Degrees.

BY J. P. STODDARD.

"What man that loves the truth can uphold Freemasonry, or how can any church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth, tolerate in its pale those who support such profane and even sacrilegious falsehoods." Bishop M. Wright.

Take the following as specimens of many of like character scattered through every degree in every rite. From the Manual of the Knights of the East and West, 17th degree found on page 238 "Book of the Scottish Rite," by McClenachan, 33d degree.

"The Book of the Seven Seals, which only one can open, is Masonically explained as representing a lodge or council of Masons, which the ALL PUISSANT alone has the right to convene or open.

"The breaking of the first seal displayed a bow, arrows and crown, signifying that the orders of this Preceptory should be executed with as much promptness and exactitude as an arrow sent from a bow; and be received with as much submission as if they came from a crowned head.

"The second seal displayed the sword denoting that this Preceptory and the order in general is always armed for its defence and to punish the guilty.

"The fourth seal produced the skull, which is the representative of that brother who has caused himself to be excluded from the lodge and Preceptory.

"The fifth seal displayed a white cloth stained with blood, invoking us that we should not hesitate, if necessary to shed our blood in defence or in the promotion of the cause of Freemasonry.

"The seventh seal when broken was followed by silence, broken by the successive blasts of seven trumpets signifying that Freemasonry is extended over the surface of the earth on the wings of the wind and fame."

Reader, please compare the above with Revelation chapters 5, 6 and 8.

Again this same author, page 261, speaking of the "CEREMONY OF THE TABLE" in the degree of "Knights of the Rose Croix" says: "The FEAST OF BREAD AND WINE is to us the symbol of fraternity and affection and of that perfect union which must exist among Knights of the Rose Croix." Read Matthew 26:26-29.

Again, page 266, is an account of what is called the "Mystic Banquet." The author says: "On this most solemn festival a young lamb, roasted, must be broken at the feast. It must be white, without spot or blemish, killed with a single blow of a knife. One of the brethren must prepare it; and the head and feet must be cut off, and burned as an offering." Read the 12th chapter of Exodus.

Continuing the account of the Mystic Banquet, on page 270 is the following: "The Most Wise [the officiating priest] then takes two cakes, one of the Passover-bread, and a broken one, in his hand together and breaks the upper cake; but he must not eat thereof till he breaks a piece of the broken one. Then saying * * * gives a piece of each to every one at the table." As the "Mystic Banquet" proceeds the announcement is made: "Behold the emancipator of mankind * * * has introduced them [i. e., those who have taken the sacrament and eaten the Passover] into the Banquet-room of Immortality, there to enjoy the seat which has been from all eternity prepared for them by the Father."

Once more on page 275, to the participant the "Most Wise" in closing says: "You are now of age. Now you are redeemed. You have your own life in charge, now and forever. The Master will ever follow you on the way. He will be your witness, your helper. He will aid your weakness and extend his hand to you in the hour of peril. The doors of the Infinite are open unto you."

On page 287 the succeeding are called "Culminating degrees of Universal Religion," and on page 290 they are said to "proclaim the Alpha and Omega."

To the Christian this sacrilegious use of the most sacred Christian rites can be nothing less than blasphemy, but the Mason finds his warrant for caricaturing the ordinances of God's house in the assumed superiority of Freemasonry over the Christian religion. Wm. M. Cuningham in his "Manual of the Scottish Rite," page 202, says: "Yes, the Christian religion originated from ancient Freemasonry as it was in its primitive simplicity and purity, and this holy religion is that which it was the province of pure and undefiled Freemasonry to preserve and guard with care in its temples."

On page 555 of the Scottish Rite by McClanachan, we find the beginning of a chapter covering twenty-two pages on the "Ceremony of Baptism." We are told "a child of either sex may be baptized by this ceremony alone, until it has attained the age of twelve years if a boy, and eighteen if a girl." "The ceremony is particularly intended for infants." "In any case the father of the child must be a Mason, or its mother a daughter of a Mason." On page 576, near the close of the lengthy ceremonies the Worshipful Master makes this announcement: "In the name and under the auspices of the Supreme Council of Sovereign Grand Inspectors General, of the thirty-third and last degree, I proclaim these children to be purified by Masonic baptism and anointed with the oil of consecration to Masonic duty."

Such is the monstrous arrogance of Masonry, and such the insolence and assumption of its "Great Lights" that they scruple not to personate Jehovah himself in their "All Puissant Sovereign Grand Commander," and entering the believers' fold as wolves in sheep's clothing, they steal the sacramental emblems from the table of the Lord, and travesty every sacred rite and ordinance found in the Mosaic or Christian dispensation. Truly, "a wonderful and horrible thing is committed in the land." "Shall not I visit for these things, saith the Lord."

Should Masonic Oaths be Kept or Broken.

BY REV. ISAAC HYATT.

[Concluded.]

A Masonic oath is a peculiar thing. How it can rest easy on the conscience of any intelligent man, who has a conscientious regard for doing right, is a marvel. It bears the impress and cunning of Satanic strategy. Like the spider's web it holds its victim in a tight place. For he who has taken it cannot write, speak or even look against Masonry without its violation. Yea, more, it binds him to cherish the institution with a heart-felt relish.

It not only requires that the secrets of Masonry shall never be revealed; but that they shall ever be concealed, no matter how much the truth must be prevaricated and misrepresented to do it. It provides no honorable way to be relieved of its obligations, but stands over its victim with whetted sword to execute judgment for its violation by cutting his throat across, with bloody hand to tear his tongue out by the roots, and with merciless revenge to bury his body where the tide ebbs and flows twice in twenty-four hours.

Hence comes the real question at issue, Ought a Masonic oath to be broken?

According to the teachings to which we have arrived, if it was just and was obtained in a lawful way, it should not. If it was obtained by representations fundamentally false, no one is bound to keep it. If one man marries another in woman's clothes the marriage is null and void, no matter how many excellent qualities the man may have who passed himself off for a woman. The man-wife might never require the husband to do anything wrong; but the character of the deception relieves him of all obligation. So the deception practiced in obtaining a Masonic oath, however glossed over to deceive when held up in the burning light of truth relieves him who takes it of all obligation.

Take a Masonic oath and hold it up in the clear light of truth, with what sentiment of Christianity can it be reconciled, or with what utterance of Christ does it bear any resemblance! The Bible is a book full of covenants; but where is one enjoined by our heavenly Father that bears any likeness to a Masonic oath?

Is there one that does not announce or imply mercy and forgiveness to him who breaks it, whenever he returns to God with contrition asking for pardon? Certainly there is no mercy or forgiveness in a Masonic oath. Its utterance is, This oath must be kept or suffer death in a most cruel and revolting manner, and be buried in disgrace. And the candidate for Masonry before taking it, is assured unequivocally there is nothing in it contrary to love and mercy, or that will conflict with his duty to God, his neighbor or his country. If this is not deception, what is? Therefore, if a man does not know that this deception is to be practiced upon him, he is under no obligation to keep the oath. Hence he is free.

And if a Masonic oath had no more objectionable feature than its unmercifulness, the law of Christ might not necessitate its renunciation, but certainly it would license the liberty to do so. But its horrid unmercifulness is not only repugnant to every noble sentiment of love, mercy and forgiveness, which are the fundamental principles of the Gospel, but its requirements are positively sinful, contrary to every command in the Decalogue. Hence he who has taken such an oath is not free; but is under obligation to break it with confession to God and man.

As already noticed, it requires that Masonry shall be hailed as a good thing--loved and cherished as a gift from God--which is as impossible for the Christian who understands its character and claims as it is to keep air from entering into a vacuum while an opening remains thereinto; for it is the prime educator of deception and favoritism, whose existence is so apparent in church and state; requires the concealment of wicked deeds and teaches a religion that is deistical and pagan. No marvel that the church, though surrounded by golden opportunities, is, as Rev. D. W. C. Durgin, D.D., President of Hillsdale College, expressed it at the last General Conference of Free Baptists, "like a beautiful corpse in a splendid coffin."

And when a man finds himself ensnared, tied and bound without any way of escape without breaking his oath, what shall he do? "Renounce it," says one, "and have nothing more to do with the order." But such action breaks the first oath in Masonry, which is reaffirmed in the higher degrees, and he that offendeth in one point is guilty of all. So those who are agreed that Masonry ought to be renounced, if consistent, hold that its oaths ought to be broken. But however good and commendable such action is, does it meet the full requirement of the Lord as revealed to us in the Bible? Where is it written that our sins shall be forgiven if we renounce them? Is not confession made a condition of our pardon? Most assuredly it is. "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." 1 John 1:9. "He that covereth his sins shall not prosper:

but whoso confesseth and forsaketh them shall have mercy." Proverbs 28:13.

To take a Masonic oath is a sinful act, for "all unrighteousness is sin." It may be the sin of ignorance and unbelief; but no qualifying circumstances can justify it, or remove the stain of iniquity. The commandments are not conditioned upon our knowledge. Thinking that wrong is right, or that right is wrong makes no differenc with the precepts of the Lord. God declares what must, and what must not be done. If we violate his law we must take the consequences. Saying that we did not know better, does not cover our transgression. For it is written, "And if a soul sin, and commit any of these things which are forbidden to be done by the commandments of the Lord; though he wist it not, yet is he guilty, and he shall bear his iniquity." Our knowledge may heighten or lessen the degree of our guilt, but can never change its character; for sin is sin; and the only way to escape its penalty is to make such confession as the nature of our transgression demands, with faith in the atoning blood of our Lord Jesus Christ. And though a Masonic oath provides no honorable way to be relieved of its obligations, the Lord does. It is the way open to all sinners. It is by the way of the cross. Oh! what gratitude should fill our hearts that there is such a way. And to walk up this highway of holiness we must confess our sins to God and to all other parties against whom they have been committed: and if any thing enters into the warp and woof of society, preventing the execution of good laws, it is a Masonic oath. Hence to take it is a sin against God, society and all righteous government. Therefore it ought to be confessed publicly.

And how can it be confessed publicly and not exposed? For the virus of sin runs all through it and when held up in the sunlight of truth it fairly sparkles with the iniquitous designs of Satan. And can a sin of such a character be confessed to men and not be exposed? It is utterly impossible. He who has taken it may acknowledge he has done wrong and is very sorry; but how is it to be known from his confession what he has done, wherein he has injured society, or sinned against the Lord unless he uncovers the oath?

And the Scriptures show clearly that it is our duty to confess the sin of taking wicked oaths. For it is written, "If a soul swear pronouncing with his lips to do evil, or to do good, whatsoever it be that a man shall pronounce with an oath, and it be hid from him, when he knoweth it, then he shall be guilty in one of these. And it shall be when he is guilty in one of these things, that he shall confess that he hath sinned in that thing." Lev. 5:4-5. Also from Acts 19:18, we learn that under the Scriptural teaching of the apostle Paul that those who were guilty of a sort of Masonic jugglery confessed their sins by showing their deeds.

No doubt many that are in the lodge do not see the magnitude of the sin. Because the deception required by Masonry has distorted the vision of their mind, taken the edge from its keenness to perceive the difference between evil and good and deadened the susceptibility of the best emotions of their heart. Evidently in our age the alarming and far-reaching evil of Freemasonry, both within and without its pale, is its potent agency as an educator to teach the art to practice deception. And this deception casts a death-like blight upon every noble sentiment of good morals and piety. It is the canker-worm that is eating at the vitals of everything that is dear and sacred to us, both in church and state. It is evident Masons do not see this for like the ancient Israelites there is a veil over their eyes, but when they turn to the Lord it will be taken away. In their grossness of heart may it not happen to them that "seeing, they shall not see, and hearing they shall not hear, lest they should be converted."

There are others in the lodge who perceive its iniquity and are straitened to know what to do. Well do I know how they are held in their snare by the triple power of fear, self-interest and the false sentiment that it is wrong to violate the oaths they have taken. It is my heart's desire that they may be relieved from the burden that rests so heavily upon their hearts.

May our mutual prayers prevail before the Throne and we receive the wisdom, courage and grace we need.

On State-Rights.

BY GEN. J. W. PHELPS.

In the Cynosure of the 29th of May, Mr. C. Quick approves the vetoes which President Hayes is showering down like grape and canister upon measures of Congress, because the second one of these vetoes was directed against State-rights' doctrines.

But there are prior questions to this State-rights' business, which we reformers have to settle; and one of these is the "rights" which the Masonic lodge, a foreign institution, has set up in our country, to which the President of the United States, by being an Odd-fellow, and by a public manifestation of sympathy with Odd-fellows has virtually sworn allegiance. Masonic doctrines (and by Masonic we mean all organized secrecy) are infinitely more dangerous than State-rights doctrines.

Masonry was the conspiratorial agency by which the rebellion was got up; and it was also under the baneful inspiration of Masonry that the Whig party was debauched into the corrupt Republican party as the means of carrying on the war against the rebellion. Secret club government was given the ascendency over regular constitutional government, and in consequence the Seward-Stanton administration was criminally weak and negligent. It was the authority of the secret clubs that was exercised during the war rather than the authority of the executive; and hence the executive authority has been weakened; and the Constitution, and the departments of government under it, are falling into contempt. It was Lincoln's weak management that renders Mr. Hayes' vetoes necessary.

More vetoes have been issued since the days of the Seward-Stanton administration than there ever were before in all the history of our government; and the reason is because these two ministers of state, Seward and Stanton, allowed themselves to be swayed by the shams of the lodge, and thus brought upon the Constitution and the executive authority a contempt from which the present executive is seeking to recover them.

But the authority of the Constitution and the executive under it is largely moral; and what moral force can a President have against evils occasioned by the detestable doctrines of Freemasonry when he is the oath-bound subject of a secret association himself? This is the character of all Jesuitical institutions: they create evils, and then seek to make a merit by vain but showy efforts toward suppressing or amending them.

No President of the United States, or other official, can properly perform his duty to the Constitution and to country, veto or no veto, who swears allegiance to a foreign institution, hostile to Christianity, and who makes a public demonstration of his allegiance by looking to its members and joining with them for sympathy and support. State sovereignty might be bad; but the sovereignty of any State of the Union would be hardly worse than the government of the Odd-fellow lodge. This secret order, when first cradled into existence in English Manchester, may have served the purpose of raising a set of ignorant, vicious, beer-guzzling workmen to the level of a higher order of serviceableness to boss manufacturers, but can never raise men to the level of the republican citizenship of the United States. They who think that its members may make proper officers to administer the constitution and laws of a Christian republic, might as well give up our Anti-masonic reform at once.

There is but one question for our reform party to decide; and that is whether this government is a goverement of the people or of secret clubs; whether it is a government of constitution and laws, or of communistic criminalities and absurdities. Those who believe that it is not a government of secret clubs, but of Christian laws, should never vote for a member of a secret society for any office whatever. Our executive authority has no aristocracy and no army to surround it to give it protection against secret clubs and other untoward pressure of all kinds. It is the especial duty therefore of our clergy and our scholars to give the executive their moral support; but they cannot perform this duty by aiding to demoralize the people, as they do by belonging to secret organizations.

"Set for the Defence of the Gospel."

The following slip is cut from the Vermont Baptist, published at Rutland, Vt., May, 1879. Its motto is, "Set for the defence of the Gospel." What kind of a gospel it defends will be seen from the reading:

"We have received a circular signed by J. A. Conant, whoever he may be, asking us for Christian sympathy and material aid for a crusade against secret societies. From the circular we take the following statement: 'Twelve States, and thirteen evangelical Christian denominations were represented. Seven of these denominations exclude by ecclesiastical law, members of secret combinations from membership in their respective churches. These seven denominations number not less than seven hundred thousand members; and include among them scholars, statesmen, ministers, college professors, college presidents, and at least one learned chancellor. Forty newspapers, mainly of the religious press, are openly pledged in favor of the same position, and advocate it.' Secret societies may be an evil, but in our experience a worse evil is the class of persons who cannot keep a secret, and we should prefer to join a crusade against the latter class. We think, also, that we should have more Bible to justify the latter course. Of one thing we feel satisfied, that membership in a secret society is not a sufficient cause of exclusion from the church. Every family ought to be a secret society, and if it is not it is because its members violate the principles of God's Word. A church should raise the question of the man's life, not whether he is a member of a secret society."

We discover, first, that he sees no evil in secret societies, or at the least they are corrective of a greater evil, for they tend to cultivate that faculty in man which allies him to the cat, the fox and the snake. The editor evidently has no admiration for that "Simplicity and godly sincerity" in which the Apostle rejoiced. He evidently does not believe that "Men loved darkness rather than light because their deeds were evil," that what Christ has told them in darkness they ought "to speak in the light," but prefers that they cultivate that "cunning craftiness whereby they lie in wait to deceive." At least if he does not mean this his words belie him.

But he says that every family is or ought to be a secret society. Did the editor ever know a family with a secret that was as happy because of that secret? Would he like to have as neighbors, families all of whose members were sworn to secrecy, and whose houses were carefully guarded against the admission of all not thus sworn?

But he tells us, that "a church should raise the question of a man's life, not whether he is a member of a secret society." But is not what a man does in his secret society a part of his life? If a man is a habitual blasphemer ought he to be a church member simply because he does not do it openly? If the editor does not know that the oaths taken in a Masonic lodge are such as all honest-minded people would call blasphemous and profane, he is culpably ignorant. If he does know it he is a deceiver of the people. The testimony of Elds. Bernard, Stearns and others are quite accessible. Let him read before he "darkens counsel with words without knowledge."

THE SERMON.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.—The following is the introduction of a sermon preached by Rev. D. Dodds, of Hepburn, Iowa, on the subject of secret societies. The introduction was all that was written, and leads to the subject in such a quaint and novel way, that I forward it to you for publication if you think it worthy.

WM. JOHNSTON.

TEXT, Eccl. 10: 5-7.—"There is an evil which I have seen under the sun, as an error which proceedeth from the Ruler. Folly is set in great dignity, and the rich in low place. I have seen servants upon horses, and princes walking as servants upon the earth."

In presenting the truth here in a paraphrase, we would say, there is evil which I have seen among men, proceeding by reason of an error in regard to the real ruler.

Folly and unworthiness have the throne of prominence and power; and wisdom and worth are degraded to bondage, spoils and poverty. I have seen selfishness praised, exalted and supported, and unself ishness—even the very spirit of self-sacrifice debased, scorned, rejected, crucified. The truth of the passage before us gathers together as in a map, and presents to the eye a panoramic view of evil human governments and institutions generally, and depraved human beings and conditions particularly.

The world, since the expulsion of Adam and Eve from the garden, has been, and still is to a very great extent the arena of confusion and woe; because its actual rulers (not its real ones) have been, and are, the Cains, the Pharaohs, the Sauls, the Absaloms, the Jeroboams, the Hamans, the Nebuchadnezzars, the Pilates, the Neroes, the Caligulas, the Popes Pius, the Jeff. Davises, and whatever other enormities of the flesh which may not be represented in this list, whose sole office is to pervert, deceive, enslave, curse and then abandon. All such are as truly included as if particularly named and numbered.

The evil that is to be endured and opposed till cured, comes, proceeds, arises, or exists by reason of an error in regard to the real ruler. The true ruler in man and among men is SPIRITUALITY—God's Spirit so enlivening, enlarging, enriching, penetrating, possessing and inclining man, that he is in positive, living, absolute and entire alliance and sympathy with all good, and through the good, innate and relative with God himself. He that hath Christ's righteousness and kingdom first, is sure of every other possible condition and comfort. When man's religious and rational powers are so spiritualized, and empowered, and exalted by God's Spirit, truth and grace, that they overrule in righteousness and reason all the lower propensities, passions, appetites, impulses, and desires, so that these all by this efficient, God-appointed baptism of truth become real supports and living pillars in the temple of a new, complete and Christlike manhood, human nature with all its varied powers is a true harmony that God himself approves. You behold the ruler and the ruled in proper places respectively; and you behold man not only in harmony with himself, but also in growing harmony with God, and with all other vital truth and righteo usness.

Hence it is clear, since evil exists by reason of an error in regard to the real ruler, that the actual, ruler is an imposter, a usurper, the very opposite, the antagonist, the contradictory of the real ruler—that the actual ruler is depravity and selfishness. Now when depravity is on the throne, his counsel, his policy, his administration will accord with himself. Hence it appears that this organic arrangement, this constituted order, is in its being and working an unveiled perversity, and consists in putting a subject in a lord's place, a sure negative for a positive, a minus for a plus, a debt to impoverish for capital to enrich, a rod to punish for a scepter to rule in righteousness, disease for health, darkness for light, evil for good, death for life. In the language of the Bible such procedure is folly set in great dignity and the rich in a low place. The servant is upon the horse, and the prince walking as a servant upon the earth. Folly enthroned, and the servant in place of the prince are personifications of the actual dominion of evil. Depravity and selfishness in man clearly indicate that the real nature of the evil cause is per se and in toto a gross perversion. It presents man's nature not only as depraved, but the lowest faculies of that nature ruling in depravity and perversity. This is the painful picture we are called to contemplate. Conscience deposed and powerless to do well; reason hushed and crowded out; man's highest and noblest faculties scorned, and trampled on, and depravity in some of its protean shapes the enthroned king. Perhaps a wild, unworthy ambition like that of Napoleon the I. is ruling, and if so, then no character is too dear or life too sacred too destroy, if the destruction feeds his unworthy desires, and helps to secure his fiendish ends. No, it matters not when such mad ambition is on the throne, if a whole nation's peace is sacrificed, and cruel continued war prevails with all its horrid privations, bloodshed, butchery, and death, if but this infernal, dread, and damnable ambition is only sated, and its ends secured. Truly it is a sore evil when folly is exalted thus.

Or it may be that the particular depravity enthroned is Sardanapalus. Then a whole nation of Assyrian nobles must support his effeminacy, lust, brutality and carnival. And thus almost endless amplification and exposure of dominant depravity in man and among men belongs to the truth under consideration.

But enough has been said to show that enthroned depravity is capable of generating and executing any enormity, iniquity, or system of iniquity. And now just here in man's lower nature perverted, and reigning in its unashamed perversity—behold the home, the hot-bed, and the nursery of secret associations.

Reform News.

TO WISCONSIN FRIENDS.

[Last week Elder Barlow appealed to you on your next State meeting. Now Bro. Collins. President of the State Association emphasises that. appeal.—ED.]

NEW LONDON, Wis., May 31.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I wish to call the attention of the friends of our great reform in Wisconsin again to the importance of locating our State meeting. The time has fully come when we should know where it is to be held, so that we can publish it and arrangements can be made in time and make it a grand success; and in order to ensure that we want a room that will hold a large congregation, and at least five good energetic men and women interested in our reform, for a committee of arrangements, and a place where accommodations can be had be had for friends from a distance. Now, friends, let us hear from you soon, write to Bro. J. L. Barlow of Menomonie, Dunn county, Wis., corresponding and recording secretary, or to myself at New London, Wis., or through the Cynosure.

I wish also to inquire if there is a lecturer who will labor in this State until the annual meeting on the first of September. There is great need of work in this State. I know of no place where secretism rules more than in this part of the State in church as well as society. When professed ministers of Christ can by the assistance of the lodge take men of the world without repentance and faith from this world to heaven, what can we say? A lodge minister did so here a short time ago, in preaching the funeral of one of his lodge brethren, a man who had always despised the Christian religion, a saloon-keeper and a hard drinker, seldom if ever found in a religious meeting and a wicked man. The professed Christian minister in addressing the brethren of the order to which the man had belonged, said that now by faith (I suppose in the order) we can see the brother standing on the frontier of heaven holding out the three golden links to them, representing the love of God to man and the love of man to God and love for the brethren of the Odd-fellow order which he loved so much. That minister I am told is a Royal Arch Mason and an Odd-fellow and the multitude run after him.

Yours in Christ and for reform.

ENOS COLLINS,
Pres. State Association.

AMONG THE MOUNTAINS.

SOUTH RYEGATE, Vt., June 3, 1879.

DEAR BRO. K:—After two lectures and a liberal collection in the Wesleyan church at South Abany, I rode over the mountains to Barton on the Passumpsic R. R. There a beautiful lake pours its waters over quite a fall into a stream which runs into Lake Memphramagog, and thence into the St. Lawrence. After several hours detention, I took the cars and went over the mountains and down the Connecticut river to Wills River, a pleasant village at the mouth of the river of that name. Here I found first class and cheap accommodations at an excellent hotel, and on the morning of the 30th walked five miles, all the way up hills to Ryegate, Vt.

It was interesting to view the White Mountains, which were quite hidden when in the valley, gradually and grandly rising into view, and to see the snow glisten in the sunshine, the distance was so great that nothing but the outlines of the mountains could be seen, but lines of white on the dark back ground could be nothing but snow. From the Ryegate hills, Mt. Washington can be plainly seen, but I could not tell which peak it was. The view from the West was less grand, but not less beautiful. As far as the eye could extend were beautiful hills with fine farms and buildings, several villages and some beautiful little lakes set like jewels in the deep valleys. I presume that mountains and great granite rocks are not so interesting to farmers as to travelers, but I have had but one thought since I came to this mountain region—that it was a grand place in which to be born.

Arrived at Ryegate Center I found Rev. Mr. Clapperton of the U. P. church, who most kindly received me, took me in his carriage and carried me several miles, and made arrangements for me to lecture at S. Ryegate and at Ryegate, and to preach for him on the following Sabbath. I then walked four miles more and stopped with Bro. McLaren who personated Hiram Abiff at the Worcester Convention. Here I took a sereve cold with sore throat, and though I rode all day on the 31st, I returned sick. I could not preach on the Sabbath nor go to meeting, and with difficulty went to my appointment last night when I met a good large congregation in the Presbyterian church at S. Ryegate, to whom I spoke for an hour and a quarter. The two pastors (Gen. Assembly and Ref. Presbyterian) were present and seemed much interested—said they had never heard the subject discussed before. To-night I expect to speak in the Town Hall at the center of the town, and have other appointments for a week.

This town was settled by Scotch Presbyterians. It has five Presbyterian churches, two Reformed, Pres.

and two R. P. New School, and one Gen. Assembly church. Of course there is no lodge and no dram shop, but the people are all intelligent, thrifty, and religious. One family I met where a brother and sister had spent five years teaching the Freedmen at their own expense, and two young ladies one of whom is in college at Oberlin, proposes to engage in the foreign missionary work. May the time come when all over our land there shall be as high a standard of manners and morals.

Yours in the faith,
H. H. HINMAN.

FROM LAFAYETTE COUNTY, WIS.,

BELMONT, Wis., May 30, 1879.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I received from the office of the Cynosure a copy of Good Templarism Illustrated, and on the evening of May 22d I delivered a lecture at Liberty Ridge school-house against secret societies. The house was well filled. A Good Templar lodge had been formed there some time before largely out of members of the Primitive Methodist church. One young lady that had joined them had already publicly renounced them. While I was reading the ceremonies of the initiation of the first degree, a middle aged lady, a member of the church, every little while would say "That is a lie." This young lady who had renounced the lodge sat by her and finally said to her, "You know that I know better, and that every word the lecturer says is true." The elderly lady after that was quiet. I conversed with this young lady the next day and she said to me that every word I read was just as she was initiated. So you see that God is raising up witnesses to the truth. The pastor of this church for the last year was a Mason; that accounts for the starting of this lodge I presume.

I am in hopes soon to be at liberty so that I can lecture some for the good of the cause. Let me suggest a mode by which laymen and ministers can help the cause along. Let all such as are good talkers go out into school districts and visit from house to house, scatter tracts and give out notices of a lecture in the evening and then go in the evening and talk to the people, telling them what you know about secret societies, and invite all that attend to subscribe for the Cynosure. If you fail the first time go to another district and try it again.

Yours truly,
I. BANCROFT.

ILLINOIS AGENT'S REPORT.

DEAR BRETHREN: On May 2d and 3d I lectured at Stockton Center, Jo Daviess Co. I was taken there by Eld. O. S. Davis, of Chelsea. Lord's Day, the 4th, I preached for Bro. D. at Chelsea in the morning, in the afternoon at Stockton Center, and in the evening at Warren. Before leaving Warren on Monday, Father Williams took me down town, where a nice hat was given me—a present from the friends in Warren. I shall long remember the kindness of Father Williams and his wife, his son Isaac and family, Bro. and sister DeLong, Bro. and sister Sherk, sister Black and family, and many others. God bless them all.

On Monday, the 5th, I started off with Father Williams' horse and buggy, and in the afternoon we called on Bro. E. H. Gillett, a Baptist preacher living three miles southwest of Lena, Stephenson Co., called also on Bro. B. J. Holley, with whom I went to Lena, and who got permission for me to speak in the Baptist church. Returning to Bro. Holley's, I partook of his hospitality at supper, and received from him in fulfilment of his pledge two dollars for State work. Lodged that night with Bro. Gillett. Some years ago the then pastor of the Baptist church in Lena, in order to receive Masons to the church communion, managed to have the resolutions against secret societies expunged from the church book. Bro. Gillett thereupon seceded—"went with the resolutions."

On Tuesday went to Dakota, where I found a friend and helper in Eld. Daniel Harris, United Presbyterian pastor, at whose house I spent the night. Wednesday, the 17th, I went to Orangeville in the northern part of the county (Stephenson), and enjoyed the hospitality of Eld. O. M. Van Swearingen, United Brethren pastor, in whom I found a ready aid in the reform against the lodge. Returned to Lena and lectured in the Baptist church Wednesday evening, to a fair audience, and in Bro. J. D. Fowler's church Thursday evening, to a good congregation. Eld. Williams, of Warren, was present Thursday evening, and spoke strong and stirring words. Bro. Peter Van Sickels, of Lena, a seceding Mason, was present on both evenings. The Free Methodist brethren deferred their prayer meeting so as to be at the lectures, and showed themselves true friends of the anti-secresy cause.

May 9 and 10 I spent in perfecting arrangements for Bro. Rathburn's work. On the evening of the 10th I was present at the U. B. quarterly meeting at Center Hill, Carroll Co. Lord's Day, May 11, preached in Ustick, Whiteside Co., and baptized four converts. May 12, lectured in the U. B. church, Center Hill, to a large and attentive audience. On the 12th was to have spoken in Brookville, Ogle Co.; went there, but rain prevented the meeting. On the 14th completed arrangements for Bro. Rathbun at Milledgeville, Carroll Co. Was to have lectured in the township of Fair Haven in the evening, but rain prevented. Lodged that night at Bro. R. G. Emerson's. Bro. E. and his wife are warm friends of the cause, and have shown us much kindness. On the 15th visited Mt. Carroll and Lanark in furtherance of the work, and returning to Fair Haven lectured in the Black Oak U. B. church in the evening, to a very attentive audience. Sister Jas. Golden and Bro. Emerson helped financially. Lodged that night at Father David Fulton's. Father Fulton has preached quite a good deal for the Episcopal Methodists, to which denomination he and his family belong, but they stand opposed to the lodge and refuse to support Masonic preachers. They have very kindly treated Bro. Rathbun and myself.

On the 16th I went to Fulton Junction and met Bro. Rathbun for the first time since Nov., 1875. From Fulton drove to Savanna, stopping for dinner at Bro. Wm. Dyson's in Thompson. In the evening Bro. Rathbun worked the first degree of Masonry in Savanna. The Savanna Times had announced that "all the horrible 'goat-riding' and 'broiling on a gridiron'" would be shown, and the people looked at first with evident distrust upon the work, so that it was with difficulty that the officers' chairs were filled, I being compelled to serve as candidate. But distrust soon gave way to wonder and intense interest when the lodge was opened and "Rev. Stephen Jones" was introduced to take his first degree in Masonry. A Mason by the name of Hathaway tried to interrupt the work, but he was finally silenced. We were told that he was drunk. Bro. Rathbun publicly challenged the Masons to deny the truthfulness of the exposition offering them $5 apiece for their affidavits that the degree was not correctly worked. We were told that citizens repeated this challenge and offer on the streets on Saturday, but the "brethren of the Mystic Tie" were afraid to bite. On Saturday evening "the sublime degree of a Master Mason" was worked, Bro. Mitchell, a seceded Mason, serving as candidate, Bro. Rathbun proved himself a master workman, and the audience were evidently intensely interested. "What a God-forsaken institution this is!" was the remark of one of the gentlemen who filled the officers' chairs, after witnessing the murder of "Hiram." Hathaway, the Mason who interrupted on Friday evening, was at the outside door of the hall when the audience was dismissed on Saturday evening, boozy as before, and declaring that 'twas "all out;" gave the Entered Apprentice grip to the boys who would receive it as they came out, giving the same and other grips to Bro. Rathbun.

On Lord's Day, the 18th, Bro. Rathbun preached in the evening to the United Brethren of Savanna, by invitation of Eld. B. J. Murray their pastor. A large audience met to hear him. On the same day I preached in Ustick.

When we went to Savanna we were told that it was a very "hard" place, and that we might expect rough treatment. We were protected, however, by the efficient marshal, Mr. E. H. Thompson, and were very kindly entertained by brethren Murray and Loop.

God grant that we may see the growth of a sound anti-secret sentiment in Savanna as a result of these meetings, and that men may be led not only to abhor the false worships of Satan but to accept the true worship of Christ.

Further reports will be sent you for next week. J. F. BROWNE.

P. S. Bro. Rathbun has returned (June 6th) to Iowa. I go to Wisconsin to-morrow, returning to work in Jo Daviess county on the 14th. J. F. B.

A SISTER'S APPEAL.

FLINT, Mich.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—In our Christian work we often meet men even among those who profess to believe in the soon coming of our Saviour, and to be students of prophecy, of so torpid a religious temperament that, when urged to take a fearless stand in vindication of truth and right by a warfare against that accursed, demoralizing device of Satan, organized secretism, they answer: Why endanger ourselves by open hostility to such a murderous institution? Suppose Masonry and its adjuncts do constitute the Image of the Beast, there can be little if any danger, of paying homage to this power if we leave it entirely alone.

I wish to say to all such misguided and loveless spirits, this is a mistaken idea, and heavily fraught with evil consequences to yourselves and the cause of Christ. There are many ways by which we may offer worship to an idol, some of which I will mention: To hold connection with a Christian, or rather religious (for we cannot call that church Christian that will admit to her communion "men who are oath-bound to the devil") denomination which, under any circumstances, would for a moment knowingly tolerate within its membership a hoodwinked, cable-towed devotee of Satan, or vote for such a man to fill an office, governmental or municipal—this would constitute us worshipers of this Image.

Masonry is a gigantic and ghastly evil from whose despotic sway none can escape. To witness the terrible God-dishonoring influence of this blasphemous power, and fail to reprove and warn, we, by our silence sanction and thereby become a partaker of its evil deeds. O, let us cry aloud and spare not! Jesus said, "Every plant which my Heavenly Father hath not planted, shall be rooted up." (Mat. 15:13). In order to prosecute this work he toiled and suffered, and endured temptation the keenest, sorrow the most piercing, insult the most humiliating, and exposure and hardship the most enervating and wasting to the system; and shall we aid him in this work by a life-long opposition to the ravenous work of this greedy monster whose thirst for the blood of souls is insatiable? or shall we sit with folded hands and apathetic mind and heart, while others lay themselves upon the sacrificial altar, and fight for the honor of God and the liberty of their conscience and yours?

O shame on such questionable philanthropy as this. How can one who claims to be a child of God, to love the Saviour, and to be a laborer in his vineyard, refuse to join hands with those who with noble self-sacrifice come up to the help of the Lord against this mighty foe? Is it reasonable to suppose that God would have his people silent respecting such a powerful, wide-spread evil as this? one that is drawing to its soul-destroying embrace, yearly, thousands of our young and promising men, who were it not for the venom that pours from the yawning mouth of this hidden reptile, might swell the ranks of Christ's kingdom.

Should we remain ignorant of what constitutes the power symbolized by the Beast and his Image, that power which God has threatened with his most terrific wrath? We fail to find elsewhere in the Word of God such fearful denunciation as that uttered against the worshipers of the Beast and his Image, and who receive his mark in their foreheads, or in their hands:—"The same shall drink of the wine of the wrath of God, which is poured out without mixture into the cup of his indignation: and he shall be tormented with fire and brimstone in the presence of the holy angels, and in the presence of the Lamb: and the smoke of their torment ascendeth up for ever and ever: and they have no rest day nor night, who worship the Beast and his Image, and whosoever receiveth the mark of his name. Here is the patience of the saints; here are they that keep the commandments of God and the faith of Jesus. (Rev. 14:9-13.) If ignorant of what constitutes the Image and his worship, how are we to escape from his subtle power or shun all of the several ways, by which we may imbibe moral and spiritual injury? O! do we not love the truth of God and his attributes; love justice and mercy? Then commensurate with our love for these Divine qualities should be our hatred of error, tyranny, cruelty and oppression,—the attributes of Satan.

O my brother, my sister in Christ! let us, we entreat you in his name, move forward with increased impetus. Let us gird on the whole Christian armor, and never suffer one of those weapons to become rusty from disuse. We cannot all lecture nor write; but we can all do something. We all have a circle of friends or acquaintances upon which our influence must operate more or less. O make it tell upon the side of right. We can perhaps subscribe for the Cynosure, that wide awake sheet wholly devoted to the work of exposing every species of iniquity in high places and in low, and "especially in those heinous haunts belonging exclusively to his Satanic majesty, and of which he would have the cowan world know nothing"—if not we can labor to enlarge its circulation, and by constant supplication at the mercy seat invoke the aid of that great Being, without which all our efforts will prove futile. Oh! may we never forget to call on God, in the name of his Son Jesus Christ, to give us complete victory over the flesh and the devil. If we love God we honor his name, and defend his Word. If we love Jesus we must work to promote the interests of his cause. Exercise faith in God and our labor will not be vain.

NINA GREGORY.

Our Party.

It is true that our Anti-masonic party should assume shape and consistency. We are tamely submitting to the control and disputes of other parties when we should be making demands for our own.

We should demand that neither the United States army, nor the Masonic Lodge Grand Army, nor Freemasonry in any shape should be felt at the polls.

We Anti-masons ought never to vote for a Freemason for office, nor for a crafty, politic, silent, non-Mason; but we should insist on an out-and-out Anti-masonic candidate for the Presidency, and vote for no other. It is for the interest of the nation and of the people that the Anti-masonic party should hold the balance of power.

ONE OF THE PEOPLE.

Self-Condemned.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Having become deeply interested in the work you are doing in destroying secretism, and having read your valuable paper for some time I desire to give you and your many readers the substance of a conversation held with a prominent Mason of this place.

He told me that as an order they entirely ignored Christ and the New Testament, but have a firm belief in the Supreme Ruler or Architect of the universe; and that when guided by the Bible the Old Testament was their guide.

I pointed him out a prominent rowdy of the town and asked his opinion of him, and the answer was, "He is a bad character." I then asked him what he would think of this same man should he see him in the pulpit of a church offering up a prayer for the people? The answer was, "I should call it sacrilegious in the extreme." But this same rowdy is a chaplain in the lodge, and has officiated at several funerals in that capacity.

I then asked him how it would look for him to go into a lodge room and there utter a prayer to the same God. "O," said he, the people don't all know of it, nor any of them hear it."

We then drifted to expositions of Masonry, Morgan included. He said Morgan was the only man who had ever made an exposition of Masonry—and what became of him? I told him to answer the question for me. He replied that he knew and so did every other Mason! He admitted that Masonry had been exposed, and that several men had actually entered their lodge and yet had never taken a single degree, but had gone in simply from the instructions given by the expositions.

What a damnable array of admissions to go before the people.

1st. That Masonry is no longer a secret.

2d. That men dare not expose them under the penalty of death.

3d. That Morgan exposed them and they killed him.

4th. That they renounce Christ.

5th. That they follow men for leaders who are the outcasts of all good society, and called by them men of bad character. They must follow their teachings, must call them brothers, must listen to their sacrilegious prayers to the God whom they daily profane—they must listen, but use as a cloak the argument that the people do not hear it—do not know it.

May the day speedily come when secretism, the hydra-headed monster, shall be crushed out of existence, and the pure light of righteousness reign supreme.

A FRIEND TO ALL.

From an Octogenarian.

ORAMEL, N. Y.

I want to give you many thanks and my best wishes. I am eighty years eight months old. I was at LeRoy when two hundred at one time said, Morgan told the truth. One Mason told me six months ago, he hoped if he revealed it they would serve him as they did Morgan. I asked him if it would be a good state of society that would allow it. He was honest enough to say no. With a number of others, I was excluded from the Baptist church in Cuba, N. Y., but we found another church where Masonry was not their idol. When they strive to take our credit they go so far as to lose their own, but when they go for money they win. I had to pay forty-eight dollars costs where a suit was decided in my favor by a jury. My opponent was a Mason; he took the case before five judges, three of them Masons, and they kept the money at home, right or wrong. In Morgan's day it was proclaimed that Babylon was fallen, but the deadly wound was healed or patched up so that it has lasted fifty-four years, but the lodge staggers, and has ever since, and soon it will fall to rise no more is my prayer.

Old Soldiers Insulted on Decoration Day.

MARSHALLTOWN, Iowa, May 31.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Yesterday was "decoration day," as you are aware, and we had our usual good time here, but not quite so much of it as formerly. We always have a grand display of our secret orders on this occasion; but yesterday there were not near so many of the orders out, and not near so large a display of those represented except, possibly, the I. O. O. F. The procession was made up of the Knights of Pythias, Odd-fellows, A. O. of U. Workmen, and a very respectable delegation of old soldiers, the Knights Templar not putting in an appearance. Two years ago all the orders were out in full display, and one of their orators (Van Valkingburg of Ft. Madison,) could tell us that "all the generals of the revolution were Masons except Arnold." This time they left the speaking business to a minister of the Gospel who, I hope, has not been hoodwinked or cable-towed.

On the march to the cemetery the soldiers were ordered to halt and open ranks to let the secret orders pass through. One old veteran stepped out of the ranks, and said, "I will see the old flag trampled in the dust, before I will submit to such an insult." The writer met with others who would not march in procession with the secret orders. How cheering that there are those who can speak out in condemnation of these wicked institutions. But it is still more cheering to believe they have reached the zenith of their glory and will soon begin to disappear from public gaze. M.

Our Mail.

Levi Tyler, Chambersburg, Pa., writes: "In this corrupt age of lodge-ruling the country needs just such a paper to oppose the deviltry, hypocrisy and fraud of secret societies, both in the church and state. I realized some of the workings of secrecy at our last annual conference. The Cynosure has a noble work to perform. It is out on a glorious mission, and I hope and pray that it may not stop until its work is performed and mission completed. Your paper is doing a good work in this part of the country, and many are realizing the fact that the claims of Masonry are a sham and its hidden mysteries a delusion and fraud."

John L. Eddins, Utica, O., writes: "I am lost without the Cynosure. I expect to lecture here on the evening of the 23d, if it is God's will. We have many friends here for the cause. I met a high Mason on the 17th. He said he had taken all the degrees and had not seen any cable-tow or hoodwink in the lodge. He said E. Ronayne's book was a lie. I told him I would give him $50 to go and swear out an affidavit that he was not hoodwinked and had no cable-tow put on him. He said he knew he was right, but would not swear to it. May God bless your work and give you 10,000 times 10,000 subscribers for your valuable paper. The Cynosure is getting better every week. Was Abraham Lincoln a Mason?"

No; he was not.—[ED.

J. W. Margrave, Salem, Neb., writes: "I detest the lodge and all its workings. I do know and feel that it is anti-Christ. The only wonder is that any Christian man can tolerate such an abomination. Indeed, that is to my mind the very hardest question to answer, viz., (as a jack Mason said to me not long since), 'If Masonry is the wicked thing you think it is, why do so many good men belong to it?' I confess that it is a hard question, and I must say that I cannot have much confidence in the piety of the man who professes Christ in the church and denies him in the lodge room. But what are we to do? The church is full of it. It enters into every business. I was sick and nauseated lately in witnessing the laying of the corner-stone of a new court-house in Kansas. Three of the secret orders took the matter into their own hands to thus advertise their tomfoolery. I am in my 66th year. I remember the excitement of the Morgan murder, and I have from that time on despised all secret organizations. I long to see the time when Kansas and Nebraska will arm for the fight, and each have a State organization and 'carry the war into Africa.'"

LESSON XXV.—June 22, 1879.—CONSECRATION TO GOD.

SCRIPTURE.—Malachi 3:8-18.

8. Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings.

9. Ye are cursed with a curse: for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation.

10. Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it.

11. And I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes, and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground; neither shall your vine cast her fruit before the time in the field, saith the Lord of hosts.

12. And all nations shall call you blessed: for ye shall be a delightsome land, saith the Lord of hosts.

13. Your words have been stout against me, saith the Lord: yet ye say, What have we spoken so much against thee?

14. Ye have said, It is vain to serve God: and what profit is it that we have kept his ordinance, and that we have walked mournfully before the Lord of hosts?

15. And now we call the proud happy; yea, they that work wickedness are set up; yea, they that tempt God are even delivered.

16. Then they that feared the Lord spake often one to another: and the Lord hearkened, and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written before him for them that feared the Lord, and that thought upon his name.

17. And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels; and I will spare them, as a man spareth his own son that serveth him.

18. Then shall ye return, and discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God and him that serveth him not.

GOLDEN TEXT.—And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels.—Mal. 3:17.

TOPIC.—A word of warning and promise.

DAILY HOME READINGS.

Mal. 1:1-14; 2:1-17; 3:4.——1 Pet. 1:1-25; 2:1-25.——2 Pet. 1:1-21.——1 John 3:1-24.

CONNECTION.—"More than a hundred years have passed since the first return from captivity in Babylon, and the rebuilding of the temple. But they have been troublous times—foes without, and dissensions within. The people were cured of idolatry, but they brought back with them other sins. They became profane and mercenary. They oppressed the poor, and took bribes, and perverted justice; they intermarried with the heathen; and they refused to pay their taxes, or tithes, for the support of the government and of the temple service of religion. Malachi reproves them and entreats them, and shows them their danger. Then in the first part of this chapter he foretells the coming of John the Baptist, and their long-desired Messiah. But as he comes to purify the people, it will be a terrible time for the wicked who determine to remain wicked. He entreats them to return and repent. Then, with the usual insensibility to sin, they begin to ask what they have to repent of, and in what respects they must return to God. The prophet declares in answer that they have robbed God."—Peloubet.

[From International Quarterly.]

THE PROPHET MALACHI.—The last of the Old Testament prophets is believed to have lived during the closing years of Nehemiah's history, about 424 B. C. (Compare Mal. 2:8 with Neh. 13:15, and Mal. 2:10-16 with Neh. 13:23.) Of his personal history nothing is known. His name, signifying the messenger of Jehovah, is a fitting introduction to his prophecy, and, like John the Baptist, of whom he speaks, he is "the voice of one crying in the wilderness."

The Book of Malachi is of great importance. Its place at the close of the Old Testament Scriptures is significant, and its testimony most solemn. The prophet repeats the story of Israel's failure, and completes the record against them. It was failure under the judges, failure under the kings, and failure even after their restoration from captivity. Yet notwithstanding all, God's promises are renewed. "The gifts and calling of God are without repentance," and we are assured that the remnant shall yet be blessed. The book opens with a word of grace, "I have loved you, saith the Lord," all the more significant because questioned by a rebellious people. Chapter 1 follows with a terrible exposure of the moral condition of the returned captives. Idolatry had given place to infidelity; and the people even questioned God's right to the offerings he required. In chapter 2, the priests are rebuked as the people had been in chapter 1. Chapter 3 sets forth the coming of John the Baptist and the Messiah with his blessings; and chapter 4 tells of the day of the Lord that is to follow.

It is solemn indeed to study the last book of the Old Testament. How wonderfully this book brings God and man before us. Genesis, 1, closes with favor and blessing; Malachi, 4, with judgment and curse. It is delightful to turn to the New Testament, opening with warning and judgment (Mat. 1, 2), and closing with grace and peace (Rev. 22:20), In itself it is a proof of the oneness of the Bible that we are not left to the words of Malachi, but led forward to the blessings of the new dispensation. Thus, having been introduced to God in the beginning (Gen. 1:1), we receive the benediction of God at the end (Rev. 22:20).

[From Am. S.S. Union Advanced Lessons.]

POINTS FOR SPECIAL STUDY.

1. The Bible readings. 2. The Jewish law of tithes. 3. Ways in which God was then, and is now, robbed. 4. Old Testament instances of physical troubles (drought, locusts, failure of crops, disease, etc.) following spiritual declension. 5. Conditions of receiving temporal blessings. 6. Conditions of receiving spiritual blessings. 7. Effect of judgments and warnings upon the godly. 8. Effect of such judgments on the ungodly. 9. Bible allusions to a "book" of remembrance, of life, etc. 10. Leading events between the times of Malachi and of Christ. 11. References, in this lesson, to Messiah.

OUTLINE.

I. "Robbing God." When a Jew kept back the appointed tithes and offerings, he was cheating or robbing God. God's service suffered, and punishment came upon the nation.

II. "Speaking against God." Sinning against God often leads to speaking against him. They distrusted his providence, and claimed that there were no rewards for serving him. So, now, men think that serving God is not profitable.

III. "The one way of safety." The godly talked and thought of religious things. God heard and remembered, and would fully reward in the great day of final account.

PRACTICAL TEACHINGS.

"Points" to be made:

1. In which of these three stages are we—defrauding God, or denying God, or fearing him.

2. Has Christianity, which enlarged our blessings, lessened our obligations in the use of means? Are we to give less than the Jews?

3. Are we relying too much on rich men? "Tithes" affected rich and poor alike. They made systematic and proportionate giving.

4. Do we need in America, where all churches and ordinances depend on voluntary giving, to study this more?

5. Is there any remedy for doubt about God's service so good as consecration to him? Try it; be his in Christ.

THE EXTERMINATION OF BORERS.

Mrs. Arthur Galpin of Waterville, Kansas, tells how she exterminated borers in her box-elder trees:

"The borer commenced operations about two feet from the ground, and gradually worked up the trunk in a semicircle. Now, I was determined he should not kill my trees so I dosed him liberally with coal, but it didn't seem to hurt his digestion a particle. I was in a dilemma what to do next. I could not get him out with a knitting needle, and I thought if the tree must die, I would experiment on it anyway, so I took strong spirits of ammonia (hartshorn), and poured it into all the wounds. I then took bar soap and made a salve of it and plastered over all those old wounds on the tree. To my great relief I found that I had at last headed the borer, and now the trees are as well and hearty as the rest that were not troubled. They had only bored two trees when I succeeded in exterminating them.—Kansas Farmer.

CORN AS A CLEANSER.—Corn is the best crop to act as a cleanser of the soil, when it becomes foul. When grown for this purpose, it should be planted three feet apart each way. It should be cultivated once a week, until too large to admit a horse, when the corn will so occupy the ground that weeds will give little trouble after. What few do start must be cut out with a hoe, or pulled out by hand. If well done, the land will be in fine condition the succeeding year, and the corn will pay for the labor. This is the manner in which I fit my ground for strawberries; it leaves no grubs to destroy the plants. I have cleaned land of Canada thistles in this way the first season.—Rural New Yorker.

TO BLANCH LETTUCE.—To produce lettuce with white heads, the usual way is to tie up the heads a week or two before the time of cutting. Select a dry day, gather the leaves in the hand in a close rounded form, the inside being clear of dirt. Pass a narrow strip of bass matting several times around the ball, making it close at the top to exclude rain and prevent rotting. Draw a little earth around the base as a support in place of the spreading leaves. In ten days, more or less, they will be sufficiently blanched for use.—Prairie Farmer.

TO RENDER CLOTHING WATER-PROOF.

It is very desirable to understand how to make overcoats, horse blankets, hay caps, grain bags, and anything else water-proof, by incurring a little expense. We herewith give a recipe which has often been sold for hundreds of dollars to unsophisticated clothiers: To about ten quarts of rain water add a half pound of powdered alum; stir this at intervals until it becomes clear; then pour it off into another bucket and put the garment therein; let it remain for twenty-four hours, then hang it out to dry without wringing it. A lady who has tested this receipt thoroughly writes that when they were traveling, they wore garments thus treated in the wildest storms of wind and rain without getting wet. The rain would hang upon the cloth in globules; in short, the garments were really waterproof. The gentleman walked nine miles in a storm of wind and rain such as you rarely see in the South, and when he slipped off his overcoat his underclothes were as dry as when he put them on. This, we think, a secret worth knowing; for if cloth can be made to keep out wet, it is in every way better than waterproofs.—N. Y. Herald.

If you are well, let yourself alone. One of the greatest errors of the age is, we medicate the body too much, the mind too little. More persons are destroyed by eating too much than by drinking too much Gluttony kills more than drunkenness in civilized society. The best gymnasium is a woodyard, a clearing or a cornfield. A hearty laugh is known the world over, to be a health promoter; it elevates the spirits, enlivens the circulation, and is marvelously contagious in a good sense. Bodily activity and bodily health are inseparable. If the bowels are loose, lie down in bed, remain there, and eat nothing until you are well. The three best medicines in the world are warmth, abstinence and repose.—Dr. Hall.

OLD PLOWS.

A plow used by the Emperor Joseph II. of Austria, in 1769, was placed beside a modern plow, in a portion of the Austrian department of the Vienna Exposition set apart for the exhibition of the old plows of various nations. No better proof could be given of the great advance in the improvement of plows which has marked the one hundred years which have elapsed since his Imperial Majesty worried himself and his mother earth with that plow.

This venerable plow was composed of the root of a tree, with the stem for a beam, resting on an axle with wheels underneath it of about two and a half feet in diameter; the handles were secured to the knee by holes bored into it, into which the handles were secured; the share was a piece of iron about nine inches long secured to the point by the knee, and then a strip of board about six inches wide was secured near the share. This last contrivance was designed to answer the purpose of a mold-board.

The old English plows, though much in advance of this Austrian one, were very awkward and weighty affairs, such as now would not be accepted as a gift by farmers in any civilized country. Spain exhibited an old plow with shafts, and a wooden share. South France, a plow constructed of wood, with the exception of the share, with wooden mold-boards five inches wide; this plow was about five hundred years old.

It is estimated that a single flower blossom, when permitted to mature and go to seed, exhausts the plant more than the growth of a dozen buds. Unless, therefore, the seed is needed for preservation, roses and all other flowers should be cut before they are at full bloom; out of which fact a wholesome moral might be drawn. It is advantageous to give away flowers.

If you are ever in doubt as to whether a thing be right or wrong consider whether you can do it in the name of Jesus, and ask God's blessing upon it.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JUNE 12, 1879.

THE CONGREGATIONALISTS.—We learn from private letters that the essay by Rev. Mr. Anderson of Quincy read at the State Association was generally disapproved of in private, and a qualified rebuke was gently administered by a committee, on the ground of its disparaging the church as compared with the lodge; but I cannot learn that one voice was raised or one word spoken concerning the irreligious, abusive, and absurd action of the Association last year concerning myself. Is it possible that the Congregational ministry, whom I have long regarded as upright men and Christians, can allow that strange, unprecedented and wicked action to go on their records to posterity!

—Since the above was written it is published in the press reports of the Association that the committee to whom the paper of Mr. Anderson was referred, reported dissenting "strongly from some of its sweeping conclusions as unfair to the churches, and reaffirmed the recorded testimony of the association against secret societies." The Congregational organ of this city says, "the paper was full of ideas and unction, and met with a very enthusiastic reception." That enthusiasm was probably from Princeton Masons who crowded into the church anxious to hear the paper.

WILLIAM. LLOYD GARRISON.

This distinguished American died at the home of his son-in-law in New York city, May 24th, ult., (1879) in the midst of his family, who sung to him the old-fashioned hymns and tunes which he loved in early life. Few men have made more impression by their individuality on both sides the Atlantic than Mr. Garrison. I have always heard it said that before his temporary union with Benjamin Lundy, he had been a Baptist professor, and he was what may be called a devout man during his whole life. The following clipped from the Chicago Inter-ocean gives a view of his opening career:

"William Lloyd Garrison was born at Newburyport, Mass., in 1804, went into business for himself as an errand boy at the age of 10. He was a shoemaker's apprentice at the age of 11, a printer at 14, an editor at 17, a proprietor and publisher at 22. As the publisher of the National Philanthropist, he began the total abstinence agitation in 1827, and a year later joined the ranks of the active workers against slavery. In an address at Boston on the 4th of July, 1829, he made his first bold assault on slavery, and in the Genius of Universal Emancipation, published at Baltimore in the same year, made a distinct avowal of the doctrine of immediate emancipation as the right of the slave and the duty of the master. He went at one bound to the head of the anti-slavery agitators, and then dashed far in advance of all. He berated the moderates, denounced the Colonization Society, and took extreme ground on every question discussed."

The first number of his Liberator was issued Jan. 1, 1831, and the next year, 1832, the New England Anti-slavery Society was formed in his office, which was also his bedroom, dining-room and parlor. It consisted of twelve persons, one of whom, Joshua Coffin, said to me in a humorous narrative, years after: "We all got into office. The president, Garrison, vice-president and secretary, with an executive committee of nine, just used up all our members." One year previous to the formation of that society, 1831, the Presbyterian Synod of Cincinnati appointed a day of fasting and prayer for the removal of slavery from the church, and also appointed Samuel Crothers, N. Fullerton and Wm. Graham a committee to issue a pamphlet, which was written with great power by their chairman, Crothers, and printed with the names of the committee appended. This pamphlet was the store-house from which Theodore D. Weld drew the terrible ammunition of ideas and principles which he wielded with such invincible power in the struggle which followed.

Had Garrison been associated with such men as Crothers, John Rankin, Gilleland, etc., men who were crowded north by slavery across the Ohio river, the whole history of the slave controversy might have been changed. Garrison was, of course ignorant of the history, doctrines and ideas which holy men had drawn from the Word of God. But he was a reformer by mental structure and the ordaining providence of God. He saw evils and attacked them; and when they reacted on him, the opposition but sharpened his ideas and strengthened his purpose. He went to Dr. Lyman Beecher, then in his prime and popularity, and other leading clergymen, and fully expected their backing in his war on slavery. He was disappointed, disgusted and embittered, and he turned away from not only the leaders of the church, but from prayer-meetings, communion-tables, Sabbath worship—in short all the visible institutions of Christianity, led by men who, as he thought were blind leaders of their blinded followers. He looked on the question presented by slavery as the plainest question ever submitted to men—"Of two men one white and the other black, which by the law of God owns the black body?" He regarded the slave as the lowest and least of Christ's human brethren, and the person on whose treatment turned, by Christ's own teaching, the salvation or damnation of men. And as righteousness is the declared basis of Christ's kingdom, he could not believe that ministers and churches who ignored the slave and communed with his unrepentant owners could belong to the kingdom of God.

This was the sum of Garrison's doctrinal belief, and his life was that belief reduced to practice. He was soon surrounded by men and women who denied the atonement, put Christ on a historic level with Mohammed; scouted the idea of his miraculous conception and birth, and of course made him the illegitimate son of a seduced peasant girl; no matter what his followers believed or denied, they were saints if they stood boldly for the oppressed. For was not this standing for the least of Christ's human brethren and consequently for him? The ministry and churches shrank from him and what followed came. But "The Lord is a God of knowledge and by him ACTIONS are weighed." He chose the weak things of the world to confound the mighty, and things that were not to bring to nought things that were.

I went down to Andover Theological Seminary two years after the New England Anti-Slavery Society was formed. Garrison was then thirty years old and I was seven years his junior. I was opposed to slavery by instinct and instruction as were all Vermonters. I went to see Mr. Garrison in his office, and saw, or thought I saw, that the truths which he omitted would be fatal to his movement. I went to see Judge Story at Cambridge, then Chief Justice of the United States, and Rufus Choate of Boston, then at the head of the Massachusetts bar, and asked both those gentlemen to tell me why we might not, consistently and with good faith to the South, the Constitution and the laws, exclude slave-holding from the churches and vote against it at the polls? I found both those gentlemen overwhelmed with the bare thought of such a thing as direct antagonism with the slave power. I could not go with Mr. Garrison, and practically give up the doctrines of regeneration and salvation by Christ; I was shocked at the non-committalism of Dr. Leonard Woods and the leading clergy, and civilians of New England; and, seeing Amos A. Phelps, Joshua Leavitt, the Tappans, and a few others, who adhered to the ideas and institutions of Christ, his abhorrence of injustice and oppression included, I went with them; and have stood by the prayer-meeting, Sabbath, communion-table, and the ideas they represent ever since. Mr. Garrison's party grew less while his anti-slavery principles spread; and thousands idolized him as much for his opposition to the churches, as for his hatred of oppression. God used him for the inauguration of a mighty revolution in the ideas and institutions of men: and, though he has lived such a life that, should the world follow his example, the visible institutions of religion and even of civil government (for he opposed voting and holding office) would perish from off the earth, yet, because there were "good things found in him" concerning the righteous Kingdom of Christ, not one of God's promises to those who are "persecuted for righteousness sake" have failed him. After the reform which he inaugurated in penury—setting up his editorials without writing them, to save paper and time; and eating his food on a bench in his office on which he slept at night—has spread widely, and forced men to respect it, a purse said to amount from twenty to thirty thousand dollars was raised to give him competence; his children sung hymns to soothe him while he was dying; and millions of the most enlightened people on earth will find their bosoms swell, and their eyes moisten at the news of the death and memory of the life of WM. LLOYD GARRISON.

THE THREE ARTICLES OF REV. W. J. SHUEY.

This brother, according to his promise, gives in the Telescope his second article in reply to leading brethren who condemned his circular. As this very long article is occupied largely with things personal, with which the Cynosure has no necessary concern, we say but little this week. Mr. Shuey brings out the fact that many members of the church in Dayton, of which he is a trustee, belong to one secret brotherhood and another; but he insists that they are no worse "United Brethren" for that. He praises their benevolence in contributing to benevolent and church objects, etc., etc.

It is now some ten years ago since I attended a social circle meeting of that church; was entertained by Bro. Berger and Bro. Shuey at their houses, and have very agreeable recollections of that people, and of those brethren and their houses. Bishop Edwards was then living at West Sonora. He was nominated by Bro. Berger the first president of the National Association opposed to secret societies, and elected to that office. At that time the wrath of the lodge was not aroused as it now is; and our movement was looked upon by the lodges as a sort of Quaker testimony against war. But, even then, Bishop Edwards was becoming unpopular with United Brethren in the city of Dayton. Many said to me that he was stiff and impracticable, or, as some said "obstinate." In the light of Bro. Shuey's last article I see the reason why good men and women in Dayton censured that great-souled, great-hearted saint of God. The lodge rules Dayton. It did then. Shop-keepers wanted the custom of those who were in these lodges, intermarriages with the members, social intercourse with their families; and ten thousand infiltrations of lodge influence, which, after all its tinsel, pinchbeck virtues, is bald organized deism, were making a man of Bishop Edwards stamp unpopular in the city of Dayton. That noble man said to me, in view of the struggle which he foresaw in his church: "'Yet once more,' saith the Lord, 'I shake heaven and earth.' But," said the good bishop, "let it come, that the things that cannot be shaken may remain."

Now, it is not wonderful that Bro. Shuey, who has been purse-holder of that denomination for fourteen years, should dread the agitation which Bishop Edwards contemplated with very different emotions. He (Edwards) felt as Samuel Adams did when he heard the first guns at Lexington in the war of the Revolution. Adams almost shouted for joy, while Boston merchants who were yet good men, and Americans, stood silent and turned pale. Nothing dreads a disturbance like money. But the idea of Bro. Shuey that this struggle is to be quieted, and the lodge demons quelled, by admitting Good Templars, grangers and the like, into Brethren churches is the highest absurdity, and he will live to find it so. Next week we shall consider his proposed remedy for agitation at large, God willing.

The Banner of Holiness and Masonry.

Editor Cynosure:—After reading an article in the last issue of the Christian Cynosure, by Joel H. Austin, I feel constrained to write a few words in reply.

In the first place, I am acquainted with both the Banner of Holiness, and the writer of the article referred to above, and know something about the spirit and practice of both. It seems to me rather bold for any one to compare the spirit and conduct of the noble editor of that paper, to that of devils in the time of Christ, or to that of the sailor who, in time of storm prayed to both God and the devil; after the Banner's repeated utterances against secret societies.

In the second place, I think the position taken by the editor of the Banner, according to Austin's own article, is the correct one. He says that "Its (the Banner's) testimony has been against secretism, whenever occasion demanded it." He also says, "We oppose all sin, not any particular form of sin, only." I wish to say right here that I utter a hearty amen, to the position taken by Bro. Brooks. If Rev. Joel H. Austin would take the same ground, well-meaning people would honor him more, and he might do more toward rescuing men from these snares and traps of the devil. What is the use of trying to get men to leave the Masonic lodge, unless they become Christians? It would be like Satan being divided against himself.

In the third place, I am intimately acquainted with the "sixteen degree Knight Templar" (as he calls him) and am frank to give it as my opinion that although he has not, as yet, publicly renounced the institution, and turned upon Masonry and Masons with "hammer and tongs" and with the spirit of a tiger, he is probably as separate from sin and sinners, and has no more fellowship with the "unfruitful works of darkness," than Joel H. Austin, or the writer. Yours for fair play,

M. L. Vorheis.

Note.—Bro. Vorheis seems to entirely misapprehend Elder Austin's article. If he will read it more carefully he will see that there is no comparison of Bro. Brooks' methods with devils or superstitious sailors. As for the Knight Templar referred to he says quite enough for himself if Elder Austin quotes him correctly. If he has not yet renounced his sin of lodge-worship, can Bro. Vorheis say that he is "as separate from sin and sinners" as himself or Elder Austin? When he is brought to the feet of Jesus he will not delay to give up his fellowship with an institution which mocks that Saviour, nor will he be likely to use such expressions as quoted last week. God grant that he may see this. The most important point is the position of Bro. Brooks of the Banner of Holiness. His position is correct to give his testimony against secretism whenever occasion demands; but this is what Elder Austin finds lacking in the Banner, and we believe justly—when does the occasion demand? Once a year or in six months? Idolatry was the great sin against which the Bible witnesses. The Jews, though chosen of God and blessed with many and glorious revelations of his presence with them, were continually led into this great sin, nor was their propensity to it destroyed until their nation itself was overthrown and the miserable remnant taken into a long and severe captivity. Now the question for us is whether the heart of mankind has been changed since the days of Elijah, Hezekiah and Josiah; and has Satan laid aside in our day this most powerful machinery for turning men from God? If the devil yet wields this power of false worship; and if our unregenerate neighbors are unprotected from his assaults, they are likely to be or to become what Paul calls devil worshipers. We may say that men worship money, lands, honors, lust; but what organized system of idolatrous worship is there in this country like the lodge? Now, while Bro. Brooks can speak freely of intemperance, dancing, pride of dress, etc., which are all good and necessary, it seems to us that the Holy Spirit, if it had "liberty" in the Banner, would speak often against the lodge. As we understand Elder Austin, this is all he pleads for—the liberty of the Spirit. Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel and the rest were lovers of holiness. We need to learn more through them of the work of the Holy Ghost in opposing the same sins against which God bade them "Cry aloud and spare not."

Commencement at Wheaton.—On next Sabbath morning President Blanchard preaches the annual sermon and address to the graduating class at 10:30 in the College chapel. In the evening of the same day, Rev. Geo. C. Coleman, of St. Charles, Ill., delivers an address before the Society of Inquiry. On Monday evening the graduation exercises of the Preparatory School occur under the charge of Prof. E. D. Bailey. On Tuesday afternoon and evening the Alumni Association hold their reunion. Prof. T. C. Moffat will deliver an address, and Mrs. J. A. Caldwell, whose name is familiar among the Methodist churches of the Northwest, will read an appropriate poem. The trustees of the College hold their annual meeting on Tuesday forenoon. The exercises of commencement day open about half past ten o'clock Wednesday forenoon, and in the evening of the same day there will be a social gathering of the students and friends of the institution.

On Tuesday, July 1, the Summer School or Normal Institute, under the management of five of the younger members of the College faculty, will open and continue till the 12th of August, six weeks. Prof. Bailey, the secretary, informs us that the prospects for this institute are very fovorable, enough having already sent him their names to insure success. For information respecting this school apply to Prof. E. D. Bailey, Wheaton, Ill.

—It is an old saying that "children and fools tell the truth," and sometimes a man stupified by liquor is as incapable of falsehood as the latter class. It must have been a most singular and amusing spectacle at Elder Rathburn's exposition at Savanna, Ill., a drunken Mason with sense enough left to confess the truth, and yield to the inevitable.

—Bro. C. Bender writes from Mount Carroll, Ill., that Elders Rathburn and Browne visited that place on the 23d and 24th ult., and worked the first and third degrees in Union Hall, which was well filled each evening with an attentive audience. Bro. Mitchell, of Savanna, the seceding Mason who rendered such valuable assistance in his own town, was present and assisted. These brethren impress the loyal Christians that their work is of God, and that they are filled with the Holy Ghost and with power.

—Bro. Stoddard spent the Sabbath in Byron, Ill., among the people with whom he so long labored as pastor. He was favored last week with a visit at the N. C. A. building from Daniel Varney of Fond du Lac, Wis., whose donations of real estate to the reform have been very large.

—Elder Freeman has been called East among his old friends in Jefferson county, N. Y., for a special work in connection with the reform. We hope soon to receive interesting news from him.

—The friends at Wheaton extend a cordial invitation to all who have so nobly stood by the College with their prayers and purses, to visit the institution they have aided, during Commencement week. A programme of the exercises appears elsewhere. Friends coming from abroad to attend the annual meeting of the National Christian Association on Thursday next, can come a day or two earlier, and visit Wheaton. The first arrivals of the great company reached the College last week from Michigan and Connecticut. The College church has appointed a large committee of entertainment, and every one will be made welcome.

—Our publishers give a fine view of their new work, "Freemasonry Illustrated," this week. The work is now going through the press and will be ready before July. For price, etc., please see 13th page. The Inter-Ocean pays a sorry compliment to the literature of the lodge in answer to a correspondent who asks about Morgan's expose. It says: "Not having read the book, we are unable to answer as regards its correctness. For full information, write to the Cynosure publishers, Chicago, who deal in 'exposure books.' Much interesting reading matter (and equally profitable for instruction and edification) will also be found in Beadle's dime novels." No one who ever read a Masonic exposition was ever very highly edified or instructed we dare affirm, having read several, which the Inter-Ocean editor says he has not, though he is ready to pass a sharp judgment.

—While there are several articles in this number which deserve special attention, there are two we must mention on the second page. The systematized blasphemy and mockery of Christ revealed in Bro Stoddard's article must shock every reader. Elder Hyatt's argument also will be thoroughly read for its originality and force. We have yet several articles for our readers that have been crowded out of this number. A letter from Pastor Bailey of Hennepin, Ill., on the State Congregational Association; a report of the masterly address of Prof. Geo. E. Foster of the University of New Brunswick, in Wheaton College chapel, on Reform and Reformers with special reference to Temperance; and a remarkable editorial in the Voice of Masonry for June, which must be regarded as one of the most damaging lately written against the lodge, all things considered.

—The Odd-fellows along with the communists and Knights Templars are preparing for some kind of a coup de main. The Grand Encampment of Ohio lately met at Toledo and held a prize drill for a champion sword and belt. In time of peace prepare for——what do they propose by this martial drill?

Home Circle.

FOREVER WITH THE LORD.

1 THESS. IV. 17.

O sweet home-echo on the pilgrim's way!
Thrice welcome message from a land of light,
As through a clouded sky the moonbeams stray,
So on Eternity's deep shrouded night
Streams a mild radiance from that cheering word,
"So shall we be forever with the Lord."

At home with Jesus! Him that went before,
For his own people mansions to prepare;
The soul's deep longings stilled, its conflicts o'er,
All rest and blessedness with Jesus there,
What home like this can the wide earth afford?
"So shall we be forever with the Lord."

With him all gathered! to that blessed home,
Through all its windings, still the pathway tends;
While ever and anon bright glimpses come
Of that fair city where the journey ends—
Where all of bliss is centered in one word
"So shall we be forever with the Lord."

Here kindred hearts are severed far and wide
By many a weary mile of land and sea,
Or life's all varied cares and paths divide;
But yet a joyful gathering shall be—
The broken links repaired, the lost restored,
"So shall we be forever with the Lord."

O precious promise, mercifully given!
Well may it hush the wail of earthly woe;
O'er the dark passage to the gates of heaven,
The light of hope and resurrection throw,
Thanks for the blessed life-inspiring word—
"So shall we be forever with the Lord."

—Hymns from the Land of Luther.

MRS. BARNEY'S SERMON.

Strangely enough the cellar stairs preached it, at least they contributed that very important part, the application. Sister Searls had furnished the text in the morning, then the sermon might have gone on from firstly to forty-seventhly without Mrs. Barney's notice, had it not been for the cellar stairs.

Mrs. Barney was hurried that day, she was always hurried, and it was warm and uncomfortable in the sunshiny, stove-heated kitchen where she was hastening to nd fro, and growing fretted and tired without slacking her speed. Nealie, standing at the ironing table, was also tired.

"There's so much to do," she said, wearily. "I don't see why we need to do baking and ironing both in one day. It makes such a crowd, and we could have left one for the morrow."

"To-morrow will bring work enough of its own," answered Mrs. Barney, quickly. "Besides, if we should get the work all out of the way the first of the week, a whole day to rest in would be worth something."

"But then we shouldn't take it for resting just because it would be a whole day, and something else could be crowded into it," murmured Nealie, to whom one hour now looked very inviting, and that possible day in the future very uncertain.

The mother did not answer and the young girl's hand moved more slowly over the damp muslin as her gaze wandered away to the hills where great trees were throwing cool shadows. How pleasant the shade and greenness were! The desire to bring it nearer suggested another thought to Nealie. "Some vines would be so nice at this window, mother. I could plant them if you would let Tim dig a little spot out there."

"Yes, but if we ever get the house fixed up as we want it, we shall have shutters at that window."

"But we don't know when we can do that, and the vines would be so pretty now," urged Nealie.

"Pretty? Well, yes, if we had the whole yard trimmed and laid out as it should be. I hope we shall have it some day; but a stray vine here and there seems hardly worth fussing over when we can't have the whole done."

Nealie sighed, but was silent, and Tim came in with an armful of wood.

"Nealie," he said, pausing near the table, "if you'd just sew this sleeve up a little. The old thing tears awful easy, and I just hit it against a nail."

He spoke low, but Mrs. Barney's quick ears caught the words.

"That jacket torn again, Tim! I never saw such a boy to tear things to pieces! No, Nealie can't stop to mend it now, and I can't either. I've been intending to get you a new one, but there doesn't seem much chance to make any thing new while you contrive to make so much patching and darning on the old."

Mrs. Barney shut the oven door with a snap. Tim was the hired boy, kind-hearted but careless, and he was rather discouraging. Board and clothing sometimes appeared to her a high price for his services. "Hurry now, and pick some currants for dinner," she said.

Tim took the tin pail pointed out to him, but did not hurry as he passed with clouded face down the walk. The thought of a new jacket would have been pleasant a few minutes before, but it had suddenly lost its attractiveness. The boy drew his bushy brows into a scowl and as soon as he was out of sight of the house, threw himself upon the grass and began his currant picking in a very leisurely style. Then it was that Sister Searls drove up in her rattling old buggy, with a horse that was, as Tim said, "a reg'lar old revolutionary pensioner."

"If I can't have fine horses and carriage I can take a deal of comfort with these," was always Sister Searls's cheery comment upon her equipage. She had an errand at Mrs. Barney's and had stopped on her way to the village. A plump, rosy-faced little woman she was, not young, only that she belonged to the class of people who never grow old; neatly dressed, though it was but that old poplin made over, Mrs Barney wondering a little that she should have taken the trouble, when she surely needed a new one.

"This room is too warm to ask any one to sit in," she said apologetically, placing a chair for her caller just outside the door. "When we are able to have the house altered to suit us, I shall not have a stove here in summer."

"In the meanwhile you have this cool porch. What a pleasant place it is," said Sister Searls admiringly.

"Yes, if one had time to enjoy it," answered Mrs. Barney, with an uneasy little laugh. "I'm so hurried, trying to get everything about the place in just the right order, that I don't have time."

"Take time, Sister Barney, take time!" said Mrs. Searls, smiling, but earnestly. "Make the most of what you have while you are working for something better. Don't crowd out any little sweetness you have, to make room for some great pleasure that's farther off. You see, she added, blushing a little, as if her words needed excuse, "it's something I had to learn myself, years ago, never to trample on daisies in a wild chase after roses. The roses I have not found, but the daisies have been enough to make the path bright."

Mrs. Barney looked upon her in some perplexity, as she took her departure. She had listened with one-half her mind on the loaves of bread in the oven, and the other half did not fully comprehend what had been said.

"Daisies and roses! I don't see what any sort of a flower has to do with wanting a new kitchen! But there! I suppose ministers' wives, even if they are only ministers' wives, hear so much talk that it comes natural to them. Bits out of old garments like as any way. Dear me! I don't get much time for poetry in my life! I'm sure of that. How Tim does loiter!"

[Concluded next week.]

STAND FOR THE TRUTH.

Let me advise you to wear no armor for your backs when you have determined to follow the track of truth. Receive upon your breastplates of righteousness the sword-cuts of your adversaries; their stern metal shall turn the edge of your foeman's weapon. Let the right be your lord paramount and for the rest be free and your own master still. Follow truth for her own sake; follow her in evil report; let not many waters quench your love to her. Bow to no customs if they be evil. Yield to no established rules if they involve a lie. Do not evil even though good should come of it.

"Consequence!" this is the devil's argument. Leave consequences to God, but do the right. If foemen surround thee, do the right. Be genuine, real, sincere, true, upright, Godlike. The world's maxim is, trim your sails and yield to circumstances. But if you would do any good in your generation, you must be made of sterner stuff, and help make your time rather than be made by them.

You must not yield to customs, but, like the anvil, endure all the blows, until the hammers break themselves. When misrepresented, use no crooked means to clear yourself. Clouds do not last long. If in the course of duty you are tried by the distrust of friends, gird up your loins, and say in your heart, I was not driven to virtue by the encouragement of friends, nor will I be repelled from it by their coldness. Finally, be just, and fear not; "corruption wins not more than honesty;" truth lives and reigns when falsehood dies and rots.—Spurgeon.

TRUSTING THE LORD.—A very learned man once asked Luther how he would be able in the day of judgment to bear the responsibility of having rejected the opinions of so many learned men. With a smile he replied: "In this manner I will do it: Dear Lord Christ, I will say, I well knew that they were all learned men, but I acted so foolishly and had such confidence in thee, that thou, O Christ, were more learned and wise than they and the whole world. If thou then didst deceive me I am indeed deceived.

Over the triple doorways of the Cathedral of Milan there are three inscriptions spanning the splendid arches. Over one is carved a beautiful wreath of roses, and underneath is the legend: "All that which pleases is but for a moment." Over the other is a sculptured cross and there are the words: "All that which troubles us is but for a moment." But underneath the great central entrance to the main aisle is the inscription: "That only is important which is eternal."

Be at work. Do what you can. Weep with them that weep, if you cannot relieve them. If you cannot give gold, give personal service. Teach children if you cannot instruct men. Be a support to the household, if not able to be a pillar of state. Be a lamp in the chamber if you cannot be a star in the sky. Gladden the circle of home if you cannot illuminate a city. Talk to the few, if you cannot save a world, try to lead at least some one's soul to Christ.

WATCH THE TONGUE.

The story is told of a woman who freely used her tongue to the scandal of others, and confessed to the priest what she had done. He gave her a ripe thistle top, and told her to go out in various directions and scatter the seeds one by one. Wondering at the penance, she obeyed, and then returned and told her confessor. To her amazement he bade her go back and gather the scattered seeds; and when she objected that it would be impossible, he replied that it would be still more difficult to gather up and destroy all the evil reports which she had circulated about others. Any thoughtless, careless child can scatter a handful of thistle seed before the wind in a moment; but the strongest and wisest man cannot gather them again.

Childrens' Corner.

Clock-work in the Family, Neatness and Order.

"The gentle child that tries to please,
That hates to quarrel, fret, and tease,
And would not say one angry word—
That child is pleasing to the Lord."

Everything in this clock-work family is neat, clean, sweet and tidy—the floors, the carpets, the kitchen, the parlor, the center-table, bookcase, the chambers, bed-room, and bedding, the wardrobes, the furniture of every kind, the table spread with heaven's bounty. Everything in the house and around the house bears evident marks of order, system, regularity and good taste.

The children are neat as a pink, quiet and harmless as doves, brisk as larks, clad neatly, modestly, simply, gospelly; their heads are combed, their hands and faces washed.

At family worship all is clock-work; every one is present at the instant, hush as heaven, sedate, solemn, peaceful, orderly. Oh, what a blessed, happy, peaceful, joyful family—a little heaven on earth!

Little friends, is not this beautiful? How is it with you? Order, system, life—a time for everything, a place for everything? A time to sleep, a time to rise, a time to work, a time to praise and pray? Is every day, every hour, every moment duly arranged, systematically, beautifully? Order is neaven's first law.

View the heavenly orbits, the sun, moon, and stars, the varied seasons, nature in all her movements. The heavens declare God's wisdom and glory, system and order. How in business matters? Are you active, studiously, perseveringly, unceasingly? Do you move on with light, life, vigor, strength of purpose, vivacity, stretching every nerve, doing what your hands find to do with your might?—D. F. Newton.

In the Streets.

"His father don't allow him to be in the streets at night," said Will Carson, in a mocking tone: "better tie the baby to the bedpost with his mother's apron strings." John Mellen's face flushed at these taunts. No boy likes to be ridiculed, especially when a crowd of his play-fellows are standing by to join in the laugh against him.

"Be a man and come along with us," said Harry Jones. "You are old enough to think and act for yourself."

"Come John, with us," said another, "We shall have a grand time. It won't hurt you just for once to have a little fun."

"No," said John, "I will mind my father. The Bible says, 'Honor thy father and thy mother,' and I shall do it."

"Come on, boys," said Will, starting off; "don't stand listening to his preaching." On he went and the boys quickly followed.

John went home and in preparing his lessons for the next day and in joining the home pleasures, he had forgotten all about the boys.

The next morning on his way to school, he heard that the boys had been arrested and sent to jail for being drunk and disorderly. Think how anxiously their parents must have been waiting all through the night for their boys to come home. And then to be told they were in jail! How it must have surprised and pained them.

Don't be wandering in the streets at night, boys. It is a bad habit, and nothing but harm can come from it.

If these boys had minded their parents, and stayed at home, they would have made different men. Not one of them turned out well.

Hundreds of boys are being ruined every night through being on the streets.

John Mellen made a happy and prosperous man. And so will every boy who fears God, stands up for the right, and honors his father and mother.

Praying over Lessons.

"There," said a little boy, "I have learned my lesson sooner than ever; I believe that it does good to pray over my books."

He was asked what he meant by so saying.

"Well, when I came home from school, and looked over my lesson, I thought how difficult it was. At first I said it could not be learned in so short a time as I have; but then I remembered what my Sunday-school teacher had told me about Daniel and his three companions; so I thought if prayer aided them, it might help me. I then prayed over my lesson, asking God to make my memory good, and I learned my lesson in half the time."

This little boy took an excellent method; and if he continues to look to God for a blessing on his studies, he will not look in vain. And why not ask Divine aid in one's studies, as well as in anything else? Learning is not very easy work, and we need God to help us. Our minds are under his control, and he can make the memory strong, and enable us to do more work in one hour than we could otherwise do in two.

Little Tommy.

Little Tommy was a very dark colored boy. I never heard when his father and mother died, but think he must have been very small, for Tommy was only six years old when I found him in the "Colored Orphan Asylum," and began to notice that he was a very bright boy, if he had a very black face. But oh! what a mischievous little fellow he was! pulling hair, sticking pins, or even using his little feet, would often make the infant class room a scene of confusion, to the great annoyance of his patient teacher.

In one of our visits, on going into the infant class-room, we found Tommy alone with his teacher, while the other little ones were gamboling like so many little lambs on the play-ground. Supposing Tommy had been kept in as a punishment, we said with a sigh, "Has Tommy been bad again?" "No," said Miss C. (his teacher), "Tommy is not bad any more." We asked, "Why, then, don't you let him go out to play?" Miss C. answered, "Because Tommy said he wanted to stay in and talk about Jesus."

We turned to the little black face which now to us looked beautiful, and said, "Tommy, dear, how is this? You used to be so bad, and now teacher tells me you are good; how is this?" With a sweet smile he said, "God makes me good." "But," I continued, "you used to be so bad in school; how can you pray in school? you cannot go out of school and kneel down and pray." "O, I whisper to God," said the little fellow. Again I said, "Satan used to come so quickly and make you stick a pin, or pull a boy's hair, before you hardly had time to think how bad it was." "Ah," said dear Tommy, "I whisper to God quick."

I hope that all the dear children who read this will, like little Tommy, ask God to make them good, and learn how blessed it is to whisper to God quick, when Satan puts in their mind a bad thought, or a desire to do anything that would not please God. God is our loving father, and wants to make us good and happy. God our father loved us so much that he gave the blessed Jesus to save us from our sins; and the loving Jesus is now saying to every dear child, "Give me thy heart." That means, be my child—obey me—love me; and every one from the heart will say, "Blessed Lord, help me; I will, I do give thee my heart; for Christ's sake forgive me my sins!"—to all who thus honestly come to God through Christ, the promise is given, "I will receive you."—Guide to Holiness.

The Chinese Wall.

The great wall of China was measured in many places by Mr. Unthank, an American engineer, lately engaged on a survey for a Chinese railway. His measurements give the height at 18 feet, and a width on top of 15 feet. Every few hundred yards there is a tower 24 ft square, and from 20 to 45 feet high. The foundation of the wall is of solid granite. Mr. Unthank brought with him a brick from the wall which is supposed to have been made 200 years before the time of Christ. In building this immense stone fence to keep out the Tartars, the builders never attempted to avoid mountains or chasms to save expense. For 1,300 miles the wall goes over plain and mountain, and every foot of the foundation is solid granite, and the most of the structure solid masonry. In some places the wall is built smooth up against the bank, or canons, or precipices, where there is a sheer descent of 1,000 feet. Small streams are arched over; and in the larger streams the wall runs to the water's edge, and a tower is built on each side. On the top of the wall there are breastworks and defences, facing in and out, so the defending force can pass from one tower to another without being exposed to an enemy from either side. To calculate the time of building or cost of this wall is beyond human skill. So far as the magnitude of the work is concerned, it surpasses everything in ancient or modern times of which there is any trace. The Pyramids of Egypt are nothing compared to it.

Johnny lost his knife. After searching in one pocket and another, until he had been through all, without success he exclaimed: "O, dear! I wish I had another pocket. It might be in that."

A little urchin in one of our schools being asked, "What is Rhode Island celebrated for?" replied, "It is the only one of the New England States which is the smallest."

LUTHERAN.

—The Lutheran Standard of Columbus, O., lately published the following: "The Ev. Lutheran St. Matthew's congregation of New York, as was mentioned in these columns, has thoroughly discussed the subject of secret societies and resolved in consequence to receive no members of these organizations into its connection. A goodly number of such secret society members were convinced of the anti-Christian tendency of these orders and withdrew from them. But some were offended at the course taken by the congregation and preferred to dissolve their connection with it. The Zeuge der Wahrheit states that of these several were, without a dismissal from St. Matthew's and without any questions as to their standing, received by the congregations of Drs. Wedekind and Krotel, both of whom profess to be Lutheran, and the latter of whom is thought one of the leaders in the General Council. The case shows how much the double-faced resolutions of the Council are worth, and how little prominent General Synodists and Council men are disposed to second the efforts of Lutherans in their war against secretism."

FREE METHODIST.

—Rev. D. B. Turney of the Sugar Grove church, Penn., is writing a series of articles on Freemasonry for the Free Methodist.

—Some of the brethren of the Chicago church have opened a street meeting which they hope to continue through the season.

—Bro. Joseph Travis of Philadelphia has established a mission at the corner of 13th St. and Girard Ave., where they have Sunday School and preaching Sunday P. M., and preaching Friday evening.

—The anniversary exercises of the Seminary at North Chili, New York, will take place on Tuesday, June 17, 1879, at 1:30 P. M.

—The tent meeting held in Belvidere, Ill., by Rev. W. F. Manley has been owned of God in the conversion of a number of souls.

FREE BAPTIST.

—At the last quarterly meeting of Free Baptist churches of his vicinity, Prof. S. C. Kimball of Center Strafford, N. H., distribued copies of the Cynosure among the ministers. While engaged in this work the minister from Pittsfield, N. H., approached him and exclaimed, "You are at your dirty work again, I see!" The minister is an Odd-fellow. Bro. Kimball replied, "I am a co-laborer in this work with Pentecost, Moody, President Finney and the Apostle Paul." "It is quite evident," he writes, "that Masons and Odd-fellows do not like the Cynosure or those who circulate it. There is an irrepressible conflict. I wish to be on the Lord's side." Amen!

—Rev. Isaac Hyatt attended the Rochester quarterly meeting at North Parma, New York, last week, from Friday to the Sabbath.

NON-SECTARIAN.

—The Evangelist L. B. Kent of the Western Holiness Association sends the following interesting account of the Lord's work in Lake county, Ind., to the Banner of Holiness. Bro. J. P. Stoddard became acquainted with this movement nearly two years ago, and held it at a similar estimate:

"Nearly three years ago, a number of earnest souls came out from Chicago with a small tent, a tabernable, to labor for the conversion of souls. They called themselves 'The Union Mission Band.' Coming without church sending, they were of course 'self-constituted evangelists.' Being earnest, consecrated people, they were ready to go 'anywhere with Jesus.' Going simply upon a mission of labor with and for the blessed Master, they did not have to wait for so-called 'church' bidding, or calls. From the very beginning of their work, they had the seal of God's Spirit upon their mission. 'The common people heard them gladly,' and came in crowds to their meetings, and the Spirit of God wrought mightily upon the hearts of the unconverted. Preaching, exhortation, prayer, personal appeals, altar exercises, and family visitations, constituted their programme. They visited many places, including Crown Point, Hobart, Hebron, and other towns, remaining from one week to two months, according to the interest and success of the meetings. In every place the Lord has added helpers to their ranks, so that they are able to supply lay preaching for Sabbath work in many places, while also holding revival meetings.

Not less than fifteen hundred have professed conversion under the ministry of these laborers. Many having declined to unite with the church, they have been obliged to form societies or bands, thus sustaining regular meetings. In a few instances, tabernacles and churches have been erected, but only when unavoidable. After this term of nearly three years, the work gives no signs of decline. The laborers are full of hope, and are arranging for more extended campaigns. A number of them are blessed witnesses and teachers of holiness; others are inquiring; and a number have entered into the fullness of the blessing at the recent meetings.

Having labored in four different places where revival meetings have been held by these workers, I am most happy to say that I have never met a more earnest and godly people. Christians imbedded in sectarian ice would find it an advantage to be thrown among these warm-hearted disciples of the lowly Jesus. Of course the envious eye of the owl of sectarianism is upon these busy workers. But the Lord will be with them, and bless them, as they go forward following Jesus.

I rejoice exceedingly that it has been my privilege to drift into this gulf stream of primitive life and work. O that it might widen to the ends of the earth! Possibly I have needed my recent experiences of crushing between sectarian icebergs, and then this warm gulf stream, to open my eyes! At any rate, I greatly enjoy this fellowship and companionship of the Lord's free people."

CONGREGATIONAL.

—Rev. T. C. Jerome, of Patchogue, Long Island, whose faithful words against secretism are on record, has received accessions on confession of faith in Christ at every communion during the past year.

—At Hennepin, Ill., a member of of the Catholic church was expelled because he had joined the Odd-fellows; he then applied to the Congregational church for admission, but as there were serious questions respecting his case, he will not be received until these may be satisfactorily settled.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

—The average salary of Methodist ministers in fourteen southern conferences is said to be $572, and the average amount paid $438. In northern conferences the average is $700, and the deficiency in payments about 12 per cent.

—The name of "Rev. H. W. Thomas, D. D.," of this city, appears in the programme of a Universalist association, meeting in Elgin, Ill., this week. He follows "the Rev. N. S. Sage, L. L. D.," of Sycamore, one of whose eminent qualifications, according to the Universalist organ, the New Covenant of this city, is his Freemasonry. So active is he in this, the lodges of Sycamore find it for their interest to keep him in the place.

UNITED BRETHREN IN CHRIST.

—Rev. D. Shuck has returned to California taking with him D. A. Mobley, a recent graduate of the Union Biblical Seminary, Dayton, snd Bro. C. A. Gantzschow of Hartsville, Ind., a well known worker in the ranks of reform.

—A convention for the promotion of Bible holiness, will be held in the U. B. church in Bloomer, Montcalm county, Mich., six miles east of Fenwick station, commencing June 10.

—The Highway of Holiness reports a great work in northern Indiana, like to that mentioned by Bro. Kent, and we presume under the same workers. At a meeting held in the new brick (U. B.) church near Palestine, twenty-eight professed full salvation. The meeting was held by the Cook's Holiness Band and others. From here they went to Fairview church, where the meeting at the time of writing was still going on. Rev. G. W. Hutchings writes: "Oh, what a glorious meeting! Both believers and sinners are coming to the altar, and both classes obtain that for which they come." He adds, "Among the most glorious saved was my wife. I never saw such a meeting. All denominations work together as one." One brother, Rev. S. W. Wells, testified "that the Lord took him all to pieces and made him a new man, leaving all sin, prejudice, appetite for tobaceo, and love for secrecy out." Yes, so it will do when the work is thorough. Until a man can give these up he is not yet holy. If this United Brethren church had a full baptism of the Holy Ghost—individually cleansed and filled—there would need be no more conventions called, either for or against modification. "In Christ Jesus we are all one." Full, thorough identification with Christ, will bring a corresponding fellowship among believers.

FREE MISSIONS.

—Bro. A. D. Zaraphonithes with his wife passed through this city on Thursday last, on their way to New York and Boston, from whence they expect soon to sail for Syra, one of the most important towns of the Grecian Islands. They spent a few days last week with friends in Wheaton who became acquainted with Mrs. Zaraphonithes at a very pleasant social gathering on Wednesday evening in the Ladies' Hall of the College. The College church also put in their hands its foreign mission collection, a handsome sum but we did not learn the amount. What is better, the church will follow these friends with their prayers for that blessing without which their labor will be vainly spent. In the Thursday evening prayer-meeting this was urged by Sister Hinman, who has been on mission ground in Africa and among the Indians, and by others. Bro. Zaraphonithes expects to begin a mission among the Albanians, that brave and warlike people occupying the western coast of what was two years ago Turkey in Europe. As they are largely occupied as sailors, he hopes to open a mission among them in Constantinople, where he will be able to reach them in considerable numbers and scatter more widely than in any other way the good seed of the Word. As no missionary effort has been made among this enterprising people, the importance of this work will appear to all, and should appeal to every one who desires to promulgate a pure gospel among all nations. With the missions represented by Bro. Brown of Oberlin, this one will be independent of the missionary organizations. Bro. Zaraphonithes wishing to go whither the Spirit of God should lead him, and none of the societies caring to begin work among the Albanians, he has responded to the call of Christ, "Here am I, send me;" and we believe that God will supply all his need in this work. We suggest that the National Christian Association, of which he is a member, take appropriate action respecting this brother at the annual meeting next week. A commendation from the Association would introduce this work to many who might not otherwise notice or regard it. It is but just to the excellent young lady who accompanies our brother that in leaving friends, home and native land, perhaps for life, she shows the devotion of a true disciple of her Lord. Her husband returns to the vicinity of the land of his birth, to live and labor among familiar scenes. Such she abandons at the call of Christ, expecting to find her reward for self-sacrifice in a labor of love, in the consciousness of doing the will of God, and in the final commendation of the judgment day.

GENERAL.

—In the Fulton prayer meeting last week a brother said that three years ago a missionary asked prayers for the king of Siam. That king has just opened a college for children of royalty and rank, and put that missionary at the head of it, with instructions to call other missionaries as professors.

—The practice of auricular confession has increased to such a degree in the Church of England that no less than ninety-six peers have forwarded to the Archbishop of Canterbury an address expressing alarm thereat and urging him publicly to condemn it.

—Lord Radstock, in Sweden, has lately addressed meetings of 2,000 people in Upsala, a University town of 14,000. More than a hundred remained each night as inquirers. At Stockholm, also, there were about a hundred inquirers at the last meeting. Lord Radstock says: "There seems a 'sound of abundance of rain.' I am expecting to go to Jonkoping and Carlscrona, and then to Copenhagen; and I request prayer for blessing on my visits to those places. One interesting feature of the Lord's grace in Stockholm is the obedience of faith with which several pastors and elder brethren have accepted their privilege of anointing the sick and praying over them in the name of the Lord. There have been many remarkable instances of God's gracious healing, showing that God has not withdrawn the promise in James 5: 15."

News of the Week.

—The great trial of the architects and contractors about the new government buildings in this city has ended in a verdict of "not guilty."

—Heavy and damaging frosts are reported from Wisconsin, Ohio, and some of the Eastern States on Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights.

The poisoned-brook horror in Vermont assumes another phase. Medical men declare that the children died of diphtheria superinduced by the pools of stagnant water under and about the school-house. Correspondents who visited Jacob's Mill, the scene of the tragedy, report a condition of affairs that seems to carry out this theory.

—Ontario, the most important of the provinces of the Dominion of Canada, has just had its elections and maintains its Mowat reform ministry by a large majority. The effect is the moral condemnation of the policy of the John A. McDonald or Dominion government in its protection tariff, or, as the catch words were last fall, a "national policy." The Tories there are the extremely loyal men who first avowed annexation when "responsible or self-government" became supreme. How strangely inconsistent they ever have been!

—Official reports from Cashmere,

India, say that it is impossible to exaggerete the distress the famine is causing there. The Maharajah of this province, at the urgent request of the Viceroy of India, is proceeding to Serinagur to superintend the organization of relief. Three thousand five hundred tons of grain are in transit to the Vaalley of Cashmere.

The Amoor river and the tributaries in eastern Asia have overflowed, and it is thought a famine will ensue.

—A Vienna correspondent says the relations between Russia and Turkey have become cooler in consequence of the events attending the installation of Aleko Pasha. The Sultan particularly begins to doubt Russia's sincerity, because of the discovery of correspondence between Slav committees in Russia and branches throughout Turkey showing a design for the union of all Bulgarians in accordance with the treaty of San Stefano.

—A correspondent at Paris telegraphs to London as follows:

M. De Lesseps has already commenced the formation of a company to construct the tide-level interoceanic canal from Colon to Aspinwall across the Isthmus of Darien, the route selected by the International Congress. The company which obtained the concession from the government of Colombia, and made arrangements with the Panama railroad, will turn over their charters to the new organization for a proper consideration, so that the new company may start fair and square. A first subscription of 400,000,000 francs will be opened simultaneously all over the world about September next. It is to be an essentially popular loan without government aid or guarantee. The amount of the first subscription, of which ten per cent is to be paid on subscribing, will, M. De Lesseps expects, be more than covered.

—The eruption of Mount Ætna had almost ceased June 8. The flow of lava was completely stopped.

—An unexpected and happy termination of the war in South Africa has occurred. According to advices received, John Dunn, an Englishman, who has long been a confidential friend and adviser of King Cetewayo, but who for some time has been with the English forces, recently penetrated the lines of the Zulu and obtained an audience with the King. He took with him information which convinced Cetewayo of the greatness of the British forces, and of the inevitable and disastrous results to the King which would follow continued war. As a result the King has sent messengers to sue for peace.

—A dispatch from St. Petersburg says Alexander Solovieff, who lately attempted the assassination of the Czar, was executed on the 7th at 5 p. m. His condemnation was regarded as certain, but its was not generally supposed that his execution would be so speedy. His trial, which took place Friday, was conducted in one of the rooms of the great citadel of St. Peter and St. Paul, which overlooks the city. The proceedings were very formal, but directed chiefly for the purpose of extorting from Solovieff confessions respecting his accomplices and the supposed orders under which he acted. The proceedings in the tribunal were secret, but it is understood that the prisoner persisted in refusing to make any statements respecting either his motives or his accomplices.

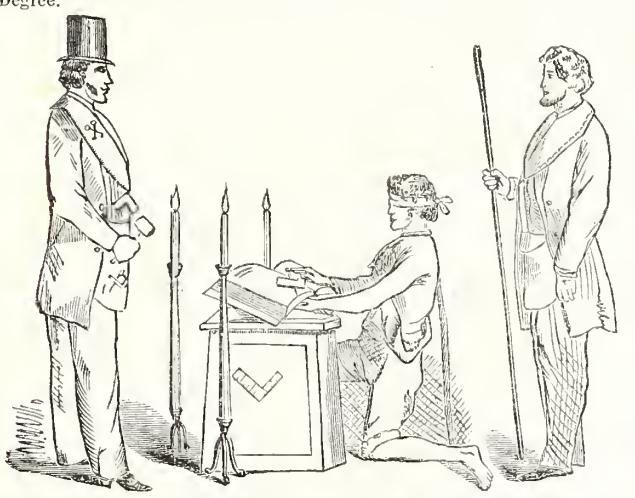
CHAPTER XXIX.

MASONIC SECRETS[3*2] AND DOCTRINES ILLUSTRATED.

PREPARATION[30] FOR ENTERED APPRENTICE DEGREE.



The candidate having satisfactorily answered the questions given on pages 95-6 of "Freemasonry Illustrated" and paid the initiation fee, is prepared for initiation as follows:

The Deacons or Stewards strip him to his shirt and drawers, and his drawers must be exchanged for a pair furnished by the lodge which fasten with strings. The left leg of these is rolled up above the knee. If his shirt does not open in front it is turned around, and if there are metal buttons or studs on it they are removed.

Candidate duly and truly prepared, Entered Apprentice Degree.

The left sleeve of his shirt is rolled up above the elbow, and the left side of his shirt is tucked in; so that the left leg, left foot,[31] left arm and left breast are bare. A slipper is put on his right foot,a hoodwink[32] over his eyes, and a small rope called a cable tow[33] is put once around his neck.[28]

Candidate taking Entered Apprentice Obligation. See page 107.

NOTE 382—FROM "FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED."

"It has been well said that the emblems are the Masonic secrets written out, conveying as they do—but only to the instructed eye—all the Esotery of the institution."—Morris's Dictionary, Art. Emblems—Symbols.

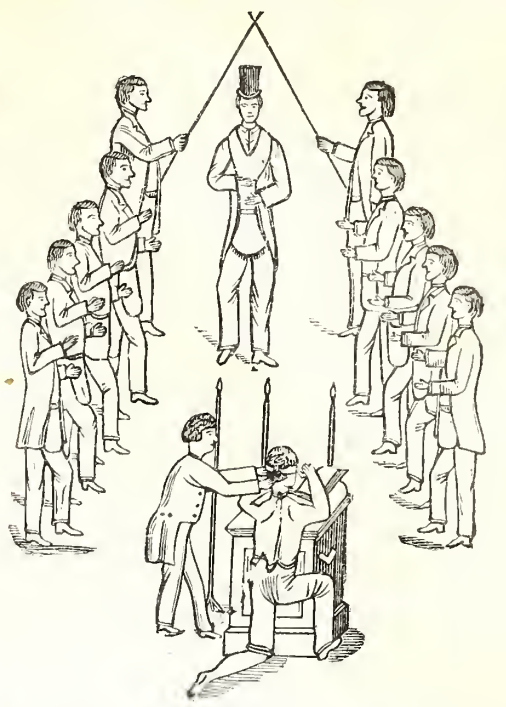
NOTE 30—FROM "FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED,"

"PREPARATION. There is much analogy between the preparation of the candidate in Masonry and the preparation for entering the Temple as practiced among the ancient Israelites. The Talmudical treatise entitled 'Beracoth' prescribes the regulation in these words: 'No man shall enter into the Lord's house with his staff [an offensive weapon,] nor with his outer garment, nor with his shoes on his feet, nor with money in his purse.'" Mackey's Ritualist, page 42, Art. Preparation.

NOTE 31—FROM "FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED."

"In nearly all the systems of Masonry, the act of uncovering one or more of the feet constitutes a part of the rite." Morris's Dictionary, Art. Discalceation.

NOTE 32—FROM "FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED."



"The material darkness which is produced by it [the hoodwink] is an emblem of the darkness of his soul. He is deprived of everything that has a value, and wherewith he could purchase food, to indicate his utter destitution of the mental wealth of primitive truth." Pierson's Traditions page 39, Subject Entered Apprentice.

NOTE 33—FROM "FREEMASONRY IL USTRATED."

"The Cable Tow is emblematic of the cord or band of affection which should unite the whole fraternity, as in Hosea xi: 4: 'I drew them with cords of a man, with bands of love.' But there is another and not figurative use of this implement with which Masons are well acquainted." Mackey's Lexicon, Art. Cable Tow.

NOTE 28—FROM "FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED."

"There he stands without our portals, on the threshold of this new Masonic life, in darkness, helplessness and ignorance. Having been wandering amid the errors and covered over with the pollutions of the outer and profane world, he comes inquiringly to our doors seeking the new birth and asking a withdrawal of the veil which conceals divine truth from his uninitiated sight. * * * There is to be not simply a change for the future but also an extinction of the past; for initiation is as it were a death to the world and a resurrection to a new life." Mackey's Ritualist, pages 22-23.

"THE WORKING TOOLS OF AN ENTERED APPRENTICE"

Are the Twenty-four Inch Gauge and Common Gavel.

"THE TWENTY-FOUR INCH GAUGE

Is an instrument used by operative masons to measure and lay out their work; but we, as Free and Accepted Masons, are taught to make use of it for the more noble and glorious purpose of dividing our time. It being divided into twenty-four equal parts, is emblematical of the twenty-four hours of the day, which we are taught to divide into three equal parts; whereby are found eight hours for the service of God and a distressed worthy brother, eight for our usual vocations, and eight for refreshment and sleep."—Mackey's Ritualist, page 38.

NOTE 63—FROM "FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED."

"In Masonry by the shock of enlightenment we seek humbly, indeed, and at an ineonceivable distance, to preserve the recollection and to embody the idea of the birth of material light by the representation of the circumstances that accompanied it, and their reference to the birth of intellectual or Masonic light. The one is the type of the other; and hence the illumination of the candidate is attended with a ceremony that may be supposed to imitate the primal illumination of the universe." Mackey's Ritualist, page 31.

NOTE 19—FROM "FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED."

"A Due Guard is a portion of the manual exercises of the lodge, by which we are reminded of sacred engagements." Morris's Dictionary, Art. Due Guard.

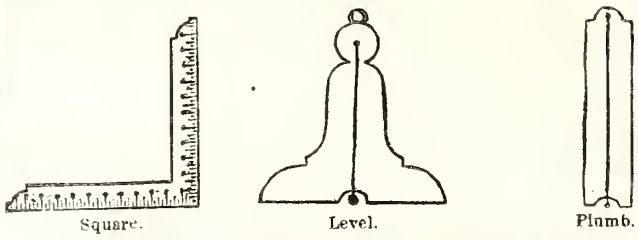
"THE COMMON GAVEL



Is an instrument made use of by operative masons to break off the corners of rough stones, the better to fit them for the builder's use; but we, as Free and Accepted Masons, are taught to make use of it for the more noble and glorious purpose of divesting our hearts and consciences of all the vices and superfluities of life; thereby fitting our minds as living stones for that spiritual building, that house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."—Mackey's Ritualist, page 38.

"THE Square inculcates morality; the Level equality; and the Plumb, rectitude of conduct.

"They are called immovable jewels, because they are always to be found in the East, West and South parts of the Lodge, being worn by the officers in those respective stations."—Mackey's Ritualist, page 57.

"THE MOVABLE JEWELS

"The rough ashlar is a stone as taken from the quarry in its rude and natural state.

"The perfect ashlar is a stone made ready by the hands of the workmen, to be adjusted by the working tools of the fellow craft.

"The trestle-board is for the master workman to draw his designs upon.

"By the rough ashlar we are reminded of our rude and imperfect state by nature; by the perfect ashlar, that state of perfection at which we hope to arrive by a virtuous education, our own endeavors, and the blessing of God; and by the trestle-board we are also reminded that, as the operative workman erects his temporal building agreeably to the rules and designs laid down by the master on his trestle-board, so should we, both operative and speculative, endeavor to erect our spiritual building agreeably to the rules and designs laid down by the Supreme Architect of the Universe, in the great books of nature and revelation, which are our spiritual, moral, and Masonic trestle-board."—Mackey's Ritualist, page 58.

THE POINT WITHIN A CIRCLE.

"Lodges were anciently dedicated to King Solomon, * * but Masons professing Christianity dedicate theirs to St. John the Baptist and St. John the Evangelist, who were two eminent patrons of Masonry; and since their time, there is represented, in every regular and well-governed lodge a certain point within a circle, the point representing an individual brother, the circle the boundary line of his conduct to God and man, beyond which he is never to suffer his passions, prejudices, or interest to betray him, on any occasion. This circle is embordered by two perpendicular parallel lines, representing those saints who were perfect parallels in Christianity, as well as in Masonry; and upon the vertex rests the Holy Scriptures, which point out the whole duty of man. In going around this circle we necessarily touch upon these two lines, as well as upon the Holy Scriptures; and while a Mason keeps himself thus circumscribed, it is impossible that he should err."—Sickels's Monitor, page 51.

"This mental illumination—this spiritual light, which, after his new birth is the first demand of the new candidate, is but another name for Divine Truth—the truth of God and the soul—the nature and essence of both—which constitute the chief design of all Masonic teaching." Mackey's Ritualist, page 33.

NOTE 100—FROM "FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED."

"PENALTY. The ceremony of entering into a covenant among the ancient Hebrews is alluded to in Jeremiah, xxxiv. 18. It was usual for the parties covenanting, to cut a beast in twain and pass between the parts thereof. Jeremiah also relates the penalties to be inflicted upon the people for a breach of their covenant. An English writer, Brother Goodacre, (quoted by Dr. Oliver,) thus fully explains the whole ceremony of making the covenant. The allusion will not escape the attentive Mason. 'After an animal had been selected his throat was cut across [Entered Apprentice's penalty,] with one single blow, so as to divide the windpipe, arteries and veins, without touching any bone.' The next ceremony were to tear the breast open and pluck out the heart. [Fellow Craft's penalty] and if there was the least imperfection, the body would be considered unclean. The animal was then divided into two parts and placed north and south, [Master Mason's penalty] that the parties to the covenant might pass between them from east to west; and the carcass was then left as a prey to voracious animals." *Mackey's Lexicon, Art. Grasp right hands in the usual way and press thumb on knuckle joint of second finger.

"THE WORKING TOOLS OF A FELLOW CRAFT

Plumb. Square. Level.

Are the Plumb, the Square, and the Level.

"The Plumb is an instrument made use of by operative masons to raise perpendiculars; the Square, to square their work; and the Level, to lay horizontals; but we, as Free and Accepted Masons, are taught to make use of them for more noble and glorious purposes; the plumb admonishes us to walk uprightly in our several stations before God and men, squaring our actions by the square of virtue, and remembering that we are traveling upon the level of time to that undiscovered country from whose bourne no traveler returns."—Mackey's Rit. p. 73.

Preparation of Candidate, Master Mason's Degree.

PREPARATION OF CANDIDATE, MASTER MASON'S[121] DEGREE.

The candidate is stripped, as in previous degrees, but in this "Sublime Degree," both breasts, both arms both feet and legs are bare. He is hood-winked and the cable-tow is put three times around his body.

Candidate taking[121] Master Mason's Obligation.[112] See page 252.

NOTE 111—FROM "FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED."

"Increased privileges and honors thus encircling the profession of Fellow Craft, weightier and more nnmerous responsibilities are superadded. Pow erful obligations impelling him to be secret, obedient, honest and charitable, guide and restrain him." Morris's Dictionary, Art Fellow Craft.

NOTE 131—FROM "FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED,"

"This has very properly been called the sublime degree of a Master Mason, as well for the solemnity of the ceremonies which accompany it, as for the profound lessons of wisdom which it incnlcates. The important deslgn of the degree is to symbolize the great doctrines of the resurrection of the body and the immor ality of the soul; and hence it has been remarked by a learned writer of our order that the Master Mason represents a man saved from the grave of iniquity and raised to the faith of salvation." Mackey's Ritualist, page 109.

NOTE 114—FROM "FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED."

"We may not call in qnestion the propriety of this organization; if we wonld be Masons we must yield private judgment. 'To the law and to the testimony—if any man walk not by this rule, it is because there is no llght in him." Pierson's Traditions, page 30.

NOTE 121—FROM "FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED."

"The importance of secret-keeping is made the grounnd-work of all Masonic degrees; not so mnch on account of the intrinsic valne of the Masonic esoterica as that Masons may learn the virtnes of discretion and fidelity to a trust." Morris's Dictionary, Art. Secret Breaking.

NOTE 112—FROM "FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED."

"An obligation is an essential part of a degree. There are three partles to every Masonic obligation; first the candidate, second the presiding officer who represents the society and third the Omnipresent Deity." Morris's Dictionary, Art. Obligation.

Dne-Guard, Master Mason.

DUE-GUARD OF A MASTER MASON.

Extend both hands, in front of the body, height of hips, palms down, thumbs nearly touching each other. [See cut.]

SIGN OF A MASTER MASON.

Made from due-guard, by dropping left hand and drawing right hand across the bowels to the right, thumb toward the body, height of hips. [See cut.]

Sign of a Master Mason.

Pass Grip of a Master Mason.

PASS GRIP OF A MASTER MASON.

Grasp hands naturally and press thumb between knuckles of second and third fingers.

STRONG GRIP OF A MASTER MASON OR LION'S PAW.

Hands joined as shown in cut, thumb and fingers pressing hard on hand and wrist of each other.

PASS OF A MASTER MASON Tubal Cain; name of grip

"THE COMPASSES

Are peculiarly consecrated to this degree, because within their extreme points, when properly extended, are emblematically said to be inclosed the principal tenets of our profession, and hence the moral application of the Compasses, in the third degree, is to those precious jewels of a Master Mason, Friendship, Morality, and Brotherly Love."—Mackey's Ritualist, page 110.

"THE WORKING TOOLS" OF A MASTER MASON

Are all the implements of masonry indiscriminately, but more especially the Trowel.

"The Trowel is an instrument made use of by Operative Masons to spread the cement which unites a building into one common mass; but we, as Free and Accepted Masons, are taught to make use of it for the more noble and glorious purpose of spreading the cement of brotherly love and affection; that cement which unites us into one sacred band, or society of friends and brothers, among whom no contention, should ever exist, but that noble contention or rather emulation; of who can best work and best agree."—Mackey's Ritualist, page 111.

THE TRAGEDY OF THE THIRD DEGREE.

PLAYING MURDER: SCENE I.—Assault by "Jubela" on the Candidate alias "Grand Master Hiram Abiff."

NOTE 71—FROM "FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED "

"Specnlative Masonry is the application and sanctification of the working tools and implements, the rules and priuciples of operative masonry, to the veneration of God and the purification of the heart. The speculative mason is engaged in the constrnction of a spiritual temple in his heart, pure and spotless, fit for the dwelling place of Him who is the author of purity.' Mackey's Rituakst, page 89.

OBITUARY.

Died at his residence in Lisbon Center, New York, JAMES NORWAY, in the 78th year of his age, May 9th, 1879. He had been a great sufferer with kidney complaint for many years, but was taken suddenly worse; was only confined to his bed about two weeks. He died as he lived, with strong faith in his redeemer. He embraced religion in 1843. Few men have lived more faithfully to their honest convictions of right, he was ever ready to defend what he considered consistent with Christian duty with his presence and means. A reformer of the most ardent type, he will be greatly missed by the church of which he was a member. He leaves an only daughter and several grandchildren, his wife having died some years since. Peace to his memory.

A. A.

DEACON SIMEON MILLS.—Died in Richland, Mich., May 20, 1879, aged 84. A beloved father has reached the shores of immortality and eternal youth, and has been greeted with a hearty welcome of Well done! from the Captain of his salvation. May we not follow him by faith, and behold him in the palace where Jesus is? He was a true reformer in every sense of the word. Anti-masonry was a cause near his heart; always anti-slavery; always anti-tobacco and liquor. Mr. Clark's lecture is what he has been talking for several years, as he had opportunity. He has been fearless; his voice was heard on all subjects of reform, and sometimes almost the only voice in the church and community. But his work is done; he has fought a good fight, he has kept the faith, and is wearing his crown. His end was peaceful, though a great sufferer. He seemed unconscious for several hours before his death, yet when asked if Jesus was with him, he answered—"Yes, O, yes;" and those were his last words. Thursday evening, the 15th, he was in the prayer meeting. Thursday, the 22d, at 2 o'clock p. m., he was buried. Our mother is still with us in feeble health; they had lived together sixty-five years and four months. His strength has been gradually failing for several weeks, but his intellect was clear and bright to the last, unusually so, for one of his age.

Notices.

NORTHEAST PENNSYLVANIA.

Friends of the anti-secret reform in northeast Pennsylvania, take notice.

The third quarterly meeting of the Christian Association of Northeast Pa, opposed to secret societies will convene at Uniondale Free Methodist church, Susquehanna Co., Pa., on the evening of the 27th of June, present, at 7:30 o'clock, and continue over Sabbath. Lectures by competent men, devotional exercises and business sessons on the 27th and 28th, and on Sabbath, preaching, prayer and conference meetings. Let all in this region of Pennsylvania observe and attend this meeting. Important business is on hand. Soon our fall campaign will be on hand; come and help on in the work.

NATHAN CALLENDER.

—YOUR CHOICE. 1. "Freemasonry is not a religion; nor is it designed to take the place of religion."—Voice of Masonry, March 1879, p. 213.

2. "We do not see that there is any real difference in the opinions of Bro. Saunders and Moore. Each insists that a belief in the one living God is essential, and each teaches that the Bible is the great light in Masonry, and the only true written guide to faith and practice. And both correctly believe that where there is no Bible there is no lodge."—Ib, p. 176. "God is truth, and Freemasonry is the science of discerning his holy will and cheerfully conforming thereto."

Topics of the Time.

Professor Francis L. Patton of the Presbyterian Theological Seminary of this city, the champion of orthodoxy against Professor Swing, has lately received a most distinguished honor—no less than an invitation to a chair in the Presbyterian Seminary of London. He has decided to accept much against the wish of his friends in this city. A subordinate item in connection with Mr. Patton's professorship shows the uncertainty of riches. His chair in the Chicago Seminary is endowed to the amount of $50,000, but the treasurer reports that of this large sum but $10,000 yields an income. This is a striking illustration of the stringency of the times. The cutting down of his salary is not the reason, however, for accepting the English invitation by Prof. Patton. He is also pastor of a flourishing church which would not allow him to become straitened in purse.

The succession of vetoes we may hope is over, or rather the necessity of them. With the passage in the House of two of the appropriation bills without their political riders, and of a third with a brief excepting clause which, leaving out Conkling, Logan and a few others, is accepted by both House, Senate and President. The clause providing that the army is not to be used as a police force at the polls may be stretched to cover nearly the whole case for which the two parties are fighting, and for a time the Republican leaders in the House were soundly lectured for an apparent retreat. There is, however, an interpretation of the bill that seems to satisfy all but a few, and if as ready an agreement can be made over the judiciary appropriations Congress may go home and the country rejoice. The last struggle is pending over the repeal of the test oath and the removal of Jeff Davis's disabilities. If the promoters of these schemes succeed there may be need of something more emphatic than words, if the high priest of secession is again instilled in Washington.

Little good news has come up out of Egypt of late, but the information that the forces of the kedive and of England under the lead of British officers have broken up the slave traffic of the upper Nile will be welcomed throughout Christendom. The expedition began fighting its way during the fall of last year, against vast odds, but with uniform and grand success; and now reports that the vast and rich territies of Soudon will be soon open to civilization and commerce. Other expeditions of a less warlike nature are penetrating the interior of Africa from both oceans, and but few years can transpire before the last remnant of the terrible system to human slavery must be crushed and trampled out of the world.

At the dedication of their new Cathedral in New York, the prelates of the Romish church took up the case of Archbishop Purcell of Cincinnati, and resolved to take up subscriptions for his relief and the payment of his creditors. So Dr. Sampson of New York is forestalled and may not be able to carry out his plan of obtaining a million dollars from American Protestants for the same object. The United Presbyterian suggests how this may be done nevertheless, through the adroit management of the priests. It says:

"We know enough of the methods of the Catholic church to understand that there will be no difficulty in raising the desired amount, and the unfortunate and unhappy Archbishop may feel sure that all his burdens will roll away like the autumn mists. If the true spirit of generosity perish in the hearts of the people, a threat of such penalties as the church always keeps on hand will easily overcome it, and from the poorest of the poor, as well as from the very rich, the offerings will be extorted. And Protestants, although they would not give very freely upon an appeal to their charity (one romantic "Presbyterian lady" has already contributed two dollars), will yet be depended on for a large share of the results. When Biddy and Patrick require a little higher wages per week because they are assessed more heavily for the new fund, their employers will not think of turning them off, and thus through them will act as the beneficiaries of a man who in their own church would be tried, convicted and deposed from his office."

—To repress the armed Socialits in St. Louis, the Missouri Legislature has passed a law making it a misdemeanor for any body of men not organized under the law to meet for drill or any unlawful purpose.

LODGE NOTES.

—At the late meeting of the Knight Templars of Indiana at the State Capital, the officers reported a decrease in the number of members during the year but the figures are not given to the interested anti-Masonic republic.

—The Grand Lodge of Masons of Iowa met at Dubuque this year. Nine new lodges have been opened during the year. No statistics of the number of Masons in the State is given. A Marshalltown Mason was elected Grand Master.

—At the general meeting of Royal Arch Masons of Nova Scotia thirty members were present.

—A Free Mason replying to Elder Austin in the West Branch, Iowa, Record, says: "Instead of the ceremonies being corrupt and debasing, we affirm they are sublime and ennobling, teaching us to dwell with love and gratitude in our hearts upon the tender mercies of the Father of all." This is a specimen of his whole letter. How true the remark is, especially when the candidate is getting into the lodge dress, or is being buried or raised as the Masonic god, Hiram Abiff.

—In what an upright, honorable manner the lodge maintains the principle of human brotherhood of which it so proudly boasts! Read the following from the Masonic department of the Inter-ocean: "There is no legitmate white Masonic lodge, we believe, in this country that regularly admits colored members. The colored Masons, however, have their own grand lodges in some States. The organization in other respects, is similar to that of their white brethren, and the work is identical. The Massachusetts Grand Lodge appointed a commissioner a few years ago to investigate the claims of colored Masons, and to ascertain the source of their authority. They reported adversely to the claim of the colored fraternity that they had authority from British grand lodges, and so the matter rests. We know of but one regular Masonic lodge in this State that has admitted a colored man. But this is an exceptional case, and it is rarely that colored members are admitted."

Scholars are frequently to be met with who are ignorant of nothing save their own ignorance.

Garrison.

The storm and peril overpast,
The hounded hatred shamed and still;
Go, soul of freedom! take at last
The place which thou alone canst fill.

Confirm the lesson taught of old,
Life saved for self is lost, while they
Who lose it in His service hold
The lease of God's eternal day.

Not for thyself, but for the slave
Thy words of thunder shook the world;
No selfish griefs or hatred gave
The strength wherewith thy bolts were hurled.

From lips that Sinai's trumpet blew
We heard a tender undersong;
The very wrath from pity grew,
From love of men thy hate of wrong.

Now past and present are as one;
The life below is life above;
Thy mortal years have but begun
The immortality of love.

Not for a soul like thine the calm
Of selfish ease and joys of sense;
But duty more than crown or psalm,
Its own exceeding recompense.

Go up and on! thy day well done,
Its morning promise well fulfilled,
Arise to triumphs yet unwon,
To holier tasks that God has willed.

Go leave behind thee all that mars
The work below of man for man;
With the white legions of the stars
Do service such as angels can.

Wherever wrong shall right deny,
Or suffering spirits urge their plea,
Be thine a voice to smite the lie,
A hand to set the captive free!

The Diamond Necklace.

Another case not dissimilar to that of Archbishop Purcell, of Cincinnati, was that of the Cardinal Prince De Rohan, Bishop of Strasburg, in the last century. A set of cheats and swindlers, male and female, got hold of him, and, through a love intrigue, made him the instrument of robbing a jeweler of a diamond necklace, valued at some three hundred thousand dollars or more. The importers made the credulous cardinal believe that the queen Marie Antoinette was secretly in love with him, and wanted the necklace, and it was on her account that he pledged his pious word with the jeweler as security for the payment of the sum asked for it. When the first payment of four hundred thousand francs became due, as the money was not forthcoming, the jeweler made a stir which led to the unraveling of the whole plot, together with the sorry part that the cardinal had played in it. The clever imposters had fled to England, broken up the necklace, and sold it for a large sum of money.

But as the actors were Romanists, who would believe that a Freemason was at the bottom of the affair? It is nevertheless the fact that the very prince of all Freemasons, and of all shrewd imposters that the world ever saw, the renowned Cagliostro, is supposed to have arranged and managed the whole thing. He was imprisoned for it; but what prison, not even excepting the Bastile, could hold a Freemason long at that time in France? He was set at liberty.

There was one quarter of the world, however, where Freemasonry had not yet penetrated, and where the authorities held a most watchful and jealous regard against it. That quarter was Rome. And it was precisely to that quarter that Cagliostro, made bold by his Masonic successes, repaired. He had probably learned the art of Masonry in London, and had practiced it with such an astonishing effect in France, making gold, silver, and diamonds; healing the sick; relieving the necessitous; doing miraculous cures, etc., in fine, accomplishing all that Freemasonry ever promised to do, that he probably felt sufficiently powerful to cope with the Pope himself, and make a greater use of the "Holy See" than he was supposed to have done of the Bishop of Strasburg. But the Pope and Cardinals indignant at the trick that had been played off upon De Rohan, put Cagliostro in a dungeon, where he ended his days. The prince of Freemasons found the princes of the church too strong for him, and he fell a victim to their enmity.

This remarkable fact in history, than which none is better attested, leads us to think that possibly the easy going, good natured Archbishop Purcell may have been played upon and swindled by Freemasons. The art of Masonic High Priests are very much like those of the Jesuit priesthood, and this fact renders it very easy for Masons to get the good graces of a Romish bishop, and make him the means of swindling poor men out of their money.

As American Knights Templar resent the death of De Molay at the hands of a French king, some five hundred years ago, though with the said De Molay and with the said French king they have no more to do than the have with Thomas a Becket; so, it is possible that American Freemasons may have a great grudge against a Romish Archbishop because the Pope and his cardinals murdered Cagliostro, and have gratified their grudge and enriched themselvos by making a tool of the Archbishop for betraying the confidence of his flock.

And why, indeed, might not Freemasons connive with Romish bishops and make cats' paws of them, as well as connive with Protestant clergymen, and make tools of them, which we know they do? If the Mason, following the example of his great Prince, Cagliostro, is able to make use of the Protestant clergy for swindling young Americans, as we know he does, then why may not Freemasons be at the bottom of this swindling affair of Archbishop Purcell's?

We think that this noted calamity of the Archbishop, by which poor men have lost many times the value of the diamond necklace spoken of, should be sifted to the bottom, in order that the responsibility should rest where it belongs. If it shall be found that it is Freemasons who have soiled the waters of the serene Romish Church, the world ought to know it, and the Romish clergy should be exonerated from the wicked deed.

If anything could excite our sympathy for the fate of an accomplished knave, it is the bold, heroic, devoted way in which Cagliostro, the head of Freemasonry, went to Rome, to the very dens of the lion, to array his art against the head of Jesuitry. There was a bravery in it, a confidence in villainy, a faith in one form of knavery over another, that seems grand. Milton himself, in handling infernal subjects, was never more grand or sublime. The imprudence was immense, satanic. The Vicar of Christ at the head of his Cardinals was to be outwitted by a Grand Sovereign Inspector General of Freemasons, alone and unaided! Alas for him! he failed, and lost his life; but he has left myriads of Freemasons to mourn his loss, and with an eternal cause for the holding of a perpetual Lodge of Sorrow! Henceforth there was, and is forever, a cause of implacable warfare between Freemasons and the Pope.

But why should American citizens take a part in this warfare? What is the old quarrel to us? Why do we enlist in the cause of either party? If Freemasons have committed this robbery of poor men, in the name of charity, and widow and orphans, let us know it. Or if a ring of the Romish clergy, under the secrecy of the confessional, have done it, still let us know it. What we want to know are the facts of the case, so that the poor men who have been swindled may be redressed, if possible.

One thing is very certain to us, viz., that poor men will always be swindled, and honest men, and especially farmers, will always be outraged, and burdened, and depressed where Masonic priests and and Jesuit priests practice their arts. Where two such truculent, sharp, and unscrupulous forces are arrayed against each other, the interests of Christian society are trampled under foot, and nothing can save the rights of men from ruin but the strong arm of a military emperor.

Lodge Blindness.

The blinding and hardening effect of secret lodges became very manifest at the last session of the New Durham Free Baptist Quarterly Meeting of New Hampshire, when I moved the adoption of the following:

Resolved, That this conference hereby advise Christian people to sever their connection with all voluntary organizations that practice gambling, after having vainly and patiently protested against the evil.

Elder Ezra Tuttle a Royal Arch Mason and Odd-fellow, favored the motion and it passed unanimously. The conference also ordered the resolution to be printed in the Morning Star. Afterward a member of the conference, although favoring the resolution, said he did not know of a church in the Quarterly Meeting to which the advice could apply. By way of explanation, I stated that I did not know of any such church in the Quarterly Meeting, and that I designed the resolution to apply to secret societies that practice gambling. This simple statement caused some excitement among the lodge delegates, and Elder Ezra Tuttle said he had supposed the resolution to apply only to churches, and if he had understood its general scope, he should have opposed it! He moved to reconsider the vote and the motion was seconded. A lively debate sprung up and the writer urged as well as he could that if it was wrong for churches it was also wrong for secret lodges to gamble. I will not attempt to give the lodge arguments as they were so absurd and silly that to repeat them in print would seem almost cruel. But the astonishing fact, that six professedly Christian delegates voted to reconsider, when they discovered that the resolution condemned lodge gambling, shows beyond all controversy the frightfully immoral and blinding effect of secret lodges upon men of professed piety.

Of course the motion to reconsider failed, but it showed the secret lodge to be a work of darkness more clearly than Bro. Hinman could have done in the same time.

I love and pity professedly Christian men blinded by the secret lodge, and I pray the Divine Spirit to open their eyes, for I am fully satisfied no other means can avail. No doubt means are to be diligently used, but human power alone cannot succeed in removing the exceedingly dense darkness that envelopes the minds of lodge devotees. One by one men are awaking to see the folly and sin of the whole lodge system. May the Lord of the harvest hasten the overthrow of every organization that hinders the progress of Christ's coming kingdom.

Grafts.

Rev. J. S. Tomlinson writes in the Indianapolis Journal:

"The Chief of Police of New York says that three-fourths of the abandoned girls in that city were ruined by dancing. Young ladies allow gentlemen the privilege in dancing, which, if taken under other circumstances, these gentlemen would be reported as improper persons. I have a sister who has passed away. On a marble block is written: 'Willing to be absent from the body and to be present with the Lord.' I had rather go there with my sighs, tears, flowers and prayers, and visit that little grave as a shrine, than to have her present in the body and see her one night in the dizzy and promiscuous ball-room. It requires neither brains, good morals nor religion to be a good dancer. It leads to bad society. I never saw such a vicious crowd of young men at our college as on a night when there was to be a ball. It won't mix with religion any more than oil and water will mix. As the love of one increases, the love of the other decreases.

Rev. John Cumming, D. D., of the Scotch Presbyterian Church in London, England, says: "I believe that one great danger to which Protestants are subject is the constant habit of supposing that Rome is a coarse and vulgar imposture, unfit for the light of the 19th century; instead of feeling that it is a gigantic conspiracy of Satan, worked out by the archangel's wickedness and will. Antichrist, with his people, constituting the church of Rome; Christ, in the midst of His, constituting its correlative, the church of the living God. Despise it, it will overwhelm you; tamper with it, it will ensnare and captivate you; resist it in the name of God, and like its author, the devil, it will instantly flee from you. It is the master-piece of Satan beyond dispute, and only by viewing it in that light will you be enabled rightly to estimate your danger and its inherent element of progress and power."

According to the wisdom of some people, says the Free Methodist, "the Sabbath, Masonry, temperance and Romanism are political questions, and should not therefore, be discussed by a preacher, or in a religious paper. The Bible can deal with all these questions; can denounce rulers and nations for their sins; indicate the character of such as should be elected to civil office; enunciate the principles of constitutional government; yet ministers of the Gospel of Jesus, in their pulpits, and editors of religious periodicals, in their columns, seeing the sword coming, must not warn the people, because the enemy has a political character. Had this modern wisdom possessed Elijah, he would not have had trouble with Ahab and Jezebel. Had John the Baptist been sufficiently prudent with his tongue, he might not have lost his head. It is apparent to every candid mind that the man of God must speak his mind on all political questions involving moral evil. Silence would be treason to the Divine administration."

Where the Masonic lodge and the confessional come in conflict, coarseness and brutality begin, and the gentle comity of Christian faith and trust comes to an end. The whole unfortunate history of the reign of Louis Napoleon was but one continued conflict between absolutism sustained by Jesuitry on the one hand, and democracy sustained by Freemasonry on the other. The interests of society were made to depend upon an equilibrium between Jesuitry and Freemasonry, and not upon the intelligence, the religion, the morals, and the good manners of Christian life. The opposing forces of the confessional and the lodge hurried French society into a rapid degeneracy under a new impetus. The growth and power of one of these forces were made an excuse and an argument for the increase of the other force; and both forces derived their power from ignorance and falsehood. Their implements of warfare were sham, duplicity, intimidation and deceit. At the close of the conflict, Louis Napoleon—the tool of the Jesuits—was surrendered on the field of battle to a foreign power; and the secret societies, his opponents, proceeded to destroy national archives, libraries, monuments, works of art, and as far as possible all traces of the history of the past. M. Renan says that during the reign of Louis Napoleon (or in other words, during the point-blank conflict between the lodge and the confessional) "the country sunk deeper into vulgarity, forgetting its past history and its noble enthusiasm."—Religious Telescope.

Two Kinds of Preaching.

It seems very strange that some can preach holiness—tell the people plainly they must seek full sanctification, and "without holiness no man shall see the Lord"—and yet everybody keep quiet; while on the other hand, others will preach the same thing, and immediately the devil appears to be loose everywhere—plenty of opposition without and within the church. This peculiarity reminds me of one our old preachers, long ago. He preached powerfully against fashion and costly dress. He was asked the reason why people got so mad when he preached against this evil, and others could say the same things, and everybody keep still. He said: "I am against this matter with all my heart, while many others preach against it only because it should be preached against." So it may be with many of those harmless holiness preachers, who find no opposition, and no one gets hurt, and no good is done by them.

Look at the blessed promises given to those whom all men shall hate, and the woe to those of whom all men speak well. We should reasonably think that no one would like to come under the latter class. But men will just reverse the matter, and call the latter the blessed ones. But those who are really in earnest about holiness, enjoy it, confess it themselves, and urge others to seek it, now, by faith—be they D.Ds., preachers, editors or laymen—will find that they have enemies and opposition enough to claim the promise, "Blessed are ye when men shall say all manner of evil against you, falsely, for my sake. Rejoice and be exceeding glad, for great is your reward in heaven." Yes, all must suffer persecution—the disciple is not above his Master, nor the servant above his Lord. "Yea, all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." And how small it is! What rest and joy it brings to the soul, when we read the Bible, and our experience corresponds with it! Then it becomes a living word to us, and we can say with Paul, "Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? Shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword? Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors, through him that loved us." Bless the Lord for his precious word!—Christian Harvester.

The Sermon.

Preached in the College church, Wheaton, Ill., Sabbath morning, June 8th, 1879, by Prof. C. A. Blanchard.

Text.—"And as Jesus passed forth from thence, he saw a man, named Matthew, sitting at the receipt of custom: and he saith unto him, Follow me, and he arose and followed him." Matt. 9: 9.

No general wins a battle alone. There is need of privates, subordinate officers, a commisariat, sappers, miners and a wagon train. If any one of these departments be lame the whole army limps. No matter what may be the skill of the commander, his army will be defeated if his soldiers are without food and ammunition. Hence we can learn that the greatness of a great man is nowhere more clearly shown than in his choice of subordinates. To be able to overlook the whole field, to see the special difficulties of each point, and to put the man at the point who has the special abilities to meet those difficulties, this is the quality of none but a master mind.

Now it is just in this particular that our Lord proves his marvelous superiority to men. When we set out to carry a point we choose those who have something to recommend themselves to the public. We go to the Professors in Theological Seminaries, to Judges of the Supreme Court, to Members of Congress, to men of wealth and learning. If we are able to secure the assistance of these classes we think our work done. If we are repelled by them, we are apt to despond.

See how entirely different was the method adopted by our Lord. He came to the world to conquer it. He found Satan crowned and (apparently) on his Father's throne. His mission was to drive Satan from this position of ruler to his deserved place as rebel and slave. He intended to overturn the existing order of things, to be a disturber of the peace, to send a sword on earth. As God about to reveal himself to men he had his choice of places. He could have come as a child of the Roman Empire, whose iron-handed legions had the eastern nations by the throat. Or he could have come as a child of beautiful Athens, which after Egypt, became the instructress of the world. He chose to come as a member of a little, down-trodden, despised remnant of a nation, which, itself a relic of repeated captivities, had recently bowed to a new yoke, the yoke of Rome.

But there was a choice of places here. There was the lordly Pharisee who swept along the street swelling with self-righteousness and pride. His home was splendid with marble and gold and garments. The offices of the nation were in his grasp. Now since our Lord wishes to conquer the world, and since he needs all the influence he can obtain, and since power and place are strong levers with which to move common minds, we shall look to see him take his place among the leaders of his chosen land.

He does not so choose.

He comes from Bethlehem, little among the thousands of Israel. His reputed father is a poor mechanic. His mother is a peasant girl. His native land spues him out of its mouth. Egypt, an idolatrous land, becomes a temporary, and Nazareth, a proverb of wickedness, his permanent home. His whole life is consistent with its opening. He selects two disciples from a boat on the lake. A day or two passes and he chooses two more fishermen, and in our text he takes for the fifth a publican. Now publicans were looked upon by the better class of Jews, very much as modern Christians look upon men who gain a living by cheating and fraud, and who at the same time do not subscribe to the church. These publicans were the representatives of Rome. They collected these taxes by aid of the Roman arms. They were an unprincipled set, who, by force and fraud, increased rapidly their own wealth and constantly plundered the people. To accept the office was to become, among Jews, a renegade vagabond.

This was the sort of man that the Son of God choose for his standard bearer. I repeat that men do not choose their adjutants in this way. They would consider a cause doomed whose leading men should be such as these. They want men who have influence and the only influence that these men could naturally have would be a repellant one. How the world would laugh, if some prophet at this day should announce his purpose to overturn the existing order of things, and select five assistants like Peter, Andrew, James, John and Matthew! It would laugh just as it did when Christ came and did it. Those hypocrites in Jerusalem were just like hypocrites in Chicago, or Wheaton or Elgin or anywhere else. Hypocrites are always the same. A coward and a liar rubbed into one makes a hypocrite. Now when these Jerusalem hypocrites voted that Masonry was an evil, and that the theater was a bad place, and that cheating and lying were not just right, and then sent private notes around to the Masons and others to say that their votes meant nothing, and that they would elect representatives from the devil's camp to supervise the synagogues, they thought they were doing a smart thing; and they thought that this lying and cowardly double-dealing would enable them to keep their places undisturbed, and that they could continue to preach generalities and say at the end to saint and sinner, the church and the world: I mean anything or nothing by what I say. Pay your money and take your choice.

But it was to meet and overcome an opposition so despicable and so powerful—for all the evil there is in the universe backs meanness like this—that our Lord choose those lowly men from the lake and the receipt of custom. This was doubtless to show that the excellency of the power was of God not of man. God choose the weak things and those that are despised to bring to nought the great and powerful, that no flesh may glory in his presence. He will have it understood that it is his hand which moves on so steadily the cause of truth and righteousness, and hence he chooses lowly men, whom the world overlooks or looks down upon, to do his work. Then, again, Christ looked into the hearts of these men and found there those characteristics which would make successful leaders of men. The qualities of a general are frequently developed by poverty and contempt. In all the great crises of the world's history, the men who have been pivots on which events have turned, have been those who have been tempered in the fires and waters of affliction.

Let then those seek ease and popularity who care for such things. It is the noblest thing in the world to be heart sound, and heart strong.

This will take a man to the front and make him useful in times when those who are selfish and cowardly are helpless in the troubles their own faint hearts have brought on.

BECOMING A CHRISTIAN.

Until the morning when Christ called Matthew, this publican had chosen his own course. What he wanted to do he had done, what he wanted to leave undone, he did not do. To increase his wealth, he had accepted this office which made him an object of loathing to his countrymen and was almost always proof of fraudulent practices. When Christ called he rose and followed. There seems to have been no hesitation or debate. At once he committed this business that had been a source of pecuniary gain to other hands and marched off after the friendless man who said to him: "Follow me." We have the true and the only true method of becoming a Christian. It is a choice of Christ instead of a choice of the world. It is a following of Christ instead of the will of the man's own heart. It is a humble complete saying: "Lord not as I will, but as thou wilt."

This submission of the will to God is made only by the aid of the Holy Spirit. Every man in a natural state says "Not thy will but mine." He follows not Christ but himself, the world, the flesh, and the devil. The circumstances attending the change are various and unimportant. In some cases the truth makes its impression little by little as the rain softens the hard dry clods. In other cases it acts like the smoulderings of a volcanic fire, which grumble and surge far beneath the surface, until a mighty convulsion takes place which shakes and rends the whole being of the man. In the first case all is quiet, the man simply leaves all and follows Christ. In the other Saul is smitten down by the shining light. The jailer cries out, "What must I do to be saved?" there is fear and tears and groans. Now it matters nothing how we become Christians but it is very important that we become Christians, and we do not enter that state until we give ourselves wholly up, and give ourselves up forever. The trouble with the people who fall from grace every six months is that they never had any grace to fall from. They have never submitted themselves unto God as those who are alive from the dead. They have been asked if they don't wish to go to heaven, if they wouldn't like to be Christians, if they don't want to put all on the altar, etc., etc., and they say: "Yes." So far as they understand the words they do want the things which they say they want, but they never coolly decide to obey God; to be honest, truthful, loving, kind, and industrious. Now the man who is redeemed, raised from death to life, born again, has made just this determination. God's Holy Spirit constrains him thus to do, he submits, then the Father and Son and Spirit take up their abode in him, or in the words of the text, Christ calls, he follows.

THIS CHANGE IS ONCE FOR ALL.

The hymn says truly that, grace has redeemed us, once for all. It is also true that when we choose the service of Christ, we choose it once for all. The ideas that a man is God's child one day and Satan's the next; that he is continually vibrating between heaven and hell cannot be successfully defended. The fact reference to a great many persons who think that they fall from grace is that they never had any grace from which to fall. When man and woman pledge to one another their faith in marriage, it is, "until death do us part." When the soul is wedded to Christ it is forever: for neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord. The Bible teaches that we are born into the world as children of Satan. We need no change to become dead in trespasses and sins. Looking at men from God's high and holy law, there is none that doeth good, no not one. They are altogether gone astray; they are all become filthy. Into this world of moral degradation and death comes the Lord Jesus with his glorious and blessed gospel. Those who listen to his call and obey it receive power to become sons of God. They pass from death to life. They are born again. Old things pass away; all things become new, and there is no record in Scripture that any man thus born again is ever born the third time. We are told by some who have received power to become sons of God, that they strive and watch, lest they should lose their sonship; but this does not say that any one ever did lose it. But a more decisive Scripture is Hebrews vi. 4-6, in which the Apostle declares plainly that it is impossible to renew again unto repentence those who should become partakers of the Holy Ghost and then fall away. This passage seems to prove that if persons do fall from grace, it is a fall into perdition. But instead of continually considering themselves as backslidden Christians or persons who, having been Christians, are now strangers to the grace of God, such ones should think themselves deceived in the matter of their conversion and work out their own salvation with fear and trembling, knowing that it is God that worketh in them both to will and to do. This continual furbishing up of old professions of religion, which is the constant winter work of so many churches is largely time thrown away. The slight wash that is put on the old metal will wear off before summer comes in and leave matters worse than before. New cloth into old garments is contrary to the Word. What is wanted is repentence, and faith evidenced by works. A humble consecration to the will and work of God with confession and putting away of sin. A man choses Christ, once for all. Grace redeems the man, once for all. Hence the constant injunctions to dig deep, to build on a rock, to count the cost and other Scriptures of like import.

BEING CHRISTIANS.

We become Christians by submitting our will in loving faith to God; we live as Christians by obeying the rules which he has laid down for our guidance. The first is an act of God's grace; the second is a state of heart and life induced thereby. The first is a birth; the second is a walking worthy of the vocation, to which, as sons of God, we are called. We become new creatures by accepting the Lord Jesus as the propitiation for our sins, we walk in the light by following his example. Think you we follow him in using tobacco, in attending frivolous and immoral playhouses, in spending all that we can get honestly on our own satisfactions and pride, turning God's house into a show-room for millinery shops, in reading secular newspapers on the holy day, or in failing to lift a warning voice against that flood tide of secretism and atheism which is almost tearing the nation from its moorings and driving it upon the rocks? You answer me, no! and you answer me truly.

But this following Christ includes suffering as well as doing. Once at least in every Christian's life the Truth lies agonizing in the garden, stands spit upon and buffeted at the priestly chair of Caiaphas and silently listens to the howlings of the "regular" ministerial mob outside the judgment hall of Pilate. At least once in every lifetime, the Truth is scourged by the rude soldiery, crowned with thorns and crucified between thieves. Now, when Christ called Matthew, he called him to the end. He made no contract with him, he makes no contract with any man that calls only for fair weather service. Those that endure to the end are the ones who are saved.

A theological professor a short time since published an article in which he argued that students should receive money to help them into the ministry, because they were called to a self-denying, a despised, a laborious life. This is perhaps the theory, but it is not the practice of theological professors or students. They, at least many of them, do not deny themselves anything which they can get in the way of good things. They are entirely unwilling to be despised or to work hard at anything, save pleasing the world. The Christian ministry to-day is very largely in the condition of the priesthood in the time of Christ. They hold the truth in unrighteousness. They refuse to declare the truth against slavery. They refuse to bear a testimony against the idolatry of secret societies. They run greedily after place, power, and the honors of the world. To get these they exalt each one his sect, and even teach that the shameful, costly, ruinous sectarianism of the present time is pleasing to God.

This is not following Christ: it is following Baal. It is saying, "Lord! Lord!" and refusing to do the things that he requires. I trust, dear friends, that you have not thus learned Christ: that you hold yourselves responsible for following him in evil as well as good report: that you will march by his side up Calvary as well as down Olivet. If not, whatever may be the fate of those to whom God has granted less light, you are not his children: you are strangers and foreigners from the commonwealth of Israel.

THE RESULT OF FOLLOWING CHRIST.

Sometimes this takes us away from all earthly means of support. It served Matthew thus; he had a house and a profitable though a despised and hated occupation. His call took him away from home and trade, and made him dependent for daily bread on the word of that humble man who was hooted and derided by the ministry and the mob. The conditions of the service have not changed; what God wanted then he demands now. Tent-making Pauls and fishing Peters. Men who can be content with such things as they have because he hath said: "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee."

Another thing that this service does is to take all pride and vanity out of us. If we get not rid of this we are not in the right way. Matthew made a great feast in honor of Christ at which many guests were present, but from his own gospel we should never learn that he had a house or made a feast. It is hard for poor humanity to do a good thing and be content if God alone knows it. We want our fellows to know it and to praise us for it. This is human nature, but it is not Christ's nature; and when we are transformed into his likeness we shall be like Matthew and the Master.

Another result of following Christ is peace and happiness forever. This man who forsook his trade that morning has been for nigh two thousand years walking the golden streets of the New Jerusalem. During all this time he has not known an ache nor a pain, nor a thought of sin. He has not seen a cloud nor a tear on the face of a companion. Nothing has during all these years come between him and the Lord of glory. This is not a peculiar case. In earthly races all run, but one is crowned; in the heavenly race all who endure to the end are victors. Dear friends, let us thank God for the privilege of running this race, of fighting this battle, of laboring in the vineyard, and let us persevere to the end.

A Grand Rally at Holland, Michigan.

A CENTER OF REFORM—A PHALANX OF MINISTERS—A FRIEND OF WM. MORGAN TELLS HOW THAT MARTYR TO MASONRY LEFT THE LODGE.

HOLLAND, Mich., June 9, '79.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Never in the history of Holland and vicinity, since its first settlement here in 1847, has there been a greater excitement and stir among the people than during the last week, when the three first degrees of Masonry were publicly worked and exposed on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings in the First Reformed church before the largest audiences the church has ever held before. No less than 2,000 people were inside and hanging on windows, etc., and no less than 300 were turned back as they could not gain admission. If the church had been twice as large it would have been filled to the brim, as many now remained at home, knowing that all could not get in; and the last evening the ringing of the bell was purposely omitted, as the church was crowded as full as possible long before commencement. Your humble servant assisted in all the degrees, which made it apparent to all, that Freemasonry is exactly the same in every State, with slight variations in the wording of the ritual.

The following ministers of the Gospel attended it, as far as your correspondent could learn: Revs. R. Pieters, H. Uiterwyck, of Holland; P. Lepeltak, of Overisel; C. Vanderveen, of Drenthe; B. VanEss, of North Holland; L. Munroe, of Olive; Mr. Thompson, of Allendale; Mr. Wing, of Lamont; J. W. TeWinkle, of Kalamazoo and Wm. B. Gilmore, of Illinois.

The largest number of our people have been opposers of secretism on general principles, and for that reason the classes, Holland, Grand River and Wisconsin, of the Reformed church of America, comprising all Holland (Dutch) congregations, allow no secretists in their churches, and while the First and Third Reformed churches of this place exclude them, the Second (American congregation belonging to the classis Michigan) admits them at the Lord's Supper and in the pulpit, and so does the whole church with the above exceptions. The Holland congregations throughout the United States, known as Separatists of the Dutch Reformed church, under the name of the True Dutch Reformed, also have a large congregation here, and are as a church throughout the whole land strongly opposed to all secretism. The Wesleyans of whom there are but few living here are also known as strong anti-secretists. The Methodist Episcopal church here is known as Masonic headquarters, as its pastors are and have been for years Royal Arch Masons (not caring which way it goes, right or wrong). Their church stands always open for public installations or funerals for the Baal worshipers. The Episcopal church here is, as all over, mixed badly.

Well, the grand result rests with the Lord, and we hope and pray, that where congregations cannot eradicate the evil in their church body, they will follow the injunction of the Lord, by his Apostle Paul, and become separate, so that the Holy Spirit once more may fill every heart and the whole temple. The people have seen the humbuggery, the lying impositions, the blasphemy, the Baal worships, and we are praying and looking for grand results! Already have we heard of ministers of the Gospel, who secretly favored it, although they were not Masons, and now have their eyes opened; young men who had promised themselves soon to join the "Mystic tie," now thank God that they know all that is necessary to convince even the most ignorant that secretism, and especially Freemasonry, is the greatest fraud invented, and that they have been saved from Satan's cabletow or chain-gang.

Rev. Lester Munroe, now in his 85th year, was also present and bore witness to the truth of the exposition, as he was made a Mason in Pennfield, N. Y., in 1818. He also stated to your correspondent in presence of many others, and was ready to make oath, if any one doubted, that he had known Capt. Wm. Morgan for ten years, and had been intimate with him for four years. That Capt. Morgan used to be a Masonic lecturer and used to land Masonry higher than the third heavens, but that when he saw before his eyes the following circumstances, as seen also by Mr. Munore, they became disgusted and renounced the whole concern, with the resolution to expose it at the risk of his life, without expecting or looking for a pecuniary reward: "Near Batavia, N. Y., lived a Master Mason and family, who became sickly and could not keep up his dues; and needed assistance from his lodge, which the lodge gave. Shortly after he died and was buried with Masonic honors, (?) when a near neighbor to the widow, also a Master Mason, envied her beautiful home and place, and tried to purchase it. This the widow refused. He then tried to engraft himself into her confidence, by assisting her, (the lodge having refused to do anything more for her) and lending her a little money once in awhile. Some time after, he presented his account to her, accompanied with an old account signed and acknowledged by her dead husband. It came to trial before a Masonic judge. The widow lost her property, and even the judge, as well as Morgan, Monroe and others, pronounced it a base piece of forgery, as the husband had never incurred any debts; but law was law, and the poor widow could not prove it to be a forgery."

Mr. Munroe, being at his farm for a few days, near Lake Ontario, had his hand on the face of the dead body of Morgan when his body was first discovered, and fully identified him, as he looked as natural as if he had been drowned but half an hour ago, instead of one year. As Mr. Munroe has studied medicine also, he stated that it was because the waters of Niagara river are at the botton so cold and pure, that a body could not decompose, and would be better preserved than embalmed or kept in the best ice-house. He further identified it by the double teeth in front, and said that he knew Morgan as well as one of his own children. While walking the streets of Rochester, N. Y., not long afterwards, he overheard one of the three ruffians acknowledge his participation in the Morgan, execution to a brother Mason; and since reading Valance's confession, is positive that it must have been Valance himself, on account of the similarity of the statement.

Every well-thinking mind must see that Freemasonry has blood on its skirts, and that it is not true as is most generally represented by Freemasons, Worshipful Masters, and even Grand Masters, that it was done by a few over-zealous young Masons, but as Mr. Munroe testifies by governer, judges, county, city and village officers, and even ministers of the gospel, and the so called best men of society.

Fraternally yours,
J. O. Doesburg.

THE AGENT'S JOURNEYINGS.

Albion, Ind., June 8, 1879.

Dear Friends:—I have just returned from a five weeks' tour. First I went to Warrington, Hancock county, spent five dollars and walked ten miles to get there. Had a full house two evenings, and by frequent request, I frequently explainde to the audience that I was not a "United Brethren;" so that I feel confident the U. B. church at Warrington is not responsible for my work there. Three ex-Masons men of character confirmed the truth of my lectures. I received one dollar and twenty cents for my work, and went to Rush county, found Drury Holt a genuine wheel-horse in reform, and enjoyed his hospitality. I had an attentive hearing in his neighborhood. At the Wesleyan church near Sevain's Mills there were good audiences, but I found much opposition to our work. One Mason said he had $10 to buy eggs to egg me. I proposed to take the funds and disburse them to suit myself, but this did not suit the benevolent spirit of the Mason, and I did not get the money or the eggs either. If we had enough such friends as O. B. Worth in that neighborhood we would get along finely.

At Carthage I had the smallest audiences I have ever had. The friends did not pay any attention to it.

In Hendricks county our tried and true friend Samuel Phillips was found sick with the erysipelas; I hope he may recover and renew the battle of truth.

I then started for Gibson county away down in the "pocket," and although I arrived sooner than the friends expected me, I found the reception which cheers the weary and way-worn itinerant. I found the veteran reformer, T. B. McCormick not at home, but was made welcome by his son Samuel, who took me to Oakland City, where I do not know what the result would have been had I not notified their corresponding secretary in advance that I was not handsome. Here the clouds which had hung over me during the whole trip gave way and light shone all around. The people here seem to have the cheerfulness which firm faith in a good cause always gives. They have a live association here.

At Ft. Branch I spoke two evenings. The last I had a full house and good attention. I found Esq. Weed and Bro. Gourley with heart and pocket-book in the right place and the moral vertebra firm enough to face the foe. At Somerville I spoke two evenings in the U. P. church to very large audiences and excellent attention. I had the cooperation of the pastor, Rev. W. G. Spencer, a quiet, clear-headed pilot at the helm. He thinks that "untempered mortar" is not the thing to build with. The Gospel of Christ and Baal cannot unite. Seven were received into the church during communion service on Sabbath, and a bright day is dawning for the churh there. They begin to realize that it does not injure a church to preach a whole gospel. May the Lord bless pastor and people at Somerville.

At Oakland City we had the help and hospitality of the shrewd and persistent Leister, M. D.; the frank, earnest and fearless Richardson; the conscientious Wallace; the sincere Walker; the unobstrusive Rev. Wilson; the honest, zealous Ritchie; the out and out Rev. Thomas; with the generous McConnel, who is useful either as steersman, oarsman or ballast. All these and many others and their families will live in my memory fresh and green; and when victory comes, and comes to stay, though far apart, we will rejoice in a fight well fought.

I stopped off at Attica, and found the same good friends of last winter: brethren James, Bittle, Bottenberg, and Amos Martin. At Pittsburg I saw T. B. Galloway, Rev. McNeil and Malcom. They want the annual meeting at Delphi. Rally friends! and rally quick—write to the Executive Committee. The southwest corner of Indiana is a very large and beautiful "pocket," and many of those who live in it are undoubtedly skillful physicians, at least in my case I must give them credit for making a very correct diagnosis, viz., "atrophy of the pocket." They made an application which gave immediate relief. I have felt easier ever since. May the good Lord bless Gibson county and send the recipe all over the State.

Yours truly,
S. L. Cook.

Correspondence.

An Effort to Save a Church from the Jaws of Masonry.

I am called to go to the aid of my old brethren in the old Baptist church of Adams, Jefferson county, N. Y., who, for their faithfulness to Gospel principles as indicated by their decided testimony against Masonry for the last fifty years, have been recently insulted and abused, as the following brief statement will show. Some two years ago (more or less), a knot of Masons, few in number, who had wormed their way into the church, proving recreant to their church vows and their covenant with Christ, had asked for light in the darkness of the lodge, sprung a trap upon the church in true Masonic style and spirit, and wiped from the church record her long cherished sentiments against Masonry; and more recently secured the passing of a resolution implying fellowship with Masonry! Was the like ever heard of before? What! Christ and anti-Christ strike hands! No, never. But such a resolution so declares. Did Judas play a deeper game? No, nor baser. But this is what Masonry can do, for it has no conscience—no fear of God before its eyes.

Now my object in writing this is to ask every Christian reformer to pray for me and those afflicted brethren. Pray for us in your closet, at the family altar, and everywhere, that we may be guided by the "wisdom from above, first pure, then peaceable, gentle, easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality and without hypocrisy," and that we may be shielded by the Gospel coat of mail. We hope to work for God—God working in and through us his grand purposes against Satan's kingdom.

Was there ever such a backward stride by a Christian church since the days of the Reformation? True before that Constantine, that unscrupulous ruler and warrior, joined together, professedly, Christianity and paganism. But could it be looked for in this nineteenth century that a Christian church could take to its embrace, and make public acknowledgment of fellowship with that pagan institution Masonry, which is as manifestly anti-Christ as any thing Satan ever devised.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

YORK, Pa., June 5, 1879.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—For the following reasons I am in favor of Washington, D. C., for the next meeting of the friends of the great anti-secret reform:

1. Washington is the capital of the United States, and therefore a capital place for any reform meeting.

2. The copperheads of both parties and of both sections have had possession of Washington quite long enough. We must go and hold a caucus with open doors.

3. Washington needs purification, exposition, regeneration, and "more light" as badly as any place on the map of this wicked world.

4. Washington ears (big and little), have listened to all sorts of eloquence, facts, arguments, foolishness, fun and fillibusters. A little anti-secret talk will be something new to them.

5. All the leading Masons and secretists of the nation have their death-grip on the money bags, the offices, the widows and orphans, the rich women, and the great and good things belonging to the people or cowans. To hold our meeting there will be like putting a "scare crow" in Uncle Sam's corn-field.

6. Washington will be full of strangers from all the States and territories; and they will be intelligent men and women, who are patriotic and anxious to see and hear all that will be going on.

7. Washington people don't throw rotten eggs. There is so much corruption in the city that the people could not stand the additional odor of such nasty bombshells.

8. Out of respect to the memory of the great and good patriot and statesman after whom the capital is named, we must go there, to remind the American people of their rights and duties. And the Farewell Address and its warnings must be recalled to the minds of American voters. Yours truly,

E. J. CHALFANT.

MISS MATILDA LEES DODS' SCHOOL OF COOKERY.

Wishing to give our readers, interested in cookery, the benefit of what Edinburgh, Scotland, and South Kensington, England, can supply through Miss Dods, at an early hour we repaired to the hall where her instructions were given.

She stands behind a long table upon which lies a small flour board and rolling pin, next to which stands scales upon which flour, butter, sugar, and other articles are carefully weighed. The table is well supplied with sieves, graters, measures, scoops, wooden and iron spoons, forks large and small, cutters, etc. Near, at her right hand is her stove ready for work; just beyond a table upon which are plain iron-stone china plates, platters and bowls, on which various articles of food are taken up when cooked; back of the stove upon a table are pieces of plain white print paper, large yellow bowls, bread pans, sauce pans, etc., the flour, spices, catsups, etc., stand back of the table at which she works; at her left, sits a basin of water for washing her hands.

Miss Dods has a pleasant face, not a wrinkle on her forehead, and is perhaps thirty-five years of age, she is calm and swift in the execution of work, extremely neat in her dress, her hair very smooth. She wears a plain linen collar, black dress hardly touching the floor, a large white apron, and tight half-fitting sleeves from wrist to elbow of the same material. So quiet about her work, at the same time explaining every process, that one would scarcely realize that she was cooking until seven or eight delicious kinds of food at the close of her two hours' lecture would lead us to exclaim: "Her own works praise her."

We give her receipts and explanations as nearly as possible in her own language.

KIDNEY SOUP.

One ox kidney.
Two ounces butter.
One ounce flour.
A little pepper and salt.
A grain of cayenne pepper.
One quart cold water.
One dessert spoonful of mushroom catsup.
One dessert spoonful of Worcester sauce.

Cut the kidney into very small pieces; wash it thoroughly. Over it sprinkle one ounce flour, covering it thoroughly. Make the butter very hot in a frying pan so that it will smoke a little, then put in the kidney and brown it well. Then put the pieces of kidney into a stew pan and pour over them cold water. Cold because the kidney will thus retain its brown color. (For rabbit soup, veal, and other light colored meats boiling hot water is used as it blanches the meat.) Stir till it boils. The flour will thicken it nicely. Then skim very carefully. When it boils, add pepper, salt, Worcester sauce, catsup, cayenne pepper, and cook slowly for two hours. Much of the seasoning would be dissipated if allowed to boil. It is best to let it simmer.

SWEET OMELET.

Yolks of two eggs.
Whites of three eggs.
(Always in making an omelet use one more white than yolk).
One teaspoonful sugar.
One teaspoonful essence of vanilla.
One-half ounce butter, to grease the omelet pan.

First put in a small bowl yolks of two eggs. Put on a dry plate the whites of three. Add to the yolks the vanilla and sugar, and beat all together with a wooden spoon for five minutes; they should then look like a thick cream.

Add to the whites a very small pinch of salt. Whip until very stiff and white. Melt in the omelet pan the half ounce of butter (but do not allow it to heat or the omelet will burn afterwards). Then mix very lightly the yolks and whites of the eggs, pour the mixture into a pan and place on top of the stove for one minutes; then put into the oven for five minutes. Open the oven in four minutes (a fine omelet sometimes is done in four minutes—the less time the better) and put finger on top of the omelet. If quite dry, it is done. Otherwise leave it in for one minute longer. Turn it out quickly on a plate, bend back one half of it with the hand. Sprinkle white sugar over the top. Serve hot.

Some of our fair-handed daughters who like to boast of their ignorance of all culinary art might profitably take a lesson from the accomplished wife of the President of the United States. She is an adept in cooking, and a few weeks ago among other notable ladies, gave her name as a scholar to a noted teacher of the art. Another example worthy of note was the wife of President Millard Filmore. While he was Vice President, an old friend from the rural district sent him as a present a barrel of flour and a box of honey. He acknowledged the gift, and paid a compliment to his excellent wife at the same time. After returning thanks, he says:

"The honey is uncommonly fine, and its pure sweetness enhanced by the thought that no life of the little industrious insects—a splendid pattern for man in his highest condition to follow—was sacrificed or endangered by depriving them of this portion of their precious hoard. The barrel of flour has been duly inspected, and pronounced of the first quality. You should see the doughnuts—my favorite cakes—which my wife, who prides herself in making, has made out of this flour. They would make the mouth of an epicure water."

The Inter-ocean would like to impress upon all its young lady readers that they can make no graver mistake in the estimation of every sensible man, than to neglect to acquire a knowledge of good cooking. We are in no wise averse to any and all accomplishments, but the art of keeping the home in order, and making glad every one that is seated at the table in the dining room, are accomplishments for a lady more desirable than even to play well the most difficult music, or be marked for ease and grace in the drawing-room. The world just now is in need of sensible men and women. There is an abundance of drones and creatures who live for society, giddy butterflies that do not know why they were made. If this class would take to dying young, the great live world which wants workers in every field would not miss them. Labor is honorable, and the young man or young woman—rich or poor—that does not work with head or hand, should stop and think, and at once order anew the method of their lives.—Inter-ocean.

Sad Disregard of Masonic Duty!

E.·. Sir Wm. Rounseville's Request for Masonic Burial Disregarded.

One of the saddest events within our knowledge of Masonry and of Knight Templarism is that which we now have to record. It pains us exceedingly to speak of it, but duty to the dead and the living cannot now be waived. There are times when "silence is golden," and we devoutly wish that this were such a time, but it is not; the command of duty is imperative and we must obey it. There are other times when mere expediency may prevail and govern, now it cannot, for an irreparable injury has been done to Masonry, and, especially, to Knight Templarism. The right of Masonic burial has been willfully disregarded, and, not to rebuke the uncharitable, unvaliant, and unmagnanimous act, would greatly imperil the present and future safety, welfare and prosperity of the entire Fraternity, therefore, while the Voice would gladly spread over this unMasonic deed the broad mantle of charity, and forever shut it from mortal view, it cannot—dare not. Now, let us state the facts, as we see and understand them. For years past Eminent Sir William Rounseville was a contant sufferer from partial paralysis, caused by overwork in behalf of his family, his church, and the Masonic Fraternity. Never receiving compensation for his services that enabled him to make provision for a time of distress, about three years since he found himself almost destitute, and would have died of want rather than have called on the Fraternity for the assistance to which he was entitled, so great was his horror of being in any way dependent on what might be esteemed charity. A visit of his son-in-law, Mr. G. S. Knapp, to him in Peoria, then revealed his need of aid. Mr. Knapp immediately made arrangements to remove Bro. Rounseville, and his wife and daughter to Chicago, and there to provide for them as best he could in his own then straitened circumstances. In this he was aided by Bro. Rounseville's son William, now a young man past twenty-one years of age. Bro. Rounseville was unable to perform any manual labor, and his only way of earning anything was by writing for the Voice, for which he was paid an average of ten dollars, monthly. Knowing his need of help from the Fraternity, we called attention to the fact, in the Voice, and applied, by letter, to the brethren in Peoria for aid to him, and they responded. We thought then, and still think, he should have received aid from the Grand Lodge Charity Fund, and we so wrote the then Grand Master, and received the response that when the Masonic bodies to which Bro. Rounseville belonged had exhausted their ability to contribute to his relief, then the Grand Lodge could and would aid him, which was all right as a rule, but exceptions had been made, promptly and without hesitation, in cases no more meritorious, and thus the precedent for aid to him had been established, and it should have been granted. The trait in his character already alluded to, and his desire that we should say no more of his need in the Voice, and let him suffer rather than burden the craft in Peoria, deterred us from further public efforts to procure him Masonic assistance. During all this time Mr. Knapp and his son, William, were doing all within their power, and their earnings came by their daily labor, not from business, or landed estates, or government bonds, to render Bro. Rounseville's condition as comfortable and pleasant as possible. They did their whole duty, while the Masonic Fraternity did not do theirs. For the latter there is the excuse that many were not aware of Bro. Rounseville's residence in Chicago, nor of his pecuniary and physical distress, and this partly accounts for the inattention shown him, both before and after his death.

In the latter part of April last Bro. Rounseville had an attack of erysipelas from which it was believed he would recover, but, early in May, his paralytic trouble complicated his case so that it became apparent he could not long survive. Monday morning, May 5th, it was evident his death was near at hand. The dearest wish he had concerning his body had been expressed to his friend Sir John B. Gavin, and he then proceeded to do his part toward fulfilling it. He and William Rounseville, Jr., came to our office, and, not finding us in, left word, which not being given to us as received entirely misled us, and the consequence was we went on with our work, entirely in ignorance of Bro. Rounseville's dangerous illness and of his death, which occurred the following day. Bro. Gavin proceeded from our office to the office of Eminent Sir Gil W. Barnard, Grand Recorder of the Grand Commandery of Illinois, who, on hearing a statement of the facts, immediately wrote and mailed the following letter:

Chicago, May 5, 1879.

C. F. Hitchcock, Esq.—Dear Sir and Frater—Bro. William Rounseville is not likely to live over to-night. The Masons here desire to grant his request to be buried with Masonic honors, but no one seems to know his standing in lodge, etc. Will you kindly telegraph John B. Gavin, 87 West Lake street, Chicago, what his standing is, and, if good, if the Masons of Peoria desire to take any part in the affair? With fraternal regards, I am courteously yours. Gil W. Barnard, Gr. Sec.

To this was added the postscript:

"I am just leaving the city for a week or I would have answer sent to me."

At the same time, Sir John B. Gavin wrote and posted the following letter:

Chicago, Ill, May 5, 1879.

Michael E. Erler, Recorder Peoria Commandery, No. 3.—Dear Sir—William Rounseville, Past Eminent Commander of Peoria Commandery, No. 3, is now dying, and, as a friend of his and his family, and being also a K. T., he requested me to see that the Fraternity took charge of him. When I saw him last night he was hardly able to talk, and could scarcely recognize any one, unless an old friend. The doctor thinks he may drop off any moment, or may linger a few days. Unless the lodge or commandery of Peoria, of which he is a member, express their wish to have the Fraternity here take charge of the matter and so write us, I don't know how we will be able to do so. He has been sick and absent from the meetings of the different bodies so long, not through his fault, but by his misfortune, that few know him as a Mason, except by his writings in the Voice of Masonry. The March number contains a sketch of his life, which is full of interest. Now, what I wish, and it is also the wish of all the Masons I have spoken to, is to have Peoria Commandery request Chicago Commandery to take charge of him, and do honor to the man who has been an honor to the Fraternity, Please let us hear from you immediately, for, in case he should die, something will have to be done quite soon. Yours respectfully. John B. Gavin.

That (Monday) evening a regular conclave of Chicago Commandery was held, when Eminent Sir Knight Rounseville's condition and request were formally made known, by Sir John B. Gavin, who is a member thereof, and, after due consideration, the first three officers were appointed a committee, with full power to act in the matter. The following morning the letters above named and copied were received in Peoria, by the Sir Knights, to whom they were addressed, and they immediately gave attention thereto. Eminent Sir C. F. Hitchcock promptly sent the following telegram:

Peoria, May 6, 1879.

To John B. Gavin, 87 West Lake street, Chicago—Brother Rounseville is in good standing in all the bodies. Desire Chicago Commandery to take charge and bury him. C. F. Hitchcock.

This was soon delivered to the Eminent Commander of Chicago Commandery, Sir Alexander White, who put it in his pocket, and subsequently called at Mr. Knapp's residence, spending, we are informed, not over two and a half minutes in making inquiries, giving the family no information, and manifesting no desire to see the deceased.

But Eminent Sir C. F. Hitchcock did not stop at sending the above telegram; he also wrote and posted the following letter:

Peoria, Ill, May 6, 1879.

John B. Gavin, Esq., Chicago, Ill.—Dear Sir and Frater—I am in receipt of Sir Knight Gil. W. Barnard's letter stating condition of Sir Knight William Rounseville, and wired you, this morning, request to Chicago Commandery to take charge and bury him. Sir Knight Rounseville is a Past Eminent Commander of Peoria Commandery, and in good standing in the several bodies. He is, and ever has been, held in high esteem among the Fraternity of Peoria; of late years unfortunate in business ventures, but always ready and willing to do to the extent of his ability. It is not probable that any of the Masons here would desire to take any part in the services. I do not know as it would be convenient for any to be present. In behalf of Peoria Commandery, and the Masons of Peoria, would respectfully request Chicago Commandery to take charge of his remains and bury him with Knightly honors. We do not know anything respecting the circumstances of his friends. We understand he has been living with a a son or daughter, and suppose they are able to meet the expenses of his funeral, but whatever expenses it may be necessary for Chicago Commandery to incur, can send the bill to me for settlement.

Courteously yours,
C. F. Hitchcock.
E.·. C.·. Peoria Commandery, No. 3.

This letter was received by Sir Knight Gavin Wednesday morning, May 7. Sir Knight Rounseville's death had then occured. The Eminent Commander of Chicago Commandery, Sir Alexander White, had also sent the following telegram:

Chicago, May 6, 1879.

To Charles F. Hitchcock, Eminent Commander of Peoria Commandery Knights Templars—Sir Knight Rounseville died this P. M. He requested to be buried by the Fraternity. Chicago Commandery declines to act unless Peoria Commandery guarantees payment of expenses incurred. If you desire Chicago Commandery to act, send full instructions by wire immediately. The expenses will be at least two hundred dollars.

Alexander White, E.·. C.·.
900 West Madison street.

This telegram was delivered to Eminent Sir C. F. Hitchcock at about 11:30 o'clock P. M. Feeling that he could not take the responsibility of answering immediately, he waited until morning. Then he sought advice from members of the respective bodies. The general expression was: "This is unusual. The amount seems extravagant. Reasonable expenses we will pay. We don't see how we can pay or raise that amount, and, as two hundred dollars is the least amount named, it may be three or four hundred dollars." The question was asked by every one: "Why can't the remains be brought to Peoria?" and all agreed in saying: "We will pay the expenses of bringing him and the family here, and their return, and give him the largest Masonic burial here for years." Accordingly Eminent Sir C. F. Hitchcock sent the following telegram:

Peoria, May 7, 1879.

To Alexander White, E.·. C.·., 900 West Madison street, Chicago, Ill.—We withdraw our request to Chicago Commandery; we can't bear the expense. Can't the remains be sent to Peoria?

C. F. Hitchcock, E.·. C.·.

The telegram reached Sir Knight White prior to Sir Knight Gavin's call on him with the above letter. Then he said the telegram superseded the letter. Sir Knight Gavin was accompanied by Sir H. H. Pond, Generalissimo of Chicago Commandery, and one of the committee appointed with full power to act, and they jointly urged and begged Sir Knight White to comply with the request of Peoria Commandery, No. 3. He replied that not a dollar should be granted for expenses, that not a man should turn out, and that ended it. Then, mortified beyond the power of words to express, the Sir Knights left him. To the question: "Can't the remains be sent to Peoria?" he deigned no reply, and imparted no information of it to any of the friends or family. The enormity of his offense will more clearly appear when it is stated that there had been no call on his commandery by Sir Knight Rounseville or his relatives to bear any part of the burial expenses, but only to turn out, and perform the burial service. But further, had there been such a call the utmost necessary expense could not have exceeded one hundred and twenty dollars. This would have included a good burial case, ten carriages, hearse, and flowers. It would not have paid for a band and a display of plumes, but of that there was no need.

It was now about 2 o'clock P. M., of Wednesday, and every effort made by Sir Knight Gavin to secure Masonic burial for Sir Knight Rounseville's remains had failed. In despair, he and Sir H. H. Pond wended their way to Mr. Knapp's residence. Sir Knight Pond said: "I never can face the family with such news; you will have to impart it." Oh, direful task! but it was performed. How? Sir Knight Gavin rang the door-bell. It was answered by Mrs. Knapp, daughter of Sir Eminent Knight Rounseville. With blood stilled, and cheeks paler than those of the corpse within, he entered the house, and then, overcome by his emotion, fell back against the door. Mrs. Knapp, burdened with grief, exclaimed: "What is the matter?" and he found voice to answer: "They utterly refuse to do anything." Up to that moment, all the family had entertained an exalted opinion of Masonry, and therefore, the shock to them was terrible; they could not understand why their request could not be granted; and they concluded that all Masonic profession was the grossest sham and hypocrisy. But they could not be idle, and again Mr. Knapp, and the son, William, performed the service that was due from the Masonic Fraternity. To them the highest praise is due, and their can be no wonder at their feeling that Eminent Sir Alexander White has inflicted upon Eminent Sir Knight Rounseville, upon them, upon all his relatives and friends, and upon Freemasonry, an irreparable wrong, for which he should be expelled from all Masonic rights and privileges. This can be better understood when it is stated that they knew the service Sir Knight Rounseville had rendered the Order; that they were familiar with his articles on Masonic funerals; that they had seen the look of serenity which had spread over his countenance when Sir Knight Gavin assured him, just before he died, that his request for Masonic burial would be fully complied with, and that their faith in Freemasonry, up to that time, was unshaken. They sent for us to visit them and explain the wrong, if we could. What could we say, but that it was a blunder caused by inexcusable ignorance, or an abuse of Freemasonry unparelleled within our experience or knowledge, and that it no more demonstrated the falsity of Masonic principles and charity than unchristian conduct on the part of some of the professors of the Christian religion proved it false, and unworthy of support and confidence. They insisted that we should expose this wrong, that others might be saved from a similar experience hereafter. To the best of our ability we have performed the duty, keeping in view throughout the welfare of all concerned, and penning no word herein with any other feeling than that of the deepest sadness, that Eminent Sir Knight Rounseville's request for Masonic burial was not complied with.

The Christian Cynosure.

MASONRY ILLUSTRATED—A CORRECTION.—The sample pages of the new work now preparing by our publisher are continued in the present number. Our readers may judge for themselves of its value. No other work on Freemasonry yet published will so completely show the nature of the lodge. An error crept in last week through some mistake of the printers. After the form was made up correctly, part of it was sent to be electrotyped, and in replacing the cut representing the sign of a Master Mason got into the Entered Apprentice's place, and that illustrating the sign of an Entered Apprentice got in as Fellow Craft due guard. Friends will please note this correction of two cuts on pages 13 and 14 of last week, and remember that there is no such mistake in the book. We intend and expect to make confusion among the Apprentices, Masters, etc. of Freemasonry, but hope to avoid it in our own work.

THE UNITED BRETHREN DISCUSSION.

The third and last article of Rev. W. J. Shuey which we promised to review at large is given in the last Telescope; also in the same paper is an able editorial which renders much that we might have said, needless: and the article itself seems so toned down and temperate in spirit from his first reply to his reviewers, that we feel more like taking him by the hand and reasoning with him as a brother, than replying to him in the asperity of controversy. Still, I have no doubt that his ideas if adopted would be simply fatal to the United Brethren church; and I think the safety and salvation of the church requires different ideas and principles in that printing house than those which he puts forth in this article.

1. His ideas are totally inadequate to meet the evil, as were those of proslavery haters of slavery inadequate. He says:

"The first and fundumental question is: "Is secrecy itself deceitful?" Now that is not the question. Does he suppose we consider concealment in war, or from pirates, sinful? All who wished to keep slave-holding in the church began with the "fundumental" question, Is slavery in itself sinful?

2. After a long argument to "settle" the above irrelevant question, he comes to the second which is like unto it, viz, "Is secrecy in a society of persons necessarily sinful?" And after another long metaphysical argument, he concludes that "we cannot defend the position that secrecy alone renders members of a society obnoxious to God, and wholly unworthy a place in the church." We can hardly speak respectfully of such a question and answer, brought forward by a brother who comes to deal with the net work of secret orders in this country, to overthrow a rule, which, in substance has stood from the foundation of the church, and substitute one of his own. It is mere confusion of ideas. It is like discussing the question "Is poison in bread necessarily deadly?" when the thing to be done is to get rid of poisoned bread.

3. When his application of this timid and vague reasoning is equally vague and timid with the reasoning itself. He says: "I am no apologist for the minor secret societies. I very much dislike all of them. Some of them have worse things in them than their secrecy." If so, why does he wish to keep those hateful things in the church? especially, since they offend us, his weak brethren. Why not put them with Paul's meat, and insist that they shall be abstained from because they cause us to stumble? When he says further: "Every society of persons should stand on its own merits or demerits." If so, why does not Bro. Shuey tell us what secret societies he wishes to keep in the church of the United Brethren in Christ, and what ones he would expel? There are from six to a dozen secret orders whose friends believe his reasoning covers and protects them, and in nine or ten close printed columns he has not named one "minor" society which he will exclude or retain. This is not fair Christian dealing; nor is such a mind fit to be followed in dealing with practical difficulties. The case is this:

Freemasonry, which Bro. Shuey gives up as guilty of murder, forswearing, perjury, concealing crime, cutting Christ's name from the Scripture it uses, blasphemy, and, in short, is so fearfully corrupt and vicious that the Presbyterian Synod of Cincinnati, an august body for piety and learning, in the city of Dayton, I think in 1836, declared membership in a lodge inconsistent with membership in a church of Christ. Similar decisions were at that time given by the Andover Theological Faculty, Mass., of Harvard University, and the best and gravest men throughout the United States, north of Mason and Dixon's line. In the free States the lodge was for the time suppressed.

The lodge-leaders, without answering one argument or overthrowing one charge in the list of its abominations, started what Bro. Shuey calls "the minor secret orders" to ride back into power, and popular favor on their shoulders—and they have succeeded. The proofs of this statement would more than fill the space allotted to this article. Andrew Johnson, a Mason of twenty-one degrees, furnished the first money to start the grange; and there was not in the State of Iowa when the grange was at its height of success there, a single granger who could be called prominent, who was not a Freemason. I have mentioned the grange, because I suppose it contains, in its constitution, less of Masonry than the average of Bro. Shuey's "minor societies." They are all children of the Masonic lodge, in the words of an able Masonic writer, "all fashioned after the same idea."

Now for Bro. Shuey to ignore these practical, obvious facts, and commence de novo an abstract, metaphysical discussion of "secrecy," and "societies with secrecy in them," is to exhibit great lack of intelligence, or something much worse. But I must close. The arguments for including the "minor secret orders" in the same category with Freemasonry, some of them at least, are:

1. They are all religious. Even the Union League had its oath and prayer. An invented religion is a false religion, or the germ of one which has its vitality in Satan.

2. Their constitutions are all Masonic, i. e., packed in degrees; each upper degree sworn or pledged to secrecy from all below: which is constitutional aristocracy and fraud: Satan's constitution of society, not Christ's.

3. They wear the name, titles, and livery of the lodge; some one or all of them. A Congressman seeing a lodge of Odd-fellows in regalia pass by the Capitol thought they were Masons and told Mr. Stevens he had "not killed Freemasonry yet." "Yes, we have;" said Mr. Stevens, "these are not Masons, but the maggots which have crept out of her dead carcase, and taken wing."

To separate the "minor orders" from Masonry, is to ignore their parentage: to disjoin, in them, what are one in fact; and the minister who wishes to receive them or keep them in the church; like the captain who should have allowed his soldiers to wear gray uniform in the slavery war, is a practical traitor, whatever may be his learned reasons for doing so.

THIS IS MASONRY.

"Nothing," says the Voice of Masonry, "is more certain than that the Anti-masonic tongue, and pen, and press ever reek and swirl in falseness and baseness, and gloat in enmeshing non-secret society people in thin web of conceit and fraud. Their coils are serpentine, their sting is aspish, and ther words adderish. Truth is a stranger to them, and error, and wrong, and falsehood, are their best acquaintances." Because of this fearful and categorical denunciation we print a whole page from the June number of the Voice, and will admit it's not pleasant reading. All the trouble with our reform literature is it has to quote so much Masonic stuff. That is sufficient explanation for every charge of falsehood. But this case of Rounseville is substantial proof of the corruption, and falsehood, and shame, of the whole Masonic fraternity, notwithstanding the attempted apology at the close of the article. One of the last articles written by Rounseville was a plea for Masonic funerals, and he, a high Mason, understood the professions of the lodge to be made in good faith. If they were, the conduct of Chicago Masons is shameful hypocrisy. Had his relations been wealthy, there would have been no questions, and a grand parade befitting the inflated titles of the dead man would have been provided. But the Masonic account is in itself sufficient, and little comment is needed. It is but one of ten thousand, only the high standing of the parties gives it notoriety and significance.

"REFORMS AND REFORMERS."

Seldom has the philosophy of reforms been more eloquently and clearly set forth than by Prof. Geo. E. Foster in his recent lecture in the College chapel at Wheaton. Prof. Foster is from the University of New Brunswick, Fredericksburg, N. B., and President of the International Temperance Union. He is visiting the States in the interest of the temperance reform, and is now laboring under the auspices of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. His lectures in this city, some twenty in number, have been reported in the daily press, and are deservedly among the most popular ever given here on the temperance reform.

On the occasion of his address in Wheaton, Prof. Foster being introduced by Prof. C. A. Blanchard, said that he should speak on the subject of Reforms and the Temperance Reform in particular, endeavoring to show that it should properly be ranked among the Christian reforms of our time. Many tell us that moral suasion is the only way to combat intemperance, that beyond this all our work is barren of results; that we must conquer this enemy by kindness or he remains unvanquished and terrible still. The other extreme, disappointed with the results of moral suasion, say that there is nothing but the law on which we can rely for permanent effect. But the great mass of those engaged in this work believe in using both these means. Moral suasion and the law both have their place, both have their work which cannot be delegated the one to the other. Upon this position the speaker announced himself as firmly and conscientiously planted and that the case might be clearly comprehended we must examine the philosophy of reforms. All the forces that act in nature and in society may be divided into two classes, formative and reformative; and the conditions of nature and of society may be classified under the same heads.

The operation of these forces upon men was contrasted with their operation in natue. We see an expanse of country in its wild, uncultivated, formative condition, broken with hollows, rough with rocks, uninviting with irregular woods, tarns, and brushwood. The ax of the woodman and the furrow of the cultivator passes over it and the ridgy roughness of the scene is replaced by slopes of verdure, corn, and harvests. The eye rests peacefully upon the landscape on which it once wearied and became impatient at beholding. So among men when the power of reformation transforms barbarisms to civilization, and instead of oppression, vice and crime, causes to spring forth the sweet influences of peace, good will to man and love to God.

But some complain, "We have heard enough of reforms, we are sick of them." How little do such complainers remember that had not great, strong men, full of zeal for God and love of their kind, taken hold of reforms, we would not now enjoy this gift of freedom; the world would have gone on in its old, dormant way. Reforms are like a themometer of a nation. In any country by noticing the number and quality of its reforms you may tell the position of that people in the scale of civilization; for all true reforms add security and beauty to life.

The temperance movement is not a new reform strictly, but is an embodiment of the old struggle for freedom that is as old as mankind. The reforms of Luther and Wilberforce, and John Howard were the same. Every reform must rest on some principle of sufficient vital truth. Luther shook Rome and remodelled the social condition of Europe by planting himself upon this: No one shall dictate to me how I shall worship God. Wilberforce found in the principle, that every man has a right to his individual freedom so long as it does not infringe on the rights of others, a blade to cut the cancer of slavery from England. John Howard proclaimed for every human being, that so long as he lives he has a right to decent treatment; and the prisons of Europe relaxed their grim and deadly horrors before him.

Reforms are always in a minority and sometimes it is a minority of one. They require time for fulfillment proportioned to the power, the depravity, of the evil to be reformed. Every reform begins and is carried on for a time by moral suasion. Had Luther begun his great work of lifting Christendom from the slough of papacy by framing a law he would have had his trouble for his pains. But he began by argument, by persuasion, by entreaty, upon the hearts of men. He created a sentiment that sustained him, a public conscience that responded to his great principle of religious freedom. Then he called for the law to sustain his work, to enact such regulations as would protect the masses who followed him and punish their enemies. There is not an example of social or political reform that has been carried out and fixed upon the national life with out the strong power of the law. It was so with Luther; it was so with slavery—the law must be used to clinch what has been gained—it is so with temperance.

It is only seventy years since any organized effort was begun against intemperance. The minority has grown from a few to a great army of men, women and children, who in this great war against sin may use the invincible weapons of prayer and the Word of God. But much more time is required to finish this work. We must not be impatient if the host moves slowly. We must not expect to uproot and destroy this enemy of the body and soul of man in a day.

It is one of the encouraging signs of the times in this reform that the world is looking toward legal enactment for the suppression of the liquor traffic. The results of a wise legislation are too obvious and satisfactory to be neglected. The speaker drew a graphic comparison between Evanston, where liquor is excluded by special charter from the State, and Clark street, Chicago, where it flows in a deadly stream day and night. In Maine three-fourths of the State is entirely free from the traffic, and liquor-selling is looked upon as equally bad with sheep-stealing. Of forty persons lately in jail at Portland for violating the temperance laws only one was an American; the foreign population are the most difficult to convince of this evil.

The progress of the reform in Canada was set forth in a most interesting way. About three years ago a few earnest men began to agitate for the adoption of a local option law. Their efforts were successful. The Dominion Parliament passed a law giving local option to the towns, with special privileges. In all liquor trials there was no appeal from the decision of the lower courts. In Fredericksburg the speaker and another gentleman bent every energy, and were rejoiced to carry the day against the traffic two to one.

In closing this eloquent address, Prof. Foster compared the temperance work without a prohibitory law to an army marching over a bridge from which a plank was gone. Hundreds are dropping through into the flood below. We rush to rescue them; drag them out; nurse them up and set them in line again only to see the same catastrophe repeated. What we must do is to put a plank over the hole, and that plank is prohibition.

—Among the friends whom we were heartily glad to see last week returning to the College anniversary at Wheaton, was J. D. Nutting, of the American Freeman of Albany, Mo. Bro. Nutting graduated last year, and has since been associated with the veteran G.W. Needles. They have not met with other than the usual self-denying lot of men who love and labor for an unpopular reform, but are cheered by the prospect before them for Missouri. The Freeman under Mr. Nutting's hand has been in every way improved, and made worthy a place in every household of Missouri and Iowa.

—Secretary Stoddard reports a very enjoyable time last week among his old parishioners and friends at Byron, Ill. He preached in the old church on Sabbath evening, and lectured in the same place on Monday evening. On Tuesday morning at 8 o'clock, special services at which Bro. Stoddard officiated were held in the church, the occasion being the marriage of Mr. P. B. Wilhelm of Sterling to Miss C. L. Christopher, of Byron.

A State Convention in Vermont.

West Barnett, Vt., June 7, 1879.

Dear Bro. Kellogg:—I have now given five lectures in this vicinity; two at South Ryegate, one at Ryegate Center, two in the Baptist church at Groton, and one the R. P. church, (new school) of this place. All of them but one were full meetings. At Ryegate Center it rained very hard and our meeting was small. At Groton the parties of both churches, Baptist and M. E., gave me their attendance and moral support, though both local churches had a few Masons in their membership.

Our meeting last night at this place was the largest I have met in the State. The pastor thanked me heartily for the information I gave him and his people. The R. P. ministers, old school, have just returned from their meeting of Synod in New York, and I have to-day called on Rev. Mr. Faris to consult about what can be done in this field. Our conclusions are that we should have a State convention to meet early in the fall at either South Ryegate or St. Johnsbury; either of them being near to four Reformed Pres. churches, old school, and two R. P. churches, new school, and three United Pres. churches, all of which would be represented by pastors and delegates. Besides there are a number of Wesleyan churches that would be sure to be represented, and many people of all denominations that would be sure to represent themselves. So I think we shall be able to soon give our Gen. Phelps an assurance of a stronger backing in Green Mountain State, than he has at all imagined. Let Vermont then be put first on the list of States for the fall campaign. Let every friend of the cause expect to attend. Let notice be not only given in the Cynosure, but in the United Presbyterian, Wesleyan, and Christian Statesman, and other friendly papers; and let Gen. Phelps, Bro. Stoddard, and all other champins "take due notice thereof and govern themselves accordingly." Above all let us pray that the dormant spirit of the Anti-masonry, once so powerful here, may awake and put on its strength. I have just received a card from Hon. P. Buchannan, of McIndoes Falls, saying that he has made an appointment for me at that place for next Monday evening, the 9th. From there I go to Montpelier.

Yours in the Lord,
H. H. Hinman.

News of the Week.

—The legislative and executive appropriation bill passed the House last week. As all political legislation has been detached, there was no especial opposition. There were but twenty-one votes against its passage and all from the Democrats. This settles the question of supplies for the executive and legislative branches of the government, as the bill will pass the Senate without a dissenting vote, and of course be signed by the President.

—The army bill also passed the House with the provision that the troops are not to be used as a police force at the polls in any State. The Republicans in the Senate are strenuously opposed to this clause, but Pres. Hayes is said to be willing to approve the bill.

—Indian Commissioner Hayt is under indictment in New York for breach of trust as President of a savings bank, and his trial began last week. He continues to perform the duties of his office and for that reason considerable comment is made. A committee from the Society of Friends, having charge of important Indian interests, have asked the President to remove or at least suspend Hayt until his character is vindicated. The President took no notice of their request.

—The French Chamber of Deputies last week, by a vote of 306 to 195, authorized the prosecution by the government of Paul de Cassagnac, after a scene of great excitement, during which Gambetta moved the expulsion of De Cassagnac from the house, but he afterward withdrew the motion, M. de Cassagnac having withdrawn the word "cowardice," which he had applied to the conduct of the government. Cassagnac is an editor, a duelist, and a rabid republican.

—Major Serpa Pinto has left Alexandria, Egypt, for Marseilles, Lisbon, and London. This intrepid African explorer started from Benguela, on the Atlantic Ocean, in August, 1877, and arrived at Durban, on the Indian Ocean, in April, 1879. He brings twenty charts, numberless drawings, valuable barometic, astronomic, and geologic records, large collections of insects, plants, skins, etc., six volumes in manuscript full of interesting narrative, including an account of the discovery of a river 200 miles long, flowing into the Zambesi. He has brought over twenty-eight cannibals. Some of his African escort proceed to Lisbon, and then return to Bise, their native land.

Under Orders.

We know not what is expedient
But we may know what is right;
And we never need grope in darkness,
If we look to Heaven for light.

Down deep in the hold of the vessel
The ponderous engine lies,
And faithfully there the engineer
His labor steadily plies.

He knows not the course of the vessel,
He knows not the way he should go;
He minds his simple duty
And keeps the fire aglow.

He knows not whether the billows
The bark may overwhelm;
He knows and obeys the orders
Of the pilot at the helm.

And so in the wearisome journey
Over life's troubled sea,
I know not the way I am going,
But Jesus shall pilot me.

I see not the rocks and the quicksands,
For my sight is dull and dim;
But I know that Christ is my Captain,
And I take my orders from him.

Speak, Lord, for thy servant heareth,
Speak peace to my anxious soul,
And help me to feel that all my ways
Are under thy wise control;

That he who cares for the lily
And heeds the sparrow's fall,
Shall tenderly lead his loving child;
For he made and loveth all.

And so when wearied and baffled,
And I know not which way to go,
I know that he can guide me,
And 'tis all that I need to know.

—The Boston Traveler.

Mrs. Barney's Sermon.

[Concluded.]

Tim, meanwhile, had sauntered out from among the bushes, and was engaged in untying the old horse that Mrs. Searls had fastened as securely as if it could be induced under any circumstances to run. He was moved to this act of gallantry, partly because he really liked the cheery little woman, and partly because he heard Mrs. Barney's call, and was in no haste to go to the house.

"That will do, thank you, Tim," said Sister Searls, nervously anxious to expedite his steps in the way of obedience. "I think Mrs. Barney is calling you."

"Yes'm; she most always is," answered Tim, philosophically, pausing to arrange the harness with painful deliberation.

"But my dear boy," urged Sister Searls, reading something in the knitted brows, "you really should try to please her and help her all you can, you know. She is kind to you."

"Oh yes, she's kind! Only when I see one of her kindnesses a coming I dodge; it generally hits a fellow hard enough to be uncomfortable," responded Tim. Then, having relieved his feelings by this statement, his conscience pricked him slightly, and he added: "You see she's always in such a hurry. She can't come and bring 'em; she has to pitch 'em."

Mrs. Searls meditated as she drove down the country road.

"Well, I never thought of that before, but I do suppose that's why the Bible speaks of the Lord's 'loving kindness' and 'tender mercy'—because there's so much kindness in the world that isn't one bit loving, and so much mercy that is only duty and not tenderness. I'll tell Josiah that." For it happened that while the good minister pored over his books and studied theology, his wife, going here and there, studied humanity. And though he cooked his own sermons, she often seasoned them.

The baking was done at last, the currants picked and Mrs. Barney's dinner ready.

"For the bounty bestowed upon us may we be duly grateful," murmured Mr. Barney with head bowed low over his plate. Then he looked up and remarked that he was tired of a steady diet of ham and eggs, and didn't see why they couldn't have a little variety.

"You would see if you had to cook in the hot kitchen as I do," responded Mrs. Barney more shortly than her wont. "I am glad to have whatever I can get most quickly and easily. When we have a summer kitchen, we can begin to live as other people do."

"If we ain't all as old as Methuseler," complained Master Tommy in an undertone which was perfectly audible. "Anyway, the chickens will be if we can't have any cooked till that time." He had sniffed the odors of the baking on his homeward way from school, and settling his juvenile mind upon chicken-pie for dinner had been grievously disappointed.

Warm and weary with the morning's work, the questions and suggestions fretted Mrs. Barney. She felt wounded and aggrieved, too, as she moved about silently after dinner. No one seemed to see that she cared as much for things nice and comfortable as did the others, she said to herself. She cared far more, indeed, since she was willing to do without much now, and work and plan for the sake of having things all that could be desired by and by. How many present comforts and conveniences she had foregone for that. Those very cellar stairs, toward whose dark tortuous steps she was tending, were an example; they could scarce be more illy-built, or in a more inconvenient place. Mr. Barney had wanted to remove them; but she would not allow him to incur the expense because a second removal might be necessary when the house was thoroughly re-arranged. No, she had preferred to submit to the discomfort all this time.

Too long a time it proved, for even while she meditated an insecure board slipped beneath her feet, plunging her down the narrow stairway against the rough stone wall, and then upon the hard floor of the cellar. One swift moment of terror, the crash of dishes that fell from her hands, a flash of excruciating pain, and then she knew nothing more. She did not hear Nealie's wild cry from the room above, nor see her husband's pale face as he lifted her in his arms.

When she returned to consciousness a strange voice—the physician's—was saying:

"No bones broken, though it's a wonder her neck wasn't, falling in the way she did."

Slowly she opened her eyes upon a confused mingling of anxious faces, wet clothes, and bottles of arnica and camphor, and gradually she comprehended what had happened, and her own condition—not dangerously injured, but bruised and lamed, with a sprained ankle that would keep her a prisoner for some days at least. It was a sudden pause in her busy work, an enforced rest. She scarcely knew how to bear it, for a moment, as she remembered all she had planned to do, until a second shuddering thought suggested that she might have left it all forever; then she grew patient and thankful. Yet it seemed strange to be quietly lying on the lougne in the best room, the room that had been kept so carefully closed to preserve its furniture until an addition to the house should transmute it into a back parlor; to watch through the open door, only a spectator, while Nealie flitted to and fro in the kitchen beyond, spreading the table for tea.

How good the children were that evening, and how thoughtful her husband was, coming to her side again and again to talk or read to her. They had not found much time for talking or reading together these late years, she and David; she had always been so busy when he was in the house. She had dreamed of a leisure time coming, though, when they should have many evenings like this, except the illness or accident coming to mar her plans, or of death suddenly ending them. But, it flashed upon her now how many loving words and offices and and daily enjoyments had been crowded out of their home, and in that brief retrospective glance she understood the meaning and the earnestness of Sister Searls' entreaty.

"Why, it's all kind of real nice and jolly—if you wasn't hurt," declared Tommy, unable to express his enjoyment of the pretty room, and the unusual family gathering any more clearly.

Tears gathered in the mother's eyes, but she had found her clue and meant to follow it. She had ample time for thought in the days that followed, when she was only able to sew a little, now and then, on garments for Tim, or look over seeds for Nealie's vine-planting; and slowly but surely she learned her lesson, and brought it back to health with her—to gather life's pleasantness as God sends his sunshine—day by day.—Interior.

"Tell me whom you admire," said Sainte Beuve, "and I will tell you what you are, at least as regards your talents, tastes and character. Do you admire mean men? your own nature is mean. Do you admire rich men? you are of the earth, earthy. Do you admire men of title? you are a toad-eater or a tuft-hunter. Do you admire honest, brave and manly men? you are yourself of an honest brave and manly spirit."

The Reproach of Cant.

The fear of the reproach of cant destroys much of the simplicity of religion. If we catch the New Testament spirit aright, the primitive Christians were single eyed in their purposes, and artless as a child in their religious exercises. Their simplicity was mightier than their opponent's logic, and wiser than their schools.

The keen Athenian's subtle metaphysics went down before the plain simplicity of the holy Apostle, who saw, when the scales fell from his eyes, that the conquest of his life was on the plan of the foolish things confounding the mighty. Hence he was pious before kings. He adapted himself to men, not by flattering their pride and magnifying their morals, but by preaching temperance to the intemperate, and righteousness to the cruel, and judgment to judges.

If one in our day were to give personal experience in a court room, or criticise the eulogies that are heaped upon deceased statesmen, he would run the risk of the sneer of cant.

The simplicity of John Fletcher was a beautiful fragrance in his life, but would it not be called cant, if one now-a-days were to lift up his hands to heaven over the humble luncheon at the garden gate, and in melting tones of thankfulness praise the loving Giver? What has taken out the hearty responses that once thrilled worshiping assemblies? I cannot think the want of piety. Is it not because a counter-sentiment to such exercises has crept in among us? Have elegant churches and professional performances at both ends of the church, style in Sabbath dress, and thoughtlessness regarding the plainer sort, had anything to do in creating a feeling that vocal amens and hallelujahs are coarse and old-fashioned? And is there not a corresponding fear lest the opprobrious epithet of cant will fall upon the pious soul who still holds to the untrammeled spirit of simple worship?

Oh, for a release of our Zion from this bondage of fear! Oh, for a great increase of simple-hearted people, to pray, sing, converse, and with godly judgment respond, as aforetime, in the sanctuary! If it be called cant, bear the reproach and go on. If it be called cant to pray against the rum traffic, or for the immediate removal of a penitent drunkard's appetite, accept the charge and keep on praying. If it be called cant to hold a "joint board" prayer meeting to pray the way through an intricate financial embarrassment, instead of turning the church into an oyster saloon, or the pulpit into a theatrical stage, then take joyfully the contemptuous charge, and pray on. God will vindicate the command, "Whether, therefore, ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God."—Christian Standard.

Happy Songs.

Were it not for sound and song,
Life would lose its pleasure;
We could not endure it long—
Such a load of treasure.

Say, what is it soothes the soul,
And the heart rejoices?
'Tis the burst of joyous songs,
Blending happy voices.

Larks that soar in upper air,
Nightingales in bowers,
Quails that sing in meadows fair—
Flying through the flowers—

How they warble! Sky and grove
With their songs are ringing;
We, like them, will evermore
Cheer the hours with singing.

Early Piety.

"When Jesus was here among men,
He called little children as lambs to his fold."

A sweet and lovely spirit of piety in a little child's heart is like the sunlight shining on the dewdrops of the morning.

Our Father is good and kind to his little ones; he listens to their earliest prayers, and rejoices in the first faint fragrance of the opening bud, which, if tenderly shielded and prayerfully nursed, will even now yield the ripened fruit of a holy life.

There is no license for children to sin because they are children. God makes no distinction between little folks and great folks, touching moral deportment, a life of godliness. God's precepts are equally binding on the lambs of the flock as on those of riper years. Children born of the Holy Spirit, quickened into life, as all children should be, are expected to let their light shine, walk softly, exhibit Christ in their daily walk and conversation, be living epistles, read and known of all men, ornaments in society, "olive-plants around the table," precious, lively stones in God's house, active in the divine life.

Christians will be more sprightly, energetic, buoyant, in juvenile life than when advanced to mature years. We have no sympathy whatever with ascetic piety. Religion is happyifying; cheerfulness and joyfulness are the fruits of faith and hope in God.

Religion is the reverse of gloom or sadness. It imparts true pleasure and abiding peace, and sweetens everything in life.

"Be ye holy, for I am holy," is applicable to every little son and daughter of Adam's race.

A True Story.

When I was a very little girl not more than four years old, we lived in a cottage down in Maine. This home was under big trees which were brimful of acorns and all alive with queer little striped squirrels.

There was a garden full of roses, and just in the center a big rock all covered with moss which looked just like tea. I used to scrape it off and tie it in little paper parcels and sell it to mamma.

She didn't pay me much, only buttons; but I liked it and so did she; 'cause she always laughed.

One day a neighbor sent for mamma to come and stay with her because she was sick. Papa said: "If you have to stay all night, I will come over, after somebody is in bed." I heard him. I knew who somebody meant; so I said: "I'll keep awake to-night, see if I don't!" I didn't want to be left alone.

I watched the corner behind the door where the dark always came first, and watched the door for mamma; but she didn't come, and the dark did. Then I watched papa. How nice he fixed the fire, and how he felt in the pocket where I always found peppermints and then said: "Now come ride." I wanted the ride and the peppermints, but I wouldn't go to sleep this time.

Papa slipped the candies into my hand and cuddled me up close, and somehow I forgot; and then I woke quick, and it was dark, and the fire was out, and papa was gone.

I jumped out of bed quick and felt around for my clothes, but I couldn't find them; so I went to the outside door and opened it softly and slipped out.

The stone step was cold, and it was just as dark out doors as it was in the house; but I wanted papa and mamma. I didn't run, but I walked fast.

It was thick woods on one side of the road, and pasture and orchard on the other. It wasn't long 'till I saw the house. I went to the side door and knocked softly two or three times, and then papa opened it very carefully. He almost dropped the lamp when he saw just me. I didn't know papa was ever afraid of anything. He led me into the room where mamma and the sick woman were, and mamma looked so white and said: "A half a mile alone, this dark night!" Papa looked at his watch and said: "At one o'clock." They held my feet to the fire and wrapped me in a shawl, and I had a nice ride back on papa's shoulder.

When I woke in the morning, mamma was home, and breakfast was ready. I wondered what made her kiss me so many times, and I heard papa say: "He shall give his angels charge."—I didn't hear the rest, but there was some more.—A little girl in New York Observer.

Facts Contained in the Bible.

The Bible contains 3,586,489 letters, 773,602 words, 31,173 verses, 1,189 chapters, and 66 books.

The word and occurs 46,277 times.

The Japanese have some curious customs: The workman shoves the plane towards him, while the teeth of a saw are so set that it is the upward pull which cuts. They print on but one side of the paper, and commence reading in what we call the back part, turning the leaves from the left to the right. The lines run up and down and not across the page like our books. The pages are numbered at the foot. The face of the clock moves while the hands stand still. Of course we can not fully understand these things, but that is the way things are done on the other side of the world.

James Parton concludes a recent article upon the habits and death of Bayard Taylor, as follows: "I would say to every young man in the United States if I could reach him, if you mean to attain one of the prizes of your profession, and live a cheerful life to the age of eighty, throw away your dirty pipe, put your cigars in the stove, never buy any more, become an absolute teetotaler, take your dinner in the middle of the day, and rest one day in seven."

Congregational.

—[The following is a portion of a letter from Rev. A. J. Bailey, who attended the meeting of the late State Congregntional Association at Princeton Ill., until the last day. It presents some striking features in the reception of the Anderson paper The writer was absent when the committee reported dissenting from some of its conclusions; but the Advance says editorially: "The general tendency of the essayist's discussion we regard as injudicious if not positively injurious."]

The paper on "The Church and the Lodge" was a shrewd, adroit effort. When the business committee were working over the programme and finding an hour for that essay, one minister arose and said that the Association did not want to be plunged into a discussion of that subject.

Quite a large number of the lodge fraternity came in to hear the essay, and fearing lest it might be shut out made some inquiries of an intimate friend of mine as to when the essay would be read. They seemed very anxious to stay, and said it would not be fair to crowd it out. They also said something about the strength of Masonry, and that the Congregational churches were helped by Masons, that the action of the Association would be watched by Masons everywhere. The essay was brought on at 11:30—was nearly forty minutes long, and Association had voted that morning sessions should close at twelve. The programme called for essay followed by discussion.

The essayist began by telling that Christ came to help men and save them. He showed how the church is not to judge men but to save them. He spoke of the great success of the Young Mens Christian Associations and of their watchfulness over young men going from one city to another. From this he turned to the work of the lodge which he claimed, supplied a felt want among men. He claimed not to discuss the right or wrong of the lodge—he only told what they did. He thought that the church ought to do more of that kind of work to make the work of the lodge unnecessary. He closed by saying: "If there is anything in this to fight over, why, then fight." He was loudly cheered, but I noticed that the most thoughtful did not cheer.

As soon as we were adjourned, in as courteous a manner as possible I solicited the opinions of some of our most prominent ministers as to what the essayist had really said, and whether or not they endorsed it. An intelligent lady sitting near me, before I left my seat said, "That is the greatest piece of sophistry I ever heard."

I did not take down questions and answers, but I am sure I can tell correctly what was said to me.

The first one to whom I spoke, a prominent D.D., not in pastoral work, apologized for the essay and seemed anxious to do so. I did not think he was in favor of Masonry. The next was one of our good secretaries; he declined giving an opinion. Two of our Theological Seminary professors expressed the opinion that the essay very much misrepresented the church, one saying, "He should have included insurance companies with the lodges." A veteran in all good work in our State said that all through the essay was a secret plea for the lodge. A pastor whose name is not the measure of his piety or ability said to Prof. Fisk, "If you want for your class the most perfect specimen of sophistry extant, secure that paper," and the pastor intimated to me when he told me what he had said, that the enthusiastic professor did not dissent from his opinion. Our delegate, who served one term in our State Legislature, said, "It is an outrage to allow that paper to pass unanswered."

During the afternoon session it became evident that the Association were unwilling to allow the paper to pass unchallenged. A veteran abolitionist, who has also served faithfully in other unpopular reforms, called up the question of opportunity to discuss the essay. In spite of an effort on the part of some to prevent discussion, the question was referred to a special committee.

THE ASSOCIATED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

—Bro. George Peterson, the clerk of the Cedar Grove Missionary Baptist church of Lowndes county, Miss., in sending the name of his church to be placed on our list, writes: "We heard an address from our Bro. E. Tapley on this subject which opened our eyes. We thank him for it and hope the good work will go on until all the churches unite together to oppose secret orders." How simply and directly does this put the whole question! Let the people of God everywhere pray and labor for this end. This church has a membership of 232, and four licensed preachers. From a correspondent in the South who is acquainted with the colored churches visited by Bro. Tapley, we gain the following interesting items:

"They seem to be hearty in this matter and even enthusiastic, and if for no other reason I think their terrible experience with the "Ku-Klux Klan" will make them for the most part firm in their opposition to all secret clans. Their poverty would be one great barrier to initiation We hope that the prayers of God's people who see their names in the Cynosure, and especially of those churches more privileged, associated with them may bring great blessings to them. The colored population are continually moving from year to year wherever they can find homes and something to eat, consequently they often get out of reach of their churches. The record for New Ruhamah year before last stood fifteen, but some have moved, and they have not had regular preaching; perhaps now there may not be more than seven members who could be regular attendents. Buttahachie river separates all who preach to them, and there is some times no money to pay for crossing; and M. Weatherspoon, the colored supply, who is a good man, was sick a part of last year and this, and had not clothes sufficient last winter; so things are in an unpromising condition, although they have a much better house than Pleasant Ridge. I do hope, however, that the church will yet be revived and prosper.

Pleasant Ridge has nine members who seem to be good Christians, and a Sabbath-school of very interesting scholars. The religious interests there seem to be on the increase. They are exceedingly poor.

New Hope has fifty-three members. I know nothing of its condition.

Military Chapel, Lowndes Co., has sixty enrolled, thirty-three in regular attendance. Bro. Brownlee is a good Christian, very earnest in his opposition to lodgery. His church is well attended, a Sabbath-school sometimes. Most of these churches are, I think, growing in numbers, though in some degree like the Scripture net; there has been improvement with regard to preachers.

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

The General Assembly met this year at New Wilmington, Pa., May 28, and continued in session till June 4. Rev. Wm. Bruce, D. D, of Zenia, the theological seminary, was chosen moderator. Some of the sessions of the Assembly were held in the chapel of Westminster College. One of the most important questions discussed by the churches during the year past was the consolidation of the Mission Boards. This was voted down in the Assembly, 97 to 643. Mrs. A. McCullough, of Illinois, was appointed to go to the S. India mission, and additional laborers were directed to be sent out. Appropriations amounting to $66,000 were made for foreigns missions, $28,000 to Egypt, and $22,000 to India. Dancing, tobacco, Sabbath desecration, and the lodge, received attention. Drs. Wishart, Harper, and Moorehead, were appointed a committee to co-operate with the International Sabbath Association, in securing a better observance of the Lord's day. The Cleveland Presbytery asked for a pastorial letter on secret societies, but the Assembly considered its previous utterances were enough. Rev. G. D. Turino, of Milan, Italy, represented the historic Waldensian church, and the sympathy, prayers and contributions of the U. P. churches commended to the Waldensians. The Assembly is to meet next year in Zenia, O. There are in the U. P. denomination 9 synods; 58 presbyteries; 683 ministers; 798 congregations, 12 of which were organized the past year; 65 mission stations, 80,692 members, 726 Sabbath-schools with 65,467 scholars. To the Mission Boards is given $106,765 and for all purposes $787,530 were given, or $10.35 per member.

GERMAN BAPTIST (BRETHREN).

—The great annual meeting of the Brethren was held June 20 at Broadway, Rockingham county, Va., where near a large church, temporary buildings have been put up for the accommodation of thousands who will eat, sleep, and hold their meetings on the premises. This —From an exchange we take the following interesting account of the Brethren:

Dunkards do not swear; they affirm. They do not go to law with each other; for after (Matthew 18) the case comes before the church and a decision is given by the members in council, that is based on ecclesiastical law which no court will set aside. Being non-combatants, they are not found either in fights or wrangles, and they do not go to war. They do not believe in divorce except for very grave reasons, and even then there may be no second marriages. There are no members of secret orders in the brotherhood, and those who were members on their admission to the church abjure all connection with worldly organization, as, without prejudice, the church affords all the advantages of the most benevolent or other secret orders. There are no poor in the church; that is, there are no paupers, and no one is allowed to suffer. Congregations have supported their poor members, the lunatic, the infirm, and the sick for years at a large expense, without trouble, as it is a part of the practice and order of the church. The members are taken in by the voice of the church; that is, the applicant for membership withdraws and the church votes on his eligibility, which usually carries. He is then immersed, face forward, three times, in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. Preliminary to his baptism he is examined, and gives his consent to the following: To give and take counsel, to abide by the rulings of the church, to not swear (in the courts), not to bear arms, not to go to law and to settle his personal difficulties according to Matthew 18, and to behave himself generally. There are two colleges in the brotherhood, one in Huntington, Pa., and one in embryo at Ashland, Ohio.

HOLINESS WORK.

—Some of the holiness camp-meetings are appointed this year as follows: U. B. Association, The Swail, near New Washington, Pa., June 5. State, Union City, Ind., June 16. State C. M. A., Youngstown, Aug. 5, and Deleware, O., Aug. 27. National Association, near Lawrence, Kansas, June 24; Bennett, Neb., July 8; Sewickley, Pa., July 18; Douglass, Mass., July 23; Summit Grove, Pa., between Baltimore and Harrisburg, Aug. 13; Urbana, O., also Aug. 13; and New Castle, Pa. Aug. 13. Wesleyan Methodist, Jackson county, Mich., June 17. Illinois State, Towanda, Aug. 13. U. B. Holiness Association, Portage, Wood county, O., Aug. 14. Cullis convention, Orchard Beach, Me., July 26. All the Free Methodist and Wesleyan grove meetings partake also of this character.

—Rev. Mr. Inskip, President of the National Holiness Association, in his paper, the Standard, speaks of Freemasonry. He thinks it a subject of minor importance, and does not condemn the mere principle of secrecy. But he very sensibly says: "If our counsel be asked, it is: keep away from Masonic and all similar associations, and look after those of a higher order and aim." If he finds no sharper weapon in the Word of God than these, Masonry will overthrow him and his work.

GENERAL.

—There has been an accession of 500 converts at Mandapaslai, in the Madura Mission of the American Board.

—As to getting young men converted in temperance and other like meetings to unite with some church, Mr. Moody lately said:

"If they are converted there is no trouble; they go into the church as naturally as water runs down hill. But the danger in counting converts and reporting how many. We don't known whether any other man is converted or not. If we must report, let us say professed conversions; or better, how many have united with the different churches, as the result of our work. But I don't like anything of the kind. The only record of conversions that can be relied upon is the one kept in heaven."

—The Chicago Times says:

"A Presbyterian minister in New York, the Rev. Mr. Biddle, has been pitching into his brethren who 'overlook the rich member who leans to secret societies, or the rich liquor-dealer in their congregation, and fire away at the Jews and the Mormons, for they haven't any of these in their church. They fear their salaries will be lowered.' 'Rum and tobacco,' continued Mr. Biddle, 'are twin devils, but he knew of ministers who could get along better without prayer than go one day without tobacco.'"

MARRIED.—At the residence of the bride's father, A. H. Hiatt, M. D., Wheaton, Ill., June 11th, Mr. E. L. Burge, of Toulon, Ill, and Miss Eva S. Hiatt. Prof. C. A. Blanchard performed the ceremony.

TREASURER'S REPORT, WHEATON COLLEGE.

WHEATON COLLEGE,
June 13, 1879.

TO THE HONORABLE BOARD OF TRUSTEES:—In making my annual report, it gives me great pleasure to say that the item "Bills Payable" has entirely disappeared from the accounts; the last note against the College was paid May 15, 1879. All the bills that have been audited have also been paid in full, and the bills and accounts not yet audited will at the close of the term not far exceed $100.

Subscriptions during the year were made on two conditions; that the principles of the College should be maintained, and that for five years no debt exceeding $500 should be allowed to accumulate. The salaried teachers (with the exception of Miss Carothers, who has been here only two terms) signed an agreement that they would share pro-rata whatever funds could be appropriated for their support and remit the balances of their respective salaries.

The endowment funds have been so largely unproductive the past year, and the receipts from tuitions comparatively so small, that the teachers have been credited with only 30 per cent. of their salaries. Unless the remaining 70 per cent. can be provided for by sale of land or otherwise, the agreement above mentioned will require that the same be remitted.

The prospects for next year are far more promising. The endowment funds will probably yield about $1,700, and the tuition receipts will I hope not fall far short of $3,800 after deducting amounts remitted to worthy students and endorsed on scholarships. Of this total of $5,500, probably $1,000 will be required for fuel, care of building, treasurer's salary, and other incidentals, it will seen then that in order to have the approximate receipts cover expenses the teachers salaries should not far exceed $4,500.

Your attention will be called to the boarding hall. This year the report shows a heavy loss from this source; this is owing, however, to the fact that for two years past, bills were left unpaid from the close of one year to the beginning of the next, while this year all accounts have been settled as far as possible. During the seven years that the boarding hall has been in operation the College has profited only $400 from it, including all the room rents. About the most profitable year of the seven was the one when the hall was leased.

With these preliminary remarks your attention is asked to the following statements.

CHAPTER XXIX CONTINUED.

SCENE III: PLAYING MURDER. (151)—Assault by "JUBELO" on the Candidate

SCENE IV: PLAYING MURDER.—"JUBELO" strikes him with the square on left breast

SCENE V: PLAYING MURDER.—Assault by "JUBELUM" on the Candidate.

NOTE 147—FROM "FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED."

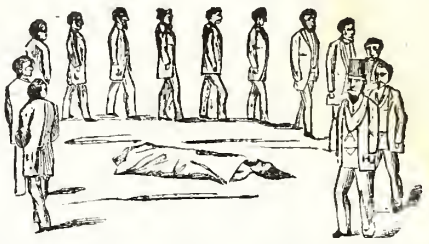
"None but he who has visited the holy of holies and traveled the road of peril can have any conception of the mysterics unfolded in this degree. Mackey's Lexicon, Art. Master Mason.

NOTE 151—FROM "FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED."

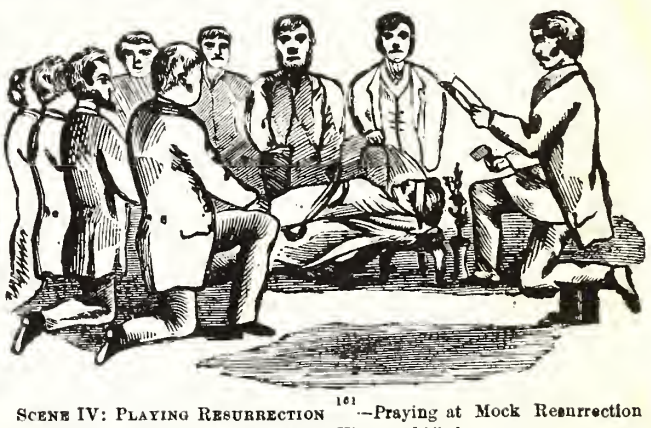
"It was the duty of Hiram Abiff to superintend the workmen, and the reports of his officers were always examined with the most scrupulous exactness. At the opening of the day, when the sun was rising in the east, it was his constant custom, before the commencement of labor to go into the temple and offer up his prayers to Jehovah for a blessing on the work. These religious customs were faithfully performed for the first six years in the secret recesses of his lodge and for the last year in the precincts of the most Holy Place. At length, on the very day appointed for celebrating the cope stone of the building, he retired as usual, according to our traditions, at the hour of high twelve, and did not return alive."—Pierson's Traditions, page 162.

SCEN VI: PLAYING MURDER. (164)—"JUBELUM" kill him with the Setting Maul and tumble him into the Canvas.

GRAND HAILING SIGN OF DISTRESS.



First Position. Second Position. Third Position.

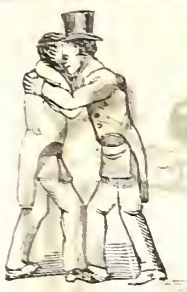


SCENE VII: PLAYING DISTRESS.—Mourning for "our Grand Master Hiram Abiff."

Raise hands and arms as shown in first cut and if in the ceremony of "raising" or in the dark the words in brackets may be used, otherwise not. [O Lord.] Bring arms from first to second position, [My God,] bring arms to third position [was there no help for the widows Son?] bring arms to side.

In the dark when in distress the words are, Is there no help etc., but in the lodge in, raising Hiram the word was is used. In the ceremony of "raising" after the second attempt and failure to raise the body, first by the Entered Apprentice's Grip and then by the Fellow Craft's, when this sign is given the words are, "O Lord my God, O Lord my God, O Lord my God, I fear the Master's word is forever lost."

SCENE VIII: PLAYING DISTRESS.—Procession Singing Dirge for "our Grand Master Hiram Abiff."



SCENE IV: PLAYING RESURRECTION [161]—Praying at Mock Resurrection of Candidate alias "our Grand Master Hiram Abiff."

NOTE 164—FROM "FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED."

"The Ancient Mysteries, those truly Masonic institutions, which by a series of solemn and imposing ceremonies prepared the mind of the initiate for the reception of those unpopular dogmas. * * * In all of them there was, in addition to the instructions in relation to the existence of a Supreme Deity, a legend in which, by the dramatic representation of the violent death and subsequent restoration to life of some distinguished personage, the doctrines of the resurrection and the soul's immortality were emblematically illustrated."—Mackey's Lexicon, Art. Antiquity of Masonry.

NOTE 161—FROM "FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED."

"The small hill near Mount Moriah can be clearly identified by the most convincing analogies as being no other than Mount Calvary. Thus Mount Calvary was a small hill; it was situated in a westerly direction from the temple and was near Mount Moriah; it was on the direct road from Jerusalem to Joppa, and is thus the very spot where a weary brother, traveling on that road, would find it convenient to sit down to rest and refresh himself; and it was outside of the gate of the temple; and lastly, there are several caves, or clefts in the rocks in the neighborhood, one of which it will be remembered was, subsequently to the time of this tradition, used as the sepulchre of our Lord. The Christian Mason will readily perceive the peculiar character of the symbolism which this identification of the spot on which the great truth of the resurrection was unfolded in both systems—the Masonic and Christian—must suggest."—Mackey's Ritualist, page 116.

FIVE POINTS OF FELLOWSHIP.

Foot to foot, knee to knee, breast to breast, hand to back and cheek to cheek or mouth to ear, when they whisper: Mah-hah-bone, which is the Master's word.

SCENE X: PLAYING RESURRECTION—Candidate Raised on the Five Points of Fellowship.[159]

EMBLEMS OF THE MASTER MASON'S[160] DEGREE.

THE THREE STEPS

Usually delineated upon the Master's carpet, are emblematical of the three principal stages of human life, viz: youth, manhood, and age. In youth as Entered Apprentices, we ought industriously to occupy our minds in the attainment of useful knowledge; in manhood, as Fellow Craft, we should apply our knowledge to the discharge of our respective duties to God, our neighbor, and ourselves; that so in age, as Master Masons, we may enjoy the happy reflection consequent on a well-spent life, and die in the hope of a glorious immortality.[159]

"THE POT OF INCENSE

Is an emblem[161] of a pure heart, which is always an acceptable sacrifice to the Deity: and as this glows with fervent heat, so should our hearts continually glow with gratitude to the great and beneficent Author of our existence, for the manifold blessings and comforts we enjoy.

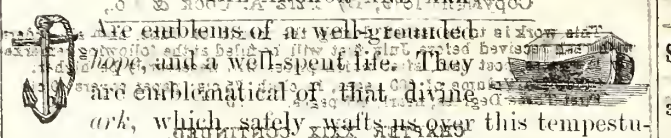
"THE BEE HIVE

Is an emblem of industry, and recommends the practice of that virtue to all created beings, from the highest seraph in heaven to the lowest reptile of the [dust etc. See page 307 of "Freemasonry Illustrated."]

"THE BOOK OF CONSTITUTIONS GUARDED BY THE TYLER'S SWORD

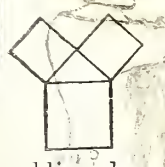
Reminds us that we should be ever watchful and guarded in our thoughts, words and actions, particularly when before the enemies of Masonry; ever bearing in remembrance those truly Masonic virtues, silence and circumspection.

"THE SWORD POINTING TO A NAKED HEART



Demonstrates that justice will sooner or later overtake us; and although our thoughts, words and actions may be hidden from the eyes of man, yet that

"ALL-SEEING EYE,

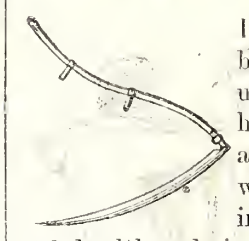


Whom the Sun Moon and Stars obey, and under whose watchful care even comets perform their stupendous revolutions, pervades the inmost recesses of the human heart, and will reward us according to our merits.

"THE ANCHOR AND ARK

Are emblems of a well-grounded hope, and a well-spent life. They are emblematical of that divine ark, which safely wafts us over this tempestuous sea of troubles, and that anchor which shall safely moor us in a peaceful harbor, where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary shall find rest.

"THE FORTY-SEVENTH PROBLEM OF EUCLID.



This was an invention of our ancient friend and brother, the great Pythagorus, who, in his travels through Asia, Africa and Europe, was initiated into the several orders of priesthood, and raised to the sublime degree of Master Mason. [etc See page 310 of "Freemasonry Illustrated."]

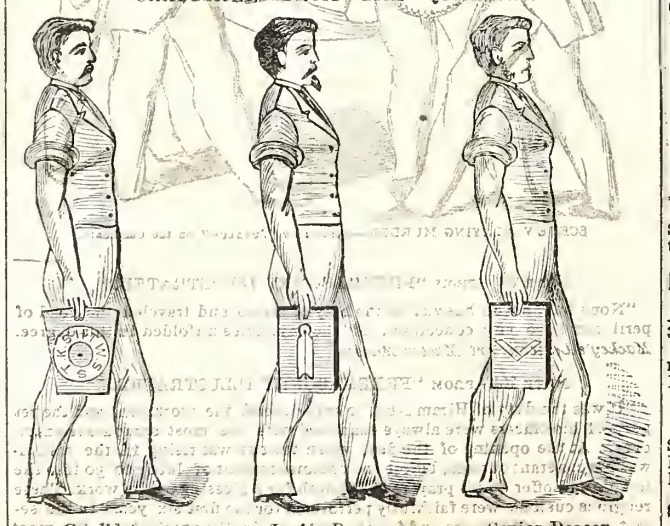
"THE HOUR GLASS

Is an emblem of human life. Behold! how swiftly the sands run, and how rapidly our lives are drawing to a close! [etc See page 310 of "Freemasonry Illustrated."]

"THE SCYTHE

Is an emblem of time, which cuts the brittle thread of life, and launches us into eternity. Behold! what havoc the scythe of time makes among the human race! If by chance we should escape the numerous evils incident to childhood and youth, and with health and vigor arrive to the years of manhood; yet, withal, we must soon be cut down by the all-devouring scythe of time, and be gathered into the land where our fathers have gone before us."—Sickels's Monitor, pages 113-119.

THE SETTING MAUL, SPADE AND COFFIN.



"The second class of emblems are not monitorial, and therefore their true interpretation can only be obtained within the tyled recesses of the lodge. They consist of the Setting Maul, the Spade, the Coffin, and the Sprig of Acacia. They afford subjects of serious and solemn reflection to the rational and contemplative mind."—Mackey's Ritualist, page 131.

FOURTH, OR MARK MASTER'S[223] DEGREE.

[FIRST DEGREE OF THE CHAPTER.]

CRAFTSMEN FROM THE QUARRIES.

Candidate. Junior Deacon. Senior Deacon.

NOTE 169—FROM "FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED."

"FIVE POINTS OF FELLOWSHIP. The term alludes to a symbolical ceremony in the Master Mason's degree which is chiefly esoteric. It is an elegant summary of the whole benevolent code of Freemasonry, and eminently worthy of study."—Morris's Dictionary, Art. Five Points of Fellowship.

NOTE 383—FROM "FREEMSONRY ILLUSTRTED."

"Under the term Emblems, writers include those conveying both the esotery and exotery of Masonic knowledge."—Morris's Dictionary, Art. Emblems.

NOTE 180—FROM "FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED."

"The Master Mason is one who has been 'raised to the Sublime Degree,' having passed from the Middle Chamber to the Sanctum Sanctorum, or Most Holy place of the Temple."—Morris's Dictionary, Art. Master Mason.

NOTE—159 FROM "FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED."

"In the initiation of life and death, of which the initiation in the third degree is simply emblematic, innocence must for a time lie in the grave—at length, however, to be called by the Grand Master of all things to immortality."—Mackey's Ritualist, page 118.

NOTE 384—FROM "FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED."

"Everything in the esotery of the society is written down, or engraved upon durable objects by Symbols. Each of these has a public and private meaning, the latter communicated only by suitable restrictions to proper persons. These Symbols form a large part of the universal language of Masonry."—Morris's Dictionary, Art. Symbol.

NOTE 223—FROM "FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED."

"A candidate receiving this degree is said to be 'advanced' to the honorary degree of a Mark Master."—Mackey's Ritualist, page 271.

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

BY PRESIDENT CHARLESS G. FINNEY, OF OBERLIN, OHIO

This is a most powerful argument against the Lodge by a truly great and good man who when a young man just before beginning the study of the law and before his convertion, was drawn into this Anti-Christian institution, and as he says on page seven "became a BRIGHT Mason." On the same page he says: "I was completely converted from Freemasonry to Christ." The most of this book was first published in a series of articles in the Independent which created such excitement that the publishers refused to insert the rest of the articles.

This book has already opened the eyes of multitudes to the evils of Freemasonry.

THE WRONG CUTS.—That there may be no mistake we give herewith the correct cuts for the "Sign of Entered Apprentice" and "Due Guard of Fellow Craft" which were incorrectly given n the reprint of Freemasonry Illustrated last week. The cuts can be cut out and pasted in their proper place in our last issue by any who wish to make use of the paper among Masons. These cuts are correct in the new work from which they were borrowed:

SIGN OF AN ENTERED APPRENTICE.

Made from due-guard by dropping left hand to side; and at same time raise right arm, with hand still open, and draw hand quickly across the throat, the thumb being nex to the throat, then hand drops to side. [See cut.]

DUE-GUARD OF A FELLOW CRAFT.

Hold out right hand, palm down, height of hips, and raise left hand to point perpendicularly upward, forearm forming a right angle with arm. [See cut.]

Those who wish to know the character of Freemasonry, as shown by its own publications, will find many standard works in the following list.

No sensible Mason dares deny that such men as Albert G. Mackey, the great Masonic Lexicongrapher, and Daniel Sickels, the Masonic author and publisher, are the highest Masonic authority in the United States.

All the books advertised here are used by Masons, but Duncan's Ritual, Allyn's Ritual and Richardson's Monitor, are not publicly acknowledged as Masonic authority, because they tell too much.

FEMALE MASONRY.

MANNUAL OF THE ORDER OF THE EASTERN STAR.

Containing the Ritual, Symbols Lectnres etc., of the five Degrees of "Adoptive Masonry;" Jeptha's Daughter; Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, profusely illustrated and handsomely bound.

Topics of the Time.

The "doctors disagree" about the Nihilist distemper in Russia. Mr Stoughton, our Russian ministe says there's nothing in it. No one but a Turk or a follower of Beaconsfield wishes to disbelieve him; but if all the stories of Russian secretism are at fault, there is a report that a meeting of the representative leaders of Nihilism and Socialism throughout the world are preparing to meet soon in London, and Bismarck has asked the British government to prohibit the meeting.

Who has yet made an estimate of the blessings flowing from the distribution of tracts and Bibles at our Centennial? The success of that enterprise stimulated to a great work at Paris last year, and now we learn of its effect in a single instance which may be of greater benefit to Russia than even the forcible suppression of her revolutionary lodges of assassination. It is reported that Prince Galitzin, a young Russian nobleman, converted by a Bible given him at the Paris Exposition, proposes to build thirty Bible kiosks and to fit up seven Bible carriages. He intends to travel in Russia with Mr. Clough of Paris, whom he has engaged to have charge of these carriages, saying: "Since Christ laid down his precious life for me, I will give my whole life and time and fortune for his service."

A new invention by Mr. T. T. Powers, a resident of this city, was put on trial last week with such success that the inventor promises to revolutionize the grain carrying trade of the country. The principle is very simple: a large iron cylinder filled with grain, upon which are set tires to fit the track of any railroad, the whole rolling along the rails. Two of these cylinders are connected to form a car sixteen feet long and seven feet hight. It is claimed that an engine can draw more than three times the amount of grain in these cars with more speed and safety, less wear and expense, and deliver it in better condition than with the common box car. A company has been formed to manufacture this invention, and actual experiment last week is said to demonstrate all the benefits claimed. The successful introduction of such an invention will bring the grain fields of Kansas, Nebraska and the northwest within a hundred miles of Chicago and add a cent or two to the value of every bushel. Kansas raised 34,000,000 bushels of wheat last year, from which an easy estimate can be made of the value of such an invention to our great Western farm lands.

The demonstration of armed secret orders two or three months since as a threat to the State legislature it will be remembered had the effect to hasten the passage of a bill to prevent the bearing of arms by any body of men not under the authority of the State or city. That statute becomes law next Tuesday, July 1st, and, as if to still further prove the need of the law and its firm execution, the same secret communist orders have engaged in a fratracidal slaughter. Last Sabbath a crowd of Catholic Bohemians held a picnic in the southwestern part of the city. They were accompanied by an armed company of the same natioality. After getting drunk on the beer and other slops sold at such places, a quarrel sprung up among the dancers in which the military were concerned. It is reported that under command of their drunken lieutenant the armed men fired two or three volleys into the crowd and charged it with their bayonets. Several were wounded one perhaps mortally. Part of the armed company were arrested. This is the same class that engaged so hotly in the riots of two years ago, and the measures that may be necessary to suppress their lawlessnes may soon become the most serious question ever before our authorities.

The appropriation bills came up before the Senate from the House last week. All were passed, but not until such a battle as the galleries of the grave Senate have seldom looked down upon. The army bill, though generally voted by the Republicans of the House was passed without amendment, though some dozen were offered in a tantalizing way to draw out such votes and admissions from exasperated Democrats, as can be used to advantage in the compaign of 1880. Some of these are such as that party would have hesitated to vote had they not been vexed with a two days' fusilade. It was first determined by the majority that there should be no discussion, but so many of that party being absent from Washington they were dependent on the Republicans for a quorum. The advantage was taken and a debate forced after an all night session on Wednesday. Soon after midnight Conkling was speaking with great vehemence against the conduct of the Democrats, when he was accused of falsehood by Lamar. The charge was hurled back with additional epithets, but the Mississippi Senator caught it handsomely and the great Knight Templar was nearly unhorsed. All Washington was full of rumors of a duel, but Conkling is from a State where such things are a failure, and he will wait for more honorable revenge. The angry debate will have its effect on next years' politics no doubt.

As we go to press it is reported that the President has approved the army bill with the clause providing that the troops shall not be used at the polls as a police force, which the Senate Republicans tried in vain to strike out. The President says he has no desire to use the army in that way and he sees nothing in the bill which prevents its use if a constitutional emergency should arise. As to the judicial bill he sends in a veto on the ground that by providing that no money shall be paid to deputy marshals practically involves the whole question of the election laws, which he believes are just and beneficial. He has in a former vote refused his consent to a repeal of these laws, and will not now permit them to be nulified by restricting the appropriation. The object of the bill in short is to destroy all control by the government over Congressional elections. What step will next be taken is uncertain, but both parties are so reduced by the absence of members, that some compromise like the army bill will doubtless be affected and the extra session adjourn before Independence day.

The death of Prince Napoleon at the hand of the Zulus in South Africa is a stunning blow to the Imperialists in France. Their ambition was that the representative of the greatest military genius, that, in the words of Pitt, "ever rose, or reigned, or fell," should have also achievements in war which they might boast. This ambition of his party sent him among the Zulus. Imperialism now seeks another figure-head or another victim in France, ambitious and heartless; while the Romish churches of England chant their masses and the Austrian and German court will go into temporary mourning. Victor Napoleon, the son of Prince Napoleon, cousin of the late emperor, and Princess Clotilde, daughter of Victor Emanuel, is designated as the successor to the empty and dangerous throne of imperialism. His father was never a favorite with that party and was a source of uneasiness to Napoleon III. His protest against such a use of his son who is now but 17 years old, will avail nothing; but a steady course by the French Republicans will. The events of the past year have been most hopeful for France, and if, satisfied with the moderation and freedom she now enjoys, wise measures are made to perpetuate these blessings, Bourbons and Bonapartists will be an ever decreasing minority.

—We take pleasure in announcing to Ohio friends that Rev. Geo. Richey, of Pataskala, has consented to act as agent for that State. Further particulars will be given next week in a letter from Bro. J. M. Scott, arrived as we were nearly ready for the press.

A Poem of a Hundred Years Ago.

Editor Cynosure:—The following from the poet Crabbe, who flourished about a hundred years ago, may be of interest to some of your readers. J. G. M.

Masons are our, Freemasons—but alas,
To their own bards I leave the mystic class.
In vain shall one, and not a gifted man,
Attempt to sing of this enlightened clan:
I know no Word, boast no directing Sign,
And not one Token of the race is mine.
Whether with Hiram, that wise widow's son,
They came from Tyre to royal Solomon,
Two pillars raising by their skill profound,
Boaz and Jachin through the East renown'd;
Whether the sacred books their rise express,
Or books profane, 'tis vain for me to guess.
It may be lost in date remote and high,
They know not what their own antiquity:
It may be, too, derived from cause so low,
They have no wish their origin to show.
If as Crusaders they combined to wrest
From heathen lords the land they long possessed;
Or were at first some harmless club, who made
Their idle meetings solemn by parade,
Is but conjecture—for the task unfit,
Awe-struck and mute, the puzzling theme I quit.
Yet, if such blessings from their order flow,
We should be glad their moral code to know.
Trowels of silver are but simple things,
And aprons worthless as their apron-strings;
But if indeed you have the skill to teach
A social spirit now beyond our reach;
If man's warm passions you can guide and bind,
And plant the virtues in the in the wayward mind;
If you can wake to Christian love the heart,
In mercy, something of your powers impart.
But as it seems, we Masons must become
To know the secret, and must then be dumb!
And as we venture for uncertain gains,
Perhaps the profit is not worth the pains.

The Law of Vermont.

Starksboro, Vt., June 12, 1879.

Dear Bro. Kellogg:—The following extract from Chap. 115 of the Revised Statutes of Vermont will show what is the law of this State in reference to such institutions as Freemasonry, Odd-fellowship, Knights of Pythias, etc., and with what contempt these orders treat the laws of the State:

Sec. 19. If any person shall administer to another an oath or affirmation or any other obligation of the nature of an oath, which is not required or authorized by law; or if any person shall voluntarily suffer such obligation to be administered to him, or shall voluntarily take the same, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding two hundred dollars nor less than fifty dollars."

This section makes no exception in favor of any secret society, but prohibits all oaths administered with intentional secrecy.

Sec. 20 provides that it shall not be necessary to prove the form of the oath or obligation, but that the person administering or taking such oath or obligation may be required to testify as to the facts; but such testimony shall not be made the ground of a legal prosecution against the witness.

From the foregoing it is apparent,

1st. That the legislature did intend to prohibit, and the existing law does prohibit the formation or holding of all such societies as Freemasons, Odd-fellows and the secret trades unions.

2d. That the initiation of any person into any of these orders is a palpable violation, or a plain evasion of law, for which every officer and member is liable to indictment and penalty.

3d. That the officers and members of these orders in Vermont have no claim to be regarded as law-abiding citizens, nor are they justly entitled to any voice in making or executing the laws which they willfully violate.

4th. That the excellent prohibitory law of Vermont has but a partial execution (greatly to the detriment of the people) mainly because the great majority of those set to execute the laws are themselves the violators of law, and are in sworn complicity with many of the violators of the temperance law; nor is there any reasonable hope that the traffic in in intoxicating drink in Vermont can be suppressed until the people of the State shall elect to office such men only as are obedient to law and not in sworn complicity with its violators.

Yours for the law and the Gospel,
H. H. Hinman.

Extracts from Report of Representatives.

To the R. W. Grand Lodge of the U. S., I. O. O. F., Session held in Baltimore, Md., Sept., 1877.

DEGREE OF REBEKAH.

"The report from the several jurisdictions in which Degree Lodges of the Daughters of Rebekah have been chartered continue with two or three exceptions to show a falling off of interest in the cause, and a very general languishment. It is obvious that unless this state of things is arrested, that in another year a large majority of these lodges will forfeit their charters, and the lodge system so elaborately a few years ago provided by the Grand Lodge of the United States, will thus virtually expire. It is difficult to arrive at the real cause for the diminution of zeal and the apparent apathy which prevails in the membership of the lodges. Some complain that too much is attempted by the present system, inasmuch as it multiplies the organizations of the order, and under color of introducing females to Odd-fellowship holds out a mere delusion in that direction, while it adds to the duties and labors of the membership seriously, with no corresponding advantages. Some complain that too little scope is allowed in the jurisdiction conferred and the privileges enjoyed; again it is contended that the whole idea is a vital error, and that there is an irreconcilable aversion on the part of both sexes to the success of the measure, which is shown in the refusal of a large majority of eligible females to take the degrees."

"There must be some powerful antagonism to the success of the degree, since all experience demonstrates the rare value of woman as an auxiliary in benevolent efforts, especially in the church and in general charitable ministration. The time has arrived for an earnest interposition to save this branch of the order. The power of the Grand Lodge of the U. S. has been in vain appealed to. It is respectfully suggested that a large sympathy in the Degree of Rebekah resides in the State Grand Lodge and that the whole control of it be remitted to them. It is believed that the experiment is worth the trial, since, unless some aid is supplied, the death of the lodge system is inevitable."

Remarks.—We think the "powerful antagonism" spoken of above is that bane of all evils light and truth. We agree with them that "all experience demonstrates the rare value of woman as an auxiliary in benevolent efforts" especially in the church and in general charitable ministrations." But women who are very fond of show and parade are seldom charitable, and the same is true of all societies, and this is probably the reason so few charitable women ever join the Odd-fellows.

But why the Rebekah degree should be lopped off on account of its being a "vital error," when the same "vital error" runs through the whole system, we fail to see.

Neither can we see the reason for the "irreconcilable aversion on the part of both sexes to the success of the measure, which is shown in the refusal of a large majority of eligible females to take the degree," unless possibly it might be that the ladies do not feel at home there, and the gentlemen do not feel at home while they are there.

We are glad to learn that the lodge (like an unskillful physician) is now proposing experiments to save the life of the order, which as all know are more apt to kill than cure. Yours etc.,

J. G. Mattoon.

A False Ark of the Covenant.

As the Israelites bore the ark of God's covenant through the desert, and enthroned it among the mountains of Judea, so there is now a band of men in the United States who are bearing onward the devil's ark of the covenant, to enthrone it as the leading principle of our social and religious life, and of our national destiny. This ark of the devil's covenant is the Masonic lodge. It is an insinuating, devilish religion that, while pretending to worship Christ it secretly connives with Judas.

Our good people go to church: Yes, surely. They array themselves around the tabernacle of God, facing outwards against the world and the devil; but at the same time they take along with them "the tabernacle of Moloch, and the star [of five points] of their god Remphau, figures which they make to worship them" and which lead, not to the holy mountains, but to the slums of Babylon. They take along with them the Masonic lodge, which enshrines all guile, deceit, craftiness, selfishness, murder, obduracy, hatred, revenge, lying, slandering, etc.

People who sustain this devil's ark, most inevitably lose all confidence in truth and justice, and acquire a distaste for every Christian and manly virtue. Certain transgressors in the camp of the Israelites were taken out and stoned to death; but I would not, for my own part, throw a stone, or smallest pebble, even at a Freemason; I would not, as Freemasons do, throw even rotten eggs at men, however bad they may be; but at the same time I would no more vote for a Freemason for office than I would for a Thug, or for the keeper of a brothel. I would no more hesitate to cast my vote against him than I would to shoot a wolf caught among my sheep. A man might as well roll himself in a slimy gutter and then present himself as a guest at a wedding feast, as to offer himself to me for my vote with his Masonic apron on. It is an indecent mockery of all that is serious, honest and sensible, for a man to put on the trappings of a charlatan, and thus offer himself for the performance of the most serious duties of life.

Would it be proper for the circus clown, in the full costume of his profession, to step from the circus ring into the pulpit, and there in that costume, to preach for the edification of that humanity for which Christ died? and, worse still, administer the sacrament? I would not listen to such preaching myself; nor would I listen to the preaching of a man who has such an obtunded sense of decency as to put on the toggery of Freemasonry. What! Shall all the paraphanalia of the true Ark of the Covenant be washed away by the blood of Christ, only to be replaced by this ridiculous paraphanalia of the devil's Ark of the Covenant, the toggery of the Masonic lodge? Shall we, of the United States, go back to the mere external things of the desert, three thousand years ago; nay, still farther than that, to the mystic signs and symbols of Pagan priestcraft, and cover our persons with the absurd trappings offered us by a set of evident imposters?

The worshipers of Moloch, though ignorant and superstitious, might have been honest men; but Freemasonry is a deliberate wickedness. It is organized villainy. It is a deliberate trifling with the religious faith of mankind. Almost all organizations are bad; for they have a spirit of their own which tends to extrude and destroy the spirit of religion; but the Masonic organization is wholly wicked. There is no more need of such an organization in Christian society than there is for the arts of Pharoah's magicians, or for the return of the Barbary pirates.

Most of our States, I believe, have abolished lotteries by law; but it is impossible to abolish this infinitely worse evil—Freemasonry, by law, because our office-holders and lawmakers are generally Freemasons. But there is one thing that we Americans can do, if we value our own personal character more than we do all the world besides, and that is—We can abolish Masonic lawmakers. We can withhold our votes from Masonic men, and thus leave in our legislatures only such men as sustain open, fair, and honest organizations. Does this work call for more character than is possessed by the average American.

The National Christian Association Annual Meeing.

REPORT OF CORRESPONDING SECRETARY.

The year just closed bgan with very much to encourage and inspire the friends to renewed efforts, and with enough difficulties to test their faith.

The indebtedness of the Association for expenses while collecting publishing funds amounted to $3,018.60, which was a serious obstacle to be taken out of the way, but this was more than compensated for in the munificent gift of Philo Carpenter. Esq., seconded by the liberal donations of others. The transfer of this building and lot to the National Christian Association gave to the anti-secrecy reform a central fortress from which to move out upon the broad field of conflict. All felt that one objective point had been reached, and although every element was not entirely harmonized so as to unify the views, wishes and feelings of all as to methods, yet all the members were, and still are, united in seeking the best means to "expose, withstand and remove secret societies, and all other anti-Christian movements" from the church, the nation and from the world. It often happens that the wisest methods result from occasional conflicts of opinion between vigorous minds, when discussion is guided and tempered by the Holy Spirit, and candid criticism among men of thought is ominous of good rather than of evil.

There has been no sudden or very marked changes in the general features of the anti-secrecy reform movement during the year. There has been a gradual but constant growth of sentiment against the whole lodge system among the more intelligent classes, and the distinctions are becoming more marked on both sides of the conflict. Every aggressive act on the part of the lodge, and each exhibition of the facts and true character of Masonry deepens the conviction that it is not merely a question of tastes and opinions, but a solemn responsibility that must be met at the communion table by the church, and at the ballot-box by the nation.

CITIES.

The strongholds of secretism are in the large cities, and so thoroughly have they intrenched themselves behind the press, the civil tribuuals, and dominant pulpits, that few breaches have been made in these centers of fashion, commerce and political intrigue. By massing their forces and making ostentatious displays, they captivate the giddy throng, and too often deceive or silence the more thoughtful whose intentions are good but who are ignorant of the enormity of the evil which by their silence they encourage. But notwitstanding the formidable forces of opposition something has been done to cripple the lodge movement in cities, and an impression has been made upon the minds of pastors and people which will result in good. One city pastor said to me in New England, "I see my duty clear to ask every man applying for admission to my church if he belongs to any secret society." Another said he had taken thirty-three degrees in Masonry and that he considered it the greatest obstacle in the way of Christianity in this country at the present time. Two prominent members of another church in the same city, whose pastor was a Freemason, refused to hear him preach until he should renounce his connection with the order. These are doubtless exceptional cases, but they are growing more frequent as the light increases.

In the country and smaller towns the case is different. The lodge has less power and the people show more independence. They are more willing to receive the truth and when informed they are more ready to act. Showing regalia, pompous exhibitions, night festivities and regal titles have little fascination for the man who lives by constant toil. My observation and the results of my labors in the anti-secrecy reform have convinced me that our hope of success is for the present under God, outside the cities, among those who till the soil and live upon the products of their own industry. The English Commonwealth of the seventeenth century began with the peasants, and the emancipation of four millions of slaves in our own Republic had a like humble origin, and it is my settled conviction that little progress can be made in removing this popular evil, so strongly intrenched in the church and state, by attempting to reach it through recognized leaders of public opinion or existing centers of influence. Our reliance is first upon God and next upon the common people, and to reach them we must keep existing channels of communication open and devise others by which to reach the masses directly, and when they are converted, politicians and ecclesiastics will fall into line as readily as other ponderous bodies move toward the center of gravity.

TACTICS OF THE OPPOSITION.

The same determination to crush every man and every movement that seriously questions lodge supremacy, which the opposition has shown from the first still continues; there is however one very perceptible change in their mode of procedure, which doubtless looks toward decisive results. There is very little ostentatious display of Masonry in the lower degrees of late, while those higher in the scale of supremacy, are incessantly thrust upon public notice.

This change is mainly due to two causes. First, Blue Lodge Masonry has become odious to a considerable extent in the eyes of respectable citizens, by correct and oft-repeated exposures; and, second, what was once a crude scheme with less ambition and no very definite aims has ripened into a well adjusted system, with aspirations and purposes which can be realized only by the use of such agencies, as are effective in suppressing freedom of speech and enforcing arbitrary decrees. The boldness of a comparatively few intrepid leaders and the constantly increasing number of seceders, have so weakened the power of the lodge that it can no longer bind its own member or successfully intimidate rising public sentiment by threats and bravado, and hence the change of tactics from processions of men clad in simple apparel with white gloves and aprons, to imposing uniforms, martial music, military drill, and weapons of war.

The so-called "Christian degrees," and the degrees of Knighthood, are in reality the standing army of the order, and each encampment is a military college where only those fit for the battle-field are drilled in the manual of arms. These schools of instruction are some of them incidentally, but all of them effectively controlled the "Supreme Council of Sovereign Grand Inspectors General," and have thier head-center in the rebel general Albert Pike, who is Masonically known as "The Most Puissant Sovereign Grand Commander."

I have no means of ascertaining the numerical strength of this armed force, but we may judge of their numbers from the announcement that ten thousand are to meet in this city in 1880, and the newspapers say that a committee of arrangments has already secured the entire accommodations of the principal hotels of Chicago for their use. Whatever may be the purposes and meaning of this secretly enlisted standing army, acting without authority from or direct responsibility to the civil government, it certainly furnishes just occasion for vigilance on the part of every good citizen, and suggests the possibility of a conspiracy such as has often resulted in bloody conflicts.

WORK OF THE YEAR.

As the secretary and general agent of the National Christian Association, I have attended conventions in the following States during the year: At St. Charles, Minn., Dec. 11th–13th, 1878; at Adrian, Mich., two, viz., Jan. 8th, 1879 and Feb. 25th–27th; at Utica, Ohio, March 4th–6th; West Branch, Iowa, Mar. 18th–19th, and Nebraska, May 7th.

Two new States have been organized during the year, viz., Minnesota and Nebraska. Most of these meetings have been well attended and productive of much good. The National Convention was held at Worcester, Mass., Nov. 13–15, 1878, and although the attendauce from abroad was not as large as at some previous annual gatherings, the local effect was good and a deep impression was made not only in Worcester but in many neighboring cities. I have delivered 148 lectures and sermons during the year, and collected in cash and its equivalent to the Association $——.

Additions to bequests made to the Association during the year by parties still living, aggregate $3,000.

A series of State meetings have been planned for the coming fall and winter so as to hold one convention each week, commencing in Wisconsin September 2nd, 1879, and closing with New York, January 22d, 1880. All the Western States except one have adopted the time suggested, and some of the Middle and Eastern States have accepted the arrangement. It is hoped by this plan to reduee expenses and add interest to all State meetings. I suggested through the Cynosure that our next national convention be held in Washington, and have received a number of communications in favor of the suggestion. A friend writes from the city giving price of board, hall rent, etc., which are quite moderate, and then adds a few reasons which seem to him conclusive that Washington is the place and February the time for holding our next annual convention.

Several veteran and valuable workers have fallen out of the ranks during the year and passed on to their rewards, but others have come forward to close up the breach, and the number of seceders from the lodge and of those who speak boldly and stand firmly is constantly increasing. Despite all the difficulties and drawbacks, there has never since my knowledge of our work been a time when the appearance upon the general field was more hopeful.

NEEDS OF OUR REFORM.

A strong, united, central force, with facilities for reaching remote and especially the rural districts of our country is the one great need of the anti-secrecy reform work at the present time. Without a vigorous united council of wise and judicious men who can work in harmony, it would not be reasonable to expect very decisive progress, in the face of great opposition; nor could the wisest and most firmly united body of men achieve great moral victories without the means of reaching those whom they seek to benefit. Just how to reach the point where no concessions shall be made to the wrong and every right principle maintained and entire unity and confidence preserved, is not easily determined, but its great importance to the success of our work renders it an object worthy of our best efforts.

To me it seems of the utmost importance that this annual meeting should take some decisive action in reference to the publishing interests of the Association. This part of the work has been very successfully and effectively carried on by E. A. Cook & Co. as a private enterprise, and by energetic, judicious management, it has been developed from a mere germ to a self sustaining business. E. A. Cook & Co. are willing to transfer this business to the National Christian Association upon equitable terms, and it seems to me that the interests of the cause and good faith with contributors to the publishing fund require that the National Christian Association own and control its organ, and the literature of the reform as far as consistent with its means, and that its building at 221 West Madison should at the earliest practicable date be made the home and headquarters of the publishing department "de facto." Those who have contributed of their means and who have prayerfully and joyfully watched the progress of our principles, have a right to expect this, and should this meeting adjourn without duly considering this question and taking such action as they may deem wisest and best, many will be disappointed, and I fear our work will be crippled. Taken as a whole, the constituency of the National Christian Association is in thorough earnest. As individuals they are men of action, and while they would never encourage reckless haste by which the funds of the Association would be jeopardized, they nevertheless insist upon a vigorous aggressive movement. I have never before urged this matter upon the attention of this body, for I did not feel that the time had come, nor do I think that this body is yet prepared to act understandingly in so grave a matter, but you are prepared to inaugurate a plan which may be consummated in the near future.

In considering this question there are, as it seems to me, three points requiring especial attention.

1st. The desirableness of owning and controling so far as practicable the anti-secret literature.

2d. The means necessary to obtain and carry on the publishing business; and

3d. Men who have the ability and skill to manage and make it a success.

FINANCE.

We may justly congratulate the friends of this cause on the financial success of our efforts A good foundation has been laid and commendable progress made toward a reliable income to meet the expense of our work, but as yet the income is far short of the actual necessities.

There is on the part of some a misunderstanding of the actual facts in the case of our finances which has been in the way of making collections and securing donations. Many have supposed our income to be much greater than it really is, and by placing this matter in a clear light you will greatly facilitate the work of collecting funds.

The Treasurer reports the assets of the Association at $55,721 99. This at 8 per cent would represent an annual income of $4,457 76; or at 6 per cent, a less rate than actually realized on trust funds, including cash in treasury at the beginning of the year, $3,343 32; while the actual net income from all these funds for the past twelve months has been $1,887 98. Stating the case more in detail that you may understand just how this seeming disparity between principal secured and interest received occurs I will give the amounts and per cent of funds in the different classes in which they belong:

1st. The aggregate amount of notes unpaid in the publishing fund June 1st, 1878, was $13,196 50 on which $582 16 interest has been paid during the year, making about four and four tenths per cent on the total amount.

2nd. There were paid up funds loaned and laying in the treasury amounting to $6,116 75 on which $471 10 interest has been paid during the year making over six and forty-five hundredths per cent.

3rd. The Association building, estimated worth $20,000 from which the net receipts from rents have been during the year $834 72, making over four and seventeen hundredths per cent on the estimated value of this property, aside from rooms occupied for the Association's uses.

4th. There is $15,000 in deeded real estate with life reserves from which no income is derived.

From the foregoing it will be seen that the smallness of our income is owing not to the fact that paid up funds do not yield a reasonable income but to the fact that notes uncollected in the aggregate actually pay a very low rate of interest, and $15,000 of the Association funds pays nothing whatever for the present.

One thing more while on this question of finance. It is the province of this body to determine what funds and to what extent those funds shall be invested in the publishing business of the Association, and to what extent and how the income shall be appropriated to general field work. In my judgment the most hopeful and at the same time the most needy field for anti-secrecy mission work is in the newly opened States, especially in Kansas, Nebraska and Minnesota. Older settled States have more means and are better established, but many of the friends along the frontier are struggling against fearful opposition and pecuniary embarrassment at the same time.

MISSIONS.

I have elsewhere alluded to the mission work, and will only add the single suggestion here which is, that the best way to reach and strengthen pastors and churches testifying against the lodge may be for the present, at least, through a publishing agency, by which they can be supplied with such books, tracts and publications as they may require. The tract work commends itself to favor in all reforms as a cheap and effective means of reaching the people, and it has already proved a valuable agency in the anti-secret cause.

I have purposely omitted all mention of names, for to begin a list of those who have toiled heroically and sacrificed cheerfully for the maintenance of truth and justice against fearful odds would be easy, but to end without unwarranted omission would be a far more difficult matter. The number of our allies is constantly increasing and the deep currents of public sentiment and religious conviction is sweeping on.

Whatever may betide us in the future let us not forget that in God alone is our strength and our salvation; that human nature at its best estate is fickle and vain, and that great reforms, like surface tides, have their ebb and flow, but when fed from the perennial fountain of living waters, the deep under currents glide steadily onward until the last obstruction gives way and all agencies and instruments are lost in the one infinite beginning but never ending good.

Directors' Report

The Board of Directors met at 221 West Madison street, Chicago, July 3, 1878, and organized for business. Philo Carpenter, Esq., was chosen president; C. R. Hagerty, vice-president; and J. P. Stoddard, recording secretary.

The Association having omitted to appoint a recording secretary at its annual meeting, Thos. Hodge, Esq., was recognized by the Board as continuing in that office under the 5th by-law of the N. C. A. "until his successor is chosen."

The question of publication and to what extent funds of the Association should be invested in the publishing business, which was after discussion referred by the annual meeting to the Board of Directors was considered and recommitted to a committee of three, consisting of Rev. A. Wait, H. L. Kellogg, and J. P. Stoddard. An Auditing Committee, as recommended by the annual meeting was appointed, consisting of John M. Wallace, J. H. Pearson, and H. L. Kellogg, who have acted during the year.

The bond of the treasurer elect was fixed at $15,000, and subsequently presented with securities and approved by the Board.

The amount of insurance on the National Christian Association Building was ordered increased from $2,000 to $3,000.

SALARIES.

The treasurer has generously performed the duties of his office gratuitously for the entire year, charging to the Association only expenses necessarily incurred in its work, such as suitable books for keeping accounts, as per recommendation of annual meeting, postage and stationary.

The secretary and general agent's salary was fixed at $1,000, with such additional sum as should be necessary to cover actual expenses, not to exceed $300. Owing to extra expenses necessarily incurred in long journeys on business of the Association, an additional $100 was subsequently added; making a total for the year for salary and expenses of $1,400.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON PUBLICATION, ETC.

The committee after a careful investigation of the whole subject, submitted a lengthy report of which the following is a summary:

Indebtedness of the Association	$2985 50
Probable expenses for the year	2492 35
Total for year	$5358 00
Probable receipts from all sources	2272 50
Leaving a deficit to be provided for of	$3085 50

The committee further reported that E. A. Cook & Co. offered to dispose of their entire stock of anti-secrecy publications, including the Cynosure, mailing lists, copyrights, electrotypes, forms, etc., to the National Christian Association for a reasonable price, the value according to the last inventory being $9,537.08.

In view of the above facts and others, the committee recommended:

1st. That the Association defer engaging in a general publishing business this year. And,

2nd. That it confine its efforts in this direction to the issuing of tracts bearing its imprint, for the supply of agents and friends.

The report, after discussion, was adopted by the board.

MISSIONS.

The question of how to strengthen and encourage pastors and churches testifying against the lodge system, especially those in the ex-slave and border States has not been overlooked. Measures with special reference to the needs of this important field have been considered, and some have aided as individuals in supplying those who stand on the ramparts in the front ranks, but no general plan has been devised so entirely perfect and free from all objections as to meet the views of every member of the Board. The difficulties with which this part of our reform work is beset are greater than at first appear, and it was deemed wisest to await further developments, hoping that, guided by the Spirit in seeking the Master's will, friends would after comparing views come to see eye to eye, and so heartily concur in some plan, against which no valid objection could be urged. I mention this, believing you would justly consider your Board remiss in duty had they neglected so pressing and important a part of our reform work.

TRACTS.

A beginning has been made in the line of publications. A limited supply of type has been purchased and the necessary cases provided and four tracts have been issued with the imprint of the Association, and others are in the hands of the committee on tracts and well under way.

RENTALS.

The basement of the Association building is occupied as a laundry at $12 00 per month; the first floor as a store at $62 50; the front room second floor as an office at 12 50; giving a monthly income from rents $87 00.

The reading room is supplied with 115 different papers; is under the charge of F. G. Houck; is kept open to the public from 9 A. M. to 9 P. M. and reasonably well patronized.

Report of Proceedings.

The annual meeting for business gathered in the hall of the Carpenter building at ten o'clock Thursday, June 19th. There were present the following members: Moses Pettengill, A. Wait, J. P. Stoddard, P. Carpenter, J. L. Barlow, E. A. Cook, E. Hildreth, J. Blanchard, M. R. Britten, H. L. Kellogg, E. B. Thompson, Isaac Preston, C. A. Blanchard, Abel Carpenter, Thos. Hodge, John Dorcas. Besides a number of friends residing in the city there were present from abroad: Mrs. S. McConoughey, Atkinson, Ill.; N. Green, Clayville, N. Y.; Rev. Enos Collins, New London, Wis., representative of the Wisconsin State Association; Henry C. Pratt, representative of the Michigan State Association; Hon. Samuel Plumb, Streator, Ill.; and John D. Nutting, of the American Freeman, Albany, Missouri.

The President, Dea. Moses Pettengill of Peoria, Ill., having called to order, the roll of the members was read by the secretary, and all united in singing "All Hail the Power of Jesus Name." President Blanchard offered the opening prayer and the presiding officer made a brief opening speech. He said that the object of the Association was well known to be opposition to such movements among men as were opposing the kingdom and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, especially the secret organizations with Freemasonry at their head. His own experience with these orders dated back to the abduction of William Morgan in 1826, and he had ever since believed them to be hostile to the best interests of society. In the fall of 1826, then a young man, he was traveling on business and for his health in Western New York. During the trip he visited Fort Niagara, and was shown through all the buildings, except one which the attendent informed him was seldom shown to visitors without a special order. He afterwards learned that at this very time Morgan was incarcerated in the detached building which he had not been allowed to enter. The influence of this Association though it was yet in comparative infancy, was felt throughout the nation. He had received and read letters showing that young men were being kept from joining secret fraternities through the light given in the publications of this society. Concluding his remarks the president called for the minutes of the last annual meeting which were read and approved.

The annual report of the Directors was presented by the Secretary of the Board, which was accepted and adopted.

The report of the Treasurer being called for, Mr. Hildreth presented the very full and definite statement which appears in another column. The report was accepted and adopted. Slips containing the report were distributed among the members.

The annual report of the Corresponding Secretary next occupied the attention of Association. After accepting the report it was referred to the following committee: Thos. Hodge, Pres. J. Blanchard, John Dorcas, A. Wait and M. R. Britten.

Rev. J. P. Stoddard presented the following names for membership to this Association: Samuel Plumb, Streator, Ill.; Enos Collins, New London, Wis.; Henry H. Hurlbut, Chicago; John Gardner, Aurora, Ill. Recommended by J. P. Stoddard and E. A. Cook.

These gentlemen were chosen to membership and a recess taken till 2 P. M.

To open the afternoon meeting Devotional exercises were conducted by Eld. J. L. Barlow, consisting of reading of the Scriptures and prayer, in which several engaged. On the resumption of business the Committee on Reports of the secretary and treasurer reported, complimenting the treasurer on the clearness and completeness of his report, and on the secretary's report presented the following:

The committee to whom was referred the reports of the treasurer and corresponding secretary, respectfully report:

That they desire to express their high sense of the care and attention of the treasurer and their approval of his account, and we recommend the following resolution:

That the National Christian Association are in favor of making the Carpenter building our publishing house in fact as well as in name, and that we authorize and direct the Board of Directors to make arrangements with E. A. Cook & Co., or others, to get possession of the publishing interests and transfer them to the building as soon as it can be done on just terms and without involving the Association in debt."

A general discussion on the report ensued, the publishing interests appearing to be near the heart of every member. Most of the members who expressed their views regarded it as of the first importance that the publishing work should be undertaken in earnest, and the building and funds contributed be put to the use for which they were given. Others regarded the fund contributed as permanent, and that only the income could be invested in material for publishing. They advised that this branch of the work be undertaken carefully without incuring a debt, and that time be taken for building up the business. The report was finally disposed of by referring it to the directors, who, in the light of the discussion would understand that their actions should be carefully considered.

The Association then proceeded by ballot to the election of officers, which resulted as follows:

For President, Philo Carpenter.

Vice President, Samuel Plumb.

Cor. Sec'y and Gen'l Agent, J. P. Stoddard.

Rec. Secretary, Thos. Hodge.

Treasurer, Edward Hildreth.

Auditor, J. H. Pearson.

Directors: The old Board re-elected.

On the re-election of the Corresponding Secretary, thanking the Association for their expression of confidence, Bro. Stoddard said that he should insist on a reduction of the salary attached to the office.

A vote of thanks was given to the retiring President for the judgment and fairness with which he presided.

The recommendation of the Directors to change permanently the date of the annual meeting from the third Wednesday to the third Thursday in June was adopted.

Elder Barlow, who is among the warmest advocates of the publishing work, moved a resolution, "That none of the funds of the National Christian Association be hereafter used for the payment of the salaries of State lecturers, or for any other purpose aside from the legitimate work of the body until we have succeeded in making this building in fact what it is in name, our Publishing House." This met with opposition from several who had been on the Director's board as being too sweeping, and showing that with all the effort that had been made the treasurer's report showed but a small amount expended in this direction; and there were times when it seemed a severity not to render some aid to the the State agents. Elder Barlow withdrew the resolution. He has himself served more than an apprenticeship as State agent, and no one can charge him with any desire to curtail that part of the work. He is only anxious that the Carpenter building be occupied by the publishing interests of the reform.

The discussion of this topic introduced Bro. H. C. Pratt of Michigan, who appeared as representative of his State Association. He was invited to sit as corresponding member, and presented the wishes of the Michigan friends that the Association should appropriate $100 for the maintenance of a lecturer in that State. In response to inquiries Bro. Pratt stated that the purpose is to raise $500 in the State; but part of the fund is yet raised, and no lecturer is appointed. It was deemed wise to wait until the effort for a State lecturer was nearer completion before voting the amount asked, and the matter was referred to the Directors with instructions to render the aid if possible.

The following introduced by Elder Barlow was heartily and unanimously voted:

Resolved, That we rejoice to see present with us Mr. John Nutting, from Missouri, as a representative of the American Freeman, and we bid him a hearty God speed in his work in that region where light is so much needed.

Also a resolution commending Bro. Zaraphonithes, a member of Association, was adopted thus:

Whereas, Rev. A. D. Zaraphonithes, of Syra, Greece, a member of this Association, having fitted himself for missionary work in his native land by a course of studies at Wheaton College and Union Theological Seminary, New York, and being ordained to that work by the Baptist ministers of this city, is now on his way to open a mission among the Albanians;

Resolved, That we follow with our sympathies and prayers the work of our brother in the East; and having confidence in his ability and Christian integrity, we recommend to the members and friends of this Association to assist this new mission by their contributions, sent through our treasurer, so far as they may be able, without interfering with missionary contributions to other missionaries now in the field, who are known to be faithful to our Christian reform principles.

The Corresponding Secretary presented a number of letters of interest, but there being no time to read them they were referred.

As several members of the Association have been called to their reward during the year, it was voted that in respect to their memory a paper be prepared by the assistant editor of the Cynosure and published in these columns.

A call was made for the minutes of the meeting, but the secretary not being prepared to present them immediately the Directors were charged to revise them.

The Association then adjourned after singing "Praise God from whom all blessings flow," and pray by Elder Barlow.

EDWARD HILDRETH, Treasurer.

The New York Witness says: "Crime is increasing fearfully in Germany. In 1871 the number of offences legally investigated was 82,000; in 1876 it swelled to 133,700. Perjuries increased from 491 to 800; offences against morality rose from 1,072 to 2,000, and bodily injuries from 7,900 to 15,400. In six years the number of offenders under eighteen years of age, increased nearly 2,000. This increase in crime has kept pace with the growth of infidelity. The Sabbath has been abandoned to a large degree in that land, and as the moral barriers with which it shielded society against vice have broken down, the flood has overspread the whole land. Let these facts be pondered by those who desire to substitute the beer garden for the house of God, and would change the peaceful Sabbath of our ancestors to the bold license and wild carousal which makes up the heaven on earth for the reveler."

Reform News.

Elder Rathbun in Carroll County, Illinois.

DEAR FRIENDS OF TRUTH:—On Monday, May 19, Bro. Rathbun and I left Savanna, Ill., and went to Lanark. Bro. R. was really too sick to be up, but God helped him, and grit and grace enabled him to do the work.

The degrees having been previously worked in Lanark, the curiosity of the people had been largely satisfied, and then the Masons did all they could to keep people away, nevertheless a large audience greeted Bro. R. on Monday evening, and evidently appreciated highly the lecture and the working of the degree. Among those present we noticed Elders Moore and Eshelman, editors of the Brethren at Work. Tuesday evening a fair audience and good work by Bro. R. It seemed a little remarkable (?) that there should be meetings at the M. E. church on both of these evenings, but then I suppose that the spiritual welfare of the church demanded it. The same zeal for meetings was noticed at other places. Masons say we are reviving Masonry: are we reviving pro-Masonic churches also? Among the friends of reform at Lanark we saw Messrs Hallowell, Corning, Gans, Chaffee, Crinklaw, the Lairds and others. At father Laird's we enjoyed what Bro. Rathbun so much needed, a quiet home and rest. Mr. Hallowell's kindly entertainment is remembered and appreciated.

On the 21st we went to Milledgville, Mr. Corning accompanying us. The hall was well filled to see the working of the first degree of Masonry, and the craft were in dismay to see their wonderful secrets laid bare to the vulgar gaze of the "profane." Eld. N. E. Gardner, U. B. pastor at Coleta, was present with members of his church. On Thursday evening, the 22d, the hall was crowded. Bro. Gardner was present again and spoke warmly and effectively in favor of the anti-secrecy cause, and Eld. P. Hurless of Polo, helped much by speaking of the work in general, presenting the claims of the Cynosure, and assuring the audience of our own personal character.

Following this I lectured briefly as usual, and then gave way to Bro. Rathbun who now proceeds to open Milledgeville lodge, No. 345, "on the 3d degree of Masonry for labor." Elder Stephen Jones being found waiting to take his third degree so as "to increase his influence" is "received in due and ancient form," and is started off "duly and truly prepared" to march around the Masonic altar. "Here goes the Rev. Stephen Jones with all his influence", says Bro. Rathbun, and the audience as they look at Bro. Jones divested of hat, coat, collar, vest and pants, with breasts, feet, arms and legs bare, blindfolded and a rope three times around his body, fairly shout in derision of ministers who resort to such means "to increase their influence." Bro. Jones is now examined by the Wardens and Worshipful Master and then the audience receive a forceful illustration of how it is that according to the boasts of Masonry it "includes within its circle almost every branch of polite learning" and "is a progressive science," as Bro. Rathbun shows the Rev. candidate for Masonic honors first what he has already learned, how to take the first step in Masonry by bringing the heel of the right foot to the hollow of the left in the first degree, and how to bring the heel of the left to the hollow of the right in the second degree, in both these degrees thus learning to perform the very scientific feat of "forming the angle of an oblong square," and next how to bring his naked heels together "forming the angle of a perfect square" in the "sublime degree of a Master Mason." How much the minister knows now! How glad the people who have witnessed this scientific display ought to be to sit "under the droppings of the sanctuary" and listen to preachers who have "made suitable proficiency" in this "royal art."

Bro. Rathbun, acting as Worshipful Master, now informed "Eld. Jones" that "before proceeding further in these solemn ceremonies he must take a solemn oath or obligation appertaining to this degree." Then kneeling on his naked knees he takes the Master Mason's oath, and its horrid wickedness is unfolded as he proceeds. After administering the clause in which the candidate swears not to sit in a lodge of clandestine Masons, Bro. Rathbun remarks that if there are any Master Mason present they have broken their obligation, since the lodge they are sitting with has no charter, and is therefore clandestine. At this point two Masons get up and leave the hall swearing, the audience laughing at them, and Bro. R. calling out that "It's too late now."

But space does not permit me to further describe Bro. Rathbun's work at this time. Allow me to say, however, that in calling the roll of workmen after the discovery of the murder of Hiram, instead of the Bible names commonly used, we called out loudly the names of the members of Milledgeville Lodge, putting in Jubela, Jubelo, and Jubelum, at proper intervals. More next week.

J. F. Browne.

Among the Mountains.

Dear Bro. Kellogg: After a pleasant Sabbath with the Reformed Presbyterian Church at Barnet, the pastor, Rev. Mr. Farris, took me about seven miles to MacIndoes Fall, on the Connecticut River, where I spoke a full hour in Academy Hall, There is a strong Masonic lodge here, and the fraternity were out in force, but kept rather quiet. The next day I learned that in the village and on the cars that it was the topic of conversation. We stopped with Judge Buchanan, a member of the R. P church and president of the County National Reform Association. He feels a warm interest in our work and wished me to visit there and lecture again.

From thence I went across to the west side of the State. On my way I stopped at Montpelier, and walked six miles to Dea. Zeba Smith's, who kindly received me, ministered to my wants, and brought me back to Montpelier. After calling on some friends and making arrangements for lectures in future (while waiting for the train), I visited the capitol. It is not so large as some other State buildings, but in architectural beauty is the finest I had ever seen. A statue of Liberty on the top, and Ethan Allen in marble on the portico, are fine specimens of art; while the cabinet has a large and fine collection of curiosities.

At Richmond I hired a livery team to take me fifteen miles to Starksboro. We passed near Camel's Hump, the second in height of the Green Mountains, and towards night arrived at the pleasant and hospitable home of Mr. Wm. Worth, a veteran in our reform of 81 years. Like Moses, his natural vigor not much abated, he is full of earnestness in the cause. He was born and raised on the farm on which he lives. I lectured here twice in the M. E. church. The pastor, Rev. Mr. Brooks, expressed his warm sympathy and appeciation of my lectures. By invitation I preached here Sabbath forenoon and lectured on Africa in the evening. The pastor of the Free Baptist church was absent, is said to be opposed to Masonry.

It was here that Eld. I. Hyatt made his public renunciation. It made no small stir, and caused him to receive some bitter persecution, but the practical effect was to break the power of the institution. The meetings were fully attended and the effect secured good. Several Masons were present, but all kept their jewel. I go from here to Lincoln and from thence to Center Strafford, N. H.

Yours in the Lord,

H. H. Hinman.

GIBSON COUNTY.

Editor Cynosure:—Dr. Cook, of Albion, Noble county, Ind., our State agent and lecturer, came to our county about the middle of May, and gave two lectures at Ft. Branch, two at Somerville, and two at Oakland City. He met with crowded houses and good attention at each place. In regard to the minister about to be initiated into the Masonic life, Dr. Cook cited to Mackey's Manual of the Lodge, p. 20, which says: "There he stands, without our portals, on the threshold of the new Masonic life, in darkness, helplessness and ignorance. Having seen wandering amid the errors and covered over with the pollutions of the outer and profane world, he comes inquiringly to our doors, SEEKING THE NEW BIRTH, and asking a withdrawal of the veil which conceals divine truth from his uninitiated sight."

Again, on page 95, "Masonic Jurisprudence," we had: "The truth is, that Masonry is undoubtedly a religious institution, its religion being of that universal kind in which all men agree." Several other quotations were given, proving if language means anything, Freemasonry to be a religious institution.

From the "Masonic Dictionary" p. 297, we had: "Master Mason. The third degree in all the different rites. In this, which is the perfection of symbolic or ancient craft Masonry, the purest of truths are unveiled amid the most awful ceremonies. None but he who has visited the holy of holies, and traveled the road of peril, can have any conception of the mysteries unfolded in this degree. Its solemn observances diffuse a sacred awe, and inculcate a lesson of religious truth—and it is not until the neophyte has reached this summit of our ritual, that he can exclaim with joyful accents, in the language of the sage of old, 'Eureka, Eureka,' I have found at last the long sought treasure. "The Master Mason represents a man under the doctrine of love, saved from the grave of iniquity, and raised to the faith of salvation. It testifies our faith in the resurrection of the body, and, while it inculcates a practical lesson of prudence and unshrinking fidelity, it inspires the most cheering hope of that final reward which belongs alone to the just made perfect." This is a beautiful (?) "testimony" for the doctor of divinity to make.

From the Traditions of Freemasonry, by Pierson, p. 240: "The Masonic legend stands by itself, unsupported by history or other than its own traditions, yet we readily recognized in Hiram Abiff the Osiris of the Egyptians, the Mithras of the Persians, the Bacchus of the Greeks, the Dionysius of the fraternity of the Artificers, and the Atys of the Phrygians, whose passion, death and resurrection were celebrated by these people respectively."

Freemasons' Guide, by Sickels, p. 196: "The Egyptian rite was a dramatic representation. This myth is the anti-type of the temple legend. Osiris and the Tyrian Architect, i. e. Hiram Abiff, are one and the same—not a mortal individual, but an immortal principle."

"Ah, I see!" says one, "what you aim to portray." That gospel minister, be he Methodist, Episcopal, Baptist, Presbyterian or Congregational, that comes to the portals of Masonry, "seeking the new Masonic life, having been wandering amid the errors and covered over with the pollutions of the outer and profane world," is simply taking his first lesson in ancient Egyptian sun-worship, in Baal worship. He has denied Christ before men, he has bowed his naked knees to Baal. Truly it is said of (to) him—"you are in a deplorable condition."

"Whosoever, therefore, shall confess me before men, him will I confess also before my Father which is in heaven. But whosoever shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my Father which is in heaven." "Every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord to the glory of God the Father."

Anti-mason means, according to the highest Masonic authority, anti-sun-worship, anti-secrecy, anti-Baal-worship, Anti-masonry, anti-paganism. Well, if to be an anti, is to be for the Trinity of the Holy Scriptures, we will meekly bear the name though it be thrown as an epithet. We beg the reader to review the points presented by Dr. Cook. Send for him when you want an able lecturer. Respectfully,

W. L. LEISTER.

THE DUNKER ANNUAL MEETING.

COWAN'S DEPOT, Va., June 9, 1879.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—The tracts you sent me came in time for the German Baptist Conference which convened June 4th.

I distributed the tracts every day and I am sure much good will be done. Many were surprised to learn that there was such a paper published and many asked how long it had been since you published them, and great was their surprise when I gave them a Cynosure and told them you were publishing it now.

This church, commonly called Dunkers, have always opposed secret societies; but, to show you how Satan works, I will try and give you a plan he used to get into this church, and worse than all the man's life was in danger.

A minister asked the conference to modify the former decision in regard to Freemasons, and allow them to be members and still recognize the lodge; for, says the minister "I have a brother in my congregation who is a Freemason and he must leave the church unless we allow him to recognize the lodge, or endanger his life."

Query, Which had he best do, Suffer for Christ's sake or cling to the lodge? But thanks be to God for the decision again.

Answer—"Yes, they shall be required to disregard their Masonic oath with reference to leveling the institution of Freemasonry."

I asked a Baptist minister who is a Mason about the oath and he said it was the same as to affirm, but he says a man takes the oath on condition that it will not interfere with his religious duties, etc., but after he has taken the oath and he finds he was misinformed, then he has not taken the oath and can tell all he knows and he is not a perjured man.

Please send me a few more tracts that I may do some more good for the cause.

Yours for freedom,

J. B. STINESPRING.

GRAFTING CHRISTIANITY ON TO MASONRY.

AMBOY, Ill., June 9, 1879.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—In your issue of June 5th, in an article by Elder J. H. Austin, is the following: "Here is what perplexed its correspondent, to know how to graft holiness on to Masonry." Let me give the rules as laid down by high Masonic authority. A. G. Mackey, (See Lexicon, page 404, article Religion): "The religion then of Masonry is pure theism, on which its different members engraft their own peculiar opinions; but they are not permitted to introduce them into the lodge or to connect their truth or falsehood with the truth of Masonry."

Now the fundamental truths of Christianity are the atonement and salvation of man by Jesus Christ; and before Christianity or Christian holiness can be grafted on to Masonry, all the saving truths of the Gospel must be disconnected, because the Mason is not permitted to introduce them into the lodge or connect their truths with the truth of Masonry. Salvation through Christ must be disconnected to make place for salvation through Masonry.

See Mackey's Lexicon page 16, article Acacian: "* * Signifying a Mason who by living in strict obedience to the obligations and precepts of the fraternity is free from sin."

And the superiority of Masonic holiness is clearly set forth in Mackey's Manual of the Lodge, page 20: "There he stands without our portals, on the threshold of this new Masonic life, in darkness, helplessness and ignorance, having been wandering amid the errors and covered over with the pollutions of the outer and profane world," (Christianity included) "he comes inquiringly to our doors, seeking the new birth and asking a withdrawal of the veil which conceals divine truth from his uninitiated sight."

Here is the Christian minister who has attained the highest point of holiness. Jesus Christ and Christianity have done their utmost, and accomplished absolutely nothing! There he stands, having been wandering amid the errors and covered over with the pollution of the Gospel of the Son of God, and can only attain the new birth and visit the holy of holies, (Lexicon, page 297) by coming to the holy Masonic lodge. So the way to graft holiness on to Masonry is to disconnect Christ and substitute Baal.

HIEL LEWIS.

OUR MAIL.

Israel Gable, Stewartstown, Pa., writes:

"Some people seem to have great fear of the Catholics. I have a much worse opinion of the Knight Templars at this time."

A. Oldfield, Bay City, Mich., writes:

"The Bible and the Cynosure are now the solace of my declining years. I wish I had something definite in regard to Oddfellowship It is doing more mischief here than Masonry."

P. P. Perry, Fort Scott, Kan., writes:

"I think your paper is just the paper for the times, and I want to do all I can to instruct the people of our land in respect to this great evil, secretism."

Wm. Knight, Hulberton, Orleans Co., N. Y., writes:

"I know Freemasonry is not of God, for the fruit of the Spirit is in all goodness, righteousness and truth. I have scattered a number of papers around the country, and tried to get subscribers, and will continue my efforts to put down the works of darkness. Let us watch and fight, and pray to the Lord to take these evils out of the way. Yours in the service of love."

Mrs. E. A. Rowley, Marysville, Mo., writes:

"May God bless and prosper you in this work, is my earnest prayer, and I have faith in his promises, that he will bring you off victorious. It is true that the number of true yoke fellows and laborers in this reform are small compared with lodge worshipers and sympathizers, but with the Lord on our side what care we for numbers? Like the host of Midian, they may be put to flight and conquered by the chosen three hundred. Let those readers of the Cynosure who are inclined to be faint-hearted read the seventh chapter of Judges and take courage. How often are we reminded in God's word that the victory is not to the strong in numbers, but to the strong in the Lord. I firmly believe that this abomination will, like slavery, be overthrown, and although our souls revolt and sicken at the evil effects of this institution let us not despair, but toil on, trusting that God in his own good time will overthrow and bring to naught these secret councils of the devil."

James Reed, Simsburg, Ct., writes:

"The past winter I had the pleasure of making the acquaintance of our noble and worthy secretary, J. P. Stoddard, and our good brother H. H. Hinman, and listened to each of them with profit. It is cause of gratitude to God that he has his chosen servants who fearlessly declare his truth, and cause of sadness that men full of the Holy Ghost are denied the duty and privilege of entering many of God's houses to enlighten the church, and to strengthen others who are in real earnest, to fight the battle of the Lord. I like the recent arrangement in the editorial department, and I think the sermons of Prof. Blanchard, so far, are a grand setting forth of Scripture truth, and if continued will be a great help to Christians, to show their duty, and thus lead them in the path of duty and labor, for the overthrow of sin and Satan, especially this deadly evil, secret societies. If we look to God for his blessing on our labors their day will soon come."

LESSON XXVII.—JULY 6, 1879.—PEACE WITH GOD.—Rom. 5:1-10.

Commit to memory vs. 6-8.

1. Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ:

2. By whom also we have access by faith into this grace wherein we stand, and rejoice in hope of the glory of God.

3. And not only so, but we glory in tribulations also; knowing that tribulation worketh patience;

4. And patience, experience; and experience, hope;

5. And hope maketh not ashamed; because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us.

6. For when we were yet without strength, in due time Christ died for the ungodly.

7. For scarcely for a righteous man will one die: yet peradventure for a good man some would even dare to die.

8. But God commendeth his love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us.

9. Much more then, being now justified by his blood, we shall be saved from wrath through him.

10. For if, when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son; much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by his life.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ.—Rom. 5:1.

CENTRAL TRUTH.—Spiritual peace comes through Christ.

ILLUSTRATION.

TRIALS.—A gardener wishing to construct a new trellis for a favorite vine took opportunity after fruit-gathering to loosen it from the old frame, and put in its place the new one. But the work, he found, required much patience. The branches had become closely interlaced in the paling, and the tendrils clung with a tenacious grasp, so that when the work was completed, many a leaf was lying on the ground, and many a tendril drooping and torn, with here and there a broken branch. So in our experience in life: when trial comes we find how hard it is to loose ourselves from the many social ties binding us to this world.—Shady Side.

[From Am. S.S. Union Advanced Lessons.]

CONNECTION WITH FORMER LESSONS.

In the last two quarters of 1877, our lessons were from the record in Acts of Paul's missionary journeys, and now we enter on a course of study in the Epistles written by Paul during these journeys. This Epistle to the Romans was written in the spring of A. D. 58, at Corinth, while Paul was on his third missionary journey. The preceding portions of the Epistle have shown that all men are sinners, but that the Gospel discloses the "righteousness of God" by which the believing sinner, whether Jew or Gentile, is justified by faith in Christ.

LESSON NOTES.

1. Therefore.—Christ's resurrection having just been mentioned as the witness and pledge of this.

By faith.—As the cause. "It is God that justifieth."

We have.—As a result. Another reading is "let us have."

Peace with God.—Peace instead of war. Not here the "peace from God" which is a part of Paul's salutation in every Epistle.

Through our Lord Jesus Christ.—As the peacemaker (Eph. 2: 14-15).

2. We have.—Better, We have had.

Access.—Or, The access, or introduction, which belongs to Christians as a matter of course.

Grace.—Favor; as if this free favor were a place of safety from war.

Stand.—Have our steadfast place and assurance.

Rejoice.—Or, Boast.

In hope of the glory.—As its future partakers.

3. We glory in tribulations.—Or, We are boasting in the tribulations (which we meet, or have). Tribulations, even persecution, are a token of salvation (Phil. 1: 28)

4. Experience.—Better, Proof; which comes by trial; the state of mind and assurance which comes from the patience which is the result of endurance (patience in the Old English sense).

Hope.—Not doubt and discouragement, which too often comes from tribulations. Compare Lam. 3:26 31. The passage may be read: "the tribulation worketh endurance; and the endurance, proof; and the proof, hope; and the hope," etc.

5. Maketh not ashamed.—Puts not to shame; disappoints not.

The love of God.—The love of God to us

Shed abroad.—Poured out.

By the Holy Ghost.—By the working of the Holy Spirit.

Which is given.—Who was given (when we became Christians).

6. Without strength.—Powerless to please God.

In due time.—"In the fullness of time."

The ungodly.—Those who regard not God.

7. Righteous.—Upright, just.

One.—Any one.

Peradventure.—Maybe, perhaps.

Good.—More than upright; as if benevolent also.

8. Commendeth.—Better, proves.

9. By his blood.—As if, With his death.

Wrath.—Better, The wrath (to come).

10. By the death.—Through the death.

By his life.—In, or with, his life.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JUNE 26, 1879.

THE NEW BOOK, FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED.—This new book is now out and ready for delivery. As the editor-in-chief of the Cynosure is the writer of a considerable part of it, modesty forbids us to laud it. But the plan of the book is original with Mr. Cook, and he has executed it with energy, research, and sound judgment. The book is intended to contain all that men ordinarily wish to know concerning secret societies ancient or modern; and as the authorities are almost all taken from standard Masonic writers, recognized as such, every faithful pastor and teacher of his fellow-men, in this country and in Europe, ought to hail with joy and read with avidity this book which sets before them the lodge and its explanation; the bane and the antidote side by side. We anticipate for this book a rapid sale and large circulation. See the advertisement for its price, different styles of binding, etc., etc., and write to the publishers, E. A. COOK & Co. 13 Wabash avenne, Chicago, Ill.

THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE N. C. A.

This body, whose proceedings are given in this number of the Cynosure, met in its hall in the Carpenter Building, 221 West Madison street, June 19th inst. The meeting was harmonious in all its results, and the report of the secretary and general agent show most cheering progress in the reform. After the attempt to raise thirty thousand dollars to secure the Carpenter donation was fairly inaugurated the stringency of the times set in, and the prospect of raising the money was distant. Several gentlemen advanced in life came forward and conveyed, by absolute deed, valuable real estate to the Association, the title to pass into the Association at their demise. A careful estimate of the present cash value of the property, so deeded, was made by business men, and accepted by Mr. Carpenter, as in equity meeting his proposal.

It thus happens that fifteen thousand dollars of the funds of the Association are at present unproductive, and yield no income. The progress therefore of converting the Carpenter building into a publishing house must be slow; but the beautiful tracts already issued with the imprint of the Association shows encouraging progress, and other tracts are forthcoming.

Meantime the Association sustains a traveling secretary and superintendent of the work; and, for the first time, a consecutive series of State meetings, arranged by the secretary and approved by the Association, promises, like a series of signal lights on mountains, to set our national firmament aglow.

WHEATON CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

The National Christian Association is a body organized for reform: "To withstand, oppose and remove" the anti-Christian secret orders; and were these suppressed to withstand and remove the other cunning counterfeits and antagonisms to the Gospel which the last days are to reveal and cast out. But there is throughout the country, a felt want of Christian associations to do the ordinary work of evangelization which shall be free from fellowship with the secret orders. These orders never will be cast out of church organizations where they are once safely anchored. Slavery was not. In every instance of church rending and separation, the slave-holders cut off or drove out the non-slave-holders; and in almost or quite every split, there were slave-holders in both ends of it. The local churches are New Testament institutions; but the mass of these churches were associated together in many ways and were recognized as brethren, as Paul's letters "to all the churches;" and collections taken from church to church for "poor saints at Jerusalem," shows.

But with the exception of Wesleyans, United Brethren, United Presbyterians and like denominations, the general meetings of the leading Christian bodies are polluted with idolatry. No one who sits at communion among General Assembly Presbyterians, Congregationalists, Baptists or Methodists can be certain that he is not communing with persons sworn to conceal crime, and practicing false worships, and who cut Christ's name from his own Bible, or insult him as Knight Templars pretending to worship him with swords.

To meet the wants of those who refuse to carry such "accursed things" on their consciences, several brethren, ministers and others, met at Wheaton College, after the graduating exercises last Wednesday, and formed a "Christian Association" to meet where and as often as its members chose. They formed the simplest possible organization, choosing a moderator, secretary and treasurer, who are to be an executive committee to call and prepare for meetings. The peculiarities of this association are: 1st. It excludes members of secret orders. 2d. It is undenominational. 3d. It is to include churches, ministers, and indivual Christians. The object of the Association is to be as nearly as possible identical with that of the disciples in the Upper-room, or in the household of Cornelius, viz., to seek power from on high; hear the truth and reduce it to practice in the sanctification of saints and the salvation of sinners. The measures suggested were: visiting the entire commnnity adjacent to the place of meeting; preaching and hearing the word; reports on the state of religion and reform; family prayer; the Sabbath; personal holiness; experience; temperance, etc., and the overthrow of false doctrines, false rites, and false governments in religion. The hope of the brethren is, as expressed by one of them, "to do good solid work for Christ."

If this Wheaton Association shall be crowned with the presence, power, and blessing of Christ, we see not why, encouraged by their example, there may not arise similar associations all over the country.

—Robert Collyer, the great Unitarian preacher of this city, has resigned and is going to New York on a large salary. Surmise is busy about his successor. Mr. Collyer was once a Methodist, and is well known as a Freemason ready to bless a corner-stone laid after the forms of the Masonic religion, or to make a speech for the good of the order. So, very appropriately, H. W. Thomas, the eccentric, free-thinking, Masonic pastor of Centennial Methodist church, is looked upon as the probable successor in the pulpit of Unity church. The Inter-ocean, after interviewing him on the probabilities, prophesies that such will be the case.

—The Knight Templars and other Masons of this city proved again last Sabbath how hypocritical is their pretended regard for the Christian religion. A prominent Mason having died at Harvard Junction, some sixty-two miles from Chicago, and on the day mentioned some 300 of the Masonic grandees hired a train and band and went to the funeral in full feather. The whole country side for miles turned out as io a wild animal show, and Dea. T. T. Gurney, who likes to harangne Masons better than Sunday-schools, with several others of high degree, made their speeches. Is this an atonement for Rounsville?

—The Christian Radical says very pertinently on the late action of the East Pennsylvania U. B. Conference:

"The East Pennsylvania Conference passed a resolution at its recent session condemning the Christian Cynosure as 'unreliable, and as exerting an influence detrimental to the peace and harmony of our Zion.' It is wonderful that that conference never found out that the Lebanon Tribune was not 'reliable,' and that it disturbed the peace of Zion. Christ and his apostles disturbed the peace of many who were asleep in sin. Pres. Blanchard disturbs the peace of many devotees of the lodge; which we fear had much to do with sending out such a resolution. Rock River Conference is located much nearer to the Cynosure than is the East Pennsylvania, and our peace is not disturbed by it, neither is it regarded as unreliable. It is probable that the shoe pinches elsewhere."

THE COLLEGES.

COMMENCEMENT AT WHEATON.

While the anniversaries at Wheaton have for several years been of unusual interest to Christian reformers all over the land, the exercises of last week are especially marked as crowning a year of returning peace and prosperity. Two years ago it was a time of contest, followed next by victory, and now by the well earned results. During the exercises of last week the spontaneous voice of the entire anniversary was of praise to God, and of cheerful, hopeful courage for the future.

During the week previous an exhibition of the elocution class under Prof. C. A. Blanchard, and the farewell meeting of the oldest literary society very pleasantly opened the commencement season. On Sabbath, the 15th, President Blanchard preached the Baccalaureate sermon from 1 Tim. 1:8: "But godliness is profitable unto all things, having the promise of the life that now is, and that which is to come." The discourse was esteemed by many as one of the best given at Wheaton on any similar occasion, and in response to several requests it will appear next week in these columns.

In the evening Rev. George A. Coleman of St. Charles, Ill., gave a very able and practical address before the Society of Inquiry.

On Monday evening the graduation of the Senior Preparatory class drew out a large audience which manifested an abundance of enthusiasm. Excellent music was furnished by an Elgin orchestra, and equal excellence in elocution and literary merit by the class of seventeen, which is one of the largest that has yet prepared to enter the college course at Wheaton. Prof. E. D. Bailey presided with grace and with his assistants is awarded much praise for the fine performance of his department.

On Tuesday at the annual meeting of the Board of Trustees, the treasurer, Prof. Fischer, presented the cheering report published last week in the Cynosure, by which it appears that $22,320 26 was raised on subscriptions during the year and every note and audited bill against the institution paid in full. The Faculty signed an agreement last year that in order to pay the debt they would divide pro rata whatever funds should be paid for their salaries and remit the balance. On account of the unproductive state of the endowments but one third of their salaries have been paid. The trustees ordered the sale of college lands sufficient to pay them in full. Mr. R. T. Morgan, who has been acting professor of natural sciences with singular zeal and success for two years was elected to that professorship; Miss A. J

Carothers of Iowa was appointed Lady Principal and Prof. C. A. Blanchard re-elected Vice-president of the institution, he having concluded not to accept a very flattering invitation to the secretaryship of the National Reform Association of Philadelphia. Three professorships were named: that of Moral and Intellectual Philosophy after J. P. Williston of Northampton, Mass., deceased; English Language and Literature after Hon. Samuel Plumb of Streator; and that of Mathematics and Natural Philosophy after Dea. Moses Pettengill of Peoria.

In the afternoon the reunion and supper of the Alumni Association took place in the Ladies' Hall, and was an occasion of much enjoyment. Fifty-two were seated at the tables. The literary exercises of the Association in the evening were attended by a fine audience. Prof. R. T. Morgan presided, and Rev. Mr. Earngey of Woodstock, Ill., offered prayer. Prof. T. C. Moffat's address was a fine literary effort, and not less practical and sensible. His views of what the future will develope in agriculture, in aerial navigation, in geological study, in politics, and in religion were heard with marked interest. He apostrophised Saint John as the chief of those who followed Christ and were his more immediate witnesses, and prophesied that he would be the model for the Christianity of the future. Mrs. J. A. Caldwell presented a poem of great beauty and strength on the "Realm of Thought;" its literary qualities being enhanced by her fine reading. At the business meeting following, Prof. O. Ring, of Reno, Nev., class of '60, was elected president, and H. L. Kellogg, '70, secretary; Judge Harvey Potter, '60, of Jefferson, Iowa was chosen to make the address, and Mrs. Jennie Gleason Smith, '65, to read an essay.

Fair skies and cooling breezes ushered in the morning of Commencement day and drew from every quarter a multitude of the friends of the institution and the graduates, who crowded the chapel and suggested the necessity of a gallery in which an extra hundred or two might be comfortably seated. Dr. A. H. Hiatt, as marshal of the day ushered in the opening exercises promptly, and Eld. J. L. Barlow, of Menominee, Wis., offered the opening prayer, and the audience, led by Prof. F. G. Baker and the fine choir under his training, sang the opening hymn composed for the occasion. The exercises of the class were: salutatory and poem, "Forgotten Builders," by Ruth F. Nutting; oration, "Unappreciated Characters," Mabel C. Parker; oration, "The Golden Age," Wilber F. Baker; essay, "Light—Original and Reflected," Geraldine C. Blanchard; oration, "Bricks without Straw," Walter L. Ferris; oration, "The Creed of Unbelief," William H. Fischer; oration, "Cæsar's Meat," DeMiller Johnston. Mr. W. W. Warner another member of the class was unable to be present, and Mr. William Osborne to whom was assigned the Master's Oration was also absent through sickness. Space forbids separate mention of these performances, and this has been well done already in the local and Chicago papers. It is enough to say that the opening poem and salutatory was marked for its brevity and sweetness; Miss Blanchard's essay for clearness and beauty of enunciation; the last two orations, though probably the best written productions, yet, with the second, they failed to rouse the enthusiasm of the audience as did that of Mr. Ferris, whose unaffected and earnest manner gained hearty and deserved applause. Miss Parker's oration was well written and finely spoken, but it was rather noticeable in that it proved that undoubted liberty of opinion is permitted at Wheaton. Certain it is, that the prevalence of some of her sentiments would indicate that the distinctions between right and wrong were being lost from the minds of men. Brilliant as it was in delivery and preparation, one sentiment from the oration following next after it gave greater honor to the class and the day: that patriotism was once the highest virtue practiced among men, but now it is philanthropy. Mr. Johnston's valedictory very touchingly referred to one member of the class who had been called from study to an eternity with God, and also to the struggles and victories achieved by the College since the class entered its halls.

After notices of the evening and of a special meeting to which all Christians were invited for the purpose of deliberating upon and perhaps forming an association of Christians and churches, the Class song composed by Miss Nutting was sung, the members all joining. President Blanchard conferred the degrees and announced the result of the meeting of the trustees respecting the professorships and teachers. The degree of "A. M." was bestowed on Marquis L. Holt, of Viroqua, Wis., and William Osborne of Monroe City, Mo., in course; and upon J. F. Snyder of Loup City, Neb., W. I. Wheaton of Wheaton, and J. L. Stratton of Wyanet, honorary: "A. L." upon W. W. Warner of Oakfield, Wis.; Ruth F. Nutting, Wheaton, and Mabel C. Parker, of Chicago; "A. B." upon W. F. Baker, of Wheaton, W. L. Ferris of Oneida, D. M. Johnson of Byron, and Miss G. C. Blanchard of Wheaton.

Though the stage was piled with a profusion of choice flowers, no offering of the kind was so fitting as the cross, silver gilt, and beautifully twined with leaves and white flowers, which was sent up to the venerable President after conferring the degrees. The gift was so touching and appropriate as to call out a spontaneous burst of applause. The diplomas were then presented and the benediction pronounced.

The Praise meeting in the evening was of such a spirit as the day would naturally inspire. Rev. G. W. Bainum of Streator presided and made the opening speech, followed by Dea. Moses Pettengill of Peoria, Dr. A. H. Hiatt of Wheaton, and Pres. Blanchard. Confidence in the principles of the College which had been proved in the fires of persecution, and in its future which is in the hand of God, was the sentiment of the joyful occasion.

AT WESTFIELD.

The exercises of commencement week at Westfield College opened June 2nd, with the reading of a poem by Mr. B. D. T. Travis of Kansas, Ill. His subject, "The Two Empires, Truth and Fancy" was treated in a masterly manner. Several parts of it were especially admired for their beauty of diction and loftiness of conception—the speech of Ambition and Sensualo Libertino whose banner was plenary indulgence. The poem is to consist of three cantos, two of which have already been given, one at our recent commencement and the other one year ago. Mr. Travis promises us at no distant day the benefit of all three cantos to be given consecutively with illustrations painted by his own artistic hand. We will most cordially welcome him whenever he comes.

The regular examinations followed on Thursday, the 5th, and were conducted in the usual rigid manner. The results showed clearly that hard, earnest work had been done by both teachers and students during the collegiate year—a success of which none need be ashamed.

On Friday evening the Zetagathean literary society held its tenth anniversary; its programme of speakers being as follows: B. F. McClelland of Cushman, Illinois, Salutatory; E. F. Warren of Tower Hill, "Weigh with Care;" F. M. Swengle of Westfield, "The Easy Peace;" C. W. Mason of Vermillion, "What Shall We Do;" J. T. Kretzinger, son of Rev. I. Kretzinger, Chicago, "Fraud;" F. F. Stoltz of Bridgeport, "The Suffrage Question." The performances were all of a high type of excellence. The music was first class and furnished by well trained and gifted students.

Saturday evening found everybody eager to participate in the rich repast which the Philalethean (ladies) literary society had prepared. Their order of exercises was as follows: A very sensible Salutatory by Miss Ida LaRoe of Westfield; "Influence of Character," by Miss Annie M. Weakley of Shelbyville; Recitation, "Rifts in the Clouds," by Miss Lelia N. DeHeart of Westfield; "There are People who Live over the Hill," by Miss Laura A. Zellar of Westfield; Philalethean Messenger, edited and read by Miss Laura A. Moore of Westfield; and an essay, "Every Man for Himself," by Mrs. Jennie R. Torrence of Cowden. Notwithstanding some one waggishly suggested that the anniversary began "Weakly and ended in Torren(ce)ts" the ladies throughout maintained a dignity and literary merit hard to be surpassed by their "big" brother students.

Sabbath morning bright and lovely pleased all with the prospect of listening to the Baccalaureate sermon of Pres. S. B. Allen, D. D. The large audience room was filled with attentive listeners. The text was: "Quit you like men."—1 Cor. 16:30. It was treated in a manner characteristic of the doctor. A most telling and joyable discrimination was made between man as distinguished from brute creation, and man as distinguished by high and pure principles, from man as debased by the ignoble. We are not simply to play men, but be men. Mere imitation is a poor thing, pitiable, even damnable. Morals themselves and not their effigies are what we want. Unmanliness and fickleness so largely characteristic of the masses, must be rooted out of the moral and mental constitution. Give us manly boys and manly men. A man to be true must stand alone with his soul filled with divinity. He must not trust to the arm of flesh, but lean upon the bosom of God. To quit one's self like a man according to the Gospel standard is to present a scene sublime to look upon.

The Colementian Literary Society entertained us with its tenth anniversary, Monday evening, 9th. It was a fine success. The good and wholesome thoughts of the performers still ring in our ears. The following named persons represented in the programme:

D. H. Gillan, of Arrowsmith, Ill.; H. W. Broadstone, Robison; Wm. M. Fogler, of St. Elms; J. H. Piper, of Prairie City; E. D. Parr, of Ireola.

Prof. J. A. Zellar, of Evansville, Indiana, favored us on Tuesday evening with an instructive lecture on "The Two Philosophies."

The Alumnal Association gave an entertainment on Wednesday evening. Three speakers figured on the occasion. Mr. J. T. Hinds addressed us on the subject "Learned but not Wise;" Mrs. Devore, a poem, "We are Children;" and Mr. D. N. Doran, on "The Subject Matter of a Practical Education."

The Board of Trustees went into session the evening of the 7th, and continued their proceedings at stated intervals until the 12th. A very burdensome work developed upon them in the start, but they engaged in it in a business and Christian like way, making every possible provision for the welfare of the institution, which we have reason to believe will march forward with renewed vigor and influence. Its friends are becoming more numerous and itself more widely known on account of its thoroughness of mental drill, and its practical enjoyment of religious principles. Several changes were made in the corps of teachers. Mr. Doran was elected

Hope.

In the quiet garden of my life
  There groweth a red rose tree;
A little bird sits on the topmost bough,
  And merrily singeth he.

The sun may shine in the happy sky
  Through the long and golden days,
And the sweet spring blossoms veil the trees
  In a fragrant pearly haze;

Or the pelting rains of autumn come,
  And the weary wintry weather,
And we've naught to watch but the leaden clouds—
  My rose and I together.

Come rain, come shine, so that bonny bird
  But warble his cheery tune;
For while he sings to my rose and me,
  To us it is always June.

And death and sorrow shall vainly sit
  The portals of life beside,
For we float upborne on that soaring song
  Through the gates of heaven flung wide!

His Brother Man.

"I cannot wait any longer. I must have my money, and if you cannot pay it, I must foreclose the mortgage and sell the place," said Mr. Merton.

"In that case," said Mr. Bishop, "it will, of course, be sold at a great sacrifice, and after all the struggle I have made, my family will be homeless. It is hard. I only wish that you had to earn your money as I do mine—you might then know something of the life of a poor man. If you could only in imagination put yourself in my place, I think you would have a little mercy on me."

"It is useless talking; I extended this one year, and I can do so no longer," replied Mr. Merton, as he returned to his desk and continued writing.

The poor man rose from his seat and walked sadly out of Mr. Merton's office. His last hope was gone. He had just recovered from a long illness, which had swallowed up the means with which he had intended to make the last payment on his house. True, Mr. Merton had waited one year, when he had failed to meet the demand, owing to sickness in the family, and he felt very much obliged to him for so doing. This year he had been laid up for seven months, during which time he could earn nothing, and all the savings were needed for the support of his family. Again he failed, and now he would again be homeless and have to begin the world anew. Had heaven forsaken him and given him over to the tender mercies of the wicked?

After he had left the office Mr. Merton could not drive away from him thoughts to which the poor man in his grief had given utterance. "I wish you had to earn your money as I do mine."

In the midst of a row of figures, "Put yourself in my place" intruded.

Once after it had crossed his mind, he laid down his pen and said, "Well, I think I should find it rather hard. I have a mind to drop in this afternoon and see how it fares with his family; that man has aroused my curiosities."

About five o'clock he put on a gray wig, and some old, cast-off clothes, and walked to the door. Mrs. Bishop, a pale, weary-looking woman, opened it. The poor old man requested permission to enter and rest awhile, saying he was very tired with his long journey, for he had walked many miles that day.

The old gentleman watched her attentively. He saw there was no elasticity in her step, no hope in her movements, and pity for her began to steal into his heart. When her husband entered her features relaxed into a smile, and she forced a cheerfulness in her manner. The traveler noted it all, and was forced to admire this woman who could assume a cheerfulness she could not feel, for her husband's sake. After the table was prepared, there was nothing on it but bread and butter and tea. They invited the stranger to eat with them, saying, "We have not much to offer you, but a cup of tea will refresh you after your long journey."

He accepted their hospitality, and as they discussed the frugal meal, led them, without seeming to do so, to talk of their affairs.

"I bought this piece of land," said Mr. Bishop, "at a very low figure, and instead of waiting until I had money enough to build, as I ought to have done, I thought I would borrow a few hundred dollars. The interest on the money would not be near as much as the rent I was paying, and I would be saving something by it. I did not think there would be any difficulty in paying back the money, but the first year my wife and one of my children were ill, and the expenses left me without means to pay the debt. Mr. Merton agreed to wait another year if I would pay the interest, which I did. This year I was for seven months unable to work at my trade and earn anything, and, of course, when pay day comes around—and that will be very soon—I shall be unable to meet the demand."

"But," said the stranger, "will not Mr. Merton wait another year, if you make all circumstances known to him?"

"No, sir," replied Mr. Bishop, "I saw him this morning, and he must have the money."

"He must be very hard-hearted," remarked the traveler.

"Not necessarily so," replied Mr. Bishop. "The fact is, these rich men know nothing of the struggles of the poor. They are men just like the rest of mankind, and I am sure if they had but the faintest idea of what the poor had to pass through, their hearts and purses would open. You know it has passed into a proverb, when a poor man needs assistance he should apply to the poor. The reason is obvious. Only the poor know the curse of poverty. If Merton had the least idea what I and my family had to go through, I think he would be willing to wait several years for his money rather than distress us.

With what emotions the stranger listened may be imagined. A new world was being opened to him. He was passing through an experience that had never been his before. Shortly after the conclusion of the meal he rose to take his leave, thanking Mr. and Mrs. Bishop for their kind hospitality.

Mr. Merton did not sleep much that night; he lay awake thinking. He had received a new revelation. The poor had always been associated in his mind with stupidity and ignorance, and the first poor family he had found far in advance, in intelligence, sympathy and politeness, of the exquisite and fashionable butterflies of the day.

The next day a boy called at the cottage and left a package in a large blue envelope, directed to Mr. Bishop.

Mrs. Bishop was very much alarmed when she took it, for large blue envelopes were associated in her mind with law and lawyers, and she thought that it boded no good. She put it away until her husband came home from work, when she handed it to him.

He opened it in silence, read its contents, and said fervently, "Thank heaven!"

"What is it, John?" said his anxious wife.

"Good news, wife," replied John "Such news as I never hoped for or even dreamed of."

"What is it? Tell me quick—I want to hear, if it is anything good."

"Mr. Merton has canceled the mortgage—released me from debt, both interest and principle—and says any time I need further assistance, if I will let him know I shall have it."

"I am so glad! It puts new life into me," said the now happy wife. "But what can have come over Mr. Merton."

"I do not know. It seems strange after the way he talked to me yesterday morning. I will go right over to Mr. Merton's and tell him how happy he has made us."

He found Mr. Merton in and expressed his gratitude in glowing tears.

"What could have induced you," he asked, "to show us so much kindness?"

"I followed your suggestion," replied Mr. Merton, "and put myself and your place. I expect that it will surprise you very much to learn that the strange traveler to whom you showed so much kindness was myself."

"Indeed!" exclaimed Mr. Bishop. "Well, it is a good joke," said the latter; "good in more senses than one. It has terminated very pleasantly for me."

"I was surprised," said Mr. Merton, "at the broad and liberal views you expressed of men any their actions generally. I supposed I had greatly the advantage over you in means and education; yet how cramped and narrow have been my views beside yours! That wife of yours is an estimable woman, and that boy of yours will be an honor to any man. I tell you, Bishop," said the lawyer, becoming animated, "you are rich—rich beyond what money could make you; you have treasures that gold will not buy. Somehow I seem to have lived years since yesterday morning. What I have learned at your house is worth more to me than you owe me, and I am your debtor yet. Hereafter I shall take as my motto, 'Put yourself in his place,' and try to regulate my actions by it.—Selected.

Childrens' Corner.

"I Will Be Good."

"I will be good dear mother,"
  I heard a sweet child say:
"I will be good—now watch me;
  I will be good to-day!"
She lifted up her bright young eyes,
  With a soft and pleasing smile:
Then a mother's kiss was on her lip,
  So pure and free from guile.

And when night came, that little one,
  In kneeling down to pray,
Said in a soft and whispering tone,
  "Have I been good to-day?"
Oh, many, many bitter tears
  'Twould save us, did we say,
Like that dear child, with earnest heart,
  "I will be good to-day!"

Jesus can help us to be good;
  To him we'll humbly pray;
His grace alone can make us good,
  And keep us good all day.
Help us to hate all evil thoughts,
  All sinful words and ways;
And in thy service take delight
  Through all our earthly days.

The Little House.

Proverbs xxiii: 26.—My son give me thine heart

Once upon a time a great king gave a little child a house to live in. The king was as wise as he was good, and the house was very well made, and very well furnished. It had a door that opened and shut without any noise, and two windows with curtains which could be dropped as quickly as one could think, and two other windows which had neither curtains nor blinds nor shutters. The doors and windows were all in the tower of the house, where the widest view could be had. But telegraph lines which worked themselves ran throughout the building. If there was any trouble in any part of the building, a dispatch was sent to the central room where the boy generally stayed, and hegave attention to it. If the rumble of wheels was heard, or the call of a voice, the sound came through the windows which had no curtain, and it was telegraphed to the boy-owner of the house. Was it not wonderful that a child no larger than the smallest of you, should have a house so strangely furnished?

But the house was not only good in itself, it was situated in a very good country. Out of the windows you could see a great many very beautiful things. Generally it was light blue overhead, and bright green on the ground. But a good deal of the time the ground was pure white; and sometimes overhead there were streaks of gold, which came from the reflection of a great ball of light, that was sometimes directly over the house, and sometimes as low as the ground; but wherever it was, it was so bright that you could not look at it, except when a curtain was drawn over it. I have not time to tell you of all the pretty things which the boy could see through the windows—flowers and trees and faces of people; nor of all the pleasant sounds he could hear through the windows which were without a curtain—singing birds and running brooks and musical voices; nor of the wonderful arrangement by which fuel and building material were taken in through the door, so that the house was warmed, and, strangest of all, grew larger and larger every day, till at last it got to be many times as large as at the first.*

But I want to tell you that the boy had something to do besides looking out of the windows at the pretty things, and keeping the fires going, and building upon the house. He had lessons to learn as you have. He had errands to run, and other work to do. He could not be happy if he neglected any duty. The king had sent to live with him what I will call a little bird, because it had a sweet voice and a pleasant song, though it wasn't exactly a bird. But it sang to him when he was good; and when he was naughty it either kept silent, or it moaned till the boy's heart ached. Sometimes there were evil sights to be seen from the window, and the little bird said, "Drop the curtain." Or there were good things to look at, and the bird said, "Run and see, and stay watching them." And there were good and bad sounds to be heard through the other windows—for there were two windows to see out of, and two to hear out of—and the little bird said when the good sounds came, "Listen," and when the bad was heard, "Run away."

But I am very sorry to say that this little boy didn't always heed what the bird said, especially when it told him about the good king who had given him his house, and put it in such a beautiful country. So, because it wasn't heeded, the bird did not sing as often as at first, and the boy wasn't as happy as he might have been. He wanted to tell the bird when to sing. But the king had told it to sing only when the boy was good. After a time the bird sang less and less, and didn't say so much about going to the window to see good sights, and about dropping the curtain to shut out the evil. I don't know but that the bird would almost have died of sorrow, because the boy was so obstinate, and bent on having his own way, whether right or wrong.

But one day a knock was heard upon the window, and the boy went to listen and heard, "My son give me thine heart!" He went to the other window and looked out, but couldn't see anybody. But the knocking continued—knock, knock, knock—and the voice over and over, "Give me thine heart," "Give me thine heart!" And the little bird was roused out of his slumber, and leaping on the boy's shoulder, said at first, "Listen, listen," and then, "Obey, obey, obey." For the boy knew that that knocking and voice came from an unseen messenger of the King, that the King called himself father, and wanted the boy to love him. He knew that he had been ungrateful and disobedient to his best friend. He knew that he had not heeded the directions which the King had given him by the little bird. And as he thought about it, he became very sorry and began to weep. He felt his heart going out toward the King and cried,

Take my heart, O Father, take it;
Take and seal it for thine own.

Then the bird began to sing till the house was full of music; and the boy was happy. He began to try to live a better life. He thought often of the good King, and tried to obey him. He read the letters sent by him, listened to the messengers that came from him, and found a way of talking to him. He was careful to heed what the bird said. And so, as he grew in years, he grew in love for the King, and in likeness to him, and here ends my story.

The good King is God. The child is any one of you. The house is your body. The windows and door are the eyes, ears, and mouth. The little bird is the conscience. You have heard it saying, "Wrong," "Right." It has made you glad when you have done well; it has made you sorry and ashamed when you have done ill. It may cease to speak or to sing to you, if you do not heed God's call, "My son, give me thine heart!" God wants you to love him. You are not too young to give him your heart, and to become his dear children. Will you not do it?—Advance.

*This is not a fairy story. Every word of it is true.

The Walled Lake.

In Iowa, one hundred and fifty miles west of Dubuque, lies what is known as the "Walled Lake," a body of water covering two thousand eight hundred acres, and whose surface is between two and three feet higher than the ground about it. In some places the water is twenty-six feet deep; it is clear and cold, and has no apparent inlet or outlet. It is confined by a wall of stone in some places ten feet high and fifteen feet thick at the base. The stones used in building it vary in size from about one hundred pounds to three tons. In the country around the lake there are no other stones within a circuit of five or ten miles, but a belt of woodland, composed of oak, makes the entire circumference of it. It is thought the trees were planted at the time the wall was built, and for that reason the wall cannot be of great antiquity. The Dubuque Herald says, however, that no one can form an idea as to the means employed to bring the stones, or who constructed the wall. In the spring of 1856, during a heavy storm, the ice on the lake broke down the wall in several places, and the farmers in the neighborhood were obliged to repair the damage to prevent an inundation.

Lobster Cutlets.

One ounce of butter.
One ounce of flour.
One gill of cold water.
A little pepper and salt.
A few drops of lemon juice.
One half of a pound can of lobster.
Two spoonfuls bread crumbs.

This quantity makes five cutlets. (If fresh lobster is used, throw it into boiling water and boil twenty minutes before using. Take off the claws, break with a hammer and remove the meat. Twist off the head, and remove the coral which runs down the back. Put the coral through a wire sieve before adding it to the cutlets. Remove the meat from the body, cut in small pieces, also from the claws). Melt the butter in a little saucepan. Pass in the dry flour and mix. (Flour mixed in melted butter never becomes lumpy). Then add a gill of cold water and stir until it boils, then let it cook two minutes; otherwise the cutlets will have a raw taste. (When cooked sufficiently the mixture will not adhere to the sides of the saucepan). Take it from the fire and add pepper, salt and lemon juice; also add a grain of cayenne pepper. One half table-spoonful of cream (no milk) improves it. Add to this mixture the meat of the lobster cut in rough pieces, mix, and turn the whole out on a plate to cool. When cool divide into five pieces. Sprinkle flour on flour board, cover each piece with it and shape into a long narrow form. Beat well one egg. Roll each cutlet in it. Put on a piece of white print paper two table spoonfuls bread crumbs and toss each cutlet in it from side to side. Then throw each cutlet into hot lard for two minutes. Take them out on a piece of white paper for a second to absorb the grease, then remove to a plate.

Cheese Fritters.

Put a saucepan of lard on the stove when preparing to make fritters.

Three ounces flour.
Three ounces cheese.
(Three table spoonfuls Parmesan cheese or any common cheese strong enough to grate fine).
One ounce butter.
One gill tepid water.
A little pepper and salt.
One egg.

First put in a bowl three ounces of flour. Then melt and pour into the center of the flour the butter, then pour in a gill of hot or tepid water, and drop in the yolk of one egg. Put the white aside upon a plate. To this flour, butter, water and egg, add the pepper and salt. (A little salt, considerable pepper.) Then add the cheese (Parmesan) grated fine. Add to the white of egg a pinch of salt (this cools the egg, absorbs the moisture, and makes it rise quicker. Sugar has an opposite effect). After it is whipped to a stiff froth mix it lightly with the other ingredients. Heat a sauce pan of lard so hot that the smoke rises from it, not to the boiling point. Water boils at 212 deg., lard at 500 deg., salad oil at 700 deg. When the lard is at 375 deg. it is hot enough for cooking and a slight smoke rises from its surface. Drop the mixture into the lard, one spoonful at a time, turn each over when cooking, and allow them to cook three minutes. Drain each on white paper on removing from the lard and pile them on a hot napkin.

Russia Fish Pie.

One-half pound of flour, quarter pound butter, one teaspoonful baking power, three eggs, half teacupful boiled rice, one pound raw fish of any kind; salt and pepper, one gill of cold water.

Make the crust first. Mix the the flour, salt and baking powder. Whip the white of one egg to a stiff froth, and make the flour into a firm dough with the egg and cold water; separate the butter into three parts. Roll out very thinly and spread over it one third of the butter. Fold the dough in three thicknesses, and roll it out again; then spread on the second piece of butter, fold as before and roll out again. Spread on the last piece of butter, fold again in three. Boil two of the eggs for ten minutes; throw them into cold water and remove the shells. Roll the crust out square and place in the center of it the boiled rice and eggs cut in pieces. Remove from the fish all bone and skin, place it on top the rice and egg. Then sprinkle over a little pepper and salt. Brush the edges of the crust with the white of egg and fold it over, so as to have fish, rice, and egg covered. Brush it all over again and bake in quick oven half an hour.

To Cook Rice.

Wash it well in cold water and throw it into plenty of boiling water. The more the better. In this way the particles will not adhere to each other. Let the water boil away for about twenty minutes. If milk is add ed a longer time is required. Season with a little salt.

Venoise Pudding.

Five ounces bread crumbs.
Four ounces sugar.
Three ounces sultana raisins (seedless).
One teaspoonful fresh lemon juice.
One-half pint milk.
Yolks of four eggs.
Butter to grease the tin mould.

Brown one ounce of sugar in a small dry saucepan. Stir while it melts and until it becomes quite brown. Add to it the milk, and stir until the milk becomes brown. Cut the bread crumbs into small square pieces, and put them in a basin. Rub the raisins in a dry towel, but do not wash them, then add them to the bread. Add the four ounces of sugar. Mix slightly the yolks of four eggs with wooden spoon, pour over them through a strainer the colored milk, add lemon juice, pour over bread crumbs and mix all together. Grease well a mould, put in mixture, twist over the top a piece of white paper, and steam one and a half hours.

Sauce for the Venoise Pudding.

Make this sauce about the time that the pudding is done.

Juice of one-half lemon.
One ounce sugar.
One tablespoonful milk.
One egg.

Put egg, sugar, lemon and milk into a small saucepan and with two common steel forks held together in one hand stir swiftly over the fire until the egg begins to thicken. Do not allow it to boil or the milk will curdle. Then turn the pudding out of the mould and pour the sauce around it.

This sauce is good for any pudding, but is especially appropriate for the Venoise as the two colors harmonize so nicely.

Raising Bees.—Miss Ella Dunlap, the bee editor of the Chicago Tribune, states in one of her last letters that white clover does not always produce honey; that in a dry, cool time even buckwheat is of no value for this purpose; and that, for these and other reasons, dependence for bee pasturage must—as is coming to be more and more generally admitted—be placed chiefly upon the forest, and the basswood and tulip take the lead. Miss D., who evidently thinks that faith without works is dead, adds that last spring, at Rural Home, a thousand young basswoods were planted, and that they have made a good growth. If all keepers of bees would endeavor thus to provide them with forage, there would be less cause for complaint among fruit-growers, whose crops are injured, if not destroyed, by the persistent onset of these busy workers.

teacher of drawing and vocal music; Mrs. Zellar, teacher of Taxidermy; and Prof. Bookwalter, of Western College, to the chair of Ancient Languages, vacated by the resignation of Prof. C. H. Kiracofe. Prof. Bookwalter comes to us highly recommended as a teacher and a Christian gentleman.

Commencement proper occurred Thursday the 12th. The chapel was filled to overflowing. The Westfield Cornet Band furnished the music. Just the moment before President Allen was in the act of rising to call the first speaker of the graduating class to the floor, Mr. F. F. Stoltz, an alumnus, arose and began to read a paper much to the surprise of the whole audience, stating the affectionate relations existing between students and teachers, and indicating the object of breaking in upon the order of the day. He then presented in behalf of the old and new students a pair of gold spectacles to President Allen, who responded with pleasant and touching words, expressing deepest gratitude to those who thus gave a token of their regard and high appreciation of his work.

Order being again restored, the class was called upon for their addresses. First Mr. F. E. Phillips, son-in-law of Rev. W. C. Smith, presented the audience with a neat and well arranged production entitled "Within the Danger Lies; within the Power." Mr. U. P. Shull of Elvaston, Ill., followed with "Nameless Heroes." Mr. F. Pease, graduate of scientific course was absent. The others completed the classical course. The degree of Master of Science was conferred upon Mr. J. H. Bolton and Miss Addie Condon.

The exercises were closed by Rev. I. Kretzinger of Central Illinois Conference, with a very searching and thoughtful address on Westfield College as to what it has done and is now doing for this immediate vicinity in point of enhancing the value of property and improving the morals and intelligence of the people. He referred to the noble band of workers who were trained within the college walls and the good they are accomplishing as citizens, ministers and professional men.

The educational work in its various relations was shown quite forcibly. Bro. Kretzinger is not an educated man and did not have the advantages young people now possess; yet his whole heart is in the work which he aids with his means and words as if he had in his very grasp all the benefits of mental culture. God loves, and the people can't do otherwise than love such a philanthropic spirit.

We have a goodly number of such men, but the demand for them is far greater than the supply. May their number rapidly increase.

FREE BAPTIST.

—The last session of the Rochester Quarterly Meeting was held with the North Parma church, June 6-8. Mr. Luther. Collamer was elected moderator. Rev. C. B. Hart preached the opening sermon from Ps. 51: 12-13, and Rev. John B. Randall delivered the Sabbath School address. The other sermons were preached by brethren J. M. Crandall, H. Whitcher, C. B. Hart, Isaac Hyatt and J. Kettle. Letters were received from all the churches except Fairport, which gave assurance by its delegates that a letter would be forwarded to the clerk. The letters, though regretting so little fruit had been gathered as a result of the labor bestowed, expressed hope and determination to toil on till directed by the Master to cast the net on the right side of the ship.

An encouraging interest was reported in all the Sabbath-schools.

Bro. C. A. Hilton offered his resignation as clerk, which was reluctantly accepted.

Resolutions of grateful appreciation for the faithful discharge of his official duties were adopted, and Isaac Hyatt was elected to the office.

A collection of over $18 was taken for missions.

REFORMED PRESBYTERIAN.

—From the Christian Statesman we make the following abstract of the late meeting of the Synod of this church in New York during the early part of June. It contains some items of special interest.

One hundred and forty members were present. The meeting was harmonious, earnest, pervaded with a deep sense of responsibility, and evidently baptized with the Holy Spirit. The Rev. D. Metheny, M. D., of Latakia, Syria, was chosen moderator, and received the thanks of the synod at the close of its session for his courteous, impartial and efficient presidency over its deliberations.

On the subject of Sabbath schools stress was laid, by the Rev. James Kennedy of New York and others, on the fact that the Covenanters of Scotland provided for the systematic religious instruction of their children in their weekly society meetings two hundred years before Robert Raikes founded the modern Sabbath school.

The report on temperance declared the position of the church to be total abstinence on the part of the individual, impartial discipline on the part of the church and absolute prohibition on the part of the State. The synod adopted a memorial to Congress asking for the appointment of a commission of five persons whose duty it shall be to examine and take testimony concerning the effect of traffic in alcoholic liquors in connection with crime, pauperism, morals, the public health, and the general welfare; also concerning license and prohibitory legislation in the several States; and, finally to report what legislation, if any, would be beneficial to suppress the traffic in alcoholic liquors within the sphere of national authority.

The work of the Board of Sustentation received much attention from synod. The design of this fund is to supplement the salaries of pastors in the weaker congregations by collections from the whole church. More than forty congregations were announced as having given nothing to this fund during the year.

The Board of Foreign Missions reported the following statistics of the church in Latakia:

Missionaries and their wives, in all	7
Native teachers	19
Communicants including missionaries	94
Sabbath schools	5
Sabbath-school scholars	200
Week day schools	9
Week day scholars	476
Mission stations	7
Mission buildings	11

The most gratifying statements were contained in this report, concerning the desire of the people of Syria for schools to be established among them. They are now willing to provide school buildings and to pay for instruction, where formerly it was with difficulty they could be persuaded to receive it gratuitously.

The missionary operations of the church in this country consist of a mission among the Freedmen at Selma, Alabama, among the Chinese in Oakland, California, and in missionary stations mainly in the west and northwest. At Selma a new church has been erected during the year, of size sufficient, it was supposed, to accommodate both church and school for years to come. But since it was opened, the school has filled and overflowed it and rooms for eighty pupils and thei teacher rented in an adjoining building. An appeal is therefore made to the church for means to erect additional buildings during the coming year. The Chinese Mission reported the baptism of ten converts during the year. The present state of this Mission awakened increased interest, and ampler provision than heretofore was made for its support.

The work of National Reform was discussed in a special report, followed by earnest speeches by members of Synod, and at a public meeting at which eloquent addresses were made by Prof. J. R. W. Sloane, Pres. H. H. George, and Rev. J. M. Foster. The instructions of last year to Presbyteries to provide for efficient co-operation with this movement within their bounds, were renewed, and the first Sabbath of July was fixed for a collection for this cause in all the churches.

No subject before Synod awakened so much interest as the removal from Northwood, Ohio, and location anew, of Geneva College. The advantages of various locations were presented, and Beaver Falls, Pennsylvania, was chosen as the seat of the College, upon the fullfilment of the conditions proposed by the advocates of this location, viz., the gift of ten acres of land and of twenty thousand dollars for the erection of suitable buildings. This action of Synod was made unanimous, and the church has undertaken, with singular heartiness and enthusiasm, the establishment and endowment of an institution of learning which shall serve her needs as a denomination, and the cause of the higher education in the United States.

Important questions of Finance demanded attention. The invested funds of the church have been steadily increasing, and have now obtained large proportions. The management has been marked by care, fidelity, and discretion.

The Rev. S. O. Wylie, D. D., and the Rev. R. Somerville with Elder Robert Patton were appointed a Committee to act during the year in behalf of the Sabbath.

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

—At its last meeting the United Presbyterian General Assembly ordered its Board of Education not to grant aid to a student using tobacco in any form. To this we have no objection, but the students thus shut out from help will think it a little hard when they see their pastors and professors chewing or smoking the filthy weed. The nervousness, excitability and general disquietude of many ministers may be traced at least in part to their indulgence in tobacco.—Presbyterian Banner.

UNITED BRETHREN IN CHRIST.

—The Telescope, taking for a text the fact of a $75,000 debt on Otterbein University, Westerville, Ohio, prints a forcible editorial on college debts.

—Elder Hurless says in the Christian Radical that an injunction has been served on the few who have been disturbing the church in Polo, Ill. He says of this "appeal to Cæsar:"

"We regret that any professor of Christianity allowed themselves to persist in a course so contrary to the spirit of the Gospel of Christ, and to interfere with the official duties of properly constituted officers of the church as to create a necessity for a measure of that kind, but the case in hand, it was believed by good and wise men who understood the surroundings, really demanded it. Life is too short, and the work to be done too important to devote any part of time to useless wrangling."

PRESBYTERIAN.

—The following timely action was taken by the General Assembly lately meeting in Saratoga, New York:

The committee on bills and overtures to which was referred the resolution of Judge Drake regarding the attendance of church members at theatres and operatic performances, offered the following which was adopted:

"Resolved, That in view of the increased attendance of church members at theatres and operas, the Assembly bears earnest and solemn testimony against this practice as inconsistent with Christian duty, since it not only gives countenance and support to an institution justly described by a former Assembly as a school of immorality, but is in itself spiritually hurtful and tends to obliterate the line which should always be plainly visible between the followers of Christ and the world."

The committee on bills and overtures reported the following which was adopted:

"Resolved, That the General Assembly, believing that the practice on the part of church members of reading secular papers on the Sabbath day is alarmingly on the increase, and believing also that it is a grievous injury to the personal piety of the readers and a serious obstacle to the cause of Christ in every community, would deprecate the practice, and would urge on all who love the Lord and desire the spread of his kingdom in this world to do all in their power to discountenance it."

—In the great storm which lately visited eastern Kansas the Presbyterian church, at Irving, was entirely destroyed. A festival was to be given by the ladies of the church, and four young ladies were in the church when the tornado first struck it, and only escaped from the building when it sank in a shapeless heap.

—A revival of great power has been in progress in the Fifteenth Street church in the city of Washington, the only Presbyterian church in that city for the use of the colored people. On the 11th of May ninety persons were admitted to the church, and at the communion service the building was crowded to overflowing.

—Prof. F. L. Patton, whose call to London has been calling much attention to Presbyterian interests in Chicago, has postponed his acceptance at the urgent request of his church in this city, and of Mr. Cyrus H. McCormick, through whose influence he came West. At an interview with Mr. McCormick in New York last Friday, the latter expressed himself emphatically that the interest of Presbyterianism must be maintained here, but he desires the hearty co-operation of the churches in connection with his own efforts. Mr. McCormick owns the Interior, and has given largely to the Theological Seminary.

—At Buffalo Lake, Dakota, there is a Presbyterian church of fifty-five members, all full-blooded Dakota Indians, with the Rev. Mazawacanayana, or Iron Thunder, as pastor.

LUTHERAN.

—The twentieth annual convention of the Swedish Lutheran Augustana Synod was begun last Friday morning in the Swedish Immanuel church in this city, to continue through this week. About one hundred delegates are present. The president, the Rev. E. Novelius, read his annual report at the morning session, presenting many interesting details of the difficulties encountered and progress made during the past synodical year. During the year he had visited many churches in New York and Kansas conferences; also made a tour through the Indian territory.

An election of officers resulted in the choice of the Rev. E. Novelius, President; the Rev. P. Sjoblom, Secretary; J. H. Wistrand, Treasurer. Friday evening a sermon was preached by the Rev. J. Wickstrand of Princeton, and a short address made by the Rev. P. Sward of Vasa, Minn. From 9 to 12 o'clock each day is occupied in the discussion of theses on the Christian nature of youth and in the consideration of the new catechism, the afternoon session from 2 to five o'clock in the transaction of ordinary business.

—The oldest Lutheran church in India, still standing, is Jerusalem church at Tranquebar. It was built in a very solid manner, and was dedicated Oct. 11, 1718, by Missionary Ziegenbalg, who is buried in the church. Recently a new roof was put upon the edifice, the third in its long history.

—The model for the monument to Luther, which is to be set up in Eisleben, the birthplace of the great reformer, commemorating the four hundredth anniversary of his birth, is now completed, and has been sent to be cast. The monument represents Luther clad in a long gown and wearing a barret. With his left hand he holds the Bible to his breast, and with his right hand he hurls away the Papal Bull. The pedestal of the statue is square, with a design on each side; the foremost showing an angel with a shield bearing the name "Martin Luther," trampling on a recumbent devil, while the other three sides represent scenes in Luther's life. The first shows him arguing with Dr. Eck; the second, in his study translating the Bible; the third, with his family and Melanchthon.

GENERAL.

—A young Polish Jew of Baltimore, named Stern has been converted to Christianity, and is preaching the Gospel with success among his countrymen and coreligionists in that city and other parts of Maryland.

—The famine and famine relief have undoubtedly been a great factor in the extraordinary movement in Southern India the past year toward Christianity. The report of the Arcott Mission says: "Abuse and ridicule of the preacher has almost entirely ceased;" and the village officials it is stated, are now showing a friendly spirit. The Indian Evangelical Review says: "The secret conviction has been gaining ground among masses of the people that sooner or later they must become Christians."

—A letter from an English missionary in Mogadore, Morocco, gives a harrowing account of the miseries caused by the famine in that unhappy country. In Mogadore alone over 13,000 persons have perished from hunger, and all the cattle, camels, horses, sheep, and other domestic animals have starved to death. Only the dogs have survived, and these, finding no food in the towns, are roaming over the country in bands of from twenty to fifty, sometimes attacking and devouring every person they meet. In their hunger these animals have also dug up the buried bodies of the dead and stripped their bones.

—The United States sends 460 missionaries to foreign fields, Germany more than 500, and Great Britain 1,000.

—Only forty years ago Fiji islanders feasted on human flesh. Now no less than 40,000 children attend Sunday-school, and thousands of people are earnest Christians.

—Recently six teachers appointed by the London Missionary Society to labor on the Southeast Cape, New Guinea, were landed there by the steamer Jonn Williams, but the whole number were poisoned by the natives, who placed upas wood in their drinking water. Of twenty men landed in the district, only five remain, the rest having died of poison or fever.

How to Send Money.

Post office orders, checks or drafts on Chicago or towns east of Chicago, and currency by express may be sent at our risk. If it is not possible to send by either of the four ways named, money in a registered letter may be sent at our risk, but it is not as safe.

News of the Week.

—In regard to Secretary McCrary, the President has sent the Senate the following: "Doubts having arisen as to the propriety of appointing in advance of the actual vacancy to occur Sept. 1, 1879, a person to fill the office of judge of the circuit court of the United States for the eighth circuit, I hereby withdraw the nomination to that office of George McCrary of Iowa."

—Col. Granville H. Haller was dismissed from the army in 1862 for uttering treasonable sentiments, has been restored by act of Congress and order of the President and he is placed on the retired list with back pay as a Major until February, 1873, and as Colonel then to the present date. There is a great deal of indignation among officers of the army at this case. Last session Congress passed an act authorizing the President to order a board to inquire into the dismissal of Haller, and authorizing him also to adopt their recommendations.

—The camels taken to Arizona two years ago did not come up to expectations, and were turned loose to roam along the Gila Valley. This seems to have been the one thing needed to secure their welfare. They have thriven as though they had been in their native Africa; have bred liberally, and seem to have become domesticated to the region.

—It is said C. W. Field has made $4,000,000, and Samuel Tilden is said to have made $2,000,000 on the elevated roads. The two roads have combined in a new company, and the big stockholders are charged with swallowing up the little ones. Enormous pans have been placed under the elevated roads in some streets near stations to catch the cinders, oil and water which drops from the engines. It has been estimated that the two elevated roads have damaged property worth $100,000,000.

—The Hon. Edwin W. Stoughton, United States minister to Russia, now in this country, says the Nihilist troubles have been grossly exaggerated, and that nearly every material statement made about them is absolutely false. Many of the letters dated in Russia were not written in that country, and contained statements which he knew from personal knowledge to be false. He further declared that it was not true that the Russian people were deeply infected with Nihilism; it was not true that whole troops of students had been arrested by the police and sent off to Siberia or tortured in dungeons; it was not true that whole regiments of the army, with their officers, were tainted; and it was not true that any women of respectability had been found among the Nihilists. This is contrary to the spirit of the London dispatches.

—General Grant's party briefly visited Swatow, China, May 13; Amoy, May 14; and Foochow, May 15. The demonstrations were unimportant, owing to his short stay. He arrived at Shanghai on the United States ship Ashuelot, May 17, and was received on landing with unprecedented manifestations of greeting in the presence of the crowd, comprising almost the entire foreign community and great numbers of Chinese. An address was delivered on behalf of the citizens, to which Grant responded with what many regarded as of peculiar significance, saying he wished he had known ten years ago what he had lately learned, and that his experience in this part of the world would be of great interest and possibly of great use in the future.

—An explosion occurred at 5:30 Saturday morning at one of the mines on the land of Stephens & Smoyer, two miles from Emaus, Pa. The boiler burst with terriffic force, killing five men outright and and seriously wounding four others.

—A young French woman was swept over Niagria Falls last Saturday before the eyes of her husband, who was unable to render the least assistance, and through inability to speak any language but the French, could not for some time make known his terrible loss. The pair had been traveling around the world and were to embark for home this week. On taking a last view of the falls from Goat Island the woman stooped to dip a cup of water, lost her balance and was swept away to her fate.

—The Daily Sentinel, of Brenham, Texas, of June 11, gives a lengthy account of laying the corner-stone of a Methodist church in that place. Among the treasured articles placed in the copper box deposited under the corner stone was "a copy of the Holy Bible, Confederate bonds of the various denominations, and photographs of Jeff. Davis and the leading Confederate Generals, and a copy of 'The Sweet By and By,' with words and notes."

—Prince Napolean who went to South Africa last spring to learn the art of war in fighting the Zulus was killed June 1 by the natives.

AN OFFICIAL ACCOUNT, says the Prince, with Lieutenant Carey, of the Ninety-eight Regiment, six men and one friendly Zulu, left the camp at Kelitzi Mountains, seven miles beyond Blood River, on the 1st inst., for a reconnoissance. The party halted and unsaddled when ten miles from camp. Just as the Prince gave the order to remount, a volley was fired from an ambush in the long grass. Lieutenant Carey and four of the troopers returned to the camp and reported that the Prince and two troopers were missing. From their statements there could be no doubt that the Prince was killed. A party started out on the 3d inst. to recover the body of the Prince, which was found and brought in the same day. The body of the Prince when found, lay on its back. There were eighteen assegai stabs in it, two of them piercing the body from the chest to the back, two in the side, and one destroying the right eye. A locket with hair medallions and a reliquary were found around his neck. The face wore a placid expression. He had evidently ineffectually tried to mount his horse, and the leather of the flap tearing, he ran along the path to where he was found. Two troopers lay near the body, both assegated. The Prince was very adventurous.

—The French government has submitted to the Chambers a bill regulating the details of the return of the Chambers to Paris. It fixes the first meeting of the Legislature in Paris the 3d of November.

—A correspondent at Berlin reports that there were 1,730 conflagrations in Russia during the month of May, occasioning a loss of 7,000,000 roubles.

Those who wish to know the character of Freemasonry, as shown by its own publications, will find many standard works in the following list.

No sensible Mason dares deny that such men as Albert G. Mackey, the great Masonic Lexicographer, and Daniel Sickels, the Masonic author and publisher, are the highest Masonic authority in the United States.

All the books advertised here are used by Masons, but Duncan's Ritual, Allyn's Ritual and Richardson's Monitor, are not publicly acknowledged as Masonic authority, because they tell too much.

Notices.

NOTICE.—A prayer-meeting for the blessing of God upon the work of Christian reform is held on the second Tuesday evening of every month at the house of Mr. E. A. Cook, No. 100, Walton Place, in this city. All friends are invited next Tuesday.

Topics of the Time.

The Indian question has taken a new direction in Nebraska. The Poncas, a peaceful tribe of some seven hundred souls, occupied a reservation west of the Missouri river near Sioux City. They were living on their farms, working quietly and improving gradually in the arts of civilization. In 1877, they were visited by an agent, pretending to be sent by the President who ordered them to pack up and be off to the Indian territory. The Indians held in their hands a treaty made in 1865, giving them their lands which they had possessed for twelve years. They refused to leave their homes which they held by as good a deed as any Illinois farm. The agent and his posse insisted, threatened, raged: and finally actually drove these poor but Christian people from their homes into the poverty, inhospitality and malaria of the Indian territory, where in two years over a hundred and fifty of their number died. They left two hundred and thirty-six houses built by their own hands for a half dozen small government shanties; their thirty-five yoke of oxen died, and also 600 of their 700 horses. Two Omaha lawyers took their case into the courts where their rights were recognized. There is a movement to interest the public in this case and carry it through the Supreme Court, thus establishing the principle that the Indian is also a man, who may plead his rights with his fellows. A large meeting to promote this philanthropic purpose was held in Farwell Hall on Monday evening, which was addressed by gentlemen from Nebraska and others.

An outrage of similar character threatened to befall a little band of industrious Indians, the Santees, located in the same part of Nebraska. Bishop Hare has called public attention to the fact that the Nebraska legislature has voted to recommend the removal of these Indians by Congress, and a bill for this purpose has been presented at Washington. The exposure of this outrageous plundering of the poor and defenceless will defeat the scheme by arousing the public to condemn it. Beside the instincts of humanity which revolt at such monstrous crimes, those of self-preservation compel us to cry out against them. Though he waited long, God heard at last the cry of the slave and our nation too late repented the long years of oppression. We cannot forget that the Almighty will demand restitution of this nation for the wrongs, the frauds, the butcheries of the Indians, will visit us for them. Let there be no more added to the arrears of robbery and blood.

The Khedive of Egypt is not so fortunate as the obdurate bankrupts of our country. He sent home the English and French agents sent to take charge of his affairs, but now finds himself compelled to abdicate by a note written at Constantinople but dictated at London and Paris. Ismail Pasha was educated at the latter city, and in 1863 took up the work of civilizing Egypt. Ten years later he became virtually independent of the Porte. He has exhibited great enterprise in public improvements, manufacturing enterprises and military expeditions by means of which the slave trade has been broken up on the upper Nile. His son succeeds him under circumstances that indicate that the nation is strictly under foreign control.

Little has been heard about the colored exodus for several weeks, but there is yet a steady stream from the South into Kansas. Over a hundred arrived in that State on Tuesday last and over two hundred during the previous week. Governor St. John writes that the State Association is in need of help. Wendell Phillips in an address in Boston last week urges with all his old zeal and eloquence that steamboats be sent down the Mississippi to help the blacks on to freedom. Southern planters have petitioned the North to drop the business, but it will not cease until some guaranty can be given every citizen that he will not be robbed of his natural and civil rights.

As we go to press Congress is in a state of serious indecision. Since the veto of the judicial bill last week Monday the former caucus tactics have been in full play. The majority finally voted the bill without the objectional clause choking off the marshals of elections, but in its place drew up a separate bill, making an appropriation of $600,000 for these officers, but with such restrictious that President Hayes and his advisers regarded it as no better than the first proposition. His veto was therefore sent in Monday. The President says, "The object, manifestly, is to place before the Executive this alternative, either to allow necessary functions of the public service to be crippled or suspended for want of appropriations required to keep them in operation, or to approve legislation, which, in official communications to Congress, he he has declared would be a violation of his constitutional duty." The House had already voted to adjourn at 5 o'clock Monday but as the hour approached it was evident that the Republicans of the Senate would not agree to an adjournment before Tuesday. If this shall be done the country will breathe freer, and will let the "responsibility" of marshals' fees over which there is so much political pother, take care of itself.

Josiah Shaw, Eau Claire, Wis., writes: "The Cynosure is doing a good work in the reading-room, and we have two of Ronayne's books in the right place. We need lectures here, but are not able to have them. Mr. Hammond and I are doing what we can in the full faith of a final triumph."

THEY THAT SIT IN MOSES' SEAT.

BY REV. J. J. HAYDEN.

Keep it before the people:

That ministers of the Gospel are chargeable, and reghtly so, with much of the success of the secret workings of the Prince of Darkness. In all ages of the church the professed leaders of God's people have been first in leading them astray; and the ministers of our day are not an exception. Very many of them are united in secrecy with the enemies of Christ, but openly profess to be his ministers. The Apostle Paul says, "Now, then, we are embassadors for Christ." Does Christ send them into the lodge, where they are not allowed to say anything in his name, notwithstanding he commands them that whatever they say or do, do all in his name? Can any man unite with the workers of darkness in the name or by the authority of Christ? Ministers who unite with those who will not come to the light, but lie in wait to deceive, have disobeyed the Lord Jesus, and excluded themselves from taking any acceptable part in his service, for the word of God has declared, "Ye cannot serve two masters." Ye cannot serve Christ in the church and anti-Christ in the lodge, or devil's church; and yet there are, it is to be lamented, thousands of those ministers who ignore the teaching of Christ, who is the true light, and run headlong into the service of the wicked one, and still want to lead the flock of Christ. Surely the god of the lodge hath "blinded their minds," lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ should shine unto them. "My sheep," says the great Shepherd, "hear my voice and follow me; a stranger they will not follow, for they know not the voice of strangers."

The question here arises, Can Christians employ and support such ministers, and not be partakers of their sins? I see no way of escape. If Christians fellowship a horse-thief, knowing him to be such, are they not guilty of theft? Or if he be an idolater in the lodge, and they are aware of the fact, and suffer him to preach to them, are not they guilty of idolatry? And any church, or conference, holding such in fellowship, is necessarily idolatrous; and unless they bind such over, or withdraw from them, they are responsible for not coming out from among them, and must fall into the same ditch along with them. May the good Lord open all our eyes by the Gospel light, and the Holy Spirit direct us all into the way of life everlasting.

A Double Life.

To live two lives in one period of existence is perhaps an advantage. The Christian, for instance, may be said to have two lives, a temporal one and a heavenly one. His object is always to make his temporal life correspond, as far as possible, with his heavenly, or spiritual life.

As Freemasonry pretends to be a great deal better than Christianity, it, too, must have a double life.

An officer of the army lately put this double life in practice in a most remarkable manner. He had a wife and family in Scotland to which he wrote kind, fatherly letters; and he also had a wife in this country, of whom he appeared to be a loving, respectful husband.

In order to maintain this great Masonic advantage of having two families, one in the United States army and one at the lodge of the ancient Scottish rite, 33d degree, he resorted to another Masonic trick. He forged his own resignation from the army, so as to make it appear that he was out of the army, when in fact he was really in it; so that he was playing the double part of civilian and of a United States army officer at one and the same time. He also derived a supposed advantage from assuming two different names. In short, he gave every external evidence of being a sublime, perfect and select Mason, who may take one sacrament in honor of Christ and another in derision of him.

But there happened to be no help for the widow's son in this case. He was, perhaps, buried less than six feet perpendicular; or there was too little rubbish over him. Everybody, as well as Masons, could plainly see where he was buried, without the aid of the acacia bush, and could smell the rottenness. If the bad odor could have been kept confined, like the point within the Masonic circle; or if it could have been circumscribed by an ordinary pair of compasses, or covered with the apron, which means innocence, all might have been made to appear well. But as it was, the mighty Master Mason's lion-like grip proved powerless to save. Not even the Masonic minister could have saved him from being hung by his own cable-tow; and so this double-lived, doubly honorable man had to leave the service.

There may be double lived men outside of the lodge as well as in it. We have no positive knowledge that our duplex here was a Mason, any more than we have that the Christian religion is true. But his late career has furnished a perfect practical illustration of the teachings of Freemasonry. The institution teaches men that they may play obscure, infidel farces in secret, and at the same time keep up a smooth, bland, serene Christian face in public. Our hero if a Mason, was no more blamable than all other Masons are. He merely practised their teachings. It was his misfortune to get caught in his knavery, not a Masonic wrong.

But the question ought to be seriously asked by every American citizen—Are there any more such officers in the army of the United States? Are there any more men there who lead double lives, and, while serving the government openly, are worshiping the lost cause in secret? Are the articles of war of such wide private interpretation that an officer of the U. S. Army can be an honorable man, and also be at the same time a Communist, Socialist, International, Nihilist, Ku-klux, Mormon, or Freemason?

We who are engaged in the Anti-masonic reform, have undertaken a great work. We must begin at the bottom, and deal just with the clergy, the army, and the press, before we can properly bring our views before the people. The question now before the country should not be whether the army should be paid if used at the polls, but whether it should be kept on foot at all, if the officers have sworn alliance to that foreign institution, the Masonic lodge. And the only question that the reformer can ask himself with regard to the clergy and the press is, whether he, as an honest American man, can pay one cent toward the support of a preacher or a newspaper that does not exert a positive influence toward the suppression of Freemasonry. The newspaper that does not give its columns that direction, hushing its voice from selfishness, or timidity, or craft, is proving utterly reckless of its assured duties of maintaining popular liberty, and should be left to draw its support only from the institution which it serves. However great a swell it may make, its management is too small, too paltry to serve any purpose worthy of being called AMERICAN.

Are Trade Unions a Nursery of Socialism?

When once we are convinced that natural wages and natural profits may exist together, we have passed through what I call the see-saw swamp in political economy, and on the firm land beyond the marsh, most of the questions concerning hours of labor, co-operation and industrial partnership, adjust themselves without State interference.

It is hardly more than fifty years since the first fully endowed professorships in political economy were founded in England. The history of the science dates in Great Britian, as every one knows, from the publication of Adam Smith's "Wealth of Nations" in 1776.

Young as it is, the philosophy of political science, as treated in the Universities, has seen two or three revolutions. There are three or four schools of political economy; and it happens that the best American and German schools are agreed in denouncing what I have here called the see-saw theory, and that only the older school in Great Britian supports it. The younger British schools, represented now by Bonamy Price, Professor Cairnes and Professor Jevons, do not adopt the dismal theory that the relations of capital and labor are a see-saw, and that what one gains the other must lose, and that the two must, therefore, live in an internecine war. These teachers reject the theory of a wages fund.

I congratulate this audience that it has passed through the ooze of early crudities in political science, and has found firm land on the other side. As we look back, however, we see trade unions up to their knees in the fateful see-saw marsh. Trade unions are most of them built on the fallacious theory that capital and labor, must of necessity be at eternal war, because they draw their reward from the same fund.

1. This is the creed of most Trade Unionists:

(1.) Capital and labor are in direct antagonism, because they divide the wages fund between them, and what one gains the other loses.

(2.) Capitalists can combine and enforce lower wages than the state of the labor market warrants, and they often do so.

(3.) Laborers, therefore, must combine and resist coercion by coercion.

(4.) Trade unions throughout a nation should assist each other by organizing contemporaneous strikes, or by assisting strikers to maintain themselves when not at work.

(5.) Trade unions should act as benefit societies.

(6) Trade unions must lay down and abide by certain economic principles, the chief of which are:—

Limitation of the length of the day's work.

Abolition of working by the piece.

Limitation of apprentices.

A uniform wage to be given to all laborers.

Refusal to work with non-unionists.

2. It thus appears that trades unions are founded on the mistaken principles of an outgrown school in political economy; that is on the theory that the relations of capital and labor are a see-saw.

3. This line needs eradication from the minds of trades unionists as well as capitalists.

4. Trades unions are mischievous so far as they tyranize over employers and non-unionist workingmen.

5. They are useful so far as they inspirit laborers to self-help and take the shape of benefit societies.

6. Trades unions are now nearly omnipresent in England and the United States in all the great branches of industry.

7. They tend to become national.

8. They tend to become international.

9. They tend, under universal suffrage, to become political.

10. Many objects of trades unions are identical with the objects sought by socialistic political parties.

11. When the members of trades unions and the members of socialistic political parties have the same political objects, their political alliance is natural.

12. Under universal suffrage, it is likely to become formidable.

Among the trades unions in England and Wales there are 32,000 friendly societies, with 4,000,000 members and more than $55,000,000 accumulated funds. These societies save to the poor fund $10,000,000 a year.

Nobody, in America at least, pretends to complain when workingmen combine for the fair and just protection of their own interests. Capitalists may combine to protect their own interests, and so, of course, may workingmen.

The notorious evil in trades unions, however, is the tyranny frequently exercised by their members over non-unionist workingmen. In Leeds the rule is that you must not carry more than eight bricks in a hod. You carry ten in London and twelve in Liverpool. If trades unions wish to bring themselves into universal contempt, let them go on legislating against thir fellow-workingmen who are non-unionists. Some years ago a cartoon in Punch represented a British workingman in his hovel, without work, during a strike, and his wife cowering over an empty grate, while a well-dressed officer of a working-men's trade union wasb erating the husband for his intention to go to work: "You mean to work, do you? You mean to give in, do you? Not if I know it." A New York citizen, who wanted papering done in his house, ordered it of a society man, as he was called, and the bill brought in was ten dollars a day. "Well, but your work is not worth this," said the employer. "Yes, but you cannot get anybody to do it for less. I belong to a trades union, and we have all agreed to ask a certain price. You will find on investigation that I am asking you what any one else will." This case of shameless extortion is typical of the whole ranges of facts that I might put before you. While I denounce these evils of trades unions, however, I must not be understood as denying the right of workmen to combine.

May working-men combine in a strike? That is a very rude measure and usually does more harm than good, but it is the chief weapon of trades unions. You say that strikes do not generally succeed; but make a distinction. On a rising market strikes often succeed; on a falling they usually fail. Half the time working men do not know when to strike. If the prices of goods are rising and working men strike, manufacturers, of course, cannot afford to shut their mills. But if men strike on a falling market, capital can fold its arms and say, "We can make more money by shutting our mills than to keep them open," and sometimes profitably answer the strike by a lock-out. Capital does not starve by waiting. Time unsold cannot be brought to market a second time. It perishes in postponement. Strikes have probably succeeded in the majority of cases on a rising market, and yet they are most barbaric of all the weapons that labor employs.

Are trades unions a nursery of socialism?

Go to Chicago, go to the door of Tremont Temple, and you may purchase socialistic newspapers of a type of which this is a specimen, [holding up a newspaper.] In this official socialistic sheet nearly half a page is taken up with a trade union directory—"Amalgamated Carpenters and Joiners," "Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers," "Miners' National Association," "Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen;" these are a few out of scores of titles reprinted every week in this sheet.

I turn to the official announcement of the object of the paper and find that: "The Socialist will record the proceedings of all trades unions, especially the Amalgamated and Centralized Unions whenever sent us. We shall discuss all the various phases of the labor movement. We expect all Unions and sections, as well as individual members throughout the country, to promptly sends us reports and items upon all matters of importance to the labor cause."

What is the socialistic platform? In this country it is somewhat altered in shape from the form it has in the old world; but here is the platform this paper prints in connection with these lists of trades unions: "We demand that the resources of life—the means of production, public transportation and communication—(land, machinery, railroads, telegraph lines, canals, etc.)—become, as fast as practicable, the common property of the whole people through the government, thus to abolish the wages system and substitute in its stead co-operative production, with a just distribution of its rewards."

Why have I insisted so on education for workingmen? Why have I insisted, as if on a question of life or death, on the rights of factory children? Why have I been taking your time by giving reasons for the execution of the school laws which provide for compulsory education? Because if trades unions are filled with an ignorant set of workingmen, socialistic doctrines will take root in that soil. The results of socialism in the United States, were it to spread here, would be more disastrous than in Germany, simply because popular suffrage on the Hudson and the Mississippi has more power than on the Elbe and the Oder. The truth is that trades unions all over the United States are seeking political power, and are therefore likely to be frequently under temptation to form alliance with socialistic labor parties.

The Sermon.

Baccalaureate Sermon preached by Pres. J. Blanchard at Wheaton College, June 15, 1879.

For Godliness is profitable unto all things; having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come.—1 Tim. iv. 8.

There is a question once put by wicked men to saints which is as old as written language: "What is the Almighty that we should serve him? and what profit should we have if we pray unto him?" (Job xxi. 15.) The text replies to this question, that "Godliness is profitable" for this world and the next. Yet of all the Christian paradoxes this would seem to be the chief.

The very apostle who wrote the text to Timothy informs us that he had "profited in the Jews' religion above his equals." (Gal. i. 14.) In intellect he towered above them; as a Hebrew he belonged to a people chosen of God; as a Roman citizen he ranked with the world's conquerors; and while yet a "young man" his zeal and eloquence had made him so prominent that in the public execution of Stephen by the judiciary and the mob, the witnesses laid their garments at his feet: and as no power is so intoxicating, and no homage so coveted as that conceded to priests, Paul was near the summit to which human ambition aspires. For, if less exalted than kings and conquerors, he had more to satisfy the natural cravings of the human heart, with less danger of losing it than they.

After he became a Christian he thus strikes the balance sheet and reckons up his profits by the exchange: "Of the Jews, five times received I forty stripes save one. Thrice was I beaten with rods; once was I stoned; thrice I suffered shipwreck; a night and a day have I been in the deep; in journeyings often, in perils of waters, in perils of robbers, in perils by mine own countrymen, in perils by the heathen, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness, in perils in the sea, in perils among false brethren; in weariness and painfulness, in watchings often, in hunger and thirst, in fastings often, in cold and nakedness, beside that which cometh upon me daily." This is but a partial inventory of the sufferings for which he exchanged ease, luxury, abundance, aristocracy of intellect, aristocracy of religion, and aristocracy of wealth and power.

And in the face of this fearful catalogue of his experiences given by himself, and in near prospect of the death he was soon to suffer, he calmly avers: "Godliness is profitable; having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come." What real meaning, consistent with truth, can possibly attach to these wonderful words of this wonderful man? Let us see.

Happiness in this world depends but slightly on condition. Outward circumstances however propitious cannot always give joy to the heart. Beds of roses are neither soft nor sweet if there are serpents in them; and the familiar saying of Shakespeare has often been verified: "Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown." On the contrary, in the most painful and revolting surroundings the bosom may be swelling with joy. The mariner on the cliff may be famished and wet and cold, but if his wife and child are brought off safe from the sinking wreck from which he himself has just escaped with his life, in the thrill of his ecstacy he heeds neither hunger nor the howling tempest. So ungodliness may be pining in palaces, and godliness be "profitable" in a cottage, in prison, or at the stake.

The word "godliness" is a translation from a compound Greek word (eusebia), which means "one who worships well;" or, generally, a devout and pious person. The terms "godly" and "worldly" have analogies, but have different subjects. The godly man loves God; the worldly man, the world; and alliance with the eternal and infinite God must, of course, be profitable. In theory, the case is clear. But the practical difficulty lies in the question put by Pharaoh to Moses: "Who is the Lord?" and what is godliness, or conformity to his will?

These questions seem likely to be solved by the progress of events. Steam and electricity have, already, nearly empanneled our race upon the issue: "Which is the true religion?" and when, as must soon be the case, a single excursion ticket will take a California passenger out on one side of our globe and bring him back over the other side, then the panel will be complete. The various religions of the earth will then lie, side by side, under that traveler's eye; idolaters, however stupid, will soon learn to reject unprofitable gods; and Pharaoh's question, "Who is the Lord?" will be answered, if on no other basis, on the ground of profit and loss. While the price of land on the slave side of the Ohio River was only one-third or one-half the price of land on the free side, that fact alone carried the verdict of men against human bondage. The eloquent Corwin said: "The soil turns pale wherever the slave sets down his foot." And idolatry is as much more degrading and impoverishing to the masses, and morally as much worse than slavery, as eternity is longer than time. Slavery dishumanized man; but idolatry undeifies God, and deteriorates and ultimately destroys all his rational creatures who are included within its spell. The travel of our globe, like a moving panorama of its surface, will soon present to the nations one continuous proof of the proposition, that "godliness is profitable having promise of the life that now is."

When Moses left the splendors of an Egyptian court "to suffer affliction with the people of God," as a hated and hunted fugitive and menial, on "the back side of a desert," his profit by the exchange did not immediately appear. But when, after a stupenduous worldly career and a hidden burial by the hand of God to prevent popular idolatry of his bones, ages having elapsed, he stood with Christ and Elias on the mount of transfiguration, his beloved country spread out beneath his feet, the glories of earth and heaven blending above his head, and he called into counsel with the eternal Son of God; then, in that sublime mingling of two worlds, eternity with time, it appeared that his godliness was "profitable, and that it had the promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come."

Man's ideas of godliness must vary with their ideas of God: and as none but degrading conceptions of the Most High are found outside of the the Christian Scriptures, Christian godliness alone is profitable to men. The supreme being worshiped by Cicero, Seneca and the Greeks, was Jupiter. They regarded him as "king and father of gods and men." "Everything was subservient to will," and everything known to him past, present and to come. But he was pictured at Crete without ears, to insure impartiality by deafness; and and at Lacedemon his statue had by a contradiction common in false religions, four heads, for convenience in hearing a multitude of prayers; and his character every where was replete with the most degrading and disgusting vices.

Under the weight of such ideas of God and religion, the minds and bodies of the Romans went down together; and Bancroft tells us that when the Christian religion made its way through the oppressed classes, "domestic life had almost ceased to exist" through the universal lewdness. The same writer adds, "It is a calumny to charge the devastation of Italy on the barbarians. The Romans themselves ruined it." "The picture of Roman immorality is too gross to be exhibited." (Ban. Mis., p. 313.)

Contrast with this foul picture the view of God given by himself to Moses. From the unconsuming flame in the desert, he proclaimed himself as "The existing one," "I am that I am:" with no visible representation or shape which idolatry could copy or counterfeit. In the opening drama of creation he appears only by the light and worlds which he created by his word. And when he gave his law at Sinai, a law ever since in the moral world like gravitation in the natural, he descends to the mountain summit in a cloud and proclaims himself, "The Lord, the Lord God, merciful and gracious, long suffering and abundant in goodness and truth; keeping mercy for the thousands; forgiving iniquity and transgression, and sin; and that will by no means clear the guilty." And when, ages afterward, visible idol-worship had ceased, and he grants to John in Patmos, a symbol of his "likeness" as "the Son of Man," "his head and his hairs are white; his eyes as a flame of fire; his feet as fine brass burning in a furnace; and his voice as the sound of many waters." All the presentations which God makes of himself in the Scrintures, which were fifteen centuries in the writing, are alike, without exception, simple and sublime and holy and august.

But if we turn from the misshapen caricatures, beasts and reptiles which Satan has set millions to worship, that he may take a devil's satisfaction in the degredation of creatures whom God loved, and for whom Christ died; if, passing by these mockeries of worship, we take up books of imposture which their authors have copied in part from the Bible, the same degradation of God everywhere appears.

Take the following from the Koran of Mohammed: "Verily God is grateful and knowing. They who conceal any of the evident signs, or the direction which we have sent down after what we have manifested to men in the Scripture, God shall curse them, and they who curse shall curse them." * * "Your God is one God; there is no God but he the most merciful." (Sales's Koran, 1: 211.) Thus, everywhere throughout this false book, every attribute befitting the infinite God is taken from the Bible, and all else is stupidity and imposture.

So of the Book of Mormon which resembles the Koran in style and matter. On page 72, 3rd edition, God is introduced as saying: "For behold I am God; and I am the God of miracles; and I will show unto the world that I am the same yesterday, to-day and forever; and I work not among the children of men, save it be according to their faith." Thus every idea of God presented in this Mormon book is stupid caricature of Bible language, or vulgar and weak imposition.

The old mythologies, Jupiter, Mars, Bacchus, Venus and the rest, are already obsolete; and when diffusion of knowledge among the masses shall place the books of true and false religion side by side; and when travel, observation, and national intercourse and expositions shall spread out the religious systems of our globe together as in a map under the public eye, religious errors will lose their fascination for all but their dupes, by the relative meanness of their results and idolatry fall before Christianity as Dagon before the ark. The world's verdict will be, "Godliness is profitable."

Wm. Lloyd Garrison is dead. The last decade of his stormy life has glided away in tranquility and honor. He was put in a Baltimore jail for publishing the truth against slavery; and afterward hurried into a Boston jail to save his life from a mob who would have murdered him for similar utterances. His principles have triumphed. He closed his eyes amid the religious songs of his children, and millions do him reverence. Though he had great errors and defects, he had this grand element of godliness. In the words of the old Covenanters, he "stood up for a suffering truth." He accepted issues when God made them. He did not cringingly profess truth already established, and forsake assailed truth. He stood for Christ in "the least of his brethren;" and this is the pivot on which human salvation turns. His earthly reversion has been as wonderful as that of the patriarch of the land of Uz. His poverty turned to competence, and his persecution and popular odium into eulogy. And the change has all been in others, not in himself. Surely no advocate of unpopular truth need despair. For no man, perhaps, since Cromwell, has been hated as was Garrison.

And godliness is as profitable to nations as to men. The men whose ideas now lead the nations which lead the world, were, three centuries ago, in pillories, in prisons, on the scaffold and at the stake. The Covenanters of Scotland asserted Christ's sole headship in his church. They were hunted by the dragoons of prelacy to their mountain holds, and shot from their knees while at prayer. To-day their doctrine is believed in Europe, and practiced in the United States. The Puritans too came from pillories and prisons across the sea, and founded churches without bishops, and states without kings, and Mexico, France and Spain, even, have since attempted to copy their republic. The Huguenots of France, the Lutherans of Germany, and before them the Hussites of Bohemia and Waldenses of Italy were the Covenanters and Puritans of the continent. They were all the same sort of people; and entitled if any are to the designation "godly." There is a belt of country a few leagues wide, running westward from Bohemia along the south of Europe, which has done the thinking and made the books for mankind. And precisely this belt of nations is now governed by the ideas for holding which those people were hunted and slain like wild beasts.

The Waldenses have inhabited the Italian Alps above six centuries, and have endured thirty-three of the bloodiest persecutions on record. One of these (1665) called forth Milton's immortal sonnet beginning:

"Avenge, O Lord! thy slaughtered saints, whose bones Lie scattered on the Alpine mountains cold."

The Puritan Cromwell, whose secretary Milton then was, wrote to the Pope that the persecution of the Waldneses must stop or he would lay the principal Roman port, Civita Vecchia, in ashes; and the perescution ceased. The followers of Huss, though but a mere handful, fought the whole German empire seventy years after their leader was burned. "They," like the English Puritans, "acknowledge no doctrine which was not given by the text of the Scripture." This is now the doctrine of Protestant Christendom. Their religious and political freedom was solemnly confirmed by the treaty of Iglau (1485) a few years prior to the Lutheran reformation. Thus adown the ages godliness has enlightened conscience; conscience has defied persecution; and the fires of persecution have enlightened mankind and brought in Christian civilization with all its blessings. Surely godliness is profitable for the life that now is.

But, one asks, how has their godliness profited in this life the millions Paul included, who died in its defence? The answer is, that if happiness be rational, the martyrs are happier than the men who burned them, even in this life; and the lives of the godly are longer than the lives of the wicked. But we must not, and cannot if we would, separate this life from the next, because the two are one; and, therefore those who have suffered scorn and unpopularity, and lived in persecution, and died perhaps in prison or in flames, only endured what Paul called "light afflictions which are but a moment," then their perfect and perpetual happiness begins. Nor is it to be forgotten, that, in that life "to come," men do not lose their interest or happiness in this. Moses and Elias, who "suffered affliction" in this life, have, doubtless, shared the "joy" of the angels in the earthly triumphs of the truth for which they suffered here, ever since their departure. In their skyey habitation they certainly shared the sufferings of Christ while on earth; they doubtless still share his administration of his kingdom and rejoice in its successes here, now that they are with him in bliss. Parents have more enjoyment in the virtue and happiness of their children after those children are gone out of their sight, than while they were with them at home. So the godly still share the life that now is, after they are entered in "that life which is to come."

Suppose Paul now among that "cloud of witnesses" which he once saw beholding as here. In the midst of idolatries, and intemperance, and Sabbath breaking, and sins and errors—all roused and writhing in the death struggles of the world-serpent, whose wrath grows hotter as his time grows short—think of the comforting changes which the Apostle now sees, since he wrote our text to Timothy. Nero, and Caligala and Domitian, exchanged for Lincoln and Grant and Haye;s the monarch monsters, the Pharoahs, who hunted his Hebrew ancestors, buried, and their ashes and memories blown away and lost; and Egypt itself mortgaged to London bankers, whose prime minister represents, as Paul did, both Moses and Christ, being both circumcized and baptized. Moab, and Edom, and Philistia, those dreaded enemies of God's people, have lost their places on the maps; and for the terrible Syrian and Babylonian despots there are the gentle Victoria and the pious Emperor William; the seven headed beast gone a begging, and Bismark pointing at united Italy and the Bible societies in the city of Rome, and remarking, significantly, "Our Emperor no more goes to Canossa."

But, leaving crowns and dynasties, let us come nearer to the masses. What changes does Paul behold here? He sees that law of persecution which he himself once practiced and suffered from now obsolete and disavowed. He sees two-thirds of the globe governed by laws and rulers which confess Christ, whom he did not know till he met him on his journey of persecution to Damascus, and the lethargic non-Christian nations were pawns to keep the balance of power among the rest. He has seen reform after reform pass like waves over life's agitated sea. He has seen the craft of the priest failing; secret idolatries dragged out into light; bigotry, and sect, and caste vanishing; and woman, no longer trembling under the law and custom of divorce at will, seated at her husband's side in indissoluble wedlock, the recognized queen of his home. He has seen that "temperance" for which he reasoned before Felix casting back the scorn of its contemners, and, at the word of a woman, made the law of the banquet in the only palace which Americans know.

And amid these joyous spectacles he has heard the rattle of the snake on the slavery flag die away into the dens of the Kuklux, and the hiss of his copperhead cousin drowned in the clank of broken fetters; and he has seen our own stars and stripes washed by patriot blood from hypocrisy and oppression; our free eagle no longer ashamed to show his head among the stars, and bands of blood and blue, the price of liberty and its uniform, binding our nation together around our declaration, that "God created men free."

And when the apostle looks for that cross which he helped set on the hill tops of Judea to nail Christians to, behold! he sees it transferred to the "Meteor flag of England," gracefully waving, a beacon light and warning to every tribe, and nation, and people; a painted proclamation of his own great utterances, that "godliness is profitable;" and lo! our own flag with answering grace and beauty, mother and daughter blending in national unity and Christian faith; their laws no longer deformed by slave codes, or their national anthems jarred by wails and shrieks and the shouts of the auctioneers of men, their bands in full harmonious chorus now

"Proclaim that all around are free
From farthest Ind to each blue crag
Which beetles o'er the western sea."

These, these all are tokens and proof that "godliness is profitable," and if there be "joy among the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth," those angels and the saints who are their companions in glory must surely share the exultation at these presages and precursors of the redemption of the world to Christ.

Reform News.

For Ohio Friends.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Permit me to say to the friends in Ohio, that the committee authorized to employ a State agent and lecturer, would have had one in the field some time ago but for the severe and long-continued sickness of Bro. Kemp of Dayton, who had consented to act as agent.

While Ohio has many able lecturers who can be secured by special arrangement in any community, the committee still feel the need of a State agent, whose business it is to go when called; believing that the people would feel a freeness to ask for the services of the agent of the State Association, which they would not feel towards others, and that places can be reached which would not otherwise be. They have therefore arranged with the Rev. George Richey, Pataskala, Licking county, to act as agent and answer all calls for lectures.

Any community desiring lectures will write Bro. Richey, and where able we hope will give him a reasonable compensation, but if unable to pay what you think a lecturer would expect, and for this reasou have not heretofore asked for them, you are invited to ask, if willing to pay the traveling expenses incurred in serving you; as arrangements have been made with the agent for visiting places unable to pay more than actual expenses.

I am at work for our next State meeting. I want every friend, and especially the agent, at work. Call him where needed; and with your help and the sssistance of the old and tried friends of the reform, we believe heaven will smile upon us, and our meeting prove a blessing to ourselves and the community where it shall be held.

JOSEPH M. SCOTT,
Alexandria, Ohio.

The State Meetings.

Having been continued by the N. C. A. annual meeting in the position of Secretary and General Agent, I desire to say that I expect to attend all the State gatherings where my presence and assistance is desired, so far as I am able.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEES OF STATES.

1. It is the duty of these committees to fix the time and place of State meetings, where this has not already been done. These committees should attend to their duties at once, as there is no time for delay.

2. They should secure two or more effective speakers who understand the reform and how to present it.

3. The committee should procure a sufficient number of notices, with time and place of meeting and names of speakers, and an invitation to all interested to attend, and have them ready at least one month before the convention is held. Word should then be given through the Cynosure, Wesleyan, Telescope, and other papers that will print on this subject, that notices are ready for all who will send for them.

4. This committee should arrange the outline of a business programme and make the best possible arrangements about procuring a State Lecturer and carrying on the State work for the year.

FRIENDS IN THE DIFFERENT STATES should, 1. Divide up their town or city in which they live into districts, assigning a man or woman to such territory as he or she is able to canvass.

2. Some one should send to the State Executive Committee for as many notices as are required on the territory which he has specially in charge, and to 221 West Madison street, Chicago, for a supply of tracts. Each order for bills and tracts should contain money or stamps for return postage. When received, take a notice and one or more tracts and fold them together and leave one at every house in the district. This will be economical and effective mission work, and do very much good in itself.

3. Secure the announcement of your meeting from as many pulpits as possible, and the insertion of a notice where you can in local papers, about two weeks before the meeting occurs.

Attend the annual meeting in person where you can, and go not to have a good time and listen to speeches, etc., simply, but to work for Jesus. Go as the patriotic soldier went into the fight, to suffer and starve and die, if need be, for home, for freedom, and for the Bride of Christ, the hope of the world.

If impossible to attend, send a contribution, if only a postage stamp, to your State Treasurer, to aid in defraying expenses of the convention and toward procuring a State Lecturer for the coming year.

4th. In church communities where there are those specially interested there should be prayer and conference meetings with this special object in view. "This kind cometh not out but by prayer and fasting." Next week I shall have a word to say to the ministers, but in this I wish expressly to stir up executive committees and the people to cooperate with them. Bros. Collins, Barlow and Britten of Wisconsin, are industriously at work. Col. J. M. Scott and his associates in Ohio are moving vigorously. Bro. Kimball of New Hampshire is always pushing the battle and routing the enemy. Bro. Hinman in behalf of many friends sends a hearty greeting from Vermont; and now let us hear from others. Will Bro. Paine of Minnesota, Bro. Austin of Nebraska, Bro. Milligan of Kansas, Bro. Needles of Missouri, and all other members of executive committees and working friends throughout the States report to me for enrollment in the list of honor. Let us show our faith, brethren, by our works and God will give victory to the right. Don't wait until the last day in the afternoon, but let the campaign be arranged and the forces equipped before the lecture season opens. J. P. STODDARD.

AMONG THE MOUNTAINS.

CENTER STRAFFORD, N. H., June 21, 1879.

DEAR BRO. KELLOGG:—I have just completed thirty-five days' work in Vermont. I left there yesterday and reached here to-day. I preached three times in that State and gave twenty-two lectures. I received in collections and contributions $52.35. I have paid out in traveling expenses in the State $21.50; other expenses $2.00: net proceeds, say $30.00. Friends in Vermont will see how much I have received, remembering that it cost nearly $30.00 to reach their State. The meetings in Vermont have generally been well attended, and much interest has been awakened in the reform.

At Lincoln I spoke two nights, June 16 and 17, both of which were dark and rainy, and yet the attendance was quite good. From there I passed over the side of Mount Abraham, the third in height of the Green mountain peaks. This mountain is 3,350 feet high, and the road over which we passed is 2,000 feet above the sea level. Near the top was a rude log cabin, the home of two families, and in the small clearing a man planting potatoes among the roots and stones. He will doubtless have a fine harvest of pure air and cold spring water. From the top of the mountain there is a fine view of the Adriondacks and Lake Champlain on the west, and the White Mountains on the east. Our descent on the east side was smooth and rapid, and nestling among the hills was the beautiful little village of Warren. Two and a half miles farther is Warren's Corners, and a Wesleyan church under the care of pastor Whiting. There on very short notice some hundred and fifty intelligent people assembled and listened attentively to a lecture of nearly two hours.

I had fully resolved to start the next morning for New Hampshire, but at the urgent solicitation of some brethren, and some Masons, I agreed to go back to Warren village and lecture. Accordingly, on the evening of the 19th I spoke in the M. E. church to a full house. Good attention was paid, and the Masons, who were well represented, made it the occasion of an attack on the church and the ministry, which took up a third hour of our meeting, but did not answer the arguments that had been presented.

On Friday, the 19th, I rode over another range, not quite so high, but giving a fine view of both the Green and White mountain ranges. On the east side I reached Roxbury, where the Vermont Central railroad passes over the summit between Lake Champlain and the Connecticut river; from thence to Concord, N. H., thence to Pittsfield, and thence by stage to this place, where I received a very kind reception from Bro. Kimball, who has a programme of two weeks' work laid out, and arrangements to carry me to my appointments.

Yours for the Lord,

THE TWO ELDERS IN NORTHWESTERN ILLINOIS.

DEAR FRIENDS:—Leaving Milledgeville Bro. Rathbun and I accompanied by Bro. Mitchell and Mr. Corning, went to Mt. Carroll. When the degrees were worked in Lanark some time ago, Mt. Carroll Masons hooted at Lanark Masons for allowing such a thing! So when it was known that Eld. Rathbun was to work the degrees in Mt. Carroll, Eld. Bender asked the "Mystic Brethren" if they were going to allow us to do as advertised. "Well, yes," the reply was, "we have concluded to allow you to go on." How thankful we ought to be that the lodge allows us to eat three meals a day, or to venture out doors alone!

At Mt. Carroll we met Eld. Williams, of Warren; Bro. Breed, of Avery, Jo Davies Co.; and Eld. R. L. Chitty, from Shannon. We were kindly entertained by Bros. Bender, Crummer, Johnson, and Maberly. The meeting on Friday evening, May 23, was well attended, and a fair audience on Saturday evening also, especially when it is remembered that the lodges did all they could to keep people away. On both evenings I lectured briefly as usual, followed by Bro. Rathbun in working the degree. While witnessing the sublime tragedy of Hiram Abiff on Saturday evening the audience were quite enthusiastic, loudly applauding Bro. Rathbun, who worked the degree splendidly. The setting maul in the hands of that "vile and impious wretch," Jubelum, brings Hiram "from a living perpendicular to a dead level" in first-class style, the audience applauding. Bro. R. tells the Masons present, "You never saw it done better in the lodge." Let me say right here that Bro. R. rejoices in the possession of a new setting-maul and hoodwink, bought of a a Masonic furnishing house and given to him at Milledgeville by Eld. P. Hurless of Polo. As the dead body of Hiram lies stretched on the floor wrapped in the canvass, Bro. R. says to the audience: "There lies your preacher—there lies your county clerk," and what a shout goes up. (E. T. E. Becker, then candidate for the office of county clerk in Carroll county, is a member of the Masonic lodge in Mt. Carroll.) The body is now "buried in the rubbish of the temple," Jubelum watches carefully by it, while Jubela and Jubelo dig the grave on the hill, "due east and west six feet perpendicular," and returning when the bell is solemnly pealing "low twelve," the body is carried to the grave and buried in first-class shape, all to the great delight of the audience. When the "roll of the workmen" was called we substituted instead of the Bible names commonly used the names of the members of the Masonic lodge in Mt. Carroll, sandwiching in Jubela, Jubelo and Jubelum at proper intervals. This greatly interested the people, and made the heads of the Masons in the audience bob down very low when their names were called, to the delight of those looking on. Well, the search for the murderers was ably conducted, their execution was speedy and well-deserved, the exercises at the grave of Hiram were very creditably performed, the singing being especially excellent, and the resurrection on the five points of fellowship was complete.

On Saturday afternoon we had a good little meeting in which the subject of the anti-secret county organization was discussed and some new members obtained. Bro. Williams, Bro. Rathbun, and myself spoke.

On Lord's Day, May 25, I started for Warren with Father Williams, having an appointment to preach there in the P. M., but rain coming on, I turned back.

On Monday, May 26, we went to Shannon. As I walked down the street with Eld. R. L. Chitty, some one assailed him for being in my company. This roused Bro. Chitty, who immediately set to work very earnestly helping me to advertise the meeting for the evening. We found the hall small and very incommodious, seated with rough plank, and the stage very small, and as the exorbitant price of $5 was demanded for the use of it on Tuesday evening, and there was no better hall in the place, it was thought best to give up the meeting on Tuesday evening. The first degree was worked on Monday evening, the hall being crowded. We were kindly entertained that night by Bro. Chitty, and Mr. Speinburg. Tuesday morning Bro. Rathbun was meanly abused by the Masons, they alleging that he was a drunkard, that he had gone into a saloon in Shannon for liquor, etc.

Leaving Shannon on Tuesday, we started for Thompson, stopping that night at the hospitable homes of Bros. Emerson and Fulton in the town of Fair Haven.

An account of the meetings in Thompson, and the mob that threatened Bro. Rathbun's life, is reserved for next week.

ANTI-SECRECY LAW OF THE U. B. CHURCH.

FAYETTEVILE, Pa.

There is a continual pleading by some who are opposed to our present law on secrecy, that the law makes no difference between Freemasonry and minor secret societies, and that it excludes members of all secret societies from our church, notwithstanding the minor secret societies are not as bad as the major. Now the law does not say that that temperance societies are not as bad as Freemasonry and Oddfellowship, but that all present secret societies are sufficiently bad, and to hold membership in any of them are sufficient cause why such persons who hold membership in them should not belong to our church. If any member of our church is guilty of any immoral conduct, such misdemeanor as are regarded among men as less offensive, after the proper steps as provided in our discipline are taken in their case, and there is no repentance on the part of the guilty, are they not expelled just as if they had been guilty of greater crimes? Now we might as justly find fault with our law in reference to the latter as the former. Some will say because Freemasonry binds all its members with an oath to aid one another in crime, that is, to defend a brother that is guilty of crime, and also to conceal crime, therefor our law justly excludes members of Freemasonry from our church. Truly it is sufficient cause why they should be excluded! But as other secret societies do not bind the members to abet or conceal crime they should not be excluded from our church.

But there is another way in which we ought to look at this matter, I know of no secret society now in existence but what teaches some form of morals; and on what are they morals founded that they teach? Are the founded on the Rock of Ages? on Christ, the only foundation? For "other foundation can no man lay than that is laid," Christ Jesus. Is it not true that those minor secret societies, as well as Freemasonry, teach a religion of works, and not faith in our Lord Jesus Christ? Do they have for their first rule repentance toward God and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ? Oh yes, some will say, we as a secret society do not claim to teach religion. Well, but don't you claim it makes a man better if he belongs to your society and lives up to your requirements? You say, Yes. Well, but what can make a man better than the true religion of Christ, and if you don't teach that, your claims to making a man better must be false. You as a secret society, have your written forms of prayer, songs, and ceremony for the burial of the dead, and is not that a religious service? And do you in the services make the Lord Jesus Christ all in all? Verily no. But your religion is a religion of works. While you may name the name of Jesus occasionally, you do not teach that he is your only hope, but by your works you can be made better, yea, saved. And is it not true as a rule if Freemasonry is assailed by our lecturers the members of these so called minor secret societies squirm and fly around as much as the tail of a snake when its head is tramped? Yes, just so, for they (these minor orders) are the tail of Freemasonry. Now, shall a man that professes to be a Christian, and professes that there is only one way to get better, do good to others and be saved, namely through Christ, and still hold membership in an institution that claims to make men better and accomplish good, and not in the name of our Lord Jesus, and him only? I say, shall he still hold membership in our church? Surely, I think our law is right in excluding members of all secret societies.

INTERNATIONAL FREEMASONS—A FEW PLAIN QUESTIONS.

Editor of the Cynosure:

I would propound a few questions for the consideration of your American readers.

FIRST—Is it not possible that the Grand Lodges of Great Britain, Germany and France, might keep in their pay a corps of writers here in the United States, for influencing our newspaper press, and through that public opinion in favor of British, German and French interests?

SECOND—Have we not evidences that this is the fact, both from the character of the writers for our American press and from our leading papers being devoted to the interests of the Masonic lodge, as witnessed by the readiness with which they herald lodge movements and their exceeding unwillingness to say anything against the lodge?

THIRD—Did, or did not the late war administration employ foreigners in consideration of great rank and pay, to influence the press in favor of annuling our laws against treason?

These are questions that every American citizen ought to consider, because there is nothing more corrupting and demoralizing than a corrupted press. Hardly even the pulpit can stand against it.

AN OLD WHIG.

ATTACK ON A PRIVATE HOUSE.

DERBY, Conn., June 14, 1879.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—We have had exciting times here the last few days. Last Tuesday we had a Masonic rum-seller's funeral, who died an awful death bordering on the tremens. The Masons were to attend his funeral.

When it came time for the funeral I attended and was met in the street and told I had no business there and to leave. I kept quiet and occupied the street. When the procession started I followed on to the grave. There were thirty members in the procession, and many of them were the heaviest men in the town. They have heard so much from me about sending rum-sellers and drunkards to the "Grand Lodge above," that they omitted it in this ease. They looked daggers at me.

But their deeds of darkness came on that night at 12 o'clock. A party came to my house and threw large stones through my windows and broke out eight large panes of glass. The concussion was so great that it aroused all in the house and near neighbors. No doubt there is great rejoicing among the Masonic and rum fraternity. The Masons and jacks are cautioning me, and tell me I will have my buildings burned and had better let them alone. I think it a free country yet to do right. The paper I received to-day is a good paper, and I sent it to our minister, who, I learn, has taken all the degrees, as he told me yesterday. If he don't get some strong meat I am mistaken.

Respectfuly yours.

ISAAC J. GILBERT.

OUR MAIL.

S. G. Barton, Laban, Kan., writes:

"The line is clearly drawn and the strife is getting hotter and hotter."

A. J. Phillips, Maquoketa, Ia., writes:

"I consider the Cynosure a great source of intelligence. I am a member of the M. E. Church. Our pastor (I have been told that he is a Freemason) has not visited me since last winter. I told him that I would not support or hear a Freemason preacher, if I knew him to be such. He said nothing about secret societies, but told me that the Cynosure was got up for speculation and was full of lies; the editor, J. Blanchard, was a bad man, and the paper should not have a place in any Christian family. He advised me to stop the Cynosure and take the Northwestern Christian Advocate. I told him the Cynosure was my choice because it uncovered the evils of secret societies, and is an open, free, Christian paper. Upon that he left me. Though my family have been sick he has not visited us. I am a stone mason by trade. I am often working among Freemasons. During a talk with them lately I was told that I could not get into a meeting of Masons with what little knowledge I had, but if I did I would not get out alive. I told them if that was a fact they were a band of outlaws and murderers. They said I had better keep still and let them alone, it would be better for me. I told them that such threats would not intimidate me, for I was going to do what I could to expose all such wickedness. We of Maquoketa are few, but we are soldiers of the cross. We expect to get Bro. Rathbun here after awhile to give some lectures. In the meanwhile we will keep our banner unfurled."

Rev. Enos Collins, New London, Wis., writes:

"I was in the neighborhood of Waupun, Wis., and gave a talk on secresy to quite a good and attentive congregation, and I think some good was done. You will hear from me again soon by the way of more subscriptions for the Cynosure, for I think that is doing more good for our reform and the Christian church than any other paper in the land."

John W. Hough, Winona, Ia., writes:

"I am doing what I can for you and for reform. The battle is raging here, and we are having a hard contest with the enemies of the reform movement. This is a hot bed of secretism. The lodge men are considerably stirred and would put a padlock on our mouths if they could; but the Lord is with us and we are not discouraged. I will send you another article soon, showing you how they are working against us as a Free Methodist people, even threatening to lock the school house against us for public worship."

LESSON II.—July 13, 1879.—THE SECURITY OF BELIEVERS.

SCRIPTURE—Rom. 8:28-39.

28. And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose.

29. For whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son, that he might be the first born among many brethren.

30. Moreover, whom he did predesdinate, them he also called: and whom he called, them he also justified: and whom he justified, them he also glorified.

31. What shall we then say to these things? If God be for us, who can be against us?

32. He that spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not with him also freely give us all things?

33. Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect? It is God that justifieth.

34. Who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died, yea rather, that is risen again, who is even at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us.

35. Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword?

36. As it is written, For thy sake we are killed all the day long; we are accounted as sheep for the slaughter.

37. Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerers through him that loved us.

38. For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come,

39. Nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord.

[From Scholar's Handbook.]

INTRODUCTORY.—After showing the greatness of the glory which shall be revealed, and assuring believers of the aid of the Holy Spirit, the Apostle goes on to declare that all things, even the greatest afflictions, shall work out good for God's children. When Paul wrote this Epistle he had already experienced persecution, and was in expectation of bonds and afflictions.—See Acts 20:23.

I. GOD IS FOR BELIEVERS. (28.) And we know,—or "But we know," compare the "we know" of v. 22, and the "we know not" of v. 26.

All things,—every event of life, and especially those which seem adverse.

Work together,—because God causes them so to do.

For good,—for the final and external well being. (Note that the following verses 31-39, are an expansion of, and commentary on, v. 28.)

(29). Conformed to,—made like unto.

Image,—Christ is the believer's pattern sanctified and glorified.

First born,—in pre-eminence of rank, as well as in time.

Brethren,—Christ is made the brother of all believers.

(31.) If God be for us,—as the writer has shown in vs. 28-30.

Who can be against us?—since one who is against us must be against God, and will be surely overthrown.

II. CHRIST IS FOR THEM. (32.) Spared not,—compare Abraham and Isaac, Gen. 22:12, 16.

His own Son,—the only begotten, John 3:16.

Delivered him up,—to suffering and death.

For us all,—in behalf of us all.

All things,—which we need for our well being and salvation.

(33.) God that justifieth,—some regard this and the second clause of v. 34 as questions, and read, "Shall God who justifies them?"

(34.) Who . . . condemneth?—"Who will condemn?" "Is it Christ . . . ?" No man can bring an accusation which will stand, when the Judge himself has pronounced absolution.

Right hand of God,—the right hand was the seat of honor and of power, comp. Ps. 110:1; Rev. 3:21.

Maketh intercession,—entreats for, advocates the cause of.

III. LOVE SHALL ENDURE. (35.) Who,—or what.

Love of Christ,—to us.

Tribulations,—etc., are not proofs of want of love.

Persecution,—Paul and the early Christians had experienced it, comp. 1 Cor. 4: 11; 2 Cor. 11: 26.

Sword,—as John the Baptist, Matt. 14: 10; James, Acts 12: 2, and later, according to tradition, Paul himself.

(36.) As it is written,—in Ps. 44: 22; during all ages God's people had been so treated by the world.

(38.) Death,—even by martyrdom.

Life,—with all its tribulations.

Angels nor principalities,—super-human powers, good or bad.

Things to come,—in time or eternity.

(39). Creat ure,—"created thing."

Love of God,—to us.

ILLUSTRATION.

Believers are all soldiers; all soldiers by their profession, are engaged to fight if called upon; but who shall be called to sustain the hottest service, and be most frequently exposed upon the battle-field, depends upon the will of the general or commander. Thus the Captain of our salvation allots to his soldiers such stations as he thinks proper. He has a right to employ whom he will, and when he will; they are supported, and in the end made more than conquerors through him who hath loved them.—J. Newton.

PROMPTINGS TO FURTHER STUDY.

Where in the Bible is cowardice condemned? To how many of the leaders of Israel was given the special command to be strong? What good king grew stronger as a bad king grew weaker? Whose wrestling is recorded as having prevailed, though not against flesh and blood? What single-handed combat showed that the Lord does not save with sword and spear? What messengers of the gospel of peace had directions how to be shod? What deceitful messengers helped out their deceit by means of their shoes?

LETTER TO THE MODERATOR OF ST. CLAIRVILLE'S PRESBYTERY.

MILLNERSVILLE, O., June 12, 1879.

Rev. Robert Alexander,

DEAR BROTHER:—Your favor of 5th June is before me, and as in the matter to which it relates many others besides ourselves are interested, I deem it not improper to answer you through the press.

You say you "presume that I wrote the article on the late meeting of presbytery," and so presuming, you say that I "represent" you as treating me "rudely and unfairly." And you further speak of "the injustice" I have done you "personally." Now, I confess that it may not have been altogether kind to you, to tell abroad what occurred in presbytery; but as the paper in question (by whomsoever written) states simply what occurred in presbytery and as it occurred, I do not see how you can call it unjust. As to your treating me "rudely and unfairly," I will put the question to you, If Dr. Mitchell or Dr. Crawford had said to you, 'Moderator, may I offer a resolution?' willing to waive his privilege for the time, if presbytery was then about to take up some very urgent business—would you have answered, "That depends on what the resolution is?" And would you have allowed him to stand waiting for your permission until the stated clerk or some other member of presbytery, by way of remonstrance had said, "Let him read it." And would presbytery have endured that you should treat one of those worthies in such a manner? And when the resolution was read would brother Wallace have moved instantly to lay it on the table? And would presbytery have voted as they did "with a promptness and an alacrity and a vengeance" so to dispose of it? I say, my brother, it is a fair question, whether it was not the man as well as the paper that presbytery desired to "lay on the table?" For myself, however, I was disposed to pass over this matter very lightly. It is you that has given it this prominence.

You say that, when the motion was made to lay the resolution on the table I "insisted on speaking, contrary to all parliamentary usage." This is simply a mistake of yours, though of little moment. But if it shall come to pass that the voice of an obscure and feeble old man shall be heard on the shores of both oceans before this matter is done with, it will not be my fault. It is of the nature of light to shine, and "The word of God is not bound." A man who stands as tall and looms as high as any other in eastern Ohio, in conversation on this subject and in reference to the ministers of our whole Presbyterian body, said to me, "The ground swell of the earthquake is coming, and they must prepare for it."

But the indictment in the article referred to, is not against you; it is against the presbytery. And the two counts in the indictment which the writer of that article has or had the audacity to prefer, are: 1st, that "Presbytery did homage to Baal;" and, 2d, that "they willfully closed their eyes to the truth." If the presbytery feel aggrieved by these charges, there are various ways in which it is their privilege to seek redress of the grievance.

You further say to me, "You cannot hope to live in this presbytery and have the good feeling of the brethren towards you, if you persist in making charges of cowardice and unfaithfulness against your brethren who are trying to do their duty as well as they can." To this I have two things to say, one in regard to presbytery and one in regard to myself. As to the ministers of presbytery, I do not by any means call in question their Christian character, or the fact that in a general way they "are trying to do their duty." I have no ill-will towards any of them. I rejoice in their prosperity, and in any success it has pleased our heavenly Father to give them in their work. But whether in the particular act referred to they were "trying to do their duty as well as they could," is just what I respectfully and seriously call in question. Good men sometimes through fear, or other sudden impulse, do wrong. There was a very good man about 1800 years ago, who, suddenly brought into danger and in fear of his life, did a very wrong thing. He told a falsehood, and even cursed and swore about it. And then he shed bitter tears over the deed; and finally laid down his life for his Master whom he loved and went triumphantly and gloriously to heaven by the way of a cross. But no one that I know of ever commended or defended the falsehood or the profanity. And as some men very readily follow their leaders, and as we are all influenced more or less, one by the example of another, it came to pass that what one good man may do, a number of good men may possibly be led to do. And I suppose also that a brother who has thus erred may sometimes not improperly be admonished or remonstrated with, provided that the admonition be given in love. And if it is true that "presbytery did homage to Baal, and willfully closed their eyes to the truth," then they did wrong, under whatever circumstances, or from whatever motives. And if they had any better motives than "the fear of man and a regard for their position as pastors," I for one should be very glad to have it appear. I will not knowingly do an injustice to you or them.

As to myself, I am not indifferent to the "good feeling" of my Christian and ministerial brethren. It is a sweet experience I sometimes have to mingle my sympathies with men who have fought or are still fighting the same battles, and have them mingle their sympathies with mine. Many a time have I dwelt with lively interest on an incident in the history of that old hero who, after two years in jail at Cæsarea, and a most perilous voyage and shipwreck and a winter of privation on the Island of Malta, finally took up his chain and his carpet-bag at Puteoli, and "went towards Rome." But the news of his coming had gone on before; and the brethren came out to meet him as far as Appii-forum and the Three-taverns, whom when Paul saw, "he thanked God and took courage." In fact, if I may say so, I am just now in circumstances that peculiarly fit me to appreciate any such sympathy as that, provided I deserve it. But I can never, I trust, seek the "good feeling" of any fellow creature by a neglect of or departure from manifest duty; and however highly I may prize the good feeling of my brethren, the approval of God and my own conscience is of far more importance to me.

The Master has said to us all, "Ye shall be witnesses unto me;" and our business is to testify always and everywhere faithfully for him. Now, if I see a pit which Satan has digged for souls, in which many have been taken already, and into which my brother is liable to fall, can I be a faithful witness if I fail to warn my brother? if I fail to sound the alarm? What then is the meaning of that word, "If the watchman see the sword come," etc.

I do not claim to be better than my brethren; but it has happened to me to know what they do not know. I see a pit, and a terrible snare for souls which they do not see. I see the danger to souls and to the health and general welfare of the church and of our civil government which lies concealed in the institution of Freemasonry. And what right have you or has anybody to say to me, "But you shall not give the warning; you shall not sound the alarm!"

In a ministry of near forty years I have made some blunders, undoubtedly, and have committed sins which, I trust, have been washed out in the blood of the Redeemer; but for the little time that remains to me I desire humbly and faithfully to witness for and serve Him who in infinitr mercy hath redeemed my soul. And in so doing I should be very glad of the sympathy and encouragement and help of my brethren in Christ, and in my humble way, and with my feeble influence, I should be glad also to help them. I BELIEVE IN THE COMMUNION OF SAINTS. But if the privilege I so greatly desire shall be denied me, I shall not be greatly disturbed by it. I am not the first man who has been shut out of pulpits—driven from the doors where his feet had loved to linger, and hunted like a partridge on the mountains. In fact, wherever a man has obtained more light on some subject than his fellows, or taken a step in advance of his fellows, has he not met their opposition? Witness Luther and Knox—the Wesleys and the great Edwards who spent the last six years of his life with a few Indians at Stockbridge; and also that eminent civilian who lately left the city of Boston for the unseen world. To common observers Paul was "mad" and even Jesus the Light of the world and the Saviour of sinners was beside himself." I do not wonder therefore at that which has befallen me, and am comforted to find on record these words—"It is enough for the servant, that he be as his LORD." Yours in the labor and patience of the Gospel,

WARREN TAYLOR.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JULY 3, 1879.

A WOLF IN SHEEP'S CLOTHING.—We have received per mail, a little book purporting to be a register or catalogue of La Harpe Lodge, No. 195, in this State. It contains a page of printed matter by J. M. Mayall, stating that Masonry teaches "morality," "pure righteousness, without regard to any particular creed," and that "the principles of our government must have been transplanted from the Masonic Trestleboard." There was a J. M. Mayall in that part of Illinois awhile since, who passed for a minister of the Gospel, and who led his people to think he was indifferent or opposed to secret societies. If this be the man, he should be shunned as a moral pestilence. The lodge leaders now pay their profound attention to all churches and places where the truth is held, and confessed; and no money or means are spared to inject into such places men of the stamp indicated above. See Christ's description of him, Mat. 7:15.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM.

The Presbyterian General Assembly in 1835 gave its "deliberate judgment" that "the Roman Catholic church has essentially apostatized" and "cannot be recognized as a Christian church."

In 1845, at Cincinnati, the Old School Assembly declared "the papacy apostate," and "no true church," "her priesthood usurpers," "her ordinances unscriptural, and her baptism totally invalid." James H. Thornwell offered the above. He was from South Carolina, and had recently offered in that State a resolution that "slavery is (was) not a moral evil." Prof. Patton of Chicago, advocated and the assembly met at Saratoga last month (1879), reaffirmed the deliverance of 1835, "as applying to the Romish hierachy headed by the Pope," which hierachy falsely claims to be the church. But it recognizes Roman Catholics as "a large part of the church of Christ over which it has usurped complete control."

When this same assembly discussed for years whether a man might marry his deceased wife's sister, Prentice of the Louisville Journal, replied: "That is a question to be answered by the lady herself."

The disciples who partook of the Lord's Supper from his own hands were neither of them baptized with the present formula, "In the name of Father, Son and Holy Ghost," for Christ's name was not used in the baptism till after he was dead; and we think the large and learned Presbyterian Assembly would please Christ much better, by discussing the question of Masonic than Romish baptism, as they have hundreds of Freemasons applying for baptism to tens of Romish converts. Indeed that grave body seems to us to be set by the "god of this world" to discuss and re-discuss such questions which have at most, but a remote bearing on Christ's cause; to amuse and occupy the consciences of that enlightened body of Christians to give an excellent appearance of doing somthing about religion, and stave off the practical questions of reform which are knocking at its doors.

In 1836 the leading synod of Cincinati decided that membership in a Masonic lodge was incompatible with a credible profession of the Christian religion. We commend this question to the next General Assembly for reconsideration.

"NEITHER BETTER NOR WORSE."

A friend in Virginia wrote to a a minister, asking his advice about joining a church whose pastor is a Mason, and received a reply from which the following are extracts:

"While I am not and never expect to be a member of any secret order, * * * yet I would never think of refusing to other Christians the right to become members of any other organizations, or decline to co-operate with them fully simply because they join them.

"I would say of joining such a society, just what Paul says, 1 Cor. viii. 8. Neither if we join are we the better; or if we join not are we the worse. May the Lord give you understanding."

1. These terms would include permission to Christians to join the Ku-Klux, and assassinate their neighbors; to join bandits and steal horses; or any infamous organization whatever, all being included in the words, "any other organizations."

2. Why should this brother not quote Paul's direct answer to the brother's question: "Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them"—Eph. v. 11. Those "works of darkness" to which Paul referred were the Eleusinian Mysteries, which Masonic books declare to be the same thing as the Masonry of the present day. Hence Paul's words are a direct command to disfellowship the lodge.

3. Masons swear to conceal crimes, which is meaner than the crime itself. When the criminal committed the crime he was probably violently tempted. But the Mason swears to conceal crimes, coolly, and for the sake of worldly advantage.

—Perry H. Smith, a prominent and wealthy Democratic politician of this city, inaugurated Sunday concerts at his own expense in Lincoln Park last year, and began them again last Sabbath. Most of his party colleagues prefer to pay their political capital over the saloon counters. Mr. Smith wants to buy the same influence, only in a more aristocratic way.

DIRECTORS' MEETING, N. C. A.

In accordance with the constitutional provision, the Board of Directors elected at the annual meeting of the National Christian Association met at the Carpenter building on Thursday, June 26, at 9 A. M. There were present Messrs. C. R. Hagerty, A. Wait, E. A. Cook, J. Blanchard, P. Carpenter, Thomas Hodge, E. Hildreth, H. L. Kellogg.

Mr. Carpenter called to order and Bro. Hodge offered prayer.

Organization was effected by electing Philo Carpenter, president; C. R. Hagerty, vice president; and J. P. Stoddard, secretary. The business referred to the Board by the annual meeting was then taken up.

The minutes of that meeting were revised and approved. The referred correspondence was read, including letters from Revs. J. T. Michael of Milford, N. J.; A. G. Miller of Everettstown, N. J.; Dr. Jas. McCosh, of Princeton College; Prof. S. C. Kimball of Center Strafford, N. H.; and Rev. H. H. Hinman. The efforts of Bro. Michael were regarded with the deepest interest, and the question of aiding him from the funds entrusted to the Association carefully considered, and the following, presented by Pres. Blanchard, adopted:

THE CAUSE IN NEW JERSEY.

The Board of Directors of the National Christian Association have heard with unfeigned satisfaction and delight letters from Rev. J. T. Michael, of the M. E. church in New Jersey, concerning plans for divorcing his church from Freemasonry, called by John Wesley "an amazing banter on mankind." We extend to Mr. Michael our cordial God-speed, and will render to him all the aid and encouragement practicable in his great and arduous undertaking.

Resolved, That we are happy to know that the free use of the Cynosure is tendered to Bro. Michael to advertise his meetings, and to print such facts and information as he may deem of importance to his work.

Resolved, 2d, Whereas, the College of New Jersey has taken firm and consistent ground against secret college orders, we commend Rev. Mr. Michael to the Faculty of that College for their sympathies, prayers, and such co-operation as they may deem wise and proper.

Resolved, 3d, That we commend the stand taken by the College of New Jersey to the favorable notice of the College Courant, of New Haven, and other college papers throughout the United States; and we call the special attention of the College press and friends of Christian education to the fact that since Mortimer D. Leggett was killed during initiation into a secret fraternity, at Cornell University, Ithica, N. Y., the number of students has fallen off nearly one-half.

Resolved, 4th, That we endorse Mr. Michael as lecturer for the State of New Jersey, and we do commend his undertaking to reform the M. E. church, to which he belongs, for immediate financial aid to Rev. N. W. Myers of Vineland, N. J., also to Rev. D. Yant of Ohio, with others interested in his special work.

The Treasurer's bond was fixed at $20,000. Mr. Hildreth signifying his willingness to perform the duties of that office gratuitously as last year, no salary was voted. The salary of the Corresponding Secretary and General Agent was fixed at $800 and $400 was allowed for traveling and other expenses, postage and stationery being separately provided for.

The publishing interests were also referred to the Board by the annual meeting. As the decision of that meeting was understood to be, that little should be done in this line during the year, the Board passed the matter without any action. Mr. Cook, however, in view of the probability that it would be some time, perhaps years, before the Association would undertake the general publishing business, withdrew his offer to transfer the Cynosure and sell the plates, material and stock of publications now in his hands.

Philo Carpenter, Thos. Hodge, A. Wait and H. L. Kellogg were appointed tract committee; J. P. Stoddard, C. R. Hagerty and E. Hildreth committee on the building. The latter were also chosen a loan committee. It was voted that no loans should be made of the funds of the Association to members of the Board. The propriety of opening a stand at the Inter-state Exposition to open in September was debated and the matter referred to Messrs. Cook, Hodge and Kellogg.

The Board during last year procured a paid for few plates of tracts out of the Publishing fund. It was voted to replace their cost from the General fund.

The Board then adjourned after prayer by Pres. J. Blanchard.

THE NEW OHIO AGENT.—I learn with satisfaction of the arrangements made with Rev. Geo. Richey of Pataskala, as State Lecturer for Ohio, to take the field which Bro. J. Kemp was unable to do on account of sickness. Bro. Richey is a man of rare heart culture and broad experience as a pastor and reformer. He understands the lodge system and how to meet and rout its advocates. Friends in Ohio should keep him at work and give him a fair compensation for his services. When you once know the man you will ever after respect him and welcome him to your homes, to your pulpits and as a leader and co-laborer in this great reform.

J. P. STODDARD.

—Bro. Stoddard went last Saturday to Kewanee, Ill., where he had appointments for the Sabbath and probably lectured on Monday evening. He will then visit Galva, Lafayette and possibly some other points in the neighborhood, visiting his aged mother at Galva meanwhile. He expects to return next week.

—Elder Browne of the Illinois State work was in Chicago on Monday, refurnishing his stock of books. His work for the past fortnight has been in Jo Daveiss county, where he has spoken at a number of points. During the present month he expects to lecture occasionally, and hopes by the middle of August to begin a series of expositions and lectures in McHenry county in connection with Elder Rathbun. He is also planning for the Wisconsin State meeting at Evansville. The Illinois friends who have pledged funds to sustain this work must be reminded of their duty. Please forward the amount of your subscription. Other friends who have laid by a contribution for the Illinois State work will please send to the treasurer, H. L. Kellogg at this office, without delay.

—Bro. J. T. Hobson who is more diligently cultivating the lecture field since discontinuing his paper, the Christian Ensign, sends a brief note of a five week's trip in southern Indiana. He writes, June 24:

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I have just returned from a five week's lecturing tour through the counties of Washington, Clarke, Harrison, Crawford and Orange. Amidst many discouragements I found warm friends at almost every point, and feel that I have accomplished some good. I lectured at a number of points where the subject had never been discussed. I found many who are aware of the evils of secrecy, but—but—. May the Lord hasten the day when these "buts" shall be removed.

—Rev. Warren Taylor, the father of reform in the Presbyterian church in Ohio, has lately demonstrated the first degree with success before an audience of a hundred men. He is following the exposition with lectures, and draws a heavy sword against the lodge. His reply to the moderator of his presbytery on the seventh page of this number is a document worth reading.

—A brother in Oberlin asks if any Masons are sent out as missionaries, by the American Board. We have not been able to learn anything definite, except that the question is never asked. Mr. Hauser, publisher of a paper in Milwaukee, Wis., was formerly a missionary in India, we believe sent out by the Methodist Episcopal society. He defended the lodge in this office, and expatiated on its benefits to missionaries to foreign lands, many of whom he claimed being members of the order.

—Franklin Pierce of Albany, Vt., wishes to correct Bro. Hinman's late letter in applying the term "Rev." to him; also in the same letter Rev. Wm. Ellis should be Rev. G. W. Ellis. Some weeks ago we quoted an item from the Arcadia Republican and Leader, of Trempleau county, Wis., which was incorrectly credited to a LaCrosse paper of the same name.

ANNIVERSARY EXERCISES AT WASIOJA.

The closing exercises of the Wesleyan Seminary at Wasioja, Minn., occurred June 18th. A pleasant time it was. The day was bright and cool enough to be most pleasant. The exercises consisted of essays, recitations, declamations, orations, interspersed with music which shed its genial influence on all.

After opening exercises by a choice duet and chorus, and prayer by Rev. J. E. Gould, the audience listened to a declamation: Phillips' "Eulogy on America," by J. C. Gilman. Others followed in order: Miss Stephenson of Wasioja, an essay on "True Greatness;" Mr. G. Corwin, a declamation entitled, "The Reform will go on;" A. B. Gould an essay on "Egyptian Antiquities;" a recitation of Whittier's "Raphael," by Miss Mary Donaldson, and an essay on "The Pupil's Pro gress," by McD. Williams.

After this came orations by gentlemen Orelup, Manwell and Mullenix. Mr. Orelup's theme was, "A Just Appreciation of our Liberty." It was delivered in good style and clealy showed the superiority of liberty over despotic rule. Mr. Manwell followed on the subject, "God rules." He showed that through law the whole of the universe is kept in harmony and that "there is no law only that which is in harmony with the divine law." H. B. Mullenix was the last speaker. His subject matter was good. The theme was, "The Ultimate Triumph of Truth." Delivery was something of a pleasant conversational style, which though agreeable, showing candor and frankness, did not partake greatly of impressive oratory.

Miss P. Honeywell then followed with a valedictory poem, which for propriety to the occasion was excellent. But not only did the occasion lend it a charm but the intrinsic merit of the production was enough to pass it as good in any literary circle. She showed that, although while students, we may probe into the mysteries of science yet we can find no way to stop the flight of time which breaks the chain of pleasant associations. The poem was truly eloquent, pathetic, and the authoress proved herself worthy of the congratulations received.

In the evening, at the invitation of Prof. Paine, the rooms were crowded by citizens and visitors for a social and good time generally. Before dispersion the assembly was quieted by the voice of Prof. Lang who announced a speech by one of the ladies, After an elegant salutatory Miss Turner presented on behalf of the students, a beautiful lyre to Miss Paine, who is an ardent lover of music. Much more of interest occurred, but we must close.

Yours truly,

A LOOKER-ON.

COMMENCEMENT AT WESTERN COLLEGE, JUNE 25.

WESTERN, Iowa, June 27, 1879.

Just a touch of the interesting occasion is intended. This is a reform College. All colleges ought to be eminently such. At 10 o'clock the Western Cornet Band reached the stand in the College campus. The beautiful grove and the melodious music aided in attracting the large number present to their shady seats, where the services were opened by Bishop Wright in an impressive prayer for God's blessing on the Board of Trustees, Faculty, students and patrons, and especially on the six whose studies in the regular College course were just completed.

Miss Emma Patton was introduced as the first speaker. Subject: "Greece and Judea." In human nature the downward tendency is prominent. History records the rise and fall of nations. Virtue exalts and vice overthrows individuals and nations. Many to-day are sleeping over smothered volcanos. The law of love and dignity of labor came not from Greece but from Bethlehem. Greece once the center of culture, failed to teach how to live and die; but Judea teaches love and forgiveness, making life and death noble and even pleasant.

Next was an oration by Mr. D. Miller, subject, "The Province of Politics." In this country it is the duty of all to understand politics. Not political intrigue but the science of government should be well understood. Intelligence, prosperity and happiness are the result of soundness in politics.

"Influence of Thought on Character" by Miss L. Moore was a well prepared and finely delivered oration.

"The Yet Unknown" by Mr. W. L. Linderman, showed much study and was a good production. Of these last named speakers I am unable to give particulars.

The last speaker, Mr. W. H. Klinefelter, took for his subject, "The Great Search." He spoke of theism and atheism as two extremes. Remove from the hearts of men the conviction that "Thou God seest me" and the dearest interests of society are imperiled. This is what atheism does. In the search for truth men should be candid. To such, satisfaction is reached only by belief in the God of the Bible. Atheism is materialistic and cold. Theism with Bible light and spiritual warmth is the only but all-sufficient inspiration and safeguard of the human family.

The addresses were all good. Mr. Miller, in his oration showed the danger of secretism in this country in strong terms. It belongs to politics to see that no secret clan be allowed and that all charters of lodges should be given up and lodges be required to disband.

Well the year is closed and now that vacation is upon us what should be the action of all the true friends of education?

A resolution was passed by the Board of Trustees asking all the members of the Faculty, agents and friends of this College to improve this vacation in securing money and students. The church of the United Brethren in Christ has filled an important place in the reform movements of our Republic, and the infidelity and idolatrous worship of the various lodges over this fair land plainly indicate that her glorious mission is by no means ended. Send in your sons and daughters, your money or notes, bequests or deeds to real estate to me. I will gladly send catalogues and give information. Fall term opens Sept. 3.

M. S. DRURY,
Agent and Treasurer.

On beholding the parade of the Knight Templars of Pennsylvania at Allentown about a month since, Rev. T. S. LaDue wrote thus to the Free Methodist: "While these Knights were making such a show of the cross on horse trappings, regalia and banners, we thought of the capital Satan is making out of the cross through Romanism, and questioned whether a Christless Catholicism is as potent to hurt Christ's cause as the Templars, who mix his name and cross with the mummeries and imprecations savoring of the pit. These 'true and worthy followers of the blessed Jesus' held a grand ball one evening of their stay here; a brothel was patronized by numbers of them two nights, according to a daily paper, and the tobacco used, the beer, wine and rum drank, made the publicans glad. The The installing officer was a D.D."

OBITUARY.

MRS. EMMA LINCOLN MOFFATT, adopted daughter of Dr. J. B. Walker, and wife of Prof. T. C. Moffatt, died at the residence of her husband's father, in Wheaton, Ill., on Thursday, June 26th, 1879. Their first child, a son, was one week and a day old when the mother died.

Mrs. Moffatt was a young woman of rare intelligence and sincere piety. As she approached her death she exhibited those tokens of the "powers of the world to come" often seen in dying Christians. She wandered in a dreamy trance state, and said, "I am going through a river, and am under the waters. Oh! how deep—deep—deep!" But after a little she said, "I am over at last, my babe and my husband all safe!" And in this state of trance or dream-thought she passed quietly away. Her babe is still living, and may survive its mother and grow up. She was of a gentle, retiring nature, and shrunk from notoriety, and would shrink from eulogy. But few persons ever left a stronger and more perfectly good impression than she has left upon her few intimate friends and associates. She was buried in the cemetery near Wheaton on Saturday. "And I heard a voice saying unto me, Write, Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

We live no more of our time than we spend well.—Carlyle.

Home Circle.

Live for Something.

Live for something, be not idle,
Look about thee for employ;
Sit not down to useless dreaming;
Labor is the sweetest joy.
Fo d hands are ever weary,
Selfish hearts are never gay;
Life for thee hath many duties—
Active be, then, while you may.

atter blessings in thy pathway!
Gentle words and cheering smiles
Better are than gold and silver,
With their grief-dispelling wiles.
As the pleasant sunshine falleth
Ever on the grateful earth,
So let sympathy and kindness
Gladden well the darkened hearth.

Hearts that are oppressed and weary,
Drop the tear of sympathy,
Whisper words of hope and comfort,
Give, and thy reward shall be
Joy unto thy soul returning,
From this perfect fountain-head,
Freely as thou freely givest,
Shall the grateful light be shed.

The Mother of Martin Luther.

A few words in memory of Dr. Martin Luther's mother, of her whom Melanchthon pronounced to be a model of virtue, an example to all womankind.

Margaretha Linderman was the daughter of an old and highly respected house in Eisenach, was brought up by her parents in the fear of God and in the knowledge of every household duty; otherwise they had no greater dower to bestow upon her. Somewhere about the year 1479 she was married to Hans Luther a miner, a most worthy man, who, plain as his circumstances then were, descended from a family of rank.

In the little village of Mohra the young couple began their new life. Very poor they were, but since the good God had blessed them with strong bodies and stout hearts they never lost courage. Hans with unfailing courage pursued his calling; Margaretha looked well to the ways of her household, and many times she even had gathered faggots to make her fire, carrying them home herself from the woods upon her back. They had a large family of children. Dr. Martin himself, in his letters, refers to nine brothers-in-law, husbands of his sisters, and we know besides these of two boys who died of the plague, of a Jacob, and our Martin. The latter was born at Eisleben, Nov. 10, 1483, at eleven o'clock at night. Margaretha had gone up there from Mansfield, where she and her husband at that time lived, far from expecting the arrival of the little stranger, when he made his unbidden appearance in the house where she had taken shelter. Well might the young mother's position be compared with that of her whose baby lay in a manger, wrapped in swaddling bands.

The house where the infant Luther was born was several times assailed by fire and rescued in what the people believed to be a miraculous fashion. Once, the year 1653 this was, 200 houses and barns all around it were devoured by the flames, while it remained unscathed and when, in the year 1680, it did fall a victim to the cruel elements, it was speedily rebuilt through the effort of a pious magistrate. This new memorial building became a free orphan school, and at the present day there stands back of it a stately teachers' seminary.

A good, conscientious mother was Margaretha, and severely strict as she was with her children, it was no more than she was with herself. When Martin as a tiny boy was carried for the first time to school in his father's arms. he was commended by both parents to the rigor, not to the consideration of the master, who was nothing loth to exercise his authority. In one afternoon, it is recorded, little Martin was beaten by him fifteen times. The poor child was timid, and the excessive sternness with which he was treated, as he himself confessed later, finally drove him to the cloister. But the great son well knew that his parents meant to do right towards him, and he humored their intentions even when they long hesitated to permit him to enter the monastery, and when later they only granted a reluctant consent to his marriage with his dear Kathe. Perhaps he realized that the stern discipline he had been subjected to from infancy up had been requisite to enable him to gain ardent control of that ardent, passionate temperament of his.

Through the purifying influences of hard experience Margaretha herself had attained her full development. She had grown in strength and wisdom day by day, as she struggled bravely on in her efforts to bring up her family aright amid all the perplexities that surrounded her, and she proved herself indeed noble through her son's fiery career. These were the days of Dr. Faust, when the Evil One was supposed to be wandering abroad in every conceivable guise, and to be especially prone to beguile the hearts of silly maidens; and it was rumored by Luther's enemies that the Great Reformer was the Foul Fiend's own son. This soon reached the poor woman's ears, but although in those days when such things were believed possible, it was harder to bear than we can well imagine, she did patiently bear all the calumny that assailed her for the sake of her dear son and his great work. Her good husband stood nobly by her, and she found consolation, too, in the trust and esteem of her son and Melancthon and other workers in the field. In such high esteem did Melancthon hold both of Luther's parents that when he took unto himself a wife, Nov. 25, 1520, he insisted upon having them present at the wedding feast, seated among the most honored guests, the simple matron and her beloved Hans.

Margaretha Luther lived to see her dear children well provided for in life, and herself and her Hans lifted above want. Martin was her favorite of all her beloved children, and she became very fond of his Kathe and their merry group of children. And Martin gave public evidence of his love for his parents in using their names in the formula of his service book, "Hans, wilt thou have Gretchen to be thy wedded wife?"

Some years after the family removed to Mansfield. Hans was appointed chief magistrate of that town on account of his universally admitted integrity. Through the fruits of his labor he in time accumulated quite a nice property, and Gretchen no longer needed to carry bundles of wood upon her back. She now rested in comparative ease in her pretty house, surrounded by her children and her grandchildren, while joy was the daily guest in the home of the old people. Then came to the faithful heart of the loving wife its severest blow; on May 29, 1530, her trustly life companion passed on before her to the world beyond the grave, and from that day her earthly existence began to decline.

We find it upon record how deeply Luther grieved over his father's death, but no chronicler expatiates upon Dame Margaretha's grief. Facts must speak for themselves, and we know that one year after Hans had left her, June 30, 1531, she went to join him.—Christian Weekly.

Patience Under Injury

Some Christians are disposed to help the Almighty somewhat in the work of execution, and run before they are sent. As if he could not or would not superintend his own business! But the entirely sanctified are quite willing to trust God, knowing that if their services are required, he will let them know. Indeed, the difference between a low state of grace and full salvation is as marked at this point as at any other. One party is ready to do a little wrong to his enemy if convenient, or at least indulges in the "grit" of hatred and vengeance; but the other is so cleansed as to hate not, and to desire no vengeance but at the hand of a loving God. One is penetrated, it may be, with a keen sense of wrong, but adds his own variance to it; while the other, equally keen in moral sensibility, cries, "The Lord rebuke thee!"

O thou, restless under injury! come to the fountain that brings "quietness and assurance forever." Come where evil finds no answering evil in your breast. Come where even the faintest desire to "render evil for evil" is removed. This is holiness. This is "the fullness of the blessing of the Gospel of Christ." It is for you. It is "nominated in the bond"—that is, "the promise of the Father," the gift and cleansing power of the Son, the bestowment of the Holy Ghost.

He "executeth righteousness and judgment for all that are oppressed." He sits as a judge to determine matters of right and wrong between members of the human family. In doing this he comes to certain, exact and unerring decisions. He enters these judgments in the "docket" of heaven. He executes them in his own time and way.

Let the tyrant tremble! Let that one in the family be afraid; the older one who is the tyrant of the younger children; the tyrant over his workmen, or fellow-servants, and neighbors; the cheats and tyrants in trade; those monstrous tyrants, who take the lives of sewing women without remorse for a pittance; the tyrants of society; the tyrants of fashion; tyrants in offices or by mere physical or intellectual strength. Tremble ye all, for God is coming with a recompense.

Let ecclesiastical tyrants tremble. And not merely the prelates of Rome, but the tyrannous clericals and church officials of Protestantism. Hands off God's little ones, his holy ones. No more "lording it over God's heritage." If you continue in your sorry course, the I Am will teach you as Gideon did the men of Succoth.

Turn ye, all lofty and hard-hearted ones; to him who has been smitten for thee, or thy own soul shall answer for thy sins!—Christian Harvester.

I see more and more daily that all worship of man, all glorying in man, is abomination in the sight of the Lord. Worship of eloquence, talent, taste, intellect, or church, is idolatry. And O, how prevalent this idolatry! Anti-Christ is a spirit far more mighty and protean than Christian thinkers have supposed. "Every spirit that confesses not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God; and this is that spirit of anti-Christ," etc. How many devices has this spirit to call us away from our humble attitude at Jesus' feet, where "with unveiled face we behold as in a mirror, the glory of the Lord, and are changed into the same image from glory to glory even as the spirit of the Lord." O that all Christians would abandon all worship but the worship of God our Saviour! How few can really say, "we are the circumcision, which worship God in the spirit, and rejoice in Christ Jesus and have no confidence in the flesh." Well, thank the Lord, there are "more than seven thousand men that have not bowed the knee to Baal."—L. B. Kent, the Evangelist.

Holiness is the rounded measure of eternal life, meted out to us on earth, and carried with us to the skies.

A great reputation is a great charge.

Childrens' Corner.

The Fly and the Leaf.

On a bridge I was standing one morning,
And watching the current roll by,
When suddenly into the water
There fell an unfortunate fly.

The fishes that swam to the surface
Were looking for something to eat,
And I thought that the hapless young insect
Would surely afford them a treat.

Poor thing! I exclaimed with compassion,
Thy trials and dangers abound;
For if thou escap'st being eaten,
Thou canst not escape being drowned.

No sooner the sentence was spoken
Than, lol like an angel of love,
I saw to the waters beneath me,
A leaflet descend from above.

It glided serene on the streamlet;
'Twas an ark to the poor little fly,
Which, soon to the land re-ascending,
Spread its wings in the breezes to dry.

Oh, sweet was the truth that was whispered,
That mortals should never despair;
For he who takes care of an insect
Much more for his children will care.

And though to our short-sighted vision,
No way of escape may appear,
Let us trust; for when least we expect it,
The help of our Father is near.

The Dark Day.

Of all the wonderful stories that my great-grand-mother used to tell my mother when she was a little girl, the most wonderful was about the dark day in New England, Friday, May 19, 1780. This was during our Revolution, you will remember, and the same year in which the traitor, Benedict Arnold, attempted to betray his country to its enemies.

For several days before the nineteenth, the air was full of vapors, as we often see it when fires are raging in the woods near us, and the sun and moon appeared red, and their usual clear light did not reach us especially when rising and setting. The wind blew chiefly from the south-west and north-east and the weather was cool and clear. The morning of the nineteenth was cloudy and in many places light showers fell, sometimes accompanied by thunder and lightning; but as the sun rose it did not increase the light, and the darkness deepened, and deepened, until the children standing before the tall clocks could not see to tell the time, and older people peering over the almanac could not see to distinguish the letters. The birds sang their evening song and flew to their nests in the woods, the poultry hurried to their nests, while the cattle in the fields uttered strange cries and leaped the stone fences to gain their stalls, and the sheep all huddled together bleating piteously.

Color, which you know depends upon the light of the sun, filled many with astonishment by its unusual appearance, for the clouds were in some places of a light red, yellow and brown; the leaves on the trees and the grass in the meadows were of the deepest green, verging on indigo, the brightest silver seemed tarnished, and everything that is white in the sunlight bore a deep yellow hue.

The shadows, which before noon fall to the westward and after noon to the eastward, were observed during the darkness to fall in every direction.

The rain, also, was unlike any other rain, and it set all the people to wondering as they dipped it from the tubs and barrels; for a scum formed on it resembling burnt leaves, emitting a sooty smell, and this same substance was seen on streams and rivers, especially the Merrimac, where it lay four or five inches thick, for many miles along its shore.

Another peculiarity was the vapor; in many localities it descended to the earth from high in the atmosphere; but at one point a gentleman saw the vapors at nine o'clock rising from the springs and low lands; one column he particularly noticed rapidly ascending above the highest hills, then it spread into a large white cloud and sailed off to the westward. A second cloud formed in the same way from the same springs, but did not rise as high as the first, and a third formed fifteen minutes afterwards. At a quarter of ten the uppermost cloud was of a redish hue, the second was green indigo and blue, and the third was almost white.

So unwholesome was this vapor that small birds were suffocated in it, and many of them were so frightened and stupified that they flew into the houses, adding to the fears of the ignorant people, who considered it a bad sign for a bird to enter a dwelling.

The commencement of the darkness was between ten and eleven in the forenoon (when the men were busy in the fields and offices and work-shops, the women spinning, weaving and preparing dinner, and the children at school, or helping their fathers and mothers at home), and it continued until the middle of the following night; but the degree of darkness varied; in some places the disk of the sun was seen when the darkness was the mostdense.

Lights were seen burning in all the houses, and the people passing out-of-doors carried torches and lanterns, which were curiously reflected on the overhanging clouds.

Thousands of people were sure that the end of the world had come, many dropped their work and fell on their knees to pray, others confessed to their fellows the wrongs they had done and endeavored to make restitution.

The meeting-houses were crowded, and neighborhood prayer-meetings were formed, and the ministers and old church-members prayed long prayers, mentioning the nations and individuals of Bible times who had been destroyed on account of their sins, and begging that as God spared the great city of Nineveh when it repented, so he would forgive them, cheer them again by the light of the sun and give victory to their armies.

It is said that the Connecticut legislature being in session, the members became terrified when they could not see each other's faces, and a motion was made to adjourn, when Mr. Davenport arose and said:

"Mr. Speaker, it is either the day of judgment or it is not. If it is not, there is no need of adjourning. If it is, I desire to be found doing my duty. I move that candles be brought, and that we proceed to business."

All the shivering, frightened people began now to look forward to evening, hoping that as the moon rose full at nine o'clock, her light would penetrate the gloom; but all the children who coaxed to sit up and see her grew very sleepy, their strained eyes were not rewarded by her beautiful beams, for at eight in the evening the darkness was total; one could not distinguish between the earth and the heavens, and it was impossible to see a hand before one's face.

Then all the weary children were sent to bed after the most honest prayers that they had ever prayed, and the older people sat up to watch for the light that had never appeared so glorious.

And never dawned a fairer morning than the twentieth of May, for the sun that opened the flowers and mirrored itself in the dew-drops brought the color again to the children's faces, and filled every heart with confidence.

The birds sang joyously, the cattle returned to their pastures, the places of business were opened, and every one went about his work more gentle toward man and more grateful toward God.

After the darkness was passed, several persons traveled about to gather all possible information concerning this memorable day, and Dr. Tenny wrote an account of what he learned while on a journey from the east to Pennsylvania. He says the deepest darkness was in Essex county, Massachusetts, the lower part of New Hampshire, and the eastern portion of Maine (where my great-grandmother lived). In Rhode Island and Connecticut it was not so great; in New Jersey peculiar clouds were observed, but the darkness was not uncommon, and in the lower parts of Pennsylvania nothing unusual was observed.

It extended as far north as the American settlements and westward to Albany, but its exact limits could not be ascertained.

In Boston the darkness continued fourteen or fifteen hours, varying in duration at other places.

As it was impossible to attribute the darkness to an eclipse, the wise people formed many theories respecting it; being convinced that it was due to immense fires in the woods, winds blowing in opposite direcrections, and to the condition of the vapors; but Herschel says: "The dark day in northern America was one of those wonderful phenomena of nature which will always be read of with interest, but which philosophy is at loss to explain.—The Standard.

The Dog and Child.

Mr. Elihu Burritt gives in his book, called "A Walk from London to Land's End and Back," the touching illustration of the affection of a dog in Truro:

"I was sitting at the breakfast-table of a friend, who is a druggist, when he was called into the shop by a neighbor, who had come for medical aid, in a very remarkable and affecting case.

"He described it briefly and simply, but it would fill a volume of beautiful meaning. His family dog had incidentally made the acquaintance of a neighbor's child on the other side of the street.

"While lying on the door-stone, he had noticed this little thing, sometimes at the chamber window, and sometimes on the pavement, in a little carriage.

"During one of his walks on that side of the street, he met the baby, and looked over the rim of the basket carriage, as a loving dog can look, straight into a pair of baby eyes, and said, 'Good morning!' as well as he could.

"Little by little, day by day and week by week, this companionship went on, growing with the growth and strengthening with the strength of the little ones. The dog, doubtless because his master had no young child of his own, came at last to transfer frequently his watch and ward to the door-stone on the other side of the street, and to follow as a guard of honor to the baby's carriage on its daily airings.

"With what delight he gave himself up to all the pelting and little rude rompings, and rough-and-tumblings, of those baby hands.

"One day, as the dog lay in watch by the door stone, the child, peeping out of the window above, lost its balance, and fell on the stone pavement below. It was taken up quite dead! The red drops of the young life had bespattered the feet and face of the dog as he sprang to the rescue. His heart died out within him in one long, whining moan of grief.

"This was the neighbor's errand. He told in a few simple words. He had come to my friend the druggist, for a prescription for his dog—something to bring back his appetite."

APPLE DUMPLINGS.

Four or five large apples.
Twelve ounces of flour.
Four ounces of butter.
One-half teaspoonful of baking powder.
One-half pint cold water.
One ounce of sugar.

Pare and core the apples, leaving them whole. Put in a bowl twelve ounces of flour, add four ounces of butter; mix well together with fingers, add a pinch of salt, one-half teaspoonful of baking powder; add one-half pint cold water; turn the mixture out of the bowl and knead it firmly together. Then cut it into four or five pieces to correspond with the number of apples, make the dough into round lumps, and holding the apple in the right hand, with the left press the dough around the apple, keeping the left hand well covered with flour to prevent sticking; before closing the dough put a little sugar into the center of each apple. Place them on a slightly floured tin and bake twenty minutes. Put a skewer or fork into the center of the apple and if soft they are done. When the dumplings are done brush them over with the white of eggs, sprinkle over a little sugar, then return them to the oven for a few minutes to dry the egg.

Dresden Patties.—First cut some very stale bread into slices one and a half inches in thickness; then with a round biscuit cutter mark a circle on each slice. Out off all the bread around it with a knife, then mark each piece with a smaller cutter, then put two tablespoonsful of milk in a bowl and dip in the patties to wet, not to soak them. Beat one egg and roll the pieces in it, causing as much egg to adhere as possible; then put two tablespoonsful of bread crumbs in a paper and roll each piece in it. Have a stewpan of lard hot on the stove, and throw in these balls and allow them to cook two minutes. When nicely browned lay them on a piece of white paper for a moment to remove grease. Slip a knife into the mark of the circumference of thes maller circle and remove it. Then scoop out the center and fill with oysters, lobster cutlets or preserves. Replace the little brown top.

Next week we will publish Miss Dods' receipts for cheese pastry, broiling steak, sauce for steak, remarks on roasting and boiling, caramel brown, for making coffee and tea, manner of trussing a fowl, etc.

—At the Christian Association organized on Commencement day at Wheaton there were some twenty-five brethren from four States present who took part in the meeting. These were from five different denominations, besides those who claim no denominational standing. It was truly a meeting where the Holy Spirit gave liberty to the brethren and its future meetings have the promise of the same blessed presence. The brethren who have thus associated themselves understand that if they continue on in this way, the adversary will not neglect them or their meetings.

—Last Sabbath evening the services with the College church at Wheaton were especially directed to the Normal School which opened in the institution on Tuesday. The important duty of the church toward the teachers who will be gathered for this term of summer study was dwelt upon by Prof. Blanchard and others, and that a decided religious influence may be exerted will be the prayer and effort of the church. One hundred and ten applications had been received for admission to the school last week, which number will probably be increased.

FREE MISSIONS.

—The subject of independent mission work is under discussion in the First Church at Oberlin, of which Bro. O. M. Brown, the agent of the free missions in India and Bulgaria, is deacon. The Oberlin Gazette says that at the church prayer meeting on the 19th ult. Mr. Matson "came forward and read a very interesting, but rather lengthy paper showing the progress that has been made in missionary work in different parts of the world during the last twenty-five years, reading in connection therewith, a number of interesting and valuable statistics. After showing that all true, genuine missionary enterprises have their origin in faith, Mr. M. argued at considerable length to prove that better results of missionary efforts are secured by the regular church organizations than can be attained by individual or independent action. He contends that one of the strongest arguments that can be brought against independent missions is their independence. As they are responsible to no higher church organization they do things in their own way and are thus deprived of the benefit of the large experience of the older and regular church organizations, and hence are very liable to, and perhaps do, make many blunders and mistakes. This feature of the paper called out a little discussion just before the meeting closed, and as there seemed to be a slight difference of opinion among some of the brethren in regard to the position taken by Mr. M., relative to individual or independent missionary work, Mr. O. M. Brown was requested to present a paper at some subsequent meeting and give the arguments on the 'independent' side of this subject. This the reader of the paper heartily acquiesed in and Mr. Brown agreed to prepare a paper, and we have no doubt that he will prepare it ably and well. We like to have Mr. Brown talk, for he always talks earnestly and to the point, and when his paper shall have been prepared and read, we have no doubt that it will be pronounced 'very good.'"

—Bro. A. D. Zaraphonithes and wife, accompanied by two Armenian girls, started from New York on the steamer Denmark, of the National Line, for London on Wednesday, July 2. The prayers of their many friends in this country will follow them on their journey, and in their important mission for the kingdom and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ.

BAPTIST.

—Brethren in this reform, Elder Freeman desires that you pray for the success of his mission at Adams Center, N. Y., that God may give relief to the Baptist church of that place from its Masonic enemies.

—Elder Barlow and Captain Wm. Wilson from the Menomonie church attended the St. Croix Valley Association at Prescott, Wis., June 11th. Representing the church they brought the subject of lodge idolatry distinctly before the conference in such a way as to secure a discussion at the next meeting. A son of Dr. Colver was moderator, and strange to say seemed averse to the introduction of the subject.

—Dr. J. D. Fulton of the Centennial Baptist church, Brooklyn, is president of a Christian organization in that city known as the "Brooklyn Christian Brotherhood," which is doing much good in many ways. A Sabbath or two since open air meetings were begun by this society in this simple and inexpensive way. Two drays were drawn up to the sidewalk, a cabinet organ placed on one of them, and Dr. Fulton and others were on the other. The choir sang attractive hymns, and the doctor sent out his stirring appeals on behalf of Gospel truth. Few men are better fitted for such a work than Dr. Fulton. He knows how to move great masses of people. Similar meetings were held in other parts of Brooklyn. Rev. Samuel Alman has also been holding open air meetings in New York.

—The Michigan Avenue Baptist church, of this city, is said to have the largest debt in proportion to its membership, of any church in the country. The debt is $1,575 for each family of the congregation.

—It is reported that Dr. Lorimer, who has come to this city to the pulpit lately filled by Dr. Everts of the First Baptist church, is a Freemason. It is an unpleasant circumstance, if true, that the successor of Dr. Colver in Tremont Temple, Boston, and Dr. Everts in Chicago should so differ from them on this subject.

FREE BAPTIST.

—The church in Starksboro, Vermont, to which Rev. Isaac Hyatt ministered for same time and where he made his renunciation of Freemasonry, is being revived of God. Rev. J. W. Burgin, the present pastor, writes thus to the Morning Star:

"The interest in this church is gaining ground. Also in the community. We have good congregations on the Sabbath at the church also at the outposts, frequently meeting fifty or sixty at a time in the school-house. Last Sabbath I was permitted to baptize ten, one of them 71 years of age, and unite them to the church. Our hearts were enlarged with gratitude. The wife of the aged husband said at the water, 'I never expected to see this, although I have prayed for it a great while.' Brethren, shall we not have more faith when we pray, that we may receive?"

GERMAN BAPTIST (BRETHREN).

The great annual meeting of this body of Christians was held near Broadway, Va., in the early part of June. It is estimated that from 10,000 to 15,000 were on the grounds, and as many as 8,000 at once. Eld. R. H. Miller of the Brethren at Work, Lanark, Ill., was the moderator. Services were held on the grounds every day, and in the evening in churches, private houses and barns. One evening two preachers went to a barn to rest for the night, and found already gathered some hundred or more sleepers. A proposition was made that some one preach before the crowd yielded to slumber. Accordingly services were held in the dark, the audience sitting up in bed, that is, in the hay. The report of the meeting has the following question from the Middle Indiana district with the answer:

"Query, since the annual meeting of 1869 has decided that ex-Masons, who abandon the order, are eligible to the ministerial office, we ask this meeting to decide whether such Masons shall be required to disregard their oath, or whether they may continue to 'hail' the institution of Freemasonry. Yes, they shall be required to disregard their Masonic oath with reference to 'hailing' the institutions of Freemasonry."

That is, that the work of renunciation shall not be half done, but the practice of Masonic arts shall be abandoned, as did the men of Ephesus under Paul's preaching.

EVANGELICAL ASSOCIATION.

—Rev. T. S. LaDue of Allentown, Pa., writes to the Free Methodist: "Not two months ago a resolution was introduced into the annual conference of the 'Evangelical Association,' or Albright Methodists, in session here, requesting the General Conference to pass a law against receiving any more ministers connected with such institutions, and it was overwhelmingly voted down, between eighty and ninety voting against it, seven or eight neutral; not one for it, we are informed."

GENERAL.

—For the past two years new churches have been erected in Kansas at the rate of one every week, and the gain in Protestant members in the same time has been 16,303.

—The Moravian denomination is again in a prosperous condition in Bohemia, where it originated centuries ago, and from which it was expelled. It is now tolerated by the Austrian government, and it is expected that the mission will be reorganized by the General Synod which meets this month.

—The French Protestants, numbering about 700,000 souls, have contributed for home and foreign missions nearly 1,000,000 francs, or one-quarter of the sum which the great Roman Catholic Propagation Society has raised. They sustain foreign missions in the south of Africa in Senegal, and in Tahiti. They have been encouraged in their home missions by the appearance of an increasing disposition among the people to listen to Protestant teachings.

—The Baptist Weekly says: It is doubtful whether there is to-day a single Catholic bishop in the country who is not insolvent, unless he can be relieved by the sale of a large amount of church property. What appears in the case of Archbishop Purcell of Ohio, and Bishop Lynch of South Carolina, is only what, under a pressure, would prove to be the hopeless condition of all their ecclesiastical associates. Their liabilities can only be met by the sale of property held by them for the benefit of their church.

News of the Week.

—It is an encouraging fact that the number of idle men in various parts of this country has been gradually reduced within the past few months, and the labor market is now in a more satisfactory condition to laborers as a class than for years.

—A New Orleans physician says that he thinks the yellow fever will spread further north this year than it did last year. There is probably no special foundation for this opinion, but it may remind various municipal authorities that cleanliness is an excellent preventive in that and most other epidemics.

—Another centennial celebration is promised for the 16th of next month in glorification of the storming and capture of Stony Point, N. Y., by Gen. "Mad Anthony" Wayne, which performance has been characterized as "one of the most brilliant achievements of the revolution." The details of the commemoration are not wholly fixed upon, but the President and Cabinet and the Governors of the thirteen original States are among the guests expected, and a sham fight is planned under West Point officers. A monument is also to be erected some time in the future.

—A terrible accident happened June 28th at Lake Minnetonka, Minn. About 12:30 P. M., as the May Queen, one of the pleasure steamers plying on the lake, was pulling out from Rockwell's Island the boiler exploded, blowing the boat to atoms, not a vestige being seen thereafter. The boiler was thrown down the lake over a thirty-foot embankment, landing some three hundred feet away, breaking down trees in its path. A number of passengers were injured some of whom will die.

—According to the American Exporter the exports from the United States for the first ten months of the fiscal year show an increase in merchandise of over $21,000,000, compared with the corresponding period of last year. The increased exports of live cattle and hogs amount to $5,000,000, flour $2,000,000 and wheat $30,000,000. Barley exports have decreased $2,000,000 and Indian corn $8,000,000. The exports of manufactured goods generally show an increase. The balance of trade in our favor (specie excluded) for the past ten months is $14,401,536.

—A Protestant school-house in Mayrus, Galway county, Ireland, has been sacked by thirty persons, who came from a distance. Bibles were thrown into the sea. This is a revival of the disturbances which had been quieted after occasioning some alarm in the district some weeks ago. In connection with the sacking of the school-house, the chief secretary of Ireland announced in the House of Commons June 27, that the government was firmly resolved to preserve order, irrespective of the religion of the persons engaged in the outrage.

—General Grant was June 1st en route from Tientsin to Pekin. The latest advices indicate a considerable change in his future movements. It is now believed probable he may return to China after visiting Japan and proceed to Australia. The plans are subject to so many sudden alterations, however, that nothing absolutely certain is known a month in advance.

—A dispatch from Janina states that, pending the result of the meeting of ambassadors at Constantinople, the Turks have prepared everything for war. Reinforcements of six battalions of infantry and three batteries of artillery have arrived at Volo. Large bodies of Bashi-Bazouks are assembling in Albania, ready to march into Epirus and Thessaly.

—Arson is rife in St. Petersburg and in every part of Russia. The town of Szyran, on the Volga, has been nearly destroyed by fire. A number of persons have been arrested at Kieff, St. Petersburg and Moscow for clandestinely trading in explosives.

—The Sultan has signed a firman deposing the Khedive of Egypt in favor of his son, Prince Mohammed Tewfik. The Khedive has signified his compliance with the demand for his abdication.

—The Porte has sent a dispatch to the powers revoking the treaty of 1841, which authorized the Khedive to conclude treaties with foreign powers and maintain an army. The Porte will exert its influence to restore the finances and reform abuses in Egypt.

—Khotan is one of the important divisions of Kashgar, the old kingdom of Yakoob Beg. On the death of Yakoob the Chinese reoccupied the province, treating the Mohammedan population with severity. Now it is reported that the Mohammedans have revolted against the newly established Chinese authorities, and have driven out or massacred all the Chinese residents. This will give employment to the Chinese army that was preparing to move on the little province of Kuldja, occupied and held by Russia.

—Three fatal boiler explosions took place last Friday. In a Youngstown, O., rolling-mill, two men were killed and seven seriously injured. A steamboat blew up at Nebraska City, killing two and injuring several, some it is thought fatally. At Philadelphia the boiler of a planing-mill exploded, wrecking two dwelling houses near and killing several members of the two families.

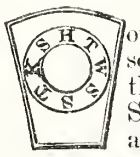
WORKING TOOLS OF A MARK MASTER

"THE CHISEL,

Morally demonstrates the advantages of discipline and education. The mind, like the diamond in its original state, is rude, and unpolished, but as the effect of the chisel on the external coat soon presents to view latent beauties of the diamond, so education discovers the latent virtues of the mind, and draws them forth to range the large field of matter and space, to display the summit of human knowledge, our duty to God to and man.



"THE MALLET

Morally teaches us to correct irregularities, and to reduce man to a proper level; so that, by quiet deportment he may, in the school of discipline, learn to be content. What the mallet is to the workman, enlightened reason is to the passion; it curbs ambition, it depresses envy, it moderates anger, and it encourages good dispositions; whence arises among good Masons that comely order,

'Which nothing earthly gives, or can destroy,
The soul's calm sunshine, and the heart'felt joy,"'
—Mackey's Ritualist, page 285.

THE MARK OF A MARK MASTER.

"In the passage from the second chapter of Revelations, which is read during the presentation of the Keystone, it is most probable that by the 'white stone' and the 'new name,' St. John referred to these tokens of alliance and friendship."—Mackey's Rit. page 287.

NOTE 279—FROM "FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED."

"The sixth degree, or that of Most Excellent Master, is as intimately connected with the third, or Master Mason's, as the Mark Master's is with that of the Fellow Craft. The Master Mason's degree is intended, in its symbolic design, to teach the doctrines of the resurrection of the dead and the immortality of the soul. But this corruption can only put on incorruption, and this mortal put on immortality by a passage through the portals of the grave. And here the degree of Most Excellent Master comes forward with its beautiful symbolism, to represent the man prepared to enter upon that eventful passage."—Mackey's Ritualist, page 312.

"The Most Excellent Master represents King Solomon, and should be dressed in a crimson robe, wearing a crown, and holding a sceptre in his hand."—Mackey's Ritualist, page 321.

NOTE 319 FROM "FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED."

"Three, and only three, can be exalted at the same time."—Sickels's Monitor, Part 2, page 74.

Royal Arch Due-uard—First Position.

Royal Arch Due-Guard—Second Position.

ROYAL ARCH DUE-GUARD.

Turning to the left and looking up, raise left hand and arm, as shown in cut, first position, palm of hand out; then bring up right hand, with a slight slap on back of left; then turn to the right, and raise right hand, and bring up left hand with a slap on right hand. [In some Chapters this is called the "sign," and the next sign is called the penal sign, as it is.]

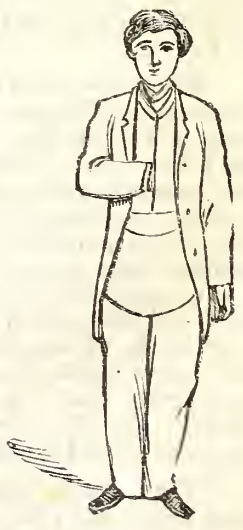
ROYAL ARCH[317] SIGN.

Right hand held with edge against forehead, thumb next to forehead; then draw hand across to the right. This refers to the penalty of the degree—skull smote off. See page 513.

Royal Arch Sign.

Royal Arch Grand Halling Sign

GRAND HAILING SIGN.



Fingers interlaced and held over the head, as shown in cut first position; turning to the right, bring hands down on thighs with a slight slap as if suffering severe pain in the back.

Grand Hailing Sign—Second Position.

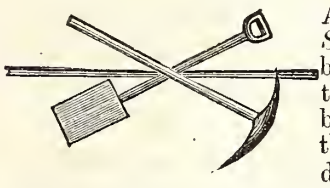
Sign Grand Master First Veil. Holding out a cane.

Sign of G. Master Second Veil. Putting right hand into bosom.

NOTE 317—FROM "FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED."

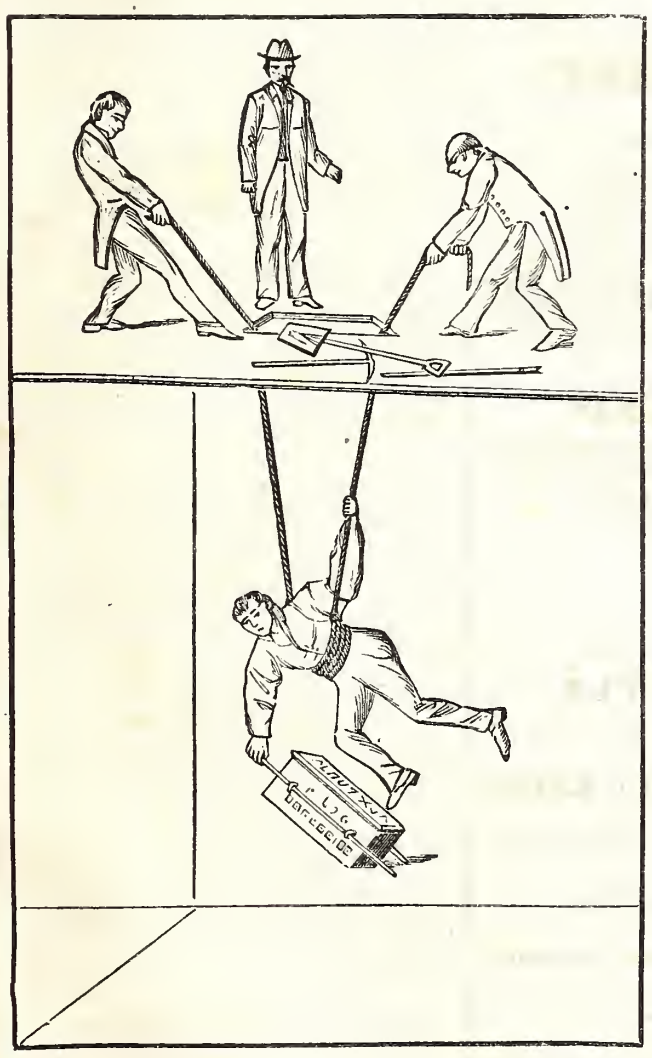
"The great object of pursuit in Masonry—the scope and tendency of all its investigations—is TRUTH. This is the goal to which all Masonic labor evidently tends. Sought for in every degree, and constantly approached, but never thoroughly and intimately embraced, at length, in the Royal Arch, the veils which concealed the object of search from our view are withdrawn, and the stimable prize is revealed."—Mackey's Ritualist, page 339.

Sign Grand Master Third Veil. Pouring out water as shown in Cut.



WORDS OF G. M. FIRST VEIL: Shem, Ham and Japheth.[339]

WORDS OF G. M. SECOND VEIL: Shem, Japheth and Adoniram.[342]



WORDS OF G. M. THIRD VEIL: Hoggai, Joshua and Zerrubbabel.

SIGNET OF G. M. THIRD VEIL: That of Zerrubbabel or Truth.

"THE WORKING TOOLS OF A ROYAL ARCH MASON

Are the Crow, Pickaxe and Spade. The Crow is used by operative masons to raise things of great weight and bulk; the Pickaxe to loosen the soil, and prepare it for digging; and the Spade to remove rubbish. But the Royal Arch Mason is emblematically taught to use them for more noble purpurposes. By them he is reminded that it is his sacred duty to lift from his mind the heavy weight of passions and prejudices which encumber his progress towards virtue, loosening the hold which long habits of sin and folly have had upon his disposition, and removing the rubbish of vice and ignorance, which prevents him from beholding that eternal foundation of truth and wisdom upon which he is to erect the spiritual and moral temple of his second life."—Sickels's Monitor, Part 2, page 65.

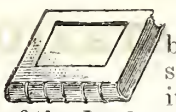
NOTE 339—FROM "FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED."

"Here our attention is invited by memorial words to the first ark, the ark of safety, which was constructed by Shem, Ham and Japheth."—Mackey's Ritualist, page 372.

NOTE 342—FROM "FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED."

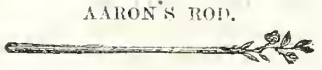


"The reference, at this place, which is made in some chapters to Adoniram who was one of the craftsmen at the temple of Solomon, and the mixture of his name with that of two of the sons of Noah, who lived almost two thousand years before him, is so preposterous an anachronism as to prove that it is a palpable innovation, at first introduced by some ignorant ritualist, and perpetuated by subsequent carelessness."—Mackey's Rit., Note on page 374.

THREE SQUARES OF OUR ANCIENT GRAND MASTERS.

"Freemasonry is throughout so connected a system that we are continually meeting in an inferior degree with something that is left to be explained in a higher. Such is the case with the three squares of our ancient Grand Masters, whose peculiar history can only be understood by those who have advanced to the degree of Select Master."—Mackey's Ritualist, page 381.

ROYAL ARCH SYMBOLS.



"Moses commanded the Levites which bare the ark of the covenant of the Lord, saying, Take this book of the law and put it in the side of the ark of the covenant of the Lord your God."—Mackey's Ritualist, page 384.

"And Moses said unto Aaron, Take a pot and put an omer full of manna therein and lay it up before the Lord."—Mackey's Ritualist, page 385.

AARON'S ROD.

"And the Lord said unto Moses, Bring Aaron's rod again before the testimony, to be kept for a token."—Mackey's Ritualists, page 386.

"THE EQUILATERAL OR PERFECT TRIANGLE

[on which the word was founded] is emblematical of the three essential attributes of Deity—namely: Omnipresence, Omniscience and Omnipotence, and as the equal sides or equal angles form but one TRIANGLE, so these three equal attributes constitute but one God. This emblem," [etc., see page 554.]—Sickels's Monitor, Part 2. page 73.

"THE ROYAL ARCH BANNER

Which should be displayed in every regular Chapter of Royal Arch Masons, is composed of the four standards used to distinguish the four principal tribes of the children of Israel who bore their BANNERS through the wilderness," [etc., see page 556.]—Sickels's Monitor, Part 2, page 76.

GRAND OMNIFIC OR ROYAL ARCH WORD.[359]

This must only be given by a group of three. Each with his right hand grasps the right wrist of the companion on the left, and with his left hand the left wrist of his companion on his right, throwing forward his right foot, hollow in front, his toe touching the heel of his companion on the right. This is called three times three, as there are three right hands, three left hands and three feet forming three triangles. They then repeat the verse on page 500 of F. M. Illustrated.

Group of Three, Giving Grand Omnific Word.

They then balance three times three with a short pause between each three, when they raise their right hands over their heads, as shown in cut, and the Grand Omnific Royal Arch word is given in low breath in syllables, as follows: The first one says Jah, second one buh, third one lun; then the second one says Jah, third one buh, and first one lun; then the third one says Jah, first one buh, second one lun.

The word Je-ho-vah is treated in the same way, and the word G-o-d is given in the same way, but letter by letter, thus each of the three being repeated three times, varying each time as explained. In some Chapters only the word Je-ho-vah is given in this way, and in others the word Jah-Bel-On was formerly used.

NOTE 359—FROM "FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED."

"This incommunicable name of God consists, as we have already observed, of four letters. Yod, He, Vav, and He, equivalent in English to the combination JHVH. It is now, we presume, evident that these four letters cannot in our own language be pronounced unless at least two vowels be supplied. Neither can they in Hebrew."—Note, Mackey's Lexicon, Art. Jehovah.

For Sale by Ezra A. Cook & Co., CHICAGO.

The leading article in the North American Review for July is entitled "Our Success at Paris in 1878," and appears over the signature of the Hon. R. C. McCormick, United States Commissioner-General at the recent French Exposition. The article is very elaborate, and includes all that is likely to interest American readers. "A Russian Nihilist," whose paper on the "Empire of the Discontented" attracted such wide attention some months since, contributes a second article under the title of "The Revolution in Russia." Thomas Hughes presents next the second and concluding portion of his article on "The Public Schools of England." The ground taken by this writer is the feasibility of naturalizing the English school system in America, and the reorganization which to him seems imminent of our present scheme of public education. The fourth paper is by General O. W. Howard, and aims to tell "The True Story of the Wallowa Campaign." Immediately following is a contribution from the pen of Dr. George M. Beard, devoted to "The Psychology of Spiritism." The peculiar methods of spiritualism, the modes judging it, and the reason why of America has fostered it, are a few of the important topics discussed by the author. The next paper is the conclusion of Mrs. Harriet B. Stowe's article on "The Education of Freedmen."

—A Berlin correspondent reports there is a mysterious coolness between Russia and Germany, and the Czar, in consequence of it, will not visit the empire.

Those who wish to know the character of Freemasonry, as shown by its own publications, will find many standard works in the following list.

No sensible Mason dares deny that such men as Albert G. Mackey, the great Masonic Lexicographer, and Daniel Sickels, the Masonic author and publisher, are the highest Masonic authority in the United States.

All the books advertised here are used by Masons, but Duncan's Ritual, Allyn's Ritual and Richardson's Monitor, are not publicly acknowledged as Masonic authority, because they tell too much.

FEMALE MASONRY.

MANNUAL OF THE ORDER OF THE EASTERN STAR

Containing the Ritual, Symbols Lectures etc., of the five Degrees of "Adoptive Masonry:" Jeptha's Daughter; Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, profusely illustrated and handsomely bound.

Topics of the Time.

The Chicago papers are greatly concerned about the dismissal of the head of the fire department, and fill columns day after day over the matter. Though the ousted official has an exceptionally good record, the newspaper war is largely political. But Mayor Harrison may bring about changes in another direction, to which fires are nothing, and a short paragraph is all the notice given it. He has announced himself in favor of licensing houses of prostitution and gambling dens, under the pretense that they can be then brought under the control of the police. Under his predecessor the police drove the gambling houses from the city, and might have cleared out the co-partner dens. But with the change of administration both are in full blast and fear no law. So too the three thousand saloons of the city ply their dreadful trade through every day in the week, the theaters have no day of rest, and under this free-and-easy policy all the restraints of morality are being broken down. Not quite eight years ago the city was called to humiliation, fasting and prayer when God laid his hand upon us and smote us with fire for our pride and folly. Is Cnicago preparing for another visitation of wrath?

The Philadelphia Press calls attention to the record of the Democratic nominee for governor of Kentucky, Luke P. Blackburn. In the report of the trial of the assassins of President Lincoln the testimony shows that this Blackburn was the principal in an attempt to fill our northern cities with pestilence by means of clothing which had been carefully infected with yellow fever, small-pox and other contagious diseases and smuggled into the country. Blackburn transacted his hellish business as a Freemason, and no other obligation seemed to be necessary to bind the parties to secrecy. This fact in the testimony is worth remembering.

The history of Adolph Sutro, a mining engineer of the great silver mines of Nevada, is a vindication of that poorly-appreciated class known as "hobby-riders," or "men of one idea." The great mines of Virginia City are opened on the top of Mt. Davidson, and all the immense operations are carried on at the expense of raising the ores and pumping the water from a depth of from a quarter to half a mile, and then with difficulty transporting the products to the foot of the mountain for smelting. Ten years or more ago Sutro began to agitate the opening of a tunnel at the base of the mountain into its heart, through which the water of the mines would run off and their ores be drawn out with ease. After great labor he succeeded in getting the necessary legislation through Congress, but he was opposed in every way by the owners of the "bonanza" mines who became prominent in politics about that time, one at least reaching the Senate. He was obliged even to carry his case before the miners of Nevada and work for their votes. He was driven to Europe to raise money. But he persisted with his "big bore," as it came to be known among his enemies, and on the last day of June, the water from the heated lower levels of the mines came flowing through his tunnel instead of being raised to the summit of the mountain. The completion of this great work at a cost of six million dollars, and its complete success, was the occasion of general rejoicing throughout the whole mining region, and bonfires and cannon greeted the successful hobbyist.

Following leisurely after the resumption of specie payments and the wonderful refunding of a large part of our national debt, the business of our country has been reviving through the warm months, and the army of unemployed has almost entirely surrendered unconditionally to the demands of labor. Railroads advertising for gangs of hands cannot find them, and the two million idle men in the country (so claimed) have been drawn into the whirlpool of industry to the watchful ear of the political demagogue. Real estate in New York city has lately taken an upward tendency, while on the broad plains west of the Missouri it never was in such demand. The Land Office in Washington is kept busy day and night, and in four months as much land has been sold as ever before in a whole year. The prospect of good crops over nearly the whole West renders the financial outlook yet more hopeful; and we seem to be preparing for a grand Thanksgiving.

If it is any satisfaction to know it, the aggregate debt of the United States, national, State, etc., is something less than the national debt of Great Britain, although the sum is over four thousand million dollars. The figures in detail are: debts of cities, towns and counties, $1,051,109,132; States $369,170,976; national, $2,027,182,468. Of the State debts $195,000,000 belongs to the South and it is estimated that fully one half of this debt has been defaulted upon, and, as in the case of Alabama, may be repudiated. That process is now going on in Louisiana. It is managed by reducing the valuation of property for tax levy and the per cent, until but $656,000 can be raised from this year's tax, an amount only sufficient to pay the expenses of the legislative and executive departments. Little is left for the judiciary, and nothing for public schools and the public creditor. The same process is going on in New Orleans and the holders of her $20,000,000 bonded debt are left to collect their interest if they can find it. For a temporary shift "wild cat" banks are demanded, but the national banking law is in the way. The slow, sure processes of industry and economy are too slowly learned; and the curse of slavery yet remains upon the land.

In Iceland there is a Bible in every house, and it is faithfully read. And Iceland has no theatre, prison, sheriff, cannon or militia.

Masonized Whiggery.

BY GEN. J. W. PHELPS.

We reformers ought to have a clear idea of what we propose to do. We must be prepared to meet the whole extent of the issue, or else beat a retreat. There is no middle ground in reforms; no half way between right and wrong. Masonry is not only out of all accord with republican institutions, but it is a great moral evil.

In the prosecution of our work it should be remembered that the Republican party is nothing but Masonized Whiggery. The respectable old Whig party, in order to fight the Democratic party with that party's own weapons, resorted to the use of Masonry. It just took a little sip of it at first, under the name of Know-nothingism; but soon becoming infatuated with the draught, it has rushed into all the intoxication of the lodge, and seems to have entirely forgotten its former respectability, its faith, and its moral integrity. It is intoxicated with a drugged religion—Freemasonry. It forgets God and our Christian religion, and has turned to this strange god of the sly-craft as one from whose worship it has met with success and glory. It boasts of having purged the nation of the sin of slavery, of having absolved the people from their great crime, and, while it renders adulation therefor to the god of the Masonic lodge, it rewards itself for its good deeds with illegitimate power and with plunder and spoils.

However bad the Democratic party can be, there is no safety in the Republican party for republican government. Even admitting that the Republican party and not the moral sense of the mass of the people, under providence, has abolished slavery, what more can it claim for itself than what was accomplished by a King David, who had merely got together and prepared the means for building the temple of the Lord, while he, himself, had become too much begrimed by war, and blood, and crime to use them. Even admitting that the Masonized craft and policy of the Republican party ended the war of abolition, instead of the moral spirit and immense numbers and treasures of a generally virtuous people, there is no evidence that that party is capable of accomplishing the reform that the country needs. That party itself needs reform. It is not an instrument from which the people can expect any good to the country. The unworthy spirit of Freemasonry has become its animating principle. It is given over to the practice of tricks and shams. It is demoralized Whiggery, and its rule is demoralizing the people.

In the contests between two parties, the rule of one party will always be a tyranny to the other. This will naturally lead the party out of power to resort to secret conspiracy, secret caucuses, in a word to Freemasonry, to subvert the rule of the party in power. But a resort to Freemasonry will bring inevitable demoralization; and no demoralized people can have the republican form of government.

When the Whig party resorted to Masonry it belittled itself, and made use of bad means for accomplishing a good end. The consequences of such a wrong step may be infinitely bad, and there is no possible way of extricating the country from them except through a party that shall renounce the error, and restore our politics to that frankness, openness and generous rivalry with which we began our national career.

Nothing could be more lamentable than to see a people announce certain principles of government, like the Declaration of Independence, openly, before God and men, which principles of government are just, true, and in accord with the dignity of man, and then to witness that people dodging away from these just principles into the subterfuges, the tricks, the shams, and the darksome tortuosities of the Masonic lodge; to see politicians and statesmen abandon the straight-forward, honest dealing of men, and resort to the indirections, the tergiversations, and hidden ways of slaves.

The spirit of the Masonic lodge is unmanly. It inspires men with a fear of losing their lives; and no such slaves can save either the lives of themselves or of the republic.

We Anti-masons must meet frankly and openly all the consequences of our movement. A reform is something that cannot be accomplished by stealing or skulking. We must not be ashamed of the smallness of our numbers, nor of the unpopularity of our sentiments. We must not be dismayed at the fact that the pulpit, and the press, and the news depots, and the railroad lines of travel have all become terrible engines in the hands of the Masonic lodge against us. Nay, we must not be terrified when we discover that every principal agent of Christian society, in every considerable village, the postmaster, the depot master, the hotel keeper, the lawyer, the doctor, the minister, the expressman, the reporter of the associated press, may have all been artfully initiated into the lodge, perverted from their duties, and made agents of that infamous, infidel worship of foreign gods. We must meet all these formidable adversaries with an unshaken faith in the truth and justice of our cause, and with a devotion that stops not this side of death and ruin to all our political interests.

He who turns aside and seeks for safety in middle courses; he who by sham pretensions to prudence, or by a mere prudery of moderation, hopes to win the approval of men; he who would expect to save his own life and that of Christian society too; he who mistakes the loud clamor of material interests for the voice of God; he who shrinks from plucking out and casting away the eye that offends him—such a man should turn back from the Anti-masonic line of march; suffer both of his eyes to be hoodwinked by the lodge, and grind at the mill, the derision and scorn of the common adversary of himself and of all mankind.

Every Whig should remember that his party has formed an alliance with a secret party whose principles are not above the level of Communism, Nihilism, or Mormonism, and so long as this alliance remains, the course of the republic must be downwards to its utter ruin.

A Summons to Surrender.

TO BE "DEALT WITH ACCORDING TO MASONIC LAW AND USAGE!"

HOLLAND, Mich., June 30, '79.

EDITOR CYNOSURE—Undoubtedly many, if not all, Christians have experienced from time to time that the devil will approach them in many different forms, and often cause us to stumble, if not fall; but on the other hand, how harmless he is to them who steadfastly and continually look to Jesus as their guide, and what silly blunders Satan will makethen!

A few days after our great Masonic exposition, your correspondent was accosted by a member of Unity lodge here, on the streets, in presence of a crowd, and in a few moments he was routed. Now, as several are low enough to state publicly that I am insane, and many more vile remarks, I informed the gentleman that, notwithstanding I had demitted from Unity lodge in August, 1877, and shortly after openly renounced the order, I was a member of the fraternity in good and regular standing according to Masonic law, Royal and Select Master included; for that according to their law they could never suspend or expel me without commencing in a regular manner, and by serving me with a copy of the charges and specifications. About a week afterwards I was honored with the following documents, which I forward to you for publication, so that you can see that they are official, with the seal of the lodge affixed, and which goes to prove that I am not insane (for certainly the lodge will never try an insane person), and that at the time of the public exposition here, and during the proof-reading of the book called "Freemasonry Illustrated," certified to before Justice C. Van Schelven, also a Mason, your correspondent was a Mason in good and regular standing according to all Masonic law. What a good joke on them! How ready they were to furnish me with the necessary proof, and at the same time making their lash so long that they strike into their own eyes. In one place I am called unaffiliated, and in another a member of Unity lodge.

To the Worshipful Master, Wardens and Brethren of Unity Lodge No. 191 of Free and Accepted Masons:

Brother Jacob O. Doesburg, a Master Mason (non-affiliated), and a resident of the City of Holland, and under the jurisdiction of this lodge,

Is hereby charged with unmasonic conduct, in this, to wit:

Specification 1st. That the said Jacob O. Doesburg, on the 25th day of February, A. L. 5879, published a certain article in a newspaper called the Christian Cynosure, and published in the City of Chicago, Ill., which is in direct violation of his moral and Masonic obligation, and an insult to the brethren of Unity Lodge.

Specification 2d. That the said Jacob O. Doesburg has for the past two months or more at divers times and places in the City of Holland, publicly expressed contemptuous opinions of the institutions of Masonry.

All of which is in violation of his duties and obligations as a Mason.

[L. S.] Wherefore, it is demanded that the said Jacob O. Doesburg be put upon his trial therefor, and dealt with according to Masonic law and usage.

Dated the 4th day of June, A. L. 5879. H. C. MALREM, J. W., Accuser.

To Brother Jacob O. Doesburg, of Unity Lodge No. 191, F. & A. M.:

You are hereby summoned and required to appear at a regular communication of Unity Lodge No. 191 of Free and Accepted Masons, to be held at its lodge rooms at Holland City, in the county of Ottawa, State of Michigan, on the 2d day of July, A. L. 5879, at 7½ o'clock P. M.

[L. S.] Then and there to make answer to charges and specifications now on file against you in said lodge.

A true copy of which charges and specifications is hereto annexed.

Dated the 4th day of June, A. L. 5879. By order of the lodge.

WM. H. JOSLIN, Sec'y.

Last Tuesday, June 24, we were promised the grandest turnout Masons have ever had in Holland. No less than from 1,000 to 3,000 were to be in the ranks, but, alas! the grand total amounted to 120 Masons from surrounding places and about thirty from here, making 150 in all. A trustworthy member of the order informed your correspondent that the W. M. of Unity Lodge was well loaded up at 8 o'clock in the morning, and the many visits paid to saloons during the day by the visiting brethren was noticed by everybody, and the large number of empty beer kegs rolled out in the morning from the different places, went to prove what kind of associates Christians (?) prefer, who think that they can consistently serve two masters. A brother seceder of the order wrote a few lines the next day to me, glorifying the Lord that he had prevented Satan in this grand and glorious jubilee and turned it into a grand failure! If the Lord is for us, who shall be against us?

Yours in Christ,

J. O. DOESBURG,
P. M. Unity ▭ No. 191.

Why Secret?

Religious orders of the Papal church abounded in the dark ages. Some of these were invented by good men and with the best of motives. All of them, however, became a corruption and a curse.

All secret orders profess to exist for worthy objects and for benevolent ends. They really do some humane and worthy acts. Thus, Good Templars profess temperance and the care of inebriates. Freemasons help a few widows, orphans and unfortunate persons. Odd-fellows frequently provide for the poor or sick in their order. Secret priesthoods practice their false religions. Nuns visit hospitals and help to alleviate the sufferers. Even pirates are known to practice hospitality, and bandits keep their word with their associates in crime, and both profess amid robbery and murder to be secret boards of equalization, distributing to the poor what they plunder from the rich, while even the Ku-klux and Molly Maguiers, are, in their own estimation, necessary remedies for monopolies and injustice which the laws fail to redress. It is an old and true adage in logic that "what proves too much proves nothing," aye more, is vicious. Therefore,professions of beneficence which would justify piracy, will not justify secret orders organized in the interest of moral reform and by men with the best of motives. In addition to their benevolence the common and plausible justification of secret orders is their resemblance to institutions ordained of God. In their blinded devotion to them the members of these orders not infrequently exalt the human above the divine. They sometimes say the lodge is better and more benevoleut than the church. They will say "the meetings of many societies, both civil and religious, are secret. The United States Senate transacts all its more important and delicate business with closed doors, and each Cabinet meeting is strictly a secret society. Grand juries the world over sit in secret. Church courts have held secret sessions in order to prudently administer discipline. Each family is a secret society and no one complains that custom from time immemorial has sealed up the doings of the family from the ears and eyes of outsiders." This is a most popular and sophistical line of argumentation and entirely ignores the difference between "secrecy" and "privacy" which it ingeniously confounds. Societies of a legitimate charter may have privacies without being secret societies. The above named organizations which practice some necessary privacy differ from a secret society as the day with some shade, clouds and umbrellas to keep off sun stroke differs from night. The privacies practiced by grand juries, churches and senates, whose privacy is incidental and temporary, can afford no justification of a lodge whose secrecy is constitutional and perpetual. Civil officers are to be "terrors to evil doers," and "revengers to execute wrath," and to do this sometimes requires a privacy of procedure that can no more justify the secrecy of the lodge room than you can justify by the necessary foraging of hungry soldiers in time of war, the tramp who steals your provisions in time of peace. With legitimate societies privacy is the exception, with secret orders secrecy is the rule. With the church, family and state privacy is incidental and non-essential. To compare a family cemented by blood and affection with the motley crowd of the lodge and fancy a resemblance in the brotherhoods of that divine organization on the one hand and this human compact on the other is to insult the God who ordained the family relation. A family conducted like a lodge, with a pledge and password at its doorstep, never until death to reveal what the comer sees or hears inside, would be endured nowhere No Christian church would be tolerated if so conducted. Nor would the lodge itself be allowed if it did not worship the "god of this world," who protects it for the sake of the worship it pays to him, and through barbarous, cruel and vindictive oaths, unlawful pledges and murderous intimidations, by false honor that comes only from men, by perils to business, grandiloquent and empty titles, heathenish superstitions, hopes of impunity for crime and secret worldly advantages. Hence the impious attempt to justify secret oath-bound orders. by comparing them in the concealment of their lodge conspiracies against outsiders to the family, is as illogical and monstrous as to attempt to justify brothels by their resemblance to Christian homes.—Sandy Lake News.

--Prof. Dana, the foremost of living geologists, packs a whole volume of argument into two sentences, in holding that the first chapter of Genesis is proved to be the right and natural account of creation, then it must have been written by inspiration. "Examining it as a geologist," adds Prof. Dana, "I find it to be in perfect accord with known science; therefore as a Christian, I assert that the Bible narrative must be inspired."

Ridicule is a weak weapon when leveled at a strong mind; but common men are cowards and dread an empty laugh.—Tupper.

Address of the Ohio State Convention.

TO THE MINISTERS OF THE GOSPEL IN THE UNITED STATES:

Dear Brethren: — The Ohio State Christian Association, at their last annual convention, appointed the undersigned ministers in three branches of the Christian church, to prepare an address to you on secret societies, and Freemasonry in particular. This we attempt to do, and the following address is respectfully presented, not so much in the name of the Association which appointed us, as in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ whose servants we are; whose church is his body and whose members we are told "should have the same care, one of another." As ministers, we are all placed not only as shepherds, but as watchmen on the towers of Zion. And as the humblest soldier in his country's service should he see the enemy approaching, or should he detect a spy in the camp, would be unfaithful if he did not sound the alarm, or make known the fact to his commanding officer, so should we be unfaithful if we see a danger threatening the churches under your care which you do not, and altogether hold our peace. We are even put in fear in this regard, by a clause in our common commission, to-wit: "If the watchman see the sword come and blow not the trumpet," etc.

We of the committee are acquainted with Freemasonry, as the great majority of you are not. We are familiar not only with its mystic language, but with its history, rites, oaths, emblems, teachings, principles and practices. And we do see in this institution a danger alarmingly threatening to the health, purity and peace of our churches; nay, to their very existence; and not merely to the churches as such, but to our civil liberties and to all the beneficent institutions of our land. And here let us say in the outset, that Freemasonry is a distinct religion, denying or utterly ignoring the Lord Jesus; and promising freedom from sin and salvation by itself alone. It is in fact only a revival of the ancient heathen mysteries, as its highest authorities claim. All the regular "work" of the lodge is worship—religious worship. It is as unchristian and anti-Christian as Islamism or Mormonism. And we do not hesitate to declare that for a man understandingly to adopt the principles and teachings of Freemasonry and be a Christian at the same time, is as impossible as it is for one to be a Mahommedan or a Mormon and a Christian at the same time. We are not denying that there are good and Christian men who are members of Masonic lodges. So there have been good men who had a plurality of wives. And in the late war which drenched the land in blood and clothed the nation in mourning, there were good Christian men on both sides of the line. But does this fact justify the crimes in which some of them participated, or which they at least encouraged? But these men do not understandingly adopt, or adopt at all the principles and teachings of Freemasonry. We do not however undertake to tell how it is that good men can be members of Masonic lodges. It is very difficult to see how this can be. But it will relieve the difficulty somewhat to observe that Masonry is not the same thing to all the members of the fraternity. And often men who are members, probably every one of them see in it a different thing and adheres to it for a different reason. Thus one is taken by the trappings and parades, and another by the curiosity of the signs. A third sees in it help in his business, and a fourth help in unexpected difficulty, and a fifth protection in his crimes. A sixth is seeking elevation to office, and a seventh enjoys the theatrical performances and the festivities of the lodge. One, a minister, thinks he has found a beautiful system of morals in the emblemology of the order, and one thinks he has found beautiful illustrations of Bible truth in the Knight Templar degree; whilst a tenth takes Masonry for his religion and expects to be saved thereby; though the proportion of this latter class is much greater than one in ten.

The whole system, in all its principles and tendencies, is supremely selfish. And whatever may be the motives of the various members in uniting with or adhering to the order, they all utter or assent to the same falsehoods, take the same profane oaths and practice the same religious mockeries. They all deny or ignore the Lord Jesus in the lodge and swear to uphold the constitutions and obey the laws and edicts of the order, and by their influence they all practically uphold the institution with all its infidelity and all its enormities; and every one of them is personally injured by it in proportion to what he has to do with it. It is impossible for a man to go through with, or even confusedly assent to the deception and fraud and falsehood and profanity and blasphemy that make part of the ceremonies of every degree, and suffer no injury to his moral character. In short, when a Christian goes into the lodge, he is a more or less sickly Christian as long as he adheres to it; and in the vast majority of cases he becomes of little value to the church. And when one not a Christian enters the lodge, there is just about the same hope of his being converted that there is of the conversion of a Mormon or a Jew. He has found a religion with rites more numerous and imposing than those of the Bible; a religion that requires no repentance, no self-denial, no mortification of the flesh, and no sprinkling of the blood of atonement; but which promises a place in the "grand lodge above," and the reward of the "just made perfect" to all who have taken the Master's degree and keep their Masonic obligations. And this religion, he will commonly tell you, is good enough for him.

But we do not undertake to point out all the ways in which Masonry is making itself injurious to the churches or endangering their welfare. Much less do we undertake here to reveal the system which the late Rev. Nathaniel Colver, D.D., who had taken seven degrees, declared to be, as he believed, "the masterpiece of Satan and a terrible snare to men." The work would be as great and as needless as that of revealing the laws of Ohio. Our wish is rather that you would examine for yourselves, that you will look into the matter, that you will make yourselves acquainted, as we have, with the history, rites, oaths, teachings, despotic government and practical workings of the institution. Then, and not till then, will you be fully qualified to judge of your duty in regard to the matter. There is no just excuse for ignorance; and it certainly is not very manly to confess that we are afraid to look Masonry in the face. Freemasonry is no more secret than the Presbyterian Confession of Faith is secret. It is quite as accessible and as easy to become acquainted with as any other system or work extant. Masonic writers themselves, their rituals, monitors and lexicons are the best expositors of the system, whilst Stearns, and Bernard, and Allyn, and Thatcher, and Finney, most of whom had been Masons, and all now among the noblest and purest spirits above that ever lived, with Tapley and Rathbun, and a hundred others now living, have put the whole system, with its character and workings, within your reach. They all testify, nay, demonstrate, that Freemasonry disseminates the most dangerous errors in religion, corrupts private and public morals, and unrighteously interferes in the administration of civil affairs; and is therefore dangerous alike to the church and to the state. And can we who are "set for the defence of the Gospel" and the guardianship of public morals, say with truth that this is no concern of ours?

For years past we have all received frequent appeals to aid in planting and sustaining the ordinances of the Gospel in the Territory of Utah, and thereby wipe out the blot of Mormonism from the land, or bury the carcass of a false religion whose festering corruptions are "rank and smell to heaven." But suppose that Mormonism, instead of being confined to a single valley, were spread all over the land, would the evil be less than it is now? And suppose it had its congregations recognized in all our cities, towns and hamlets, and its wily secret agents in all our churches, and that they were every day seducing our sons and our daughters, and casting them bound into their "black holes" of falsehood, corruption and infamy, would you be silent on the subject? Would you lift no note of warning to the ignorant and unwary? And yet all this is true of Freemasonry, an institution as Christless and profane, and wicked and corrupting as Mormonism.

The subject of promiscuous dancing has frequently been before our various ecclesiastical courts, as an evil from which our churches should be purged. Bishop Coxe of western New York, has declared that he will confirm no candidates who indulge in "lascivious dancing;" and the General Assembly of the larger Presbyterian church has repeatedly sent down to the courts below its solemn deliverances on this subject. And many of us ministers have thought it not unsuitable for us to preach on the subject, and make it matter of discipline in the churches under our care. But why do we discipline the children for their midnight routs in the ball-room, whilst we allow their fathers unrebuked and without remonstrance, to go through with ceremonies far more indecent and corrupting in the lodge? Why do we discipline the children for that which at most has only an immoral tendency, whilst we allow their fathers to uphold and practice the rite of a heathen worship from which the name of the Lord Jesus is excluded by law, and which cannot be gone through with without the utterance of falsehood, profanity and blasphemy? Do we not in this matter put ourselves within the range of our Lord's scathing rebuke of the Scribes and Pharisees, when he said, "Ye pay tithes of mint and anise and cummin, and neglect the weightier matters of the law. Ye strain at a gnat and swallow a camel."

We are not ignorant of nor indifferent to the difficulties of the case. Freemasonry has so long and with such boundless arrogance claimed for itself the discovery and the conservation of all religious knowledge, and all that is really valuable in science and the arts of civilization, and these pretensions have been conceded to it so long and to such an extent, that it requires a courageous faith to look its enormities in the face and to treat the system as we do other systems of falsehood and wickedness. And this system, with its vast pretensions, is so interwoven in all our social relations, and all our habits of thinking, that great wisdom and care are required in dealing with it. But as there are very many Masons who are convinced of the evils of the system and would renounce to-day were they not restrained by fear, so you must allow us to say, we are persuaded there are many of you who are convinced of the evil, but are restrained from opening your lips on the subject, and even from making yourselves thoroughly acquainted with it, through the fear of man. We know that this is the case with some of you, as it certainly is with hundreds of our members. The lodge is felt and confessed to be a terrible despotism and a terribly persecuting power.

A highly respectable minister said to one of this committee, as an excuse for his silence on Masonry whilst he freely spoke out on gambling: "Gambling is an open enemy, but Freemasonry is secret. It strikes behind your back; it can kill a man so quietly that he will never know what hurt him." And an official member in one of our churches who had taken three degrees, was heard to say, "I see the evil, but Freemasonry is strong. It is not wise to oppose it." Men do not dare to expose or oppose or even to examine Freemasonry, lest it should injure their business, or disturb their relations with friends and neighbors, or bring down upon them all the terribly persecuting power of the lodge. That the lodge, i. e., the fraternity has the reputation of 'striking behind one's back,' and of 'killing a man so quietly that he will never know what hurt him,' is not much in favor of its morality. But it is this threatening power that awes the world and keeps so many of us in fear to-day. And yet have we not given it this power by our tolerance, our cringing and humble submission? Did we all stand up manfully for the truth, and did we expose the shams aud wickedness of Masonry as we do other shams and wickedness; did we faithfully warn our young men against the seductions of the lodge as Solomon warns them against the flatteries of her "whose steps take hold on hell," very soon, we think, this awful power would quail and go backward and stumble and fall. It is said that savage beasts will quail when you look them in the eye. But cowardice never conquered. What! Shall a minister of Christ, in this Christian land or any where be silent, not daring to rebuke sin in high places through fear of an organized heathen power, or any power of man? He whom we profess to follow, and whose servants we trust we are, has given us instructions on this point. "Fear not them," says he, "who kill the body and after that have no more that they can do. But fear him who hath power to cast both soul and body into hell. Yea, I say unto you, fear him."

These words may indeed sound harsh to some of you; and to some whom we have long known and joyfully recognized as brethren beloved. But there are some errors and forms of wickedness so gross that they cannot be described in gentle terms, and Masonry we take to be of these. But for the truthfulness of the statements here made we refer you not simply to the rites of the order as they are fully revealed and accessible to you all, but to the highest Masonic authorities, such as Webb's Monitor, with an appendix on Masonic law by Robert Morris, and Mackey's Ritualist and Lexicon of Freemasonry, books to be found on sale by Masonic publishers.

We also beg leave to introduce a brief paragraph from the pen of the late Rev. Moses Thacher. The name of the good old man was on the roll of ministers appended to the Minutes of the General Assembly of the larger Presbyterian church for the year 1878, though he has since gone to his reward. A few years ago, in a correspondence with one of this committee in regard to the revelations of Morgan, Bernard, Allyn and Finney, he wrote:

"The books you mention are true, not only in part, but as a whole. I took seven degrees, but when I found their hypocrisy and wickedness I came out at once."

He afterwards sent to the same party a copy of a Royal Arch Mason's oath, written with his own hand, and as taken by himself fifty years before.

In the year 1830 there was a National Convention of Anti-masons held in the city of Philadelphia, in which Wm. H. Seward, Thaddeus Stevens, Wm. Slade, Joseph Ritner and other men of like celebrity took part. Rev. Moses Thacher was chairman of a committee of eleven seceding Masons appointed to report on the degrees of the order. Having made their report in substantial agreement with Bernard, Allyn and others, they say, and we wish to make their sentiment our own:

"In concluding this report we make no appeal for the truth of these disclosures. We speak what we know and testify what we have seen and our hands have handled. We wish not to excite, but to warn; not to wound, but to heal the public mind with immutable truth. We are not prompted by feelings of unkindness toward any brother Mason, or by any political or personal motives in seceding from Masonry, but only a sincere regard for the rising generation, for our whole country and for posterity. What is there in Masonry for which we should adhere to it? Its form and character, its doctrine and usages, its origin and practices conspire to make it unspeakably odious to a virtuous mind, and dangerous to any government."

Brethren, would it not be manly in us, would it not honor the Master whom we serve, and be pleasing to him who died a Witness for the truth, and should we not in all probability be more successful in building up his kingdom, if we should treat Masonry as we do other systems of error and forms of wickedness? as we do Universalism and Mormonism, adultery and gambling? Very likely we shall find opposition for a time. Very likely some of us may lose our pulpits. but is it not written, "He that findeth his life shall lose it, and he that loseth his life for my sake shall keep it unto life eternal?" Freemasonry is an enemy of Christ; and now that this enemy is entrenching himself throughout the land—and daily leading captive our young men and the goodliest of them, and flaunting his black flag in front of our churches and our pulpits,

"O who's there among us, the true and the tried,
Who will stand by his colors, who is on the Lord's side!"

As to other kindred associations, viz: Odd-fellows, Redmen, Knights of Pythias, grangers, Sons of Temperance, Good Templars, and the like, whoever examines their rituals will see that they were all gotten up by Masons. And though none of them, so far as we have examined, is so entirely heathen, blasphemous and wicked as the parent institution, yet they all have more or less of the same image, and partake more or less of the same character. They are all rivals of the church of Christ, and are all nurseries of selfishness. And they were all evidently invented, not for the purpose of accomplishing any benevolent end, but to strengthen Freemasonry, as earthworks and redoubts are built for the purpose of strengthening the already strong fortification. The grange was never intended to benefit the farmer, but to make the farmer give his support to secrecy. And the society of Good Templars was not invented to aid the cause of temperance, but to make temperance, already popular, aid the cause of secrecy, or Freemasonry. And so we find, almost universally, that the members of these various minor orders, being committed to secrecy, will stand up for Freemasonry as the child stands up for its mother.

And all these various orders are opposed to the spirit and teaching and practice of the Saviour, our great exemplar, who said, "I ever spake openly to the world, and in secret have I said nothing."

Moreover, God has given three, and only three, social organizations to the world: the family, for the care and education of children; the church, for the maintainance and propagation of his Gospel; and the State, for the preservation of public order. And these outside institutions, the whole brood of them, whatever their pretended design, are unauthorized of God. His blessing cannot be called upon them. They are opposed to him; and his command is, "Come out from among them, and be separate, and I will receive you, and be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty."

We add no closing exhortation to this address. Our design has been simply to lay before you, in the spirit of brotherly love, facts with which we are acquainted, whilst many of you are not, and to commend them to your consideration. And our prayer is that the spirit of Christ may guide us alike unto all truth, and that he will use us for his glory, and through the riches of his grace bring us all at last to his eternal kingdom. Amen.

—Awhile since in overhauling the warehouse of a steamship company in New Bedford, Mass., a half barrel, which had been some three years in the building uncalled for, was broken open and its contents discovered to be human bones. The skull had been smoothly sawed off just above the eyes. The grim freight was turned over to the chief of police, who being a Knight Templar had a peculiar Masonic qualm on beholding the "smote off" skull, and remembered the "fifth libation." The matter got into the papers as a "mystery," but very soon "nobody knew anything about the matter," and the investigation ended.

THE NEW ENGLAND WORK.

BARRINGTON, N. H., July 1.

DEAR BRO. KELLOGG:—I find that in the month of June I gave nineteen lectures and preached three sermons; expended $16.91, and received $45.40. My work in this State has been in the following order: One sermon and lecture at Center Strafford; one lecture at Canterbury; one at Barnstead, where there is one church, two stores, and three dramshops; one at Clarktown, one at Northwood; one sermon at Northwood and one lecture at Barrington. There has been a fair attendance at all these points. At Canterbury, a Mason in the congregation told us that the most I had said was false, but failed to specify anything in particular. I received a vote of thanks and a fair collection.

At Northwood I was gravely informed that Bro. Stoddard must be a very bad man, because he had invented a story about the Masons personating Hiram Abiff, being knocked down, lying in the grave, and being raised on the five points of fellowship, etc. They said the Masons there denied these things, and that it was wicked to tell such falsehoods. They were still more shocked when I told them that all who were decently well informed knew these things to be true, and that it was their Masonic ministers who were the liars. I don't object to sending missionaries to Africa and India, but New Hampshire ignorance and wickedness should have the first and largest attention. The same influences that have made this State so widely different from Massachusetts and Vermont, politically, are abundantly manifest in the low state of the the temperance and Anti-masonc reforms.

Last night I had a good meeting at Barrington, and was kindly aided by Rev. Mr. Baucher, pastor of the Congregational church and a seceding Mason. He thoroughly abhors the whole system, and is free to say so. He has been but a little while on his present field, and will perhaps ere long feel called upon to take a bolder stand.

It is not all granite in New Hampshire; there are noble men and women here who are battling for the right, and making progress in the cause of reform. I am to visit a few more points in this State and then go to Maine.

Yours, in the Lord,

H. H. HINMAN.

A Masonic Mob Threatens Eld. Rathbun's Life.

THE EXPOSITIONS OF MASONRY IN THOMPSON AND MORRISON, ILL.

Dear Brethren:—Masonic Hall, Thompson, Ill., was filled on Wednesday evening, May 28th, by those who had come to see the working of the first degree of Masonry. After the usual devotional exercises and a short lecture by myself, the degree was worked by Eld. Rathbun in his usual effective manner. The Masons had tried to prejudice people against us by lying about our work and endeavoring to defame our characters. It was told that at Savanna the candidate was shown with his shirt entirely off, the Masons evidently hoping by this lie to keep women from our meetings. They failed, however, for many women were present on both evenings. The Masonic lodge was well represented also, on both evenings, the members not appearing with their aprons on, however, as they had said they would, if report be true.

The hall was crowded on Thursday evening, May 29th, to see the third degree worked. While Bro. Rathbun was unfolding the abominations of the Masonic system, Captain Slocum Dunn, a Mason, interrupted by calling him "a degraded dog." Bro. R. then proceeded to show that Captain D. was simply illustrating Masonry, by proving from Mackey's Lexicon that all non-Masons are Masonically considered as dogs.

But the Masons were very angry that the "true inwardness" of their institution should be shown up, and began to make much disturbance by moving about in the hall, talking aloud, swearing, etc. Repeated calls for order produced no effect, the Masons, a number of whom had gathered near the door, declaring that we should not have order. Bro. Rathbun went on, however, and finished the degree. As soon as the meeting was formally closed the Masons pushed forward to the stage, led by Wm. Tate, son-in-law of Capt. Dunn, and Byron Dunn, the captain's son. The rioters were not content with using most wretchedly abusive and indecent language toward Bro. R., and that in the presence of ladies, but Byron Dunn, especially, told with a great many big oaths his desire to kill Bro. Rathbun right there and then, shaking his fists and threatening savage vengeance. But the leaders in these fierce and lawless demonstrations being led away by the police, the mob were compelled to leave the hall, Eld. Louver, M. E. minister, urging them not to use violence, but to allow us to go in peace.

We were kept in the hall with our friends some time after the withdrawal of the mob, Bro. R. being repeatedly assured by a policeman that his life would be in great danger if he attempted to go. We were escorted out after a while by a guard of policemen and citizens to the house of a friend, Mr. Cone. As we passed down the hall stairs I saw by the lightning flashes—a storm was coming up—a crowd of men gathered on the street, who yelled after us. So in the good providence of God we escaped without harm only that Bro. Rathbun received a somewhat severe scratch on his head, from some one as he passed out of the hall. It is believed that whisky worked with Masonry in getting up the mob. We were told that many Thompson Masons are in the habit of drinking.

Bro. R. staid over night at the house of Mr. Cone, a real Antimason, and started for Mt. Morris, Ogle county, Friday morning with a Bro. Fulton of Fair Haven, who kindly accompanied him to afford protection in case of need. Bro. Mitchell also went with him a ways out of town for the same purpose.

We will not forget the kindness and hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Cone, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Dyson and others. The brethren from Fair Haven and Ustick were especially helpful, coming as they did a long distance to assist and protect us, as the Masons had threatened us long before we went to Thompson.

I was not at Mt. Morris with Bro. Rathbun on May 30 and 31, as our grove meeting at Ustick was to be held then. On Monday and Tuesday, June 2 and 3, Bro. R. worked the degrees in Morrison. On Monday evening the attendance was large, and on Tuesday evening there was a fair gathering, although the Masons did their best to keep folks away—getting up sociables, etc., to draw them elsewhere. They also showed their "benevolence" by circulating lying reports about me to the effect that I bought and drank liquor in a saloon in Morrison, that I played in a beer-garden in Thompson and that I was put in jail there. So you see I have some cause to "rejoice and leap for joy," (Luke 6: 23) as well as Bro. Rathbun.

I wish to say for the encouragement of others, that in spite of the efforts of Masons to keep people away, the 10ct. admittance fee taken on the second evening in this series of expositions, has amounted to more than enough to pay Bro. Rathbun for his services and his traveling expenses.

Elder Turney Lights the Watch-fires in W. Virginia.

In company with Jonathan W. Moss, I made a recent visit to the house of Joseph H. Wilson, not far from Turkey Run postoffice, Marshall county, W. Virginia, and had the pleasure of giving three discourses in the neighborhood. In my first address I adduced evidence to show that Freemasonry was the means by which the slaveholders of the South brought about the rebellion, quoting from Gen. Phelps, E. J. Chalfant, President Lincoln, and others in proof. I also appealed to Mackey's Manual of the Lodge, page 216, where he says, "So that if a brother should be a rebel against the State * * * they cannot expel him from the lodge, and his relation to it remains indefeasible." A similar doctrine taught in the Textbook of Masonic Jurisprudence, from which I made a quotation at second hand to the like effect. After showing up the order as treasonable and murderous, I conferenced the testimony as to its religious character, in doing which I derived great aid from the "Master's Carpet." The fact that Freemasonry abrogates the ten commandments was also shown.

1. It has another god, which it calls the "Grand Architect of the Universe," instead of the God of the first commandment, who stands revealed as the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit; and by its rejection of Christ it discards the Father also, as well as repudiates the Spirit itself.

2. It has made many symbols and images of things in heaven above and in the earth beneath, in studied contempt of the second commandment; and it worships the compass and square, as well as the point within the circle, thereby practicing gross and horrible idolatry.

3. It has with revolting profanity repeatedly taken in vain the name of God in its ceremonies.

4. It has place for the Sabbath, only to desecrate its sanctity, and convert it into a pagan holiday.

5. It has dishonored the uninitiated parents by teaching sons to regard such parents as "profane dogs," as well as by giving its members secrets to be carefully concealed from both father and mother, although shared with lewd libertines found in so many lodges.

6. It has sworn its members to revolting death penalties, and its numerous murders prove that assassination is its most potent peculiarity.

7. It has restricted the application of the law against adultery to a few women who are known by the lodge-libertine to be relatives of some brother Master Mason, and has thus given its broadest sanction to the violation of the chastity of all other females.

8. It has stolen from the candidate all his best manhood, and proceeds to overthrow, in lodge fashion, the law against stealing, by restricting its provisions to such as are members of the fraternity of Freemasonry; so that the insider may steal from the outsider, without in the least imparing his good standing in the order.

9. It has had its members to bear false witness in the civil courts, time and again, for the purpose of shielding such of their Masonic brethren as were held for trial; and it continues to bear false witness as to the character of the exposures which have been made of its so-called secrets.

10. It has decoyed many of its victims by appealing to, and promising a gratification of, one of the worst traits in human nature—"covetousness, which is idolatry." It holds out the prospect of taking secret advantage of a man's uncable-towed neighbors. Thus this embodiment of wickedness, with its mysteries of Mah-hah-bone and murder-manufactories, has set aside the ten commandments in the law of God, as well as substituted its mockeries for the very atonement of Christ himself, whose very name it carefully excludes and erases in quoting from the New Testament itself. Nevertheless it promises salvation by its own rites. Do you doubt it? Look at Mackey's Lexicon of Freemasonry, Art. "Acacian," p. 16:

"Acacian. A term derived from akakia, innocence, and signifying a Mason, who, by living in strict obedience to the obligations and precepts of the fraternity, is free from sin."

To judge just how "free from sin" such a Mason would be, I refer to some of the obligations which every Master Mason has taken:

"Furthermore do I promise and swear, that I will keep the secrets of a worthy brother Master Mason as inviolable as my own, when communicated to, and received by me as such, murder and treason excepted and they only at my option."

All crimes except the two specified have to be kept secret—are included among the secrets which every Master Mason, whether he be a minister or a mountebank, has sworn never to reveal; but that no Master Mason may be punished for even "murder and treason," provided he employs the grand hailing sign of distress, is clear enough from another clause of the Master Mason's lodge oath:

"And should I ever see the signal given, or hear the words accompanying it, I will immediately repair to the relief of the person giving it, should there be greater probability of saving his life than of losing my own."

Not to mention the many Masonic murders that have come to light since the time of the Morgan tragedy, the question may be asked, When did a Freemason receive punishment for murdering a fellow citizen, unless where the one killed was also a member in good standing of the same irresponsible midnight clan? If a Freemason kills one of his fellow lodgemen, he will probably be hanged for the crime; but if a Freemason were to cut my throat from ear to ear, would he suffer any such penalty? Appeal to the murder records in the courts of this country, if you would have an answer.

In course of my remarks, I quoted the poem recently published in the Cynosure,, Alexander Thompson's "Freeman's Reply to the Invitation of the Craftsman;" and before coming to a close, I commented on the minor secret orders, grangers, Good Templars and such like, not forgetting to give a portion of the initiatory ceremony in Odd-fellowship. Rev. A. B. Grosh, in his Manual, p.

90, while discoursing on "Initiations in General," fairly exposes the cloven foot by saying, "In one word, what regeneration by the Word of Truth is in religion, initiation is in Odd-fellowship." Yet there are some Odd-fellows who know so little of the authoritative teachings of their order, that they will even take offense on hearing that Odd-fellowship professes to regenerate men by its initiatory ceremony; but such is the case, as the above quotation from the Odd-fellow's manual pointedly proves. The very best attention was given, although the time occupied in the oration did not fall short of two hours.

The next day being Sabbath, at half-past ten A. M., I preached at the Sand Hill M. E. church, taking for my text the words, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" In the sermon, among other things, I did not forget to urge and enforce the duty of forsaking, renouncing and exposing the lodge, as a matter of obedience to the will of the Lord; and that the person who renounces and reveals lodgery to the world is not a "perjured wretch," I showed by the case of St. Paul himself. I explained as best I could the true nature of an oath and when it was or was not to be regarded as binding. One poor old gray-headed Freemason, named Warder, could not stand the truth, for when I made the grand hailing sign of distress, for the instruction of my audience in the Mah-hah-bone mysteries, instead of repairing to my relief, he repaired precipitately from the church, though every one else remained to listen to the truth as it is in Jesus. Good was done most undoubtedly. We ought to obey Christ as a soldier obeys his general.

At four o'clock that afternoon I filled an appointment at Stuhl's chapel, taking for my text 1 Peter ii. 21: "Leaving us an example." I dwelt largely on the example which Christ sets us in looking after the welfare of others; in denouncing and opposing all forms of wickedness; in refusing to swerve from duty; in courageous truthfulness, and in having "said nothing in secret." In both sermons I tried, in the fear of God, to so present the truth that souls might be saved; for a sermon which does not tell a sinner how he can be saved through the blood of Christ, fails to accomplish the desired end of preaching.

The details of our journey, together with several important items of interest to readers, against the lodge, will probably be written up for the Cynosure by my friend and leading supporter, Bro. J. W. Moss. But before closing, I would like to ask the friends who have Masonic books which they are not using, to please bear in mind that I would be grateful for any book in the following list: Pierson's Traditions of Freemasonry, Mackey's Lexicon, the General Ahiman Rezon, or Freemason's Guide, by Sickels; Webb's Monitor, by Morris; Mackey's Symbolism, the Text Book of Masonic Jurisprudence, Masonic Ritualist, Chase's Digest of Masonic Law. I already have Mackey's Manual of the Lodge. I cannot afford to buy any of the books which I have mentioned, but if any of them are furnished me I am willing to publish the name of the book sent and that of the donor in the columns of the Cynosure. My postoffice address is "Cameron, Marshall Co., W. Va."

Correspondence.

WILL THAT TIME EVER COME?

ST. PAUL, Minn.

DEAR BRO. KELLOGG:—Lately in company with an old friend who resides in Clinton, Iowa, a man whom I should think far above suspicion as a fair dealing man, and so far as I know neither a Mason nor an Anti-mason, related the following to me. While he lived in the country they had almost invariably called upon him to serve upon juries. But in the town of DeWitt a murder was committed, and a man who was a Mason was apprehended and brought to trial charged with the murder. On that occasion they were a long time selecting a jury. My old friend plainly saw that he was not wanted on that jury. At length a jury was made ont and it consisted of Masons and men whose characters were so weak that they could easily be influenced. The judge was a Mason, and the Mason charged with the murder was acquitted and as soon as he was acquitted he fled the country.

The other day a lawyer from Cincinnati related the following in my presence: A case was on trial; the jury was impanneled. Lawyer A. who was a Mason, wanted the trial postponed until another term. He observed a Mason on the jury before him to whom he made known, by signs, that he wanted the jury to disagree. Lawyer B., the opposing counsel, was also a Mason and saw the communication made by lawyer A. to the Mason on the jury, and when the jury disagreed lawyer B. objected, before the judge, to the conduct of lawyer A. towards the jury. The judge then inquired of lawyer A. to know if he had used his Masonic influence to cause the jury to disagree. Lawyer A. confessed that he had. The judge then asked the Mason on the jury if he had acted in obedience to the wishes of lawyer A. The Mason on the jury confessed that he had caused the disagreement in obedience to the wishes of his brother Mason.

Here we see that lawyer B. did not sustain the adage "honor among theives" But the Mason on the jury acted in accordance with the obligation in the seventh degree ("Furthermore do I promise and swear, that I will aid and assist a Companion R. A. Mason, when engaged in any difficulty; and espouse his cause, so far as to extricate him from the same, if in my power, whether he be right or wrong,") until he was exposed by a brother Mason whose own interests were in danger by reason of the juryman's obedience to the villainies of the order.

Then ought a Mason to be allowed a seat in a jury box? Surely this oath diaqualifies him to act on a jury. And ought not our law-makers to disqualify Masons from acting on the jury? Why do they not do so? Because our law-makers either are Masons, or are ruled by Masons. We are already as a nation under the rule of Masonry to a certain extent. And if things go on thus much longer the Masons will be able to execute their penalties on all seceders.

Yours truly, W. FENTON.

MOCK SOLEMN BURIAL RITES.

CANAL DOVER, O., June 30, '79.

The sacriligious character of Freemasonry was exhibited in this place a few days ago. One of the craft, an aged man, died on the 21st, and on the 23d the "lambskins" buried him in the usual honors (?). It may have seemed to be a solemn and impressive affair to those unacquainted with the principles and character of the order, but to the writer it was hollow mockery, blasphemy, and a disgrace to an intelligent people. Rev. U. J. Knisely, the Masonic champion of the county, preached the discourse. He was assisted by two other Lutheran divines, neither of whom belong to the order, but by their sympathy for and co-operation with it sanction the blasphemous acts of the lodge, and thus become "partakers of other mens' sins." When the Masonic brethren (as Rev. U. J. Knisely called them when he first saw them approaching the house), came, headed by the Tyler with the drawn sword, the ministry had to stand back, and the "order" became the "master of ceremonies." The burial ceremony, including the offering of a Masonic prayer, was read by a man who makes no Christian profession at all, and the responses, "amen," and "so mote it be," were mingled by professing Christian and avowed infidel. The Holy Bible was suspended from the neck of a gray-headed man who is a prominent member of the Methodist church. A drapery was thrown over the Bible so that the place it was open could not be discovered, but it is not at all likely that the open page would have revealed the divine injunction recorded in Ephesians v. 11. Such texts do not suit the order.

The affair was only one of the many wicked, blasphemous, ungodly things that are repeated over and over in a country boasting civilization, education and Christianity, while it is itself a greater act of heathenism and Satanic reign than ever cursed benighted India. Through its deception and wily influences, the people are blinded as to its true character and having the supports of the church and God's ministers (?) it reigns supreme, usurping all other authority. In a free government I should like to know what right any sect or body of men has to stalk in and wrench the authority of taking charge of a corpse from the church and perform its heathenish, God-defying rites over the remains of any man? When will our people rise up in the strength of King Immanuel and demand that Christ shall rule instead of Baal? Will it be so long as Christian (?) ministers aid and support such a system?

As usual, the "resolutions of respect have been published and God again blasphemed by being called "The Grand Master of the universe." One of the committee professes to have no faith in a superintending providence.

The Lutheran church of this county is in league with this "work of Satan," and needs some wakening up. A short time ago the members of the church at Bolivar received a vote of thanks from the I. O. O. F. for "kindness shown" when that order held an anniversary in the Lutheran church at that place. Query: Would the members of that church allow it to be opened for an anti-secret lecture? May the time speedily come when that will be tested everywhere.

Yours for Christ and against Baal.

MASONIC CANDIDATING.

OGDEN CENTER, Mich., June 23, 1879.

I promised some time since to give the Cynosure the political complexion of Lanawee county, Michigan. I went to Adrian last fall about a week before election in search of more light, and my experience was far from what I expected when I started out.

I went to the office of the Adrian National Greenback paper and purchased a paper, etc., asking the clerk how many Masons there were on the State, Congressional and county tickets. He did not know and called up another man, who marked seven names on the county ticket, but said he didn't know about the rest.

I then went to the Democratic newspaper office; the clerk was a lady and I asked no questions.

I then went to the Times office, the Republican paper, and asked the same question of the clerk. He said he was no Mason and referred me to justice R. as he was a Mason, and on the ticket as a Representative to the State Legislature. I unfolded the paper before Mr. R. and asked him how many Masons were on that ticket. He ran over the names and said, "I know of but one," and that was his own name. I handed him the other town papers and he looked over the tickets and said he didn't see any Masons on them he knew. After election I found the facts to be about like this: There were sixty-six names on the three tickets, and on the Republican ticket twenty-one Masons and one Oddfellow, and I have found but one man out of the sixty-six that I am sure does not belong to the lodge, and he is an aged man and a farmer with whom I am well acquainted, and he told me he never belonged to any secret society.

I must say a little more, as the Governor is from Adrian, and Mr. R. did not know he was a Mason. I have come to the conclusion that Mr. R. is very ignorant, or he lied to me three times in less than ten minutes. In the last twelve years we have had Masonic sheriffs, and I am not able to find one deputy who has not been a Mason in that time. That shows plainly that Masonry will rule if we vote for the candidates that are put up for us on the present political basis. If we want to do anything we must put up our own men and vote for them, and let Mah-hah-bone defend himself before the American people. So mote it be. D. B. HECKERT.

OUR MAIL.

W. T. Wilson, Long Run, Pa., writes: "I lend my papers and have tried hard to get subscribers, but thus far have failed. Will continue trying."

E. G. Cooper, Albany, Mo., writes: "If we could pay for only one paper it would be the Cynosure.

David Kelster, Mt. Pleasant, Pa., writes: "I am much interested in the cause the Cynosure advocates. It is one of the best reform papers I know of. I hope the cause will finally succeed."

J. O. Doesburg, Holland, Mich., writes: "I hope and pray that the Lord may bless us all in the great work of clearing out the temples of the Lord, and that his Holy Spirit may abundantly fire every heart to work with fervency and zeal to the honor and glory of his name."

P. P. Perry, Ft. Scott, writes: "I hope the day is not far distant when the Christian people, and the honest people, and the laboring class of this land will not submit to be swindled by the lodge power. I want to encourage every school district to organize against all secret power."

S. B. Allen, Morrison, Ill., writes: "I am on the watch to improve opportunities of advancing the cause. Gain a little. We had a good time when Bros. Rathbun and Browne were here. I am praying for success in every department."

G. W. Taylor, Gilsonburg, O., writes: "I am very thankful for the Cynosure, as I like to read it and give it to others who will read it. I loaned one to an Oddfellow and it stepped out."

Garret Keppel, Biggs Station, Cal., writes: "I like your paper very much and think it will accomplish much good. Light is what we want."

David Thompson, Arkansas City, Kan., writes: "I intend to lend my copy of the 'Master's Carpet' to at least one Master Mason of this place, who is a member of the Presbyterian Church. I will also try to get his minister to read it. The latter is not a Mason, but how he and many of his brethren in the ministry can keep silent in regard to this unchristian society, I cannot understand. Some of them are afraid to read on the subject lest their conscience should be disturbed."

John Motter, Lyons, Kan., writes: "We seem to be on the eve of a terrible drought here, our spring oats and wheat are now gone. If we get rain soon our corn will be good; it looks well now."

LESSON XXVIX.—JULY 20, 1879.—CHRISTIAN LOVE.

SCRIPTURE.—1 Cor. 13: 1-13.

1 Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass
2 or a tinkling cymbal. | And though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have
3 not charity, I am nothing. | And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor and though I give my body to be burned, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing.
4 Charity suffereth long and is kind; charity envieth not; charity vaunteth
5 not itself, is not puffed up | Doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, think-
6 eth no evil; | Rejoiceth not in iniquity,
7 but rejoiceth in the truth; | Beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things.
8 Charity never faileth; but whether there be prophecies, they shall fail; whether there be tongues, they shall cease; whether there be knowledge, it
9 shall vanish away. | For we know in
10 part, and we prophesy in part | But when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be
11 done away. | When I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child: but when I became a man I put away childish
12 things. | For now we see through a glass, darkly; but then face to face: now I know in part; but then shall I know even as also I am known.
13 And now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity.

GOLDEN TEXT.—And now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity.—1 Cor. 13: 13.

What verses in this lesson teach us—

1. The danger of counterfeits in religion?
2. The need of watchfulness against all evil passions.
3. The injury strife works to religion?
4. The supreme importance of love?

CONNECTION WITH THE LAST LESSON.

In time, this lesson is earlier than the last two by a year, as it was written at Ephesus, in the spring of A. D. 57, during Paul's long stay there on his third missionary journey. Paul had been at Corinth on his second missionary journey, and wrote this Epistle to confirm the Corinthian Christians in faith and doctrine, and to correct their practice and discipline. The lesson shows love's place among the Spirit's gifts.

PROMPTINGS TO FURTHER STUDY.

In what case is an angel's speaking to be condemned? When and where did the people test the declarations of the apostles by reference to the Scriptures? What thing of brass was used as a symbol of Christ? What became of it? What Bible examples are there of the ungodly having the gift of prophecy? Before whose faith was it declared that a mountain should be leveled? In what are believers exhorted to continue children? What childish quality may be removed by forcible measures? What is it that believers behold as in a glass; and how are they changed thereby?

SUGGESTIONS.

Corinth was the commercial capital of Greece, situated on the isthmus that divides the lower peninsula (called Peloponnessus, or Morea) from the main land. Having the Ionian (or Corinthian) sea on the west, and the Ægean sea (or Saronic gulf) on the east, it enjoyed superior advantages, and became a beautiful, wealthy and corrupt city. The ancient history of the city is in obscurity, but it dates far back. The Aelians are said to have been the earliest rulers, and after them the Dorians ruled for three hundred years. Royalty was abolished among them 747 B. C. The city came under the rule of the Romans 146 B. C., and was burned by the conqueror Mummius, Its rebuilding began in the year 47 B. C., and at the time of our lesson it was fresh, beautiful and prosperous. It was celebrated for the Isthmian games, which were annually contested, and attracted multitudes of visitors from all parts of Greece.

Paul went there from Athens A. D. 52, and remained there a year and six months (Acts 18: 1-11.)

The book, or first letter, was written from Ephesus A. D. 57 (1 Cor. 16: 8). Five years had passed since the church was founded, and many difficulties had arisen. The idea at Corinth was, that if the Gospel had done so well among the poor and lowly (as at Philippi and elsewhere), it ought to succeed in a wonderful manner in a city of wealth and learning like Corinth. Thus the troubles arose not so much on account of ignorance as of worldly wisdom. True, the converts at Corinth, composed mostly of Gentiles (1 Cor. 12: 2), but also numbering many Jews (Acts 18: 8), were principally from the poorer classes, with a few prominent exceptions, as Crispus, Erastus and Gaius. But, as usual, this did not alter their view, and disorder followed. They divided into parties, and claimed to be followers of different leaders, while all neglected the plainest teachings of Christ, and suffered shameful sins to go unrebuked. Paul had been for three years at Ephesus, and tidings had reached him of the troubles at Corinth; but at length a letter was written from there and sent to him by the hands of Stephanus, Fortunatus and Achaicus, who were a committee to consult with him (chap. 16: 17, 18). In reply to this and from his knowledge of their wants, this letter of the Holy Spirit was written by Paul, and, from its lofty style, its depth of spiritual and moral power, it has challenged the admiration of all. It has provoked special opposition, and no wonder, for it treats of moral details. Chapter 15 is the great lesson of the resurrection. Let us remember that these Scriptures are written for us and to us.

With how many things is love compared? (The word "charity," as here used means love.) (Verses 1-3.)

What was the "gift of tongues?" (Acts 2). Tongues signify language, and there are said to be 900 languages or dialects.

What are fine words without love? "The gift of prophecy" is to make known the will and purposes of God, and to disclose the future. "Mysteries" are the secrets of God, and "faith that removes mountains" is the highest kind of faith. What is said of them without love?

In verse 3 we see the difference between true love and almsgiving, or even suffering for friends or country without love.

In how many ways is love described? (verses 4-8.) Here we see that no single word would describe the fulness of love, and it is here turned over as a jeweler would display a choice gem, that we may greatly desire to possess it. We may say love is the root or tree on which all these fruits grow. What difficulties in the church, in the school, in the home, in the heart, would be cured by love!

Write down what love does and what it does not.

Write down what a father's or mother's love has done for their children, and what God's love has done for us.

What will love lead us to do for God and for others?

How have we proved the value of love?

What further proof is here given? (verse 8.)

How will prophecies fail and tongues cease, and knowledge pass away? (verses 9-11).

The word "glass" in verse 12 signifies a mirror, and may be read, "We see as in a mirror obscurely or imperfectly," being only a reflection; but then we shall see face to face."

What three things shall abide forever? (verse 13

Why is love the greatest?

[From U. P. Bible Teacher.]

INTRODUCTION.

The first epistle to the Corinthians was written by Paul (1 Cor. 1: 1), about A. D. 57, from Ephesus (1 Cor. 16: 8) to the church at Corinth (1 Cor. 1: 2), a renowned, wealthy, beautiful and corrupt city of Achaia. The Corinthian church was founded by Paul (Acts 18: 1-17), and in it he had labored for a year and a half. It is evident that this epistle was written in reply to one which had been sent to the apostle by the church at Corinth, three or four years after he had left that city (1 Cor. 7: 1). He had also heard reports (1 Cor. 1: 11], that certain disorders which required correction, had been introduced into the church at Corinth. After speaking of their sinful divisions [1 Cor. 1-4], of their remissness in the exercise of church discipline [1 Cor. 5], of their practices of going to law before heathen magistrates [1 Cor. 6], of marriage [1 Cor. 7], of the lawfulness of eating meat which had been offered in sacrifice to idols [1 Cor. 8-10], and of the abuses which had been introduced into the observance of public worship [1 Cor. 9], he turns the attention of the Corinthian Christians to "spiritual gifts" [1 Cor. 12-14]. While it was lawful for them to desire all the gifts conferred by the Spirit; there was one which was more valuable than the others. This was charity or Christian love. To illustrate the nature, excellence and power of Christian love is the design of the beautiful chapter before us.

LESSONS—DOCTRINAL AND PRACTICAL.

1. The best gifts are within our reach. We may not have great learning, miraculous powers, or ability to speak with tongues, but be can have "faith, hope, charity."

2. Here we acquire knowledge with difficulty; hereafter we shall know as we are known [John 13: 7].

3. If we would attain the grace of Christian love, we must use the appointed means. One of these means is a study of the love of God [1 John 4: 2].

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JULY 10, 1879.

One Hundred and Fifty Thousand Seceders!

This is the answer to the question "What will the harvest be?" in the following extract from the Voice of Masonry for July. Mr. Drummond who makes the report as Committee on Correspondence, is the "Most Puissant Sovereign Grand Commander" of the thirty-three members of the, "Supreme Council, 33°, Northern Jurisdiction, U. S. A., and there is no higher authority in Masonry except Albert Pike, who holds the same title in the Southern jurisdiction. No advocate of American principles need be ashamed to face the lodge in the presence of such statistics. In explanation it should be said that "raised" means made Master Masons; "admissions," received on demit or certificate of good standing; "not dues," non-payment of dues; and "rejections" means the number black-balled, whom the lodge has refused to receive from the ranks of the profane. Let this table be preserved as a record of the progress of reform. And, above all, let no one forget that these 150,000 Masons, who have renounced all active connection with the lodge may be enrolled in our ranks if we have faith in God and do our duty with fearless zeal. Read Mr. Drummond's report:

	1879. Grand Lodges.	1879. Totals.	1878. Grand Lodges.	1878. Totals.	1877. Grand Lodges.	1877. Totals
Members	54	682,550	54	592,443	52	602,689

Deaths	54	7 118	52	7,038	50	7,102
Rejections	24	3,888	39	4,734	58	6,142

It will be seen that the total membership has fallen off again, the decrease being just about the same as the preceding year; some of the Grand Lodges have increased, however. Those which have increased are Alabama, Arkansas, California, Canada, Colorado, Dakota, Indian Territory, Iowa, Kansas, Manitoba, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Nebraska, New Brunswick, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New Mexico, Oregon, Quebec, Rhode Island, Texas, Utah, Washington, West Virginia and Wisconsin. Those which have decreased are Connecticut, Delaware, District of Columbia, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Nevada, New York, North Carolina, Nova Scotia, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Prince Edwards Island, South Carolina, Tennessee, Vermont and Virginia. The suspensions for non-payment of dues have increased about one thousand. The suspensions within the last ten years, aggregate the enormous amount of one hundred and fifty thousand. Our report in 1869 shows that forty Grand Lodges returned over fifty thousand initiates, against about 24,000 shown by our report of 1879, to be returned by fifty-three Grand Lodges. "What will the harvest be?"

The Christian Cynosures.

Every paper which testifies against the lodge system of the present day is a reform paper; is, in short, a Cynosure, a pole-star to the Christian voyager. I see that the American Wesleyan—which besides being an agreeable, sprightly, well conducted paper, has a denomination behind it—has a less circulation than we. The Religious Telescope is an old paper, and has one of the very best constituencies on earth, and a compact, long tried, thoroughly organized phalanx of agents in the itinerancy of the United Brethren. Yet the Telescope has its hands full, and is likely to have them fuller of the lodge. Two United Brethren papers have been started in succession, with the real, though not professed object, of forcing the Telescope, either to let the lodge alone, or to oppose it by mere inane testimony, as worldly Quakers used to oppose war, while paying taxes to support it, and in heart rejoicing in its victories. But the Telescope will live and outride opposition if it is true to Christ.

Opposing Freemasonry, though a center shot at the devil's target, is but a small part of the reform. It is a mere skirmish with the progeny, while Popery, the mother snake, lies hid in the bushes behind the affray. The papacy is to-day the mightiest organization on this earth; and all other secret societies are but its children and janizaries. There is now a large stone church going up in Wheaton, and farmers for miles around are leaving their crops needing attention, and hauling materials to build this stone temple, which when built and in blast will weaken every reform calculated to benefit those farmers and their children. Priests will come here and say masses in Latin who do not know what the word "mass" means; and beer and tobacco and bad Latin chattered to farmers who do not know a word of Latin, will be about all the visible and tangible benefits which the honest, toiling and praying people get by the increase of their religion in Wheaton, and throughout the country. While ritual salvation, the Bible out of schools, and the payment of Archbishop Purcell's debts will complete the list of their present advantages.

Salvation by ceremonies is salvation by Satan; and, like Satan, imposture and cheat; and every paper which asserts salvation by Christ, against these sorceries and counterfeit religions, must and will meet the whole cunning and force of "the god of this world," in one way or another.

But let us all remember that Christ is mightier than Satan; stronger than "the strong man armed," and every true Christian Cynosure will prove to be a beacon light, like the bush in the desert, burning but not consumed.

The Methodist Episcopal Church.

A NEW REFORMATION.

We commend to our readers for their careful perusal everything which shall appear in the Cynosure concerning Rev. J. T. Michael and his movement in New Jersey for the reformation of the Methodist Episcopal church. This new movement is by far the most important event which has occurred in the reform in relation to the M. E. church. That church not only includes a vast proportion of the voting masses in its communion, but the number of voters who are Methodists puts into the hands of its bishops the key to American politics beyond the influence and power of any other denomination except the Roman Catholic. The Episcopal church, through its worldly human devices, had great influence with the government in our early history, so that at one period a large part of all the chaplains in the army and navy were filled by Episcopalians. But the M. E. Church is supplanting it. Bishop Simpson is said to have made three journeys to Washington to see Mr. Lincoln and get prominent Methodists into office. While slavery made our presidents the M. E. church was pro-slavery; and since the fall of slavery, the aspirants to the presidency, Mr. Chase included, turn their eyes to this church, whose leaders know their power. They would be a breakwater for us against popery and Bible-exclusion, were it not that the same worldly policy now rules both, and worldly policy in religion always inures to the "god of this world."

Nothing will reform the M. E. church but secession, as the Wesleyans helped change its policy on slavery and the Free Methodists on the doctrine of holiness; and Mr. Michael's New Jersey movement if carried out, will, if anything can, turn its ministry away from the gods of the lodge. Read everything concerning and pray for Rev. J. T. Michael.

Swindling Advertisements.

The mail frequently brings us offers of advertisements, not one in five of which ought ever to appear in a Christian paper; and of this one-fifth that are not objectionable in themselves, the payment offered is generally a swindle. Advertisements of all sorts of merchandise, such as musical instruments, sewing machines, roofing and building paper, songs, etc., are sent, and this merchandise is offered in payment of advertising, but in each case, instead of offering part cash for the advertising desired, they demand from thirty to fifty per cent. cash for the merchandise offered, usually enough to pay the first cost of the goods offered, so as to get their advertisements for nothing. Often the advertiser gets his advertising for less than nothing, as the publisher finds that should he have an "order" in part payment for a machine, or merchandise, he will make money to throw it away and buy elsewhere the same article at less than the price asked by the advertiser.

Our readers are doubtless familiar with many dodges in use to get canvassers for sensational story papers and books; but considering the title of the firm, or company, we have seen nothing more contemptible than the deception practiced in the following advertisement:

"FREE TO ALL—Fleetwood's Life of Christ; 850 pages; over 200 illustrations. Free to all who send us their address and six cents in postage stamps. Address United States Book and Bible Co., 178 and 180 Elm street, Cincinnati, O."

The above was sent us by Cincinnati advertising agents. Unwilling that any of our readers should be "bit" by this company, a friend sent on the six cents, waited a reasonable length of time, and receiving nothing wrote again, and finally received a lot of circulars, and a proposition to send on the promised book, provided ten books at one dollar each were sold, and the ten dollars sent to these generous (?) advertisers. Our readers may judge for themselves as to the honesty of such an advertisement.

—Bro. Stoddard, when last heard from, expected to return to Chicago on Wednesday of this week. After visiting Galva and Lafayette, Ill., he spoke a second time in Kewanee on his return.

—Elder Browne has been planning to have the Wisconsin State Convention meet this fall at Evansville, Rock county, where he has already made some impression in favor of the reform. The brethren at Vienna in Walworth county are also hoping to get the State meeting. In this there should be a generous rivalry; we should be glad if a dozen places were offered.

—Instead of a sermon this week we are happy to place before our readers such an argument and appeal as the address to Christian ministers by the committee of the Ohio State Association. Every preacher of the Gospel should read this appeal and profit by it. In justice to the esteemed brethren whose names are given with the address, we will say that the document was prepared some time ago with the intention of issuing it as a tract, but being too long for this purpose it has been given to the public through our columns. Let it be circulated as widely as possible.

—It will be a satisfaction to the readers of our sermon department to know that these discourses are widely appreciated. Two sermons have been printed entire; one in a North Carolina exchange, and another in the Banner of Holiness, of Bloomington, Ill. If any have the misfortune to have inherited a dislike for such reading, it will be some mitigation to know that thousands enjoy this part of the Cynosure and are profited by reading it. Their adverse opinions would be modified after reading one or two of these discourses. Begin with last week and see.

—The Voice of Masonry is becoming Congregational or the Congregational Association is becoming Masonic, which? The Voice publishes a large part of the paper on "The Church and the Lodge" read at Princeton, Ill., lately and with manifest approval; but neglects to say that the paper was seriously objected to by the committee to which it was referred, by whose report the former testimony against the lodge was reaffirmed.

—The Steubenville, O., Herald of the 27th ult., has a long report of a Masonic performance on the Tuesday preceding ("St. John's day.") One of the speakers, eulogizing the old members of the order, whose consciences were sufficiently hardened to maintain the lodge through the discussions of 1827-32, said: "How much even the present generation is indebted to them, we scarcely realize. They were Masons when the angry populace were howling like wolves for their blood, and when bigotry and fanaticism were decreeing the speedy and total destruction of the order." This might read very finely if it were only true. Were the balance of the account taken no one would be able to realize any benefits to the present generation, for they could not be found. "Howling for blood," etc., is only a Masonic rhetorical flourish, like those flights of fancy about Solomon, Washington, the generals of the revolution, etc., so often used to season Masonic speeches. The destruction of the order was less fanciful. It came so near being a fact that 45,000 Masons acknowledged it.

—The Woman's Tribune, a female suffrage paper of Indianapolis, has lately opened a column for a new secret order known as the "United Order of Honor," an Indiana institution which she is welcome to keep within her borders. The fee for organizing a lodge of twenty members is $40.00. The society is chiefly engaged in paying funeral expenses and "benefits" to sick members and families of the dead. As all such assistance is all the while rendered needy and worthy persons without the expensive machinery of a lodge there must of course be some particular object gained by introducing the principle of secretism, which would not be attractive if made public. The Woman's Tribune, however, having just suspended, the lodge will profit no more by it. Its list is to be turned over to the National Citizen of Syracuse, N. Y., published by Mrs. Matilda Joslyn Gage, whose convictions on the secret society question have not changed since her able address against the lodge system in the national convention of 1874.

—The St. Paul Dispatch published last week an able letter from Bro. Fenton, over which it places an eleven line heading, in which Anti-masonry is set forth to be a "lost cause," and the editor thinks himself generous in opening his columns to give it a re-hearing. Well, we all say to him, Thank you.

INDIANA.

NEW LISBON, Ind., June 27, '79.

Dear Friends of the Anti secret Reform in Indiana:—After an extensive correspondence with the friends of our reform in reference to the most eligible place for holding our next annual convention, the executive committee has finally decided upon Albion, Noble county. It is true that Albion is not the most central point that might have been selected, but after carefully considering all contingencies in the case, it was thought best to select that point. Let no one be disappointed on account of the location, but let each friend of the cause put their shoulder to the wheel, determined to make our next annual meeting a grand success. Our opponents are terribly in earnest, and any half-hearted work on our part will result in an inglorious defeat. Then let us stand shoulder to shoulder as true soldiers and press the battle to complete victory. It is true that it will require some sacrifice on our part, but the prophet Amos says, "woe to them that are at ease in Zion." I am assured that there will be free entertainment for all that will attend.

There is a very fine country in the northeast part of this State. and I am sure that it will well repay any one from any part of the State as a pleasure trip, besides giving your time, your influence, and a few dollars of your money towards the upbuilding and sustaining Christ's kingdom and Republican government. Then dear friends, to the front. Let us do our whole duty, and not leave others to bear the brunt of the battle.

GEO. W. CHAMP,
Chairman of Ex. Committee,

N. B.—October 21, 22 and 23 is the time, and Albion, Noble county, Ind., is the place appointed.

OBITUARY.

Died, in the village of Memphis, Macomb county, Mich., June 24, 1879, of pneumonia and disease of the heart, CHESTER LEETE DUDLEY, aged seventy-two years, eleven months and twenty days. He has ever been a consistent and active Anti-mason, bearing his testimony against the secret order in all places. He was a young man at the time of Morgan's abduction, and murder, and the convictions that then possessed him lasted him through life. Although never a Mason himself, he was probably better posted as to the oaths, signs, grips and fooleries practiced in the lodge room than many that have been Masons for years.

Among his papers were found the following verses, and the desire that they be sent to the Cynosure for publication as his dying testimony against intemperance and Masonry. They are evidently of a recent date, and had his health and life been spared would doubtless have been followed by similar testimony against some of the other evils of our day and times.

SOME PREVAILING EVILS.

BY O. L. DUDLEY.

My years are thirteen and three score
I cannot hope for many more,
And, whensoe'er they end,
My warning voice I fain would leave
Against some wiles that but deceive
And unto evil tend.

And one among the ills we know,
That causes poverty and woe,
Is alcoholic drink.
Young men beware its fatal snare—
Ere to your lips its cup you bear
I pray you stop and think.

* * * * * *

Another tyrant evil reigns—
Ensnaring thousands in its chains
To make men abject slaves.
Makes servile pulpit, servile press,
Perverting justice—righteousness—
And favored much by knaves:

First strips its dupes to nearly bare—
Shirt, drawers, slipper all they wear,
And these don't cover all;
A blinder o'er their eye is bound,
A "cable tow" their neck around,
And thus led 'round the hall;

With one foot bare—one partly dressed,
One naked arm—one naked breast—
In third grade naked both.
With drawers rolled above the knees,
And knelt on one or both of these
The preacher (!) takes his oath.

He then goes through the lying slum,
Of "Jubela"—belo—belum,
And Hiram—called Abiff,
La hits his throat with two-foot guage,
Lo strikes his breast with square in rage,
Lum knocks the preacher stiff!

At least he's hit with "setting maul"
And either falls—or is made to fall
On canvas—duly spread;
He then on this is carried 'round
And (falsely) buried under ground
Pretending he is dead.

He lies there covered o'er with stuff,
And when he's lain there long enough—
They say full fourteen days;
Till he emits bad smell—they say—
(The preacher does—in moral way—)
Then him they try to raise.

* * * * * *

Thus grown up men—and preachers too
Such degradation do go through
Some selfish ends to gain,
Through secret clannishness receive
What equal justice would not give Nor moral worth obtain.

How strange that preachers do not see
(For they're paid back their entrance fee)
Like pigeons tied to stools—
They're kept to hover to their net
Some decent men they could not get
Without such priestly tools.

And though in lodge they never sit,
To leave their names there, sanctions it,
For Masons boasting say:

There's Reverend Mr. Worldly Mind
Belongs to us—and Deacon Blind—
And don't they preach and pray?

Those parsons swear to bear the loss—
Of "tongue torn out" "throat cut across,"
If "signs" they don't obey—
"Torn open breast," "heart taken thence"
And "thrown"—as a just recompense
To beasts and birds of prey.

* * * * * *

If culprit give the "hailing sign—"
To shield from prison—or a fine—
To sheriff of his clan,
Or judge, or juror—he must break
One oath of two—there's no mistake
And be a perjured man.

From this result there's no recourse—
If Masons' oaths have binding force,
As most adherents claim,
And if no force, what are they then
But blasphemous and wicked men
Who countenance the same?

Now freemen, be true freemen still,
And be not slaves to clansmen's will,
Be free the truth to speak;
Nor skulk away 'hind guarded doors,
With darkened windows, deafened floors
Like counterfeiting sneak.

And you good men once led astray,
By false pretence, to swear away
Your freedom or your life—
Renounce sham oaths, by Masons made
To shelter crimes of every grade
And make them hence more rife.

The writer knew through Morgan times
Their felon deeds of shielding crimes
(And Masonry's the same,)
When thousands of their best of men
Renounced and left their wicked den—
Ashamed of e'en the name.
God help you do the same.

—A Milwaukee correspondent of the Chicago Tribune tells a rather startling story regarding Senator Carpenter. It is to the effect that he is a slave to tobacco, and is killing himself by its excessive use. This correspondent says that Mr. Carpenter smokes twenty cigars a day, that he is hardly ever without one in his mouth, that he has wasted so that his limbs have become emaciated to the semblance of pipe-stems, and that he is a very sick man.

—Wendell Phillips owns a pew in a Congregational church in Grinnell, Iowa, which is called the "liberty pew," because no one can be excluded from it on account of race or color. But the church has reduced the significance of the term to zero by making all the pews free in the same way and wholly abolishing the color line.

—John S. Morton of Philadelphia, sentenced to ten years' imprisonment in the penitentiary for over-issuing street railway stock to the amount of $1,200,000 will probably be pardoned, as a large number of depositors show he was controlled in his financial operations by imaginary spirit influences. This hallucination possessed him for fifteen years.

—The report of the business fo the Chicago clearing house for the past six months shows aggregate returns of $533,225,391 against $453,-942,825—an increase of $79,285,565. Considering the low price at which all classes of produce and merchandise have been disposed of, the increase in business is exceedingly gratifying.

Home Circle.

The Coming King.

O North with all thy vales of green,
O South, with all thy palms!
From peopled towns and fields between,
Uplift the voice of psalms.
Raise, ancient East! the anthem high,
And let the youthful West reply.

Lo! in the clouds of heaven appears
God's well beloved Son,
He brings a train of brighter years;
His kingdom is begun;
He comes a guilty world to bless
With mercy, truth and righteousness.

O Father! haste the promised hour,
When at his feet shall lie
All rule, authority and power,
Beneath the ample sky;
When he shall reign from pole to pole,
The Lord of every human soul.

When all at all heed the words he said
Amid their daily cares,
And by the loving life he led,
Shall strive to pattern theirs;
And he who conquered death shall win
The mightier conquest over sin.

Big Meetings.

Bigness is not greatness. And he who judges of value by bulk, will find himself seriously mistaken. A boulder is larger than a diamond but it is not as valuable? The passion for bigness is found in connection with public assemblies for divine worship. Meetings are held, and a great effort is made to increase their size. Men go for the "big meeting." They publish accounts of crowds which attend, until at last religious interest deteriorates, being overwhelmed by the tide of worldliness. A man who prefers to drink out of a big horse-pond rather than a little spring, might be pleased with such results, but spiritual and discerning Christians have different thoughts.

Sometimes through much puffing and advertising, religious meetings grow so large that they almost entirely lose their original character. The workers who founded them are displaced, rival interests are projected, men run in debt, purchase property, sell lots, speculate in real estate, pay salaries and divide proceeds, until quarrels spring up, accusations are made, and though all may be hushed up and made smooth, yet God is not in the camp.

One wedge of gold routed Israel; one Babylonish garment hidden in the tent of Achan, discomforted the host of God. And God does not bless bad management, nor does he bless bad men, no matter how publicly they may be associated with religion and religious works. The spirit of covetousness is infectious. Covetous men make others worldly, so when they see a chance for gain, they are inclined to wish to have their share with the rest.

The Christian's main duty often lies near home. He has work enough to occupy his time and absorb his money, and employ his strength in publishing salvation, sustaining the worship of God, and scattering the light of truth in his own immediate vicinity; and it would be greatly to the advantage of the people of God and the cause of truth, if men would devote themselves more earnestly to the cultivation of their own home fields, instead of spending their time and means in the dissipation of special religious services that grow unwieldy and worldly, and which show small results compared with what might be effected in other places by similar outlay and labor.—The Common People.

A Temperance Incident.

Last summer, while stopping for a few days at a seaside resort, I unexpectedly met a lady acquaintance who, by the following incident, demonstrated clearly what woman, with her loving, impulsive nature aroused, is capable of accomplishing in practical work for the temperance cause. Sister R. is a maiden lady, in feeble health, and has been for several years a great sufferer.

Sitting in the pavilion one afternoon, I noticed her approaching in company with a noble-looking young man, who was evidently partially intoxicated. They came near where I was, and I heard her earnestly pleading with him "not to drink any more, but to go directly home." He seemed somewhat impressed, but was intoxicated just enough to manifest indifference, and only responded laughingly, "Oh, you must let us have a little freedom once in a while, in order to have a good time."

She continued to plead with him regardless of the people standing around, till it was time for the cars to start, when she left him, saying, "Now I shall see you on board the cars. You must not drink another drop." In a few minutes she returned, when I remarked, "You have been doing missionary work to-day, I guess, sister R." She burst into tears and exclaimed, "Oh, that was my brother whom I haven't seen for eight years till to-day. He has been to a soldier's re-union and came around this way on purpose to see me. He doesn't drink at home, is a member of the church, very kind to his family, a noble man; but a fellow-soldier got him to drink some lager beer to-day, and now you see the condition he is in. He's been drinking at every opportunity till he got here, but I have followed him all day to keep him from it, and he hasn't tasted a drop since I first saw him. He has tried to get away from me to get a drink with his companion, but I wouldn't let him. Oh, it seems so strange that he should do so! I never thought I could do what I have done to-day; but he is my brother, and I could not do otherwise. I have followed him into three saloons, and when he called for a glass of lager, I forbade them giving it to him, declaring I would dash the tumbler on the floor if they offered it to him. They all yielded to my request, and refused to let him have any. In one place there were a dozen men standing by the bar. I forbade the man selling him any, telling him he was my brother, and I could not see him drink. The bar-keeper looked at me and said, "Well, you seem to be in earnest. If you were a man I would pitch you out of doors, but as you are a lady, I will yield to you." I took the glass handed to his companion, whom I had never met before, carried it to the door and emptied it upon the ground. When I did this, two men who were just about drinking, quietly stepped to the door, poured out the contents of their glasses, placed them upon the counter again, and without saying a word left the saloon. Others pushed their tumblers back, and looked at me with amazement."

"I hope," she continued, smiling amid the tears, "I have done some good to-day. One thing is sure, I have established my reputation here, I guess. But I don't care. It was my brother, and he is too good to be a drunkard. I could not see him drink, and I would not!"

She stopped, and nervously wiped the tears away, and I thought, another name added to the list of temperance heroines. God bless them! Oh! if all the sisters and wives, and mothers, of these tempted ones, with their yearning love all aroused, would follow them into these rum dens, how many noble ones would be saved, and how many alluring agents of Satan would be kept from dealing out the beverage of death, whom man's influence and the enforcement of law fail to reach!

Moral: Woman's power and pleading can accomplish what no other human means can, when brought in direct contact with the rum traffic. Should we not pray that all over the land they may have a special impulse and anointing for their work, and with the boldness of consecrated affection march to the front, as chosen leaders in this great battle for the redemption of their loved ones?—Zion's Herald.

A Real Ship of the Desert.

A report comes from the Sierra Nevada Mountains of the discovery of the timbers of a stranded vessel, resembling those of a Chinese junk, high up in the mountains between Mineral King and the head-waters of King's River. The sound portions of the timber resemble camphor wood, and, it is said, still retain a faint smell. The fastenings are of copper; the rigging, etc., are, of course, all gone. A number of bones, supposed to be human, were also found in the vicinity, and upon the adjacent slopes there is abundant evidence of the previous occupation of the waters, in the shape of shells, as well as the occasional finding of petrified fish. That this valley has at one time been an inland sea is admitted by geologists; but that these waters were navigated by celestial seamen one or two thousand years ago, has never been claimed, even by the Chinese themselves. But these same people do claim to have been the original discoverers of this country, and this find seems to give color to the claim. It has also been claimed by them that vessels of theirs have been wrecked on this coast, and that portions of the crews have returned to China; but that the wreck itself should be located, and that this location should be in Tulare county, is surely an interesting fact, inviting the inspection of the curious and the solution of the scientist.—Portland (Oregon) Transcript.

"Oh that they had Sent it Sooner!"—At one of the fellowship meetings which the native Christians of the South Sea Islands have among themselves, an old man rose and said: "I stand among you to-day a solitary and lonely man. Once I had a wife—dear she was to my heart; she is no more. Once I had five noble sons; they are all gone. Oh, that terrible night, when my wife went out to the brushwood, never to return—when my boys left my home to be slain by our deadly enemies!"

He paused, and there was a deep silence; the tears rolled down his cheeks.

"These things do not occur now," he again said: "Christianity has put an end to these bloody wars. But there is one thing I want to ask: Can it be that the Christian people of England have had this Gospel of peace for many long years, and never sent it to us till now? Oh, that they had sent it sooner! Had they sent it sooner, I should not be to-day solitary, sad-hearted, mourning my murdered wife and children. Oh, that they had sent it sooner!"

He sat down. Another man rose up. "I know what my brother says. I, too, mourn to-day sons and daughters slain. If we had known the Gospel sooner, they should be with us now. Yes, it is true. Oh, that English Christians had sent the Gospel sooner!"

I thought, as I sat listening, how much these words should sober and stir us. Oh, to send the Gospel everywhere we can, and send it soon! —Rev. W. Wyatt Gill.

Truth is always consistent with itself, and needs nothing to help it out. It is always near at hand, and is upon our lips and ready to drop out before we are aware; but falsehood is troublesome, and sets a man's invention upon the rack, and one untruth needs a great many more to make it good.

An ingenious mind feels in unmerited praise the bitterest reproof. —Bossuet.

A Good Name.

"A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches."

Children, chose it,
Don't refuse it;
'Tis a precious diadem.
Highly prize it,
Don't despise it,
You will need it when you're men.

Love and cherish,
Keep and nourish;
'Tis more precious far than gold.
Watch and guard it,
Don't discard it;
You will need it when you're old.

Out in the Rain.

There is a touching story of the famous Dr. Samuel Johnson, which has had an influence on many a boy who has heard it. Samuel's father, Michael Johnson, was a poor bookseller in Litchfield, Eng. On market days he used to carry a package of books to the village of Uttoxeter, and sell them from a stall in the market place. One day the bookseller was sick, and asked his son to go and sell the books in his place. Samuel, from a silly pride, refused to obey.

Fifty years afterward Johnson became the celebrated author, the compiler of the English Dictionary, and one of the most distinguished scholars in England, but he never forgot his act of unkindness to his poor hard-toiling father; so when he visited Uttoxeter he determined to show his sorrow and repentance.

He went into the market place at the time of business, uncovered his head, and stood there for an hour in a pouring rain, on the very spot where the book-stall used to stand. "This," he says, "was an act of contrition for my disobedience to my kind father."

The spectacle of the great Dr. Johnson standing bareheaded in the storm, to atone for the wrong done by him fifty years before, is a grand and touching one. There is a representation of it (in marble) on the doctor's monument.

Many a man in after life has felt something harder and heavier than a storm of rain beating upon his heart, when he remembered his acts of unkindness to a good father or mother now in their graves.

Dr. John Todd, of Pittsfield, the eminent writer, never could forget how when his old father was very sick, and sent him away for medicine, he, a little lad, had been unwilling to go, and made up a lie that "the druggist had not got any such medicine."

The old man was just dying when little Johnny came in, and said to him, "My boy, your father suffers great pain for want of that medicine."

Johnny started in great distress for the medicine, but it was too late. The father on his return was almost gone. He could only say to the weeping boy, "Love God, and always speak the truth, for the eye of God is always upon you. Now kiss me once more, and farewell."

Through all his after life, Dr. Todd often had a heartache over that act of falsehood and disobedience to his dying father. It takes more than a shower of rain to wash away the memory of such sins. Dr. Todd repented of that sin a thousand times.

The words, "Honor thy father and thy mother," mean four things—always do what they bid you, always tell them the truth, always treat them lovingly, and take care of them when they are sick or grown old. I never yet knew a boy who trampled on the wishes of his parents who turned out well. God never blesses a wilfully disobedient son.

When Washington was sixteen years old he determined to leave home and be a midshipman in the Colonial navy. After he had sent off his trunk he went in to bid his mother good by. She wept so bitterly because he was going away that he said to his negro servant, "Bring back my trunk; I am not going to make my mother suffer so by leaving her."

He remained at home to please his mother. This decision led to his becoming a surveyor, and afterwards a soldier. His whole glorious career in life turned on this one simple act of trying to make his mother happy. And happy, too, will be the child who never has occasion to shed bitter tears for any act of unkindness to his parents. Let us not forget that God has said, "Honor thy father and thy mother."

The Child-Dike.

Holland is a beautiful country, full of green fields, with cattle and sheep grazing in the pastures; but there are few trees and no hills to be seen. The ground is so flat and low that two or three times the sea has rushed in over parts of it and destroyed whole towns. In one of these floods, about two hundred years ago, more than twenty thousand people were drowned. In some of the towns that were flooded not a creature of any kind was left alive.

A large part of the water that came at the time of that flood still remains. It is known as "the Maas," and in one part there is a little green island—a part of an old dike or dam—which is called the "kinder-dike," or "child-dike," and it got its name in this way.

The waters rushed in over one of the little Friesland villages, and no one had any warning. In one of the houses there lay a child asleep in its cradle—an old fashioned cradle, made tight and strong of good stout wood.

By the side of the cradle lay the old cat, baby's friend, probably purring away as comfortably as possible. In came the waters with a fearful roar. The old cat in her fright, jumped into the cradle with the baby, who slept through all the turmoil as quietly as ever. The people were drowned in their beds. The house was torn from its foundations and broken in pieces. But the little cradle floated out on the angry sea in that dark night, bearing safely its precious burden.

When morning came there was nothing to be seen of the villages and green meadows. All was water. Hundreds of people were out in boats trying to save as many lives as possible; and on this little bit of an island that I have spoken of what do you think they found? Why, the same old cradle, with the baby asleep in it, and the old cat curled up at her feet, all safe and sound.

Where the little voyagers came from, and to whom they belonged, no one could tell. But in memory of them this little island was called "kinder-dike"—the child-dike—and it goes by that name to this day; and this story is told to thousands of little people all over Holland as a remarkable instance of God's providence.—Nursery.

Home and Farm.

Miss Matilda Lees Dods' School of Cookery.—No. IV.

How to truss a fowl for cooking.

Take a large needle (from six to ten inches long) thread it with cord. (Skewers are in the way when cooking and are not desirable.) First twist the wings behind the back; then pass the needle through the under part of the wing at your right hand when holding up the legs towards you, leaving an end for tying; then through the top of the leg straight through the body coming out through the top of the other leg, then through the under part of the other wing. Turn the fowl on its breast, pass the needle through the upper part of the wing, through the skin of the neck and top of the other wing. The two ends of the cord will now be near each other; draw the cord and tie tightly; then pass the needle through the lower part of the back as close to the back bone as possible, then over one leg, through the skin at the foot of the breast, over the other leg, draw tightly and fasten to thread passing through lower part of the back. It is now trussed for boiling, roasting or baking.

To Boil.—Grease a large piece of white print paper with plenty of butter, twist it over the breast buttered side in. Then plunge the fowl, breast downwards, into a large kettle full of boiling water. (The butter will strike into the fowl making it more tender and seasoning it.) Put in a tablespoonful of salt and boil one hour and twenty minutes. Take out the cord after first snapping it on opposite sides.

Dressing for boiled fowl.

Two hard boiled eggs.
Two ounces of butter.
One ounce of flour.
A little pepper and salt, three gills of milk.

First remove yolks of eggs, and chop whites into rough pieces. Melt the butter in a saucepan, stir into it the dry flour, then add the milk and stir it till it boils. Allow it to boil two minutes, then throw in pepper, salt, and the whites of the eggs. Pour the dressing around the fowl. Grate the yolks through a wire seive over it.

Cheese pastry.

Two ounces of flour.
Two ounces of grated cheese.
Two ounces of butter.
A little pepper and salt.
A few drops of lemon juice; a grain of cayenne pepper; the yolk of one egg.

First, put into a large bowl the flour, butter, and grated cheese; sprinkle over them the pepper and a little salt; make a hole in the center and drop in the yolk of an egg and the lemon juice; knead well with the fingers until all the flour and cheese become dough. It will be quite stiff. Then roll out very thinly on floured board. Never add any water. After being rolled very thinly, with very small cutter cut out small round cakes. Place on a tin without flouring or buttering and bake five minutes. These cakes can be kept for a month or two in a tin box. Warm in oven before using.

Coffee.

One half Mocha, one half Java, mixed and ground to a fine powder. One pint of water, nearly, to each tablespoonful of coffee. In a common coffee pot pour on cold water, let it boil up once and set aside to cool a little. Then allow it to boil up again and it is ready for use. It needs nothing to settle it.

In a patent coffee pot which prevents all aroma from escaping let it boil hard for ten minutes.

Tea-making.

Pour over the tea boiling water and keep it hot without boiling seven minutes.

Scotch Soda Scones for Breakfast.

One pound of flour.
A pinch of salt.
A small teaspoonful of the carbonate of soda.
Two of cream tartar.
One ounce of sugar.
One ounce of butter.
Nearly a pint of sweet milk.

First put in a bowl the flour, add the butter and half of the sugar. Mix thoroughly together with the hands. Put on a plate the soda and cream of tartar, make them very mooth with a spoon and stir them nto the mixture. Add a good pinch of salt and then add the milk. Make a very wet dough, flour the board well, turn out the mixture and knead in sufficient flour to roll. Cut the dough into two equal pieces. Roll out each piece round about an inch in thickness. Cut it twice across the top at right angles. Place on a slightly floured baking tin and bake twenty minutes in a slow oven. Brush with the white of an egg or with sour milk or buttermilk, sprinkle with sugar and place in the oven one minute.

Italian Pudding.

One-half of a quart can of peaches.
Four tablespoonfuls of bread crumbs.
One teaspoonful of lemon juice.
Two ounces of sugar.
One gill of milk.
Two eggs.

First put on a small flat dish a layer of fruit, then a layer of bread crumbs. Continue to alternate the layers until all are used up. Put in a small saucepan to boil one gill of milk; put in a small bowl the yolks of two eggs. To the yolks of the eggs add one teaspoonful of lemon juice, and one ounce of sugar. When the milk boils draw away to cool a little, then pour it over the yolks. Pour this mixture very carefully over the bread crumbs and fruit. Set it into an oven a few minutes (seven to ten minutes), to firm the yolks of the eggs. To the whites add a pinch of salt and beat to a stiff froth. Sprinkle in the remaining ounce of sugar. Then pile the whites as high as possible on the peaches, bread crumbs and yolks of eggs. Put into the oven two minutes to firm the whites on top.

BROILING STEAK.

Place the steak over a great heat without any seasoning (the secret of good broiling is an intense heat); the stronger the heat the better—seven or eight minutes. (After broiling steak for an invalid, cook very quickly and rare; put no water on it, only a little pepper and salt, and a piece of butter.)

SAUCE FOR STEAK.

Two ounces of butter.
One ounce of flour.
One half pint cold water.
A little pepper and salt.
A dessert spoonful of Worcester sauce.
A dessert spoonful mushroom catsup.

First melt the butter in a small saucepan. Stir into it an ounce of dry flour. (Flour when stirred in with the butter never becomes lumpy). Then pour in the cold water. Stir until the water boils. Let it boil two minutes. Then add the Worcester sauce, the catsup, the pepper and salt, but do not allow it to boil for an instant.

REMARKS ON ROASTING AND BOILING.

To roast is to cook in a reflected heat. In no other way are the juices of the meat so perfectly preserved. In baking much of the virtue of the meat is lost. When putting a joint to roast get it into the strongest heat possible at first, this hermetically seals the cells and keeps in the juices of the meat.

In boiling meat for the table plunge it at first into boiling water. The heat closes up the outer cells and keeps the juices in the meat. In making stock or soup put the meat into cold water and let it heat gradually.

CARAMEL BROWN.

(Used to color soups, gravies, puddings, sauces, etc.)

One pound of the coarsest brown sugar.
One pint of cold water.

Put the sugar into a dry, clean saucepan over a hot fire. Stir it constantly until it is browned to a very dark color, it then will have lost all its sweet taste. Add the water slowly and stir until it boils. Let it cool. Then bottle it leaving it uncorked. It will keep a year.

SHORT CRUST FOR A FRUIT TART.

Two pounds of any sort of fruit.
Six ounces of flour.
Four ounces of butter.
One ounce of sugar (besides sugar to sweeten the fruit.)
A few drops of lemon juice.
Yolk of one egg.
One-half gill of cold water.

First put in a bowl six onces of flour, add to it four ounces of butter, and then one ounce of sugar. Mix all well together with fingers or with a knife. Then make a well or hole in the center, drop in the yolk of one egg, and lemon juice, salt and half a gill of cold water. Knead this together as lightly as possible until the flour is wet (the lighter the better). Roll out half an inch in thickness. Put the fruit in a deep earthen dish two or three inches deep, add sugar (for peaches two ounces). Brush the edges of the dish with the white of an egg or milk, then cut narrow strips of crust with which to line the edges of the dish and wet them with the white of an egg or milk. Then roll the remaining crust just to the size of the dish. Cut off the rough edges. Mark the edge with a knife. Brush the top with the white of egg or milk, sprinkle on sugar and bake one-half of an hour.

—Next week the last collection of Miss Matilda Lees Dods' receipts, recently demonstrated in Chicago, will be published. Will those who try them let us know how they like them?

WESLEYAN.

—In the report of the quarterly meeting at Sherman, Portage county, Wis., in the Wesleyan, occurs the following paragraph which is a reminder that every good rule has an occasional exception: "One question came up before the quarterly conference that demands more than a passing notice; it was as follows: Is the Wesleyan church opposed to all secret societies, including Good Templars, or only Masonry and Oddfellowship? The answer of the pastor, based on the Discipline, action of the General Conference, general tenor of church teachings, etc., was: It is opposed to all secret societies. This reply was declared correct by the officiary, but a brother (pastor of an adjoining Wesleyan church) denied the statement of the answer, and declared to the public congregation: 'The Wesleyan church does not stand opposed to Good Templars or the grange.' Which pastor is right? Will the Church Fathers' please decide?"

—Bro. C. F. Hawley returned to Wheaton from his Missouri visit some two weeks ago. His labors were owned of God in the conversion of several. During his sixteen days labors a church was organized, two preachers were ordained or licensed, and six preaching places opened. This hopeful work was in Lawrence county in southwest Missouri.

—Rev. J. E. Carroll of Harrison, Ohio, has been compelled to resign on account of failing health. Bro. Carroll was one of the secretaries of the Oberlin National Convention in 1872. Bro. Geo. Richey of Pataskala, the new lecturer for Ohio, will take his place for the present at Harrison.

—Notice was made in our religious notes a few weeks ago that Bro. Thos. K. Doty of Cleveland, O., a renouncing Mason, and editor of the excellent holiness journal, the Christian Harvester, had joined the Wesleyan brethren. There is more in the case than appears in such a notice. Bro. Doty was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, a local preacher and a class-leader; but his good testimony for Christ against the worldliness and abominations creeping into the church, in which no doubt his position on the lodge question was not the least important part, led his pastor to drive him out of the church after having drawn up the following remarkable indictment, the equal of which is seldom seen:

"Charge I.—Slander and malicious falsehood.

Specification 1. In charging that his pastor preached Zinzendorfism.

2. In saying that for this reason he is not faithful to his vows as a Methodist minister.

Charge II.—Disobedience to the order and discipline of the church.

Spec. 1. By exercising as a local elder while an effort was being made to arrest his character.

2. In endeavoring to override the authority of the preacher in an official meeting. (He differed with the preacher on some point in dispute, and was sustained by the official board.)

3 In holding his class on a certain occasion, when the minister had decided that no meeting should be held.

4. In opposing the formation of a Ladies' Aid Society.

5. While he was leading his class, and the preacher ordered him to stop, he refused to obey.

Charge III.—Sowing seeds of discord, and making dissensions.

Spec. 1. By holding what is termed a meeting for the promotion of holiness, when the minister has forbidden it.

2. In calling the church sociable a devil's lovefeast, because it was the occasion of dancing, and of unbecoming kissing games.

Charge IV.—Dishonesty.

Spec. 1. In promising to pay the preacher a certain amount, and afterward reduced it on the ground that he promised to pay for preaching Methodist doctrine, and not such as he was compelled to hear."

A moment's examination will show that not one of these charges could be maintained by the specifications, and a part of the latter are a positive recommendation of the Christian integrity of Bro. Doty. The preacher in charge having picked a jury for the trial before which Mr. Doty was sure of injustice, he withdrew from the church and joined the Wesleyans who received him gladly, his position being well known in Cleveland. Nevertheless the trial proceeded in the usual ex-parte manner and Bro. Doty found guilty of every charge. Such proceedings put the profession of Christian religion to an open shame.

CONGREGATIONAL.

—Rev. N. D. Fanning of the Independent church of Marengo, Ill., preached last Sabbath in the Crystal Lake Congregational church, which is without a regular supply at present. Elder J. F. Browne, Illinois State lecturer, preached for the same brethren on the Sabbath previous.

—Rev. S. B. Goodenow of Roseville, finding that a number of copies of Ingersoll's works were in circulation in the place, and were having the intended effect upon the thoughtless, has been giving a series of discourses entitled, "Objections to the Bible candidly considered; in review of Thomas Paine's famous Age of Reason, now being revived by Robert Ingersoll."

—In the town of St. Albans, England, Congregationalism has had a very interesting history. It dates from the time of the Commonwealth. Although the Puritans in that locality suffered from ecclesiastical tyranny, they did not succumb, for it appears that in 1672 a license was taken out for "the house of Robert Pemberton, St. Albans, for a Congregational meeting." Under the Toleration act, Congregationalists and Presbyterians worshiped together, until the Arian sentiment spread among the Presbyterians in the last century, when the Congregationalists withdrew and became a separate and flourishing society. This society has been fortunate in having eminent men in its communion. Doddridge, Brown, Watson, Rogers, Bacon and Bassano, are names of which any church might be proud. It is now proposed to make an appeal to the English Congregationalists to replace the old chapel in Spicer street by a fine edifice, to be known as the "Doddridge Memorial church."—Christian Union.

FREE METHODIST.

—The Rochester, N. Y., Exponent of last Friday, has the following notice of our old friend "The Liberty Singer:" "Mr. George W. Clark of Dansville, delivered an elaborate lecture on the evils of tobacco, in the Free Methodist church last Sabbath evening. It is becoming very evident that the use of tobacco is becoming an evil of almost equal magnitude with that of liquor. Mr. Clark's lecture was a thorough discussion of the subject, well worthy of the most attentive consideration."

—A new church was dedicated last week Wednesday in Sycamore, Illinois.

—The Free Methodist contains full accounts from various camp-meetings now in progress. At St. Charles much interest was awakened by the offer of a colored local preacher, Bro. James Suggs, to begin work among the colored people recently come north. The meeting voted heartily to endorse him and raised $100 to begin the work.

UNITED BRETHREN IN CHRIST.

—We have received the 26th annual report of the U. P. Board of Missions. The annual meeting was held in Westerville, Ohio, May 9th. Rev. J. L. Luttrell preached the annual sermon. Among the reports of the mission committees appear many interesting items: Appropriations for $5,000 were asked for Africa; $1,000 for Germany; $2,000 for the Pacific coast; $650 to freedmen's missions; Rev. P. B. Williams of Zanesville, Ind., was recommended to be sent as missionary to Kentucky. The total receipts from all sources for missionary purposes was $37,787.82.

—Rev. W. J. Shuey of Dayton, O., having been offered the title of "D.D." by Hartsville University, Ind., he has respectfully declined accepting it. The Telescope suggests that the colleges may be advancing in this matter faster than the sentiment of the churches at large will allow.

—Pres. W. J. Pruner of Hartsville, has accepted an agency for the Union Biblical Seminary, Dayton, and Prof. C. A. Kiracofe of Westfield College, has been elected to preside over the institution at Hartsville. Westfield, we understand, has called to the vacancy in her faculty Prof. Bookwalter of Western, Iowa.

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

—Rev. J. W. Glenn of Marissa, Ill., died on the 19th ult., after an illness of about nine months. He had been a pastor at Marissa since 1872, and his loss will be deeply felt by his own and the surrounding churches.

Rev. W. J. Gillespie who accepted a call to New York a few years ago from Sparta, Ill., has returned to the old place.

—The amount required by the Board of Foreign Missions for each month during the ensuing year, will be, according to the appropriations made by the late Assembly, about $5,500 each month.

GENERAL.

—An extensive revival is in progress in Germany and promises to be fruitful of good results to the churches. The movement extends along the entire Rhine Valley, and at Dusseldorf alone 200 conversions are reported. A conference has been organized on the English plan and was to be held in that city on June 5th and 6th. Prof. Christlieb has taken great interest in the work and a little tract written by him and entitled "The Gospel of Marah" has had a wide circulation and done much good.

—The matter of church attendance is attracting considerable attention in England. A visit to fifteen churches belonging to the Establishment in the east of London, disclosed the fact that in all these edifices, with a seating capacity of 14,478, there were present exactly 905 persons. In four churches of the Establishment in Rotherhithe, only 156 persons were in attendance. Many of these churches are built with special reference to the poor population gathered around them, and the Church Times declares that their present condition is "something appalling." On the other hand, a recent count in eleven Nonconformist churches of the same size and location showed the presence of 5,500 worshipers.

—T. DeWitt Talmage the eccentric Brooklyn preacher, is now in Europe. He is received in London with wonderful demonstrations. The cable informs us that he preached on Sabbath in that city at Agricultural Hall to two congregations of 20,000 people each. Thousands upon thousands of persons thronged the streets leading to the hall for miles, almost blocking the passage of vehicles and pedestrians. Many people were severely crushed, and Dr. Talmage's carriage was almost demolished by the crush of the crowd, every individual in which was anxious to see the distinguished American preacher. His presenceis creating a furore throughout Great Britain.

—About a hundred person are reported to have been converted in connection with the union Gospel meetings recently held by the evangelists Pentecost and Stebbins in Minneapolis, Minn. They met with strong opposition, but God was their helper. They have been requested to return in November and conduct another series of union meetings. Bro. Pentecost supplies the pulpit of the Center church, New Haven, Conn., during the months of June and July.

—While there are 489 churches, chapels and missions, and 418 Sabbath and 500 day-schools in New York, in the interest of intelligence, morality, and religion, there is an active opposing force of 8,000 liquor saloons, with numerous evil accessories corrupting the innocent, betraying the ignorant, and impoverishing, debasing and ruining the bodies and souls of men.

MASONIC RELIGIONS.

—The Mormon statistics show a grand total of 11 apostles, 2 counselors, 50 patriarchs, 4,260 seventies, 3,241 high priests, 9,615 elders, 1,347 priests, 1,515 teachers, 2,997 deacons, 52,555 members, 75,556 officers and members, 33,661 children under eight years of age. Total, 109,218.

—The Shinto sect of Buddhists in Japan have just completed a college at Kioto in which 600 students will be trained for proselyting purposes, some being prepared for missions to Europe and America. It has recently established a flourishing mission in China.

News of the Week.

—At lake Quinsigamond, near Worcester, Mass., July 4th, the steamer Isaac Davis, loaded with passengers, careened, the hurricane deck broke off, and scores of passengers were thrown into thelake. There were about 200 passengers on the boat—100 on the hurricane deck, and no opportunity to get off. From twelve to fifteen lives were lost and others are missing.

—The Morris Bland excursion resort, one mile below Trenton, N. J., was the scene of a terrible accident July 4th. As the boat approached the wharf hundreds of people rushed towards it to get aboard when it landed. The wharf gave way and about seventy-five persons were thrown into the river. Several were taken out injured. Three persons were drowned and it is feared there are others who have not yet been recovered.

—Mrs. Emilia Young, one of the widows of Brigham Young, has applied for an injunction to restrain the executors of the Young estate from further management of it, saying that they have improperly made away with about $1,000,000 of the property. The executors are Geo. Q. Cannon, Albert Carrington, and Brigham Young, Jr. The third district court has appointed Marshal Shaughnessy and Mr. McCormick, a banker, as receivers. The estate is said to be worth $2,500,000.

—The Supreme Court of Pennsylvania refused to hear the appeal of the last two living Molly Maguires of the State, and death warrents will be issued at an early day for their execution. Their names are Peter McManus and John O'Neil, and both were found guilty of murder last summer. In the last two years thirty-eight Molly Maguires have been hanged in various counties in the State, and the execution of these men will conclude the list.

—The Tampa (Fla.) Tribune says that during the recent dry weather in Manatee county, the lower Miaka lake dried up all to one hole—a thing never before known by the oldest inhabitant—which hole was quite deep and was the only resort for water for the cattle. This hole was full of alligators, and as the stock men feared their depredations on the cattle, a number of men went there one day and killed 723 alligators, from six to fourteen feet in length.

—The greatest fire ever known at Amherst, Mass., broke out on the morning of the 4th. A number of buildings were destroyed. among which were the halls of the Psi Upsilon and Alpha Delta Phi secret fraternities.

—A fire occurred on the evening of the 4th at Trenton, N. J., caused it is supposed by a rocket. The Third Presbyterian church was entirely destroyed, occasioning a loss of $45,000.

—Among the results of the 4th of July celebration there are four violent deaths recorded in this city, three from accidental pistol shots, and the fourth from the kick of a young ruffian, who attacked an inoffensive young man without any apparent provocation. The communist procession in favor of an eight-hour law fell short of the boasts of its members. As three of their number are likely to go to the penitentiary for using their firearms upon a crowd on a late Sabbath, the military companies left their weapons at home, and no cause of disturbance was noticeable.

—June 30 was the last of the fiscal year, and United States treasury officials were very busy getting up the annual statement of the finances of the government. The receipts of the year from internal revenue were about $113,500,000, which is an increase of $3,500,000 over the amount of last year's receipts. This shows an improvement in the business condition of the country.

—The Board of Health at Nashville has adopted by-laws containing the following section: "Upon satisfactory information of the approach or transit through the State of Tennessee of infected persons or goods, it shall be the duty of the President to cause the same to be stopped at the State line, or if found within the limits of the State, to cause said persons or goods to be removed from cars, boats, and other lines of transit, and securely isolated."

—A terrible storm destructive of life and property visited southern Minnesota last Wednesday night. It consisted of an unprecedented rainfall in St. Paul, thunder and hail throughout the State, and a cyclone sweeping across southern Minnesota from the southwest corner to a point on the Mississippi river above Red Wing, where it crossed into Wisconsin. Within fifteen hours the rainfall at St. Paul was probably the greatest ever recorded in the meteorological annals of the State, the rain gauge showing a depth of nearly five inches. The gale increased in violence as it continued eastward, developing local cyclones along its course in LaSuer, Steele and Rice counties, along the Cannon river valley, till it grew into a full-fledged tornado, which fell upon the Swede town of Vasa, in Goodhue county, some ten miles from Red Wing, with terrific fury, making fearful havoc in its track. It lasted only ten minutes, but in that time did immense damage. The Orphans' Home, containing twenty-eight inmates, was razed to the ground, and eighteen childrsn wounded, one fatally, and three killed outright. Several other cases of fatality occurred at Vasa. Much damage was done by the great fall of rain at Red Wing and in and about Menominee, Wis., and at other points.

—A Paris dispatch says that by a hurricane on the river Doubs, in France, a steamer with fifty-three passengers was sunk, and only five persons saved.

—M. De Lesseps, the great French engineer, has just signed the treaty giving him the consession of the isthmus granted by the United States of Colombia. Matters are now to be pushed with the greatest activity. A new company will be immediately constituted, with a capital of 400,000,000 francs.

—The Chilians are said to be preparing an attack on Lima, Peru, and Callao, with an army of 10,000 or 15,000 men, while the iron-clads will engage the attention of the present garrison. The main army of Peru is now at Pisaqua, Iquique, Arica, and Tacua, and, with the transports hemmed in in Callao Bay, relief for the beleaguered city would be impossible for more than a month.

—The troopers with the French Prince Imperial, when killed by Zulus, declare, in contradiction of Lieut. Carey's statement, that the survivors galloped two or three miles without stopping. A correspondent says: "The Quartermaster General disobeyed Lord Chelmsford's orders by sending the Prince on a dangerous expedition, and the escort of which deserted its duty. In the whole affair there is not one redeeming feature." The troop ship Orontes, with the body of the Prince, is expected to reach England on the 9th of July. The Lieutenant who was with the Prince is to be court-marshaled.

—It is reported from Belgium that Sunday last a placard was posted on the wall of the Royal Palace of Lacken, threatening the King with death if he ratified the bill passed by the Belgium Parliament depriving the clergy of the control of elementary education.

—Official reports of the Italian harvest say that the rain and inundations have rendered the prospects in the north deplorable. Central Italy promises at least a moderately good harvest, —According to Odessa newspapers the situation of the crops in southern Russia and the Caucasus has been scarcely ever so bad as at present. What was left by the drouth and hail is now, it is asserted, being annihilated by frightful swarms of grasshoppers and corn-beetles.

—Spring Valley, Minn., a city of 2,000 inhabitants, has for the third time voted for prohibition—the last time by a vote of four to one. There were only two arrests during the last two years.

What Constitutes Gambling.

Chief Justice Thompson, of Pennsylvania, in a case decided by him a few years ago, gave his opinion of gambling in the following words: Anything which induces men to risk their money or property without any other hope of return than to get for nothing any given amount from another is gambling, and demoralizing to the community, no matter by what name it may be called. It is the same whether the promise be to pay on the color of a card, or the fleetness of a horse, and the same numerals indicate how much is lost or won in either case, and the losing party has received just as much for the money parted with in the one case as in the other, viz: nothing at all. The lucky winner is of course the gainer, and he will continue so until fickle fortune, in due time, makes him feel the woes he has inflicted on others. All gambling is immoral. I apprehend that the losses incident to the practice disclosed within the past five years have contributed more to the failures and embezzlements by public officers, clerks, agents, and others acting in fiduciary relations, public and private, than any other known, or perhaps all other causes; and the worst of it is, that in the train of its evils there is a vast amount of misery and suffering by persons entirely guiltless of any participation in the cause of it.

Big Figures.—A rapid penman can write 30 words in a minute. To do this he must draw his pen through the space of one rod—16 1-2 feet. In forty minutes his pen travels a furlong; and in five and one-third hours, one mile. Rather prosy, is it not?

We make, on an average, 16 curves or turns of a pen in writing each word. Writing 30 words in a minute we must make 480—8 to each second; in an hour, 28,800; in a day of only five hours, 144,000; in a year of 300 days 43,200,000.

The man who made one million strokes with the pen in a month was not at all remarkable. Many men make four million.

Here we have in the aggregate a mark 300 miles long, to be traced on paper by each writer in a year—1,904,000 writers must trace 571,-200,000 miles of inky lines, 43,200,-000 strokes multiplied in like manner by 1,904,000, make 82,252,800,-000,000 strokes of the pen in one year.—Eastman's Journal.

A Clock Made of Bread.—There was recently received in Milan a great curiosity in the shape of a clock made entirely of bread. The maker is a Peruvian, a native Indian; and he has devoted three years of his life to the construction of this curiosity. He was very poor, and being without means to purchase the necessary metal deprived himself regularly of a portion of his daily bread, which he devoted to the construction of this curiosity, eating the crust and saving the soft part for his work. He made use of a certain salt to solidify his material, which rendered it perfectly hard and insoluble in water. The clock is of respectable size and goes perfectly well. The case, which is also of hardened bread, displays great talent, both in design and execution; and, taken altogether, it would be difficult to find a greater curiosity.

The Philosophy of Strikes.

"Where are you going with the puppies, my little man?" asked a gentleman of a small boy, yesterday, whom he met with three pups in a basket. "Goin' to drown them," was the reply. "I want a pup for my little boy to play with; what do you say to letting me take one of them?" "I'll sell you one," spoke up the boy, with true American enterprise. "I'll sell you this yaller one for half a dollar, the black one for seventy-five cents, and the spotted one is worth a dollar." "I think my boy would like the spotted one best, but you ask too much for it. You had intended drowning them, but I will give you twenty-five cents and save you the trouble of drowning the spotted one." "Twenty-five cents for the spotted pup!" exclaimed the boy; "I can't stand it. Taxes is high, groceries is high, oil is down and goin' lower. Oh, no; I can't take less than a dollar." "But you intend to drown—" "Take the black one at seventy-five cents" "My little boy wouldn't like the black one." "Take the yaller one at half a dollar; and he's dog cheap." "I don't like his color." "Well, then you'd better tell your little boy to play with his toes;" and he continued on his way to the river, remarking, "No party can dead-beat his way on me these hard times."—Oil City Derrick.

—Four hundred and ninety-four persons committed suicide in San Francisco in the last six years. Stock gambling is said to be responsible for one-third of the entire number.

—It is estimated that the public schools of the United States cost $2 for each inhabitant, while our military expenses cost $1.39. That is, a small standing army of 20,000 men cost seven-tenths as much as the education of 10,000,000 children. Nothing shows better how enormously expensive soldiers are. But mark the expenditure for these two purposes in other countries: Prussia, education, 51 cents for each inhabitant; military, $2.20; Austria, 34 cents and $1.39 respectively; France, 29 cents and $4 50; Italy, 13 cents and $1.57; England and Wales, 66 cents and $6.86; Switzerland, 88 cents and $1.—Penn. School Jour.

Discussion on Secret Societies,

By Elder M. S. NEWCOMER, and Elder G. W. WILSON.

This discussion was first published in a series of articles in the Church Advocate and afterward in pamphlet form. The Evangelical Repository reviewing it says: "This pamphlet consists of a series of articles originally published in the Church Advocate, Lancaster, Pa.
Elder M. S. Newcomer, opposes Secret Societies and especially Freemasonry, and Elder G. W. Wilson defends the system. We are free to say that Mr. Newcomer has thoroughly routed his opponent at every point. Mr. Wilson speaks by the book as he is a Royal Arch Mason."

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

BY PRESIDENT CHARLESS G. FINNEY, OF OBERLIN, OHIO

This is a most powerful argument against the Lodge by a truly great and good man who when a young man just before beginning the study of the law and before his convertion, was drawn into this Anti-Christian institution, and as he says on page seven "became a BRIGHT Mason." On the same page he says; "I was completely converted from Freemasonry to Christ." The most of this book was first published in a series of articles in the Independent which created such excitement that the publishers refused to insert the rest of the articles.

This book has already opened the eyes of multitudes to the evils of Freemasonry.

MASONRY A WORK OF DARKNESS

ADVERSE TO CHRISTIANITY, and Inimical to a Republican Government.

BY REV. LEBBEUS ARMSTRONG, [Presbyterian.]

A Seceding Mason of 21 Degrees.

This is a very telling work and no honest man that reads it will think of joining the lodge. Single Copy, post paid,..... 20cts.

GRAND LODGE MASONRY,

Its relation to civil Government and the Christian Religion.

By Prest. J. BLANCHARD, at the Monmouth Convention.

The Unchristian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is here proved from the highest masonic authorities.

SERMON ON ODD-FELLOWSHIP AND OTHER SECRET SOCIETIES

BY REV. J. SARVER, Pastor Evangelical Lutheran Church, Leechburg, Pa.

This is a very clear argument against Secretism of all forms and the duty to disfellowship, Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications.

" per hundred by express (ex. charges extra $25.00

Capt. Wm. Morgan was Mr. Greene's neighbor in Batavia, N. Y., and a member of the same lodge with him at the time of the great excitement in 1826. The titles to these chapters are sufficiently exciting to give the book a large sale:—"The Storm Gathering;" "Abduction of Morgan;" "Attempted Abduction of Miller and his Rescue;" "What became of Morgan;" "What Morgan Actually Revealed;" "Confession of the Murderer;" "Allegations against Freemasonry, etc."

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion.

A clear cutting argument against the Lodge, from a Christian stand point.

Topics of the Time.

The grain markets of this country were greatly agitated during last week. Reports from England and the continent indicated widespread injury to the crops in all the grain-producing regions. The prospect of an unusual demand from abroad, and the probability that the late severe rains that swept over Dakota, Minnesota and Wisconsin would affect our own crop had a temporary influence. It is yet too early to know how permanent this may be, but the feeling is strong that better prices will be paid during the fall. From central Illinois it is reported that the yield of winter wheat is far beyond anything of late years, some fields producing as high as forty-six bushels per acre. Such extraordinary production cannot probably extend over a very large section. In preparation for the yield of the immense grain fields of the extreme northwest, the great mills which were destroyed about a year ago at Minneapolis by explosion and fire are being built on a magnificent scale. Three of these monster mills are now going up; the largest, the Washburn "A," is in size 244 by 100 feet with stone walls six feet thick at the foundation rising eight stories or 114 feet high. Cars from the railroad are run into the third story to be discharged. Two immense turbine wheels furnish the power, and steel rollers instead of burr-stones will reduce the grain to flour.

Of the 8,079 men engaged in liquor selling in Philadelphia, only 205, about one in forty, are native Americans, while 3,041 are Irish and 2,170 Germans. The idea that "the oppressed of all nations" seek here a home and happiness has an extravagant sound in the presence of such figures. Except for this foreign element ours would be one of the most temperate of the nations. But there may arise from this very fact salvation to our country. So long as the drinking and liquor selling classes are so largely foreigners, native Americans will maintain the supremacy in business, politics and religion. The very efforts being made to suppress the traffic will tend to strengthen in every way the party which forces the battle and wins. Those engaged in this great work are almost universally native born. So that out of this enormous evil God may bring a great good to our loved country.

The articles on other pages of this paper on the freedmen and their exodus will not be passed without a careful reading. It seems that another danger has arisen to block the freedman's way to liberty. An Inter-ocean correspondent writes that a colored preacher of Rapides parish Louisiana, preached to his congregation on a Sabbath in June in favor of emigration, not en masse or hastily, but at such times as circumstances might justify. A few nights later his house was surrounded by some fifty men, who seized him and hung him to a gum tree in the neighboring woods. Where there are no courts this is an evil to be remedied by bayonets. Gen. Conway's steamer cannot reach it, but may, like John Brown's raid, precipitate the struggle that must forever settle the question of the black man's rights.

On his late trip across the continent Joseph Cook, the great Boston lecturer, stopped at Salt Lake and lectured to large audiences of Mormons and "Gentiles" on the abominations of polygamy. Mr. Cook had the satisfaction experienced by many of our lecturers against the lodge, who know that the wholesome truths they have spoken are pricking Masonic consciences when they note signs of disturbance and receive upon themselves personal abuse. The Mormons were much enraged at the lecturer, and his words may have some effect—time will show. But something more severe than lectures is needed for a people so lost to decency and respect to law as appeared in the late trial of Miles. Something should be done to stop the proselyting of ignorant foreigners. A train of twenty-one cars, sixteen of them laden with 700 foreign converts to polygamy and five with their luggage, went westward from this city last Friday evening. The Mormon disease will grow only more dangerous so long as it is allowed to transport the most ignorant and degraded classes from Europe as sacrifices to its religion of lust.

At the beginning of the present century the Porte allowed only three hundred Jews to reside in Palestine. Now it is said that Baron Rothschild, a Jew, holds a mortgage on the whole of that interesting country as security for his loan of two hundred million francs to the Turkish government. About four years ago there were 13,000 Jews residing in Jerusalem. They have bought up all the land for sale in the city and have built entire streets outside the walls. A scheme fostered by Sir Moses Montefiore, a wealthy Jewish baronet of the old school, is now contemplated for the rebuilding of the entire city and the re-establishment of the Jews. German Jews have already sixteen charitable associations there; a school of agriculture has been founded by a Venetian Jew; the Jewish congregations number 28 and they have two journals printed in the city. Although the Jews living in Jerusalem are on the whole very poor, the immense wealth of their countrymen in Europe, and their almost universal enthusiasm for the city of their fathers is encouraging them as they increase in number and power, to lift up their heads and look for the drawing nigh of their redemption.

The body of the young Prince Napoleon reached England from South Africa last week and was buried on Saturday beside his father in the little church at Chiselhurst. There was something inexpressibly sad in the anguish of his mother, the once gay Eugenie, as she grieved over the coffin where lay the slain hopes of a proud woman's ambition. And who may say there was not enough for her sadness? The whole history of this case reads like a story of despotic power secretly and desperately disposing of a rival. Young Napoleon joined the English army operating among the Zulus a few months ago. It can hardly be supposed that there were not opportunities of learning the art of war in the presence of more noble enemies. His reasons for the strange step were few. He was grateful to England for a home in banishment. He had been learning military tactics with some of the troops who had gone to Africa, and wished to share their hardships and perhaps victories. When at length he is sent out with a small party without any well defined object, they run into an ambush and the lieutenant and soldiers run away safe. The officer is court-martialed, but no good ground of prosecution appears, some misunderstanding of orders, the evidence is said to clear him of cowardice; and that will be all of it. Such things awaken the suspicion that behind the scenes such hands are working as in years past the despots of Europe have chosen for deeds of blood. There is some alarm manifested in France at the funeral honors prepared by England, lest Victoria and her premier are jealous of the republic and would foster imperialism in France. But with no prince to crown with empty homage, and no successor, the Bonapartists of France are fast becoming a cypher in the politics of that country.

—A pastor in New York State who takes a deep interest in our reform work writes: "I think the notice for a prayer meeting at Mrs. E. A. Cook's very encouraging. Why can we not have a prayer meeting once a week attended by all who are interested in our reform. We can meet in heart if we can't bodily." Such meetings we desire before all things else to see established. The lovers of holy living have such praying bands in hundreds of places, in the churches if they can, but more often in private houses. God is blessing them and the churches through them. So it should be with our work. It is a holiness work—a separation to Christ, and for him, from all the false worships set up by the devil to destroy his kingdom. We hope that the Associated Churches of Christ may yet assume the form of a prayer alliance, which can be done without anything ecclesiastical or denominational attaching to it.

THE BAPTISTS AND THE FREEDMEN.

BY EDWARD HERVEY.

The Baptist denomination has been on trial. At the close of the war there were more freedmen identified by connection and by sympathy with that church than with any other, and with the exception of the Methodists, with all others. Before the war closed, as early as 1863, the National Theological Institute was organized to look after the interests of the contrabands, who flocked to our cities and who followed our camps. In 1865, the anniversary meetings of the societies were held in St. Louis, and Wm. Hogue, D.D., and others influenced the American Baptist Home Mission Society to undertake the freedmen work.

At the outset both societies worked, as did the American Missionary Association, in the States where our flag floated in supremacy, or in States reduced to territories where Northern influence was all-controling. Then came the surrender of Lee to Grant, the murder of Abraham Lincoln, the betrayal of liberty by Andrew Johnson, and the consequent demoralization of the people in the South. Though the negro had received the ballot, which was thought to be a protection to his rights, yet the opposition to his manhood early appeared in the South and the question was reached, Shall our religious organizations seek to do Christ's work among Christ's poor? or shall they acquiesce in the purpose of Southern churches and organizations to keep the negro down, that the respect and power of the white man in the South may be enjoyed?

Nathaniel Colver, D.D., the black man's friend, and Rev. Seward A. Grimes, the black man's representative, with many who were old-time abolitionists, stood for the black man despite the influence of the whites. In the Methodist church, the influence of Gilbert Haven, D.D., and men of his stamp, has ruled the day in favor of the recognition of all the black man may be and do or dare for Christ, liberty and humanity. The Methodist Church North represents Northern Christianity in the South, and represents it exceedingly well. The American Association does the same thing for the Congregational communion. In the Baptist policy there has been on the part of the American Baptist Mission Society an attempt to promote the education of the negro and at the same time retain the power and co-operation of the white Baptists of the South. Worsihiping God and Baal is a difficult business now and ever. The Baptists of the North have been compelled to declare in favor of making northern sentiment pervade American Christianity. The brutality of the South cannot be defended even by conservative Baptist preachers and churches. Choosing sides became a necessity.

At Saratoga, in May, the societies pronounced strongly in favor of liberty. The Missionary Union, under the inspiration of God's manifest presence among the people of the East, could not withhold sympathy from the persecuted, maltreated Christians of our own land. As a result when Dr. Tucker of the Atlanta Index, tried to play the part of an extremist on the side of the South, he found little sympathy and much opposition. In the American Baptist Publication Society Dr. Justin D. Fulton spoke energetically in regard to the freedmen, and offered the following, which were unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, The negro exodus compels the recognition of the black black man as a factor in our national life, whose right as outlined in the Gospel of Jesus Christ and as recognized by the Constitution of the United States cannot wisely or safely be ignored; therefore,

Resolved, That this movement so wide-spread and unexpected presents to the Christian people of the North an opportunity to continue on a broader field and in a more effective way the work inaugurated by our missionaries, preachers and teachers.

Resolved, That while we rejoice in all that had been achieved by the efforts put forth in behalf of the education of a few preachers and teachers of the colored people for the colored people, necessity on their part as on our own demands for Africans in ignorance and almost in heathenism, the brotherly help as well as the Christian leadership of those who loved them in bondage and must establish them in liberty.

Resolved, That the American Baptist Publication Society, through its missionary and Sabbath-school departments is fitted to look after this work, and has special claims as never before upon the benevolence of our churches and the prayers of our people that they may foster the era of good feeling and of philanthropic endeavor which shall make the colored man prosperous and contented in the place of his birth, in the home of his childhood and on the field where his industries are needed, and where his interests shall be protected and subserved.

In the Home Mission Society Rev. Dr. Marston of Missouri, met the Gulf Stream of liberty when he avowed that American slavery had been instrumental in leading more souls to Christ than all our mission boards put together. Then Dr. Bright of the Examiner and Chronicle, Dr. Wayland of the National Baptist, and Dr. Fulton of Brooklyn, spoke in remonstrance. The brother saw the difference between the North and the South, and the next day, when Rev. R. S. Macarthur of New York offered a resolution declaring that the sentiments uttered by Dr. Marston were not in harmony with the convictions of that body, the Southerner came down, apologized for the utterance, and put himself squarely on the side of liberty. It was a great achievement. I have waited to see what the Southern press would have to say about it; but with rare exceptions they passed it over. The Western Recorder of Louisville published the facts without comment.

It will be seen that this denomination is taking advanced ground. Gen. T. M. Conway, the leader in the colored exodus, is a Baptist minister, and wears the mantle of Nathaniel Colver. The Standard of Chicago, the Examiner and Chronicle of New York, and the National Baptist of Philadelphia, are stalwart champions of liberty. Up to the present time, Nathan Bishop of New York, Estey of Vermont, Shaw of Massachusetts, and Chamberlain of Brooklyn, the founder of Leland University in New Orleans, have done nobly in a financial way. But the heart of the great givers sets eastward toward India rather than southward toward Africa. The exodus is beginning; the great work is yet to be accomplished. Rejoicing in what has been attempted, it will be more and more the manifest purpose of Christ's true children to go on toward perfection, until in all this land a man shall be "a man for a' that." God speed the work.

SALEM, MASSACHUSETTS.

The old town of Salem (in Massachusetts, not in the Holy Land) is distinguished for witchcraft. It seems desirous also, of being noted for another institution not less vile, viz., a Masonic lodge.

The lodge to which we allude, was founded just one hundred years ago. Like the lodge of Milthra established by the pirates of Cilicia some two thousand years ago, it was based on the interests of piracy, or rather on privateering, which, however, amounts to about the same thing.

On Saint John's day, so called by the Masons and Romanists, in the centennial year of its existence, the Masons of this lodge came together to worship Freemasonry. Universalist ministers and politicians also came among them; though of course it is understood that an institution based on piracy has nothing to do with religion or politics.

The Hon. George B. Loring, Representative in Congress, was there; between two pious Universalist ministers, so to speak, like Richard III. between the two reverend prelates, when he appeared before the people as a pious aspirant for the crown. Mr. Loring's refrain was the same old Democratic song that he sung before the Rebellion. He knew no North and no South. It would not do for Masonry to know any distinctions in politics, or in morals. It must not confine itself to principles so narrow as the ten commandments, or the Christian religion. It would not be Freemasonry if it did. It must be entirely above any considerations like those of religion and politics; it must ascend far above such clouds, like "the skyey Olympus," and serenely penetrate the great lodge above.

I only wish that I could give the readers of the Cynosure an adequate idea of the spirit pervading the centennial celebration of this pirate lodge of Massachusetts. There seemed to be a Satanic leer upon the face of everything, and everybody, and especially upon the fronts of the Universalist ministers. They all seemed to be laughing in their sleeve; as much as to say, "We have a joke here which we defy any one to detect us in; a joke by which we can safely pretend to be worshiping the Lord while serving the devil." What a consummate joke it is, beating the Egyptian sphynx or Samson's riddle! With such a joke Barnum can be outdone at his own game!

But the most wonderful part of all remains to be narrated. The Boston Advertiser, the most respectable paper of New England, reports the proceedings of this lodge-meeting with as much solemnity as if it had been a prayer meeting, or a funeral service. That paper would shew evidences of impatient wrath or slavish fear if called on to publish the proceedings of an Anti-masonic meeting; for such a meeting might upset the shoe business, or perhaps some piratical interest; and besides, the Freemasons of Massachusetts doubtless expect to present one of their "order" as candidate for the next President of the United States; and what hopes could such a man have—what chance would a high tariff have—what expectation of managing the affairs of the Republican party could Massachusetts have, if the impositions of the Masonic lodge should cease to operate?

If anything but devils or knaves could flourish on every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the Masonic lodge, we should hope that the shoe business and president-making, nay, even the Universalism of Massachusetts might thrive; but this lodge business is getting to be somewhat overdone for the credit of Massachusetts.

NEW ENGLANDER.

THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

BY THOS. HODGE.

This Association may be regarded as the anti-slavery society was—a civil, voluntary institution born of the necessities of the hour. It desires to influence the whole nation. The word Christian is variously applied. Strictly it is the character of the devout believer in Christ, or of the churches of Christ. In a broader sense, it applies to the country at large. The N. C. A. derives authority from no one church, but is the offspring of Christian sentiment existing among the churches, or among many who are not members of any visible church.

Our N. C. A. has a clear moral purpose in view. The inscription upon its flag is "Opposition to Secret Societies," which are regarded as inimical to our civil and religious institutions. To use its own words, "Its business and objects shall be to expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion and our republican government from corruption."

The N. C. A. seeks to purify our courts, our legislatures, and our churches, but not to be the substitute for any of them. It is open for, and welcomes every one who professes faith and obedience to Christ. Its purpose is to preserve that civil and religious freedom for which our fathers shed their blood, and for which the Pilgrims braved the ocean, the forest and the savage. They endured for conscience' sake extraordinary toil, and bequeathed to us an extraordinary spirit of independence which no foreign force could overcome.

But the price of liberty is eternal vigilance. Has not our external security lulled us into lethargy, disarmed jealousy and exposed us to the insidious enemy whose principles in their very nature are subversive of those which are our glory by inheritance? Nations have in past days been duped and republics have been overthrown; are we to imagine that no danger to our country can exist among our people? Our recent history gives too sad an answer to that question. Our danger is still from within our own borders. Another foe to our peace and prosperity exists. Danger threatens not only from Rome with its priests and popes, nor from infidelity, but from another foe more silent and secret than either, but equally intent upon gaining control over the bodies and souls of men, and which is now busily at work among our people of every class, of every color, and of every faith. Itf work is not limited by degrees of latitude nor longitude, nor can the color of the skin afford a presumption against its presence.

It is for the people to say whether or not their judges and jurors, legislators and office-holders of every grade from policeman to President shall be freed from the suspicion, that not their merits but their membership in a lodge secured to them their offices. Let the people declare that the educators in their schools and colleges, and those who minister consolation amid cares, anxieties and bereavements, must have their lips pure, or purified by renunciation, from the awful secret obligations which God never sanctioned and which are therefore profane. Such brotherhoods are not Christian. Christ did not institute the lodge and enjoin silence and secrecy in its worships, but he instituted an open church and commanded that its blessings should be freely proclaimed in all the world.

The Seventh Commandment of Masonry.

If I were guided, in writing of Masonry, by personal feelings alone, I should have something to mention of brotherly kindness received from fellow members of that fraternity. As the view I am taking, however, extends to the whole system and the principles upon which it is built, I must repeat my caution to young men not to become entangled in its sorceries.

In a former paper I have spoken of the immorality, nay, the blasphemy, by which the victims become bound to the order. Now I must speak of the immorality that is combined in all its parts. It is selfish throughout. Selfishness is the key note of all its melodies, and selfishness gives to Masonry its anti-Christian character. The mandate of Christianity is, "do good to all for Jesus's sake." That of Masonry is, "do good to us and our folks for the sake of us and our folks."

I will give an illustrative sample in which is seen the quality of the whole lump. By way of preface, let us suppose that the Masons in a community are in proportion to the whole, as the colored people of the community are to the entire population. Further suppose that some one of the ten commandments were accommodated to the colored people. Take the eighth, for instance, and make it read, "Thou shalt not steal — from colored people." A coarse perception might say, "that is good, we do not want to see the poor colored people robbed and impoverished." I trust to your more educated perception, Mr. Editor, to look beyond the letter and grasp the implication. The implication is, "you may steal from people not colored. Now to the case. Masonry applies just this heroic treatment to the decalogue. It takes the seventh commandment and recognizes it in the following fashion—(I quote the exact language of the obligation:) "I will not violate the chastity of a Mason's wife or daughter, knowing them to be such." There it leaves chastity and returns to it no more. The importance of this provision to the domestic circumstances of the "Grand Master Solomon" is obvious, yet who that knows the man can refer to him the origination of such a rule? I anticipate your verdict, Mr. Editor. You say that it were better for the world to cancel the seventh commandment than to have it stand as the Masonic architects have left it. "If thou lift up thy tool upon it thou hast polluted it." Ex. 20: 25. I know many Masons who would be dissatisfied to have their wives and female relatives live under a rule no more restricted than they apply to themselves.

The number of those who rely partially or wholly upon their Masonry for salvation is great. Many Masons who are in the Christian church make much account of Masonic funeral services over a deceased brother, and the number of ministers who hold an orthodox ecclesiastical standing, and at the same time adhere to Masonry is so considerable that no chapter need be without its chaplain. Can it be that any minister, qualified to teach the way of salvation, is so blind as not to see that Masonry not only comes short of Christianity but that it antagonizes it?

Aside from the vital mischiefs of Masonry I would specify the following minor ones. 1. It takes a man away from his domestic relations. 2. It absorbs the pecuniary means of men of small wealth. 3. It feeds the mind moonshine instead of substance. 4. It withdraws a man from the larger sympathies of humanity. THE WIDOW'S SON.

Knights of Labor.

THE SO-CALLED ORDER OF WORKINGMEN — ITS ORIGIN, PLANS AND METHODS.

A correspondent writes from Pottsville, Pa., to the Cincinnati Gazette:

The expose of the inner workings of the labor organization known as the "Knights of Labor," by the coal and iron police, has directed much attention to the coal regions of this State, and to the great workingmen's trade association, which has an extensive and influential membership in the mining districts of Pennsylvania. The mysterious movements of the miner Knights of Labor has given rise to many suspicions among those persons unconnected with and distinct from them, and it has been often wondered for what purpose the organization was founded, and what were its principles, aim and object. The officials very strongly disclaim any connection with the troubles prevailing between the coal and railroad companies and their operatives, and state that an examination of their "record of principles," by-laws and constitution will thoroughly disprove that their organization has any socialistic or communistic tendencies. As the Knights and their association are attracting the attention of all workingmen and many other classes of citizens throughout the country, a detailed account of the aims and purpose of the organization may prove interesting reading.

THE BEGINNING.

About ten years ago a secret organization, bearing the name of the Knights of Labor, was started in Philadelphia by James L. Wright, a garment-cutter. The operations of the order were confined to the clothing-cutter's trade of that city, until a few years ago, when it was proposed by Wright to extend the influence of the order. Shortly after the commencement of the work sixty-four assemblies, every member denoting a different trade, were in active work in Philadelphia, and numbering not less than seventeen thousand members. From these the order rapidly spread.

Two of the most powerful assemblies were the brotherhoods of Locomotive engineers and Locomotive firemen, and through their agency new assemblies were established along the line of the Pennsylvania, and Philadelphia and Reading, and other railroads. Pittsburg, Scranton, Pottsville, Pottstown, Shenandoah, Wilkesbarre, and other places in Pennsylvania, soon became the headquarters of strong assemblies. Newark and Jersey City, in New Jersey, soon organized. The work of organization went on, and is still going, and now its effects are felt.

The prrsent "Grand Master Workman" of the entire organization is Uriah S. Stephens, of Philadelphia, and the "Grand Secretary" is Charles H. Tetchfield, whose headquarters are at Marblehead, Mass., from which place he was elected a member of the State Legislature, through the aid of his organization.

WORKINGS OF THE ORDER.

The workings of the order are secret in character, and it was not until recently that the existence of the society was credited. The greatest care is exercised in inducing men to join, and nothing as to the nature of the organization is developed until the oath of secrecy is administered. The assemblies generally meet in some out of the way place,, where those who have signified their willingness to become members are reported to the assembly, composed of the tradesmen of which he is a member. The name is referred to an investigating committee, which examines into the applicant's character, and without his knowledge, ascertains his ideas of secret organizations. If he is reported favorably, the person who first recommended him will invite him to attend the next meeting of the organization.

The applicant remains in a small ante-room until the assembly completes the opening ceremonies, which is done by reading a portion of the the Scriptures. This done, the lights in the room are lowered until it is impossible to distinguish faces. The "Grand Sage," who is chairman of the investigating committee, now enters the ante-room, disguised with a large black cloak and head cover that completely envelopes the body and head, while the face is protected from recognition by a black mask. In a solemn manner the following questions are asked, and the answers recorded in a little book which the investigator holds in his hand:

"Your name, birthplace, residence and business?"

"Do you know of any reason why by joining a secret organization designed to protect labor, and especially your trade, you would be committing a wrong against your God, man, or your country?"

THE OATHS.

The answers to these questions are made known to the assembly, and, if satisfactory, the sage brings the bewildered man into the darkened chamber. In the center of the room, and surrounded by the officers of the assembly, and, with one hand resting on the Bible, a solemn oath is administered to the applicant, who also swears that he will not divulge any of the secrets of the order, and will not mention its name, or the fact of its existence to any one but those whom he thinks will become members, and even in such cases that nothing definite is to be made known. The annexed interrogations are those put to the applicant:

"You will obey the mandates, so far as they are consisteut with law and order, that are given out by the assembly?"

"You swear to assist your fellow members regardless of the circumstances of his troubles, whenever you find one is sick?"

"If you notice anything in the oath that you will not subscribe to, you are asked to state it."

If the candidate objects to anything material in the oath, and will not conform to it, he is conducted to the ante-room and permitted to depart, and unless he were able to recognize a voice, he would not know with whom he had been talking. If all is well, the lights are turned on, and in all probability, the newly pledged knight finds himself surrounded by many of his shopmates and other acquaintances in the trade. He is then given the passwords and secrets of the society.

PURPOSES OF THE ORDER.

The purpose of the order is to maintain a high scale of wages and assist in providing members with employment. Different means of maintaining the scale of wages are employed at different times, according to the circumstances. If a manufacturer in a certain business gives notice to his employes that he will, at a certain date, reduce the wages, the assembly composed of tradesmen in that line, will consider the matter. The assembly first inquires as to the number of men working in the place who are members of the organization; the state of trade, the time of the year, the funds in their treasury and other important matters are all considered before it is resolved to resist the reduction. If the reduction is a threatening one, or likely to extend, the general assembly is consulted upon the matter. If it is decided not to resist, the amount of the reduction is placed upon the minute book and is ordered to be reconsidered at a certain day in the year when this particular trade is generally in a prosperous condition. Then, without the slightest notice to the manufacturer, and generally while he is in a great emergency, his operatives strike for the old rates.

The general assembly is known as a district, and is designated by number in the same manner as the ordinary assembly. It is composed of a delegate from each of the bodies in the county. No person can be a delegate, however, unless he has been an active member of the organization for a period of six months. From each "district" one delegate is elected to the "grand body" which gathers together representatives from all parts of the country, and meets once a year. This body elects the Grand Master and the Grand Secretary. Uriah S. Stephens, the present executive head, was elected at Reading, Pa., in January, 1878. He and the present secretary were again elected on the 6th of January, 1879, at a convention of the grand body, held in St. Louis. With the usual secrecy of the organization, this large body, numbering over three hundred representatives from all parts of the United States, collected in St. Louis, transacted its business during the day, in the evening was addressed by Grand Master Stephens, and on the following day attended a grand banquet given by the St. Louis assemblies, and subsequently departed from the city, whither none but themselves know. All this was done without attracting any attention.

Previous to this conference it was customary to tax each member of the organization one cent per capita per annum, by which they created a reserve fund. At this year's meeting the tax was increased to two cents per capita. Out of this fund the national officers are paid, the salary of the Grand Master being $200 per year and that of the Grand Secretary being $800.

THE GRAND BODY.

According to the report of the grand body at the Janaary convention, the total membership of the organization in the United States at that time was 800,000. Since then the establishment of new assemblies have been so greatly pushed throughout the country, particularly in the Western States, that it is estimated that fully 200,000 additional names have been placed upon the rolls of the order. The annual receipts of the grand body for the reserve fund during 1878 amounted to $7,580. This was found to be inadequate for the expenses of the national organization, and, as strikes were apprehended this season, measures have been adopted by which the funds in the treasury may be materially increased.

The Knights of Labor have had their agents zealously working among the coal and iron workers of Ohio, Indiana, West Virginia, Maryland, Illinois and Missouri within the past few months, and a powerful interest has been stirred up in behalf of the organization. Cincinnati, Dayton, Toledo, Crestline, Columbus, Sandusky, Cleveland and other places in Ohio, Indianapolis, Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and various other western cities where large manufacturing establishments that employ numbers of operatives are located, are now being invited by agitators duly empowered by the organization, and so successful have their emissaries been in their mission that hundreds of workingmen of all classes have enlisted under the standard of the Knights of Labor.

CORRESPONDENCE.

PRESENTED TO THE N. C. A. ANNUAL MEETING.

The following letters were presented to the annual meeting of the National Association, June 19th, and referred to the Directors. With their permission the most important letters are herewith presented.

The first is from one of several letters from Rev. J. T. Michael respecting his efforts in New Jersey; date June 6, 1879:

"I intend to rent halls in different places on my own responsibility, as God opens the way, instead of waiting for invitations. These, I imagine would be very few in New Jersey. Halls sometimes can be obtained for a small sum. I have done this in Frenchtown, a stronghold of secretism and worldly churches, where I expect to speak next Monday and Tuesday evenings. The expense is four dollars, and it will no doubt be raised by the collections. I would like to travel throughout the State in this way. With $250 or $300 and traveling expenses, with the interest money I have, will give me a comfortable annual support, and enable me to devote all my time to reform work.

Should you, however, be unable to pay me anything, I am willing to take the lectureship, and do the best I can. I go forth as a minister of the Gospel to preach the whole truth. I prefer to call what I do preaching instead of lecturing.

Truly yours,
J. T. MICHAEL.

Milford, N. J.

The following recommendations of Bro. Michael will be read with great interest. The first is from the secretary of his conference, the second from a young M. E. minister who was not long since left out of work on account of his zeal for Christian reform:

As Rev. John T. Michael of the Newark Conference of the M. E. church, is about to be offered to the National Christian Association as a candidate for the State lectureship of New Jersey, I have great pleasure in bearing my testimony to his unbreakable integrity of Christian character. I have always found him amiable, gentle, and courteous in our personal intercourse. I think he enjoys the confidence and esteem of all his brethren in the Conference, of which he is a member. With respectable talents and attainments, and, as I doubt not, sincere piety, I trust he will be a useful and respectable minister of Jesus Christ, wherever in the providence of God he may be called to labor.

JOHN J. MORROW,
Pastor of First M. E. Church, Dover, N. J., Newark Conference, June 2, 1879.

EVERITTSTOWN, N. J., June 5, '79.

To all whom it may concern:—I have been acquainted with the Rev. John T. Michael for eight years. For several years I was intimately associated with him as a student at Drew Theological Seminary, and have been ever since.

He is considered more than an ordinary preacher. I have often heard him myself and know the opinion of good judges. He is a superior thinker and logician. While at the seminary, Bishop Foster, who was then president, remarked that he had the best mind of any student that had ever been there. His graduating sermon was pronounced the best of any that had been preached previously. (At the time nearly one hundred had been preached.) When admitted on trial in the Newark Conference, it was remarked that as a theologian he was the second Matson.

He is humble and meek in the the true sense of those terms. Bold and fearless in standing up and proclaiming the truth. Self-interest and popularity are no questions with him in the discharge of duty. He is strictly conscientious and has a deep religious experience.

A. G. MILLER,
A local preacher in the M. E. church, formerly pastor of this (Everittstown) charge.

From Prof. S. C. Kimball of New Hampshire the following was read. The special attention of all our contributors is called to the suggestion about publishing their names with their articles.

CENTER STRAFFORD, N. H.
June 16, 1879.

Moses Pettengill, President Nat'l Christian Association.—DEAR BRO:—I received from you a notice to attend the annual meeting of the National Christian Association to be held in Chicago, June 19th. It would afford me much pleasure to be there, but the expense of the journey and the presence of Bro. Hinman in New England at this time render it inexpedient for me to go. I write to assure the brethren who may be there that I am in full sympathy with them in the great work of the Association and that they shall have my prayers for wisdom and success.

The Cynosure, under God, is a tower of strength to our cause. Great attention should be directed to increasing its circulation. The paper is ably edited and well managed. I think it would be a marked improvement, however, if all the writers would speak under their own names. Why should a man who writes for the Cynosure be ashamed to let the whole world know that he is on the Lord's side?

Another suggestion has occurred to me, whether it might not strengthen the cause and the paper to have an able corps of unpaid editorial contributors residing in different sections of the country.

The anti-secrecy cause is gradually strengthening in New England and what we need is, in some way, to reach the Christian public with the facts in reference to lodge folly and sin.

Bro. Hinman is doing a good work, and I wish we could keep him continually employed in New England but I fear we shall lack money to pay him.

Hitherto the Lord hath helped us and in view of our progress during the past ten years we can gratefully exclaim: "Behold what hath God wrought!"

Your brother and fellow-laborer,
S. C. KIMBALL.

The suggestions of Bro. H. H. Hinman also deserve a careful reading:

SOUTH RYGATE, Vt., June 3, 1879.

DEAR BRO. STODDARD:—As a member of the N. C. A., and in view of its approaching meeting, I wish to make a few suggestions.

1st. As to our annual State meeting. I am satisfied that your suggestions in reference to the time of holding the State meetings is wise, and I shall endeavor to secure one for Vermont in the fall. I am quite doubtful about having the national meeting at Washington and would suggest Cleveland, Ohio, as more central, less expensive, and more impressible. There are several churches there which sympathize with us and would afford entertainment. This is not true of Washington. I suggest that a special invitation be given to friends of reform in Canada.

I earnestly suggest that the N. C. A. own the Cynosure and publish the books and tracts they sell.

1. Good faith with the donors of the Publishing fund demand it. It was confidently expected that the N. C. A. would own and control the Cynosure and other publications. Many suppose it does, and most will be disappointed and some offended if it does not.

2. The burdens of such publications ought to be borne, and the profits (if any) realized by the N. C. A. If the work is not self-sustaining we can appeal to the friends of the reform to aid us without any one's thinking that there is any selfish interest involved.

3. Some true and tried friends of the N. C. A. and the Cynosure would labor more earnestly, and I think more successfully, if it was understood that our paper was our common property (in trust for the cause) and not a private enterprise. I write this in no spirit of unfriendliness to E. A. Cook & Co., whose generous contributions and self-sacrificing devotion to the reform are worthy of all praise, but because I think that the work no longer needs to be an individual enterprise, and because I think the time has come when a due regard to the best interests of the cause and the avoidance of all possible reproach demands it.

So long as the Cynosure is a private property it would be inappropriate to make suggestions as to its editorial management; but should it be transferred to the N. C. A., I should earnestly hope that its present editors be continued, and that its senior editor receive something for the work he has long done so ably, yet gratuitously.

It may be objected that the funds of the N. C. A. are needed to help State agents. I answer that this is not the object for which they were constituted, but if the N. C. A. has means it can aid them in publications at wholesale prices. It ought to be the privilege of each State to support a lecturer by annual contributions, but I would suggest that partial appropriations may be made to aid State lecturers conditioned on their more adequate support by private pledges. All of which is respectfully submitted by

Your brother in Christ,

H. H. HINMAN.

ELDER RATHBUN AND THE IOWA LECTURE WORK.

MARSHALLTOWN, Iowa, July 9, 1879.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—There seems to be a misunderstanding among the friends in Iowa in regard to our State lecturer, which I wish to correct as far as possible.

There seems to be a strong impression that Bro. Rathbun is paid by the State Association and therefore should not ask the people for anything where he goes to lecture. Now this is a mistake. The State Association is only pledged to make up a certain amount if he fails to get it on the field. The Association cannot pay the whole of his salary, neither did it expect to at the time the agreement was made.

Now Bro. R. is willing to go wherever he is solicited, provided the friends asking him will pay his traveling expenses, and obtain a hall, and allow him an admission fee of ten cents. This will lighten the burden as well as the responsibility to some extent of paying the agent. Bro. R. is willing and anxious to work, but he and his family must live.

Friends, try and find a number of places in one neighborhood for him to lecture when he goes so as to make his traveling expenses as small as possible, then write him and tell him what you can do. And let us keep the question of secret societies hot until the 16th of September.

JOSEPH MCCLEERY,

BROTHER MATHEWS READY FOR WORK.

HUDSON, Mich., July 7, '79.

DEAR BRO. KELLOGG:—I am feeling the need of vent through the Cynosure once more. Say to our friends everywhere, that though outraged for conscience' sake, yet it's good living, glory to Jesus! We have in southern Michigan "tried men and true," but not all who say, "I believe Masonry to be a great sin, and largely the cause of the low state of spirituality in the churches of to-day are such. In our work we have too many militia, ready for service only on "feast days," that is, in attending general gatherings and passing resolutions and shooting of paper wads. We must disown such, or make regulars out of them by having them tarry at Jerusalem. All who profess reform should be regulars, "whose sole occupation is war or military service," says Webster.

I am in correspondence with brethren of Wisconsin and Minnesota, and expect to start out soon to beard the badger in his den. Pray for me. My wife and many others fail to see the analogy between opposing lodgism and preaching the Gospel. Iowa is witness that our discourses while in that State were called sermons. I want no better weapon to fight the sin of secretism than the Bible. "For the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds; casting down imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God." 2. Cor. 10:4, 5. "The Master's Carpet" is mighty, but only so far as it proves Masonry to be opposed to the worship of Jehovah. This is done by Bible texts. Let us have more of God and less of puffing the saw and the hammer, bearing in mind the words of Jesus, Matt. 25: 13: "Every plant which my Heavenly Father hath not planted shall be rooted up." I have thrown my scabbard away and have engaged the enemy, and my motto is, I'll fight it out on this line 'till I'm called from labor to refreshment.

Finally, brethren, pray for us, that the word of the Lord may have free course and be glorified" in Hudson. If the outspoken Anti-masons would rally with our support it would be easy to build a church edifice here free from leprosy. Brethren, to the front.

E. MATHEWS.

GOOD MEN WELL SATISFIED.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—It is with feelings of the greatest pleasure that I forward you the result of our Anti-masonic meeting held at Salem church in Thompson, Jo Daviess Co., Ill., on June 23d, 1879. After a very short notice Eld. Browne favored us with the best exposition of Masonic religion it was ever our lot to listen to; in fact, he produced such proofs and quotations from Masonic standard works as opened the eyes of the whole congregation; that though we were strong opponents of the lodge before the lecture, we are double distilled and dyed in the wool since. There were a few Masons who had been "East in search of light," but when they came to Salem and heard the truth it gave them inward disquiet, and finally they left so abruptly that you would have thought their very existence depended on their escape. In short we think that Eld. Browne is the best lecturer it ever was our lot to listen to. We have heard more eloquent, flowery and in fact more pleasant speakers, but for sound sense, good logic and plain truth delivered in a Christian and gentlemanly manner, he stands equal to any man. We hope and pray that his labors may long continue until the battle cry of freedom shall be heard on the ruins of every Masonic fabric now cursing our land. By the way, as Methodists we were amazed that any M. E. minister of the Gospel can be a Mason. Do they know that the standard authors of Masonry hold that regeneration is obtained through the foolish mummery of the lodge. The doctrine of regeneration is the foundation of our hopes; it is attainable alone through Christ; and can any man who has obtained it think for a moment that it is found in the mummeries of Masonry? But this explains how some of our ministers, if called upon to preach funeral sermons of Masons, however vile such Masons have been living, invariably proclaim them safe in the "grand lodge above;" so that it is proverbial among us: If you want a man to go safe to heaven then get a Masonic preacher. In fact in our section, at Elizabeth and at Warren, people have concluded that on some occasions the preacher had forgotten the man he was preaching for, but it is now made clear that if they are regenerated in the lodge then is the preacher justified in landing them safe in heaven.

Query, but what becomes of those who belong not to the lodge? the women, children, those of nonage and dotage, imbeciles, lame and blind? We are certain that regeneration cometh not from two sources and seeing we are regenerated through Christ alone we here conclude to hold on to Christ.

Yours with sincerity,

WM. WHITHAM.

Correspondence.

FROM AN EARNEST SECEDER.

WINONA, Iowa.

DEAR EDITORS OF CYNOSURE:—I have allowed considerable time to elapse since I last wrote, but I am still alive—not dead, as some of my Masonic and Odd-fellow brethren would like to have me, as one of the good Odd-fellows of Winfield lodge said the other day that the lodge could not help a certain deceased Odd-fellow's widow, but if the good Lord would deliver to them John Hough's dead body, they would give it a decent burial, free of charge. Now, Messrs. editors, what would you call this?

I said I was not dead, neither do I believe the good Lord intends me to die until my death will hurt the devil more than all my past life has done. I hope that in that hour it will be my crowning act on this stage of life. Now I am aware that the Odd-fellows and Masons hate me; and what for? Simply because I could no longer stand by them in their heathenish institution, and help practice deception on every young man who could be induced to join them in idolatrous worship. Masonry and Odd-fellowship are of the devil, because they are so deceptive.

I remember when I took the first degree in Masonry that I told the brethren of Patmos lodge, No. 189, in Upperville, Virginia, where I was initiated, passed and raised, that I had read all that I had passed through with in a book called an exposition of Freemasonry, belonging to a young man who was then living with me. When I took the Fellow Craft degree I again told them that I had read the same also. They said to me perhaps it was not the same, and that when I took the Master's degree I would find out the difference. They said I had not yet become a Mason and would not until I had taken the sublime degree of a Master Mason, when I would then see what Masonry was. I went on and took the sublime degree, as they call it, of a Master Mason, and after the lodge was closed I said to them that I knew I had read it all in an exposition. They simply laughed to see what a dupe they had made of me, and then told me what had become of that book. The Master of our lodge had borrowed it, and he told me one night while at the lodge that he burned it. He said that the book was as true an exposition of Masonry as he ever saw. I do not remember who was the author, but it had all the different positions, signs, etc., given as in the lodge. I have often wished that I had kept it out of sight.

Our Worshipful Master at that time was Joshua Fletcher, and was about as profane a man as you generally meet, and yet he was Worshipful Master of our lodge, my heart shudders now to think of the awful position he occupied when he dared to stand up in the lodge and call on the name of the Most High to let his blessing rest on them in their heathenish working. Just think of it—a man who seldom used the name of God except to blaspheme it! I have often wondered why I remained with them as long as I did, but I have the same excuse to offer that Paul had when he speaks of his past wicked life, "I did it ignorantly in unbelief, but the grace of God was exceeding abundant with faith and love which is in Christ Jesus, and I obtained mercy." Praise his holy name, I am glad in my soul that the scales of unbelief have dropped from my eyes and I can exclaim as the poor blind man, "One thing I do know, whereof once I was blind, now I see." Bless God.

Now I feel that the time has come when every one who loves the truth should take a bold stand for it. It is written, God has not given us the spirit of fear; but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind. And we are not ashamed of the testimony of our Lord who hath saved us, and called us with an holy calling, according to his own purpose,and grace which is given us in Christ Jesus, that we should show forth those hidden things of is honesty, not walking in craftiness, nor handling the Word of God deceitfully. Let me say that I fear that we are not doing enough to clear our skirts of the blood of immortal souls when we allow those who profess to be ministers of God to go on in their present course of deceiving the minds of the people in their manner of life and preaching. Jesus says every plant that my Heavenly Father hath not planted shall be rooted up, now how can we excuse ourselves for not attacking sin in high places. Secretism should be rooted up because I know from past experience that God never planted such a cursed institution; but the devil was the originator of it, and it originated in hell, because it is the secret works of darkness, and should be reproved. Now our so-called ministers should be brought to light and by the grace of God I mean to clear my skirts of the blood of souls in this matter. I know that there are few that will have the spiritual courage to attack sin in the pulpit but by the help of the Lord I intend to be one of those few.

JOHN W. HOUGH.

MASONIC INFATUATION.

ST. PAUL, Minn, June 24, '79.

DEAR BRO. KELLOGG:—In the Voice of Masonry for last April there is an article in regard to the State anti-secret meetings held at St. Charles, Minn., last winter, in which the writer says:

"For ministers of God's service to prostitute their position, or to denounce that which they possibly were unacquainted with, requires no comment except quoting St. Stephen: 'Lord, pardon them, for they know not what they do.' For a Past Master (?) to profess to work the degrees in public, or to inquire whether Masonic obligations are binding, he may live to learn when too late what remorse and compunction can do, and lay the flattering unction to his soul that as the combined efforts of church and state have hitherto failed to destroy, or even injure it, nothing that he can essay will accomplish that end."

It is not recorded in the Bible that Stephen said, "Lord, pardon them, for they know not what they do." But for him to attempt to condone our wickedness by such a sketch of charity is not a little nauseating. It is not at all likely that any "minister of God's service" will "prostitute his position" by ignorantly denouncing Masonry while such an exhaustive knowledge of that self-assumed plan of salvation is so accessible to all through its own standard publications. Of course the true status of a minister's position is what he is in the sight of God. It is the minister's duty to warn the sheep of his flock to beware of wolves, therefore he may tell his hearers what Freemasonry is.

Surely that institution stands confessedly black and awful that involves "remorse and compunction, when too late!" for one of its members to "inquire whether its obligations are binding." But, thanks to God, there is a way of escape from the frightful bonds of Freemasonry provided in the Gospel. It is found in Leviticus 5: 4, 5: "He shall confess that he hath sinned in that thing." And also 2 Cor. 6: 14–18; and Eph. 5: 11–13.

Then there is the writer's vain attempt to blind us to the fact of the Masonic kipnapping and murder of Capt. William Morgan for writing the degrees of Masonry, by quoting the words of a politician, who upon the recovery of Capt. Morgan's body said, for election purposes, "It is a good enough Morgan;" also his boast that the combined efforts of church and state failed to injure Masonry. But, thanks to God, their cunning devices have hitherto failed to obliterate the facts of history; that show that their kidnapping and assassinating Captain Morgan for writing the degrees of Masonry caused such a commotion that church and state almost destroyed Masonry. He tells us that he is an old Mason. But surely he must be a very ignorant one if he does not know that Masonry was almost destroyed by the combined efforts of church and state about fifty years ago. Why Freemasonry could fare no better than a band of pirates were it not that they had snared so many officers of state and church into their coils.

But there are old Masons so ignorant that they really think all the degrees of Masonry are a profound secret; they do not know that Miller was brutally murdered in a Masonic lodge for saying that the book entitled "Jachin and Boaz" contained a true revelation of their degrees. Nor do they know that a convention of eight thousand people was held at LeRoy, N. Y., while in that same convention there were one hundred and three ex-Masons who arose one by one and each testified to the truthfulness of the revelations of the degrees so for as he had taken them, and then authorized one of their number, Elder David Bernard, to publish all the degrees of Masonry to the world, and that this book, published by that authority and entitled "Light on Masonry," can be had at the office of the Christian Cynosure for seventy-five cents; and therefore they go on in ignorance giving their candidates for secrets what are no secrets at all because they are all published broadcast to the world. They have been told in the awful solemnity of the lodge-room that Masonry is good. They have seen some very polite and well-dressed men there and some who occupied very high positions, hence they think Masonry must be good and so they swallow their awful oaths and thus sell their bodies and souls to the devil without knowing it.

A few weeks ago at the close of a prayer-meeting while Pentecost was preaching in Minneapolis, a well known minister of the M. E. church joined in the conversation of a group of eight or ten persons and told us that he was a Royal Arch Mason, and that he did not regard their obligations as binding, and that he was free to tell us all about it. The company retired to an adjoining room and he there told us about it, corroborating all that was mentioned to him as revealed by Bernard and other distinguished seceders who have written the degrees. We were especially careful to have him corroborate the parts in regard to the concealment of crime, and the removal of the exception of murder and treason in the Royal Arch degree, to extricate a brother Royal Arch Mason from any difficulty, right or wrong, the penalties, the mock prayers, the preparation of the candidate, the signs, etc. He told us that he was lured in by a class-leader in his church, and that he recognized him by his voice playing the part of Jubelum in the enactment of the murder tragedy of the third degree; and also that he was taken in free because he was a minister. We all regretted that a large audience of the citizens were not present so that like the prophet Ezekiel they might have had an opportunity to have looked into the inner court and seen some of their preachers with "their backs toward the temple of the Lord, and their faces toward the east; and they worshiped the sun toward the east." Eze. 8:16. It seems to me that the time is near when the very stones will cry out if God's children hold their peace concerning the sin of Masonry in God's churches.

A few days ago, while talking with a 32d deg. Mason of this city, a man of the very highest moral standing in the city, and a member of the highest standing in the Presbyterian church, I called his attention to the Masonic obligation in the third degree, which requires the concealment of crime. He defended Masonry by saying that he was not obligated to "receive" criminal secrets from a brother Mason. But perhaps he was a little shaken in his defence, for when I called his attention to the Royal Arch degree, where the exception of murder and treason is removed, he defended the act of treason, and referred to the treason of Gen. Washington in taking up arms against England. Allowing this to pass, I asked him to justify the concealment of murder; and here he seemed to be nonplussed, but he still continued to plead the excellency and virtue of Freemasonry. In speaking of our conversation to a brother minister, he remarked that men differ in their axioms of morality. It may serve as a sort of explanation of this strange mental phenomenon of Masons, to imagine a cannibal conscientiously extolling the beauties of cannibalism; but nevertheless Freemasonry is the very insanity of wickedness, and if justice could be had in the courts of justice Masons would learn this fact on the scaffold before the judgment day, when Jesus Christ will judge them. Yours, truly,

WILLIAM FENTON.

HOW I WAS MADE AN ANTI-MASON.

WABASH, Ind., July 5, 1879.

ED. CYNOSURE:—After reading the page in the Cynosure of June 19th, copied from Voice of Masonry, I thought it might be of interest to your readers to know how I was made an Anti-mason. Four years ago the 2nd of June, an excursion train left our city to attend the burial of Hon. Solomon Bayless (a Knight of the Red Cross) of Fort Wayne. I availed myself of the opportunity of attending, thinking I might obtain some information respecting their character. We arrived at the city about 10 o'clock A. M. I think there were ten or twelve bands of music; such a rattle bang with bands I never heard, and they kept it up for nearly two hours. I asked a friend of mine if that was Masonry. He said, "O yes; that is the beauty of it. The music pays me for coming." By walking around I found, to my surprise, every saloon in the city in full operation with front doors wide open. By this time I began to regret very much that I had missed our Sabbath-school to attend what? A Masonic burial on the Lord's day. Seeing those saloons doing so much business, the question arose, Who is patronizing them? I was not there as a critic, but a learner; and am sorry to say, the majority of those who entered the (so-called) "respectable" saloons had their black crape tied about their arm and wearing their regalia. Nevertheless, Masons claim theirs to be a temperance institution. (Sickels's Monitor, p. 55.)

By the time they were ready to march to the place of burial, I became so disgusted at their display, I made my way to the depot to await the hour for departing. Late in the evening the trains left, and with them a plenty of bad whisky. I came home a confirmed Anti-mason and a confirmed temperance man.

Since then I have been reading Masonic authors, Anti-masonic books, etc. I expect to inform myself without having a "cable-tow" about my neck or being "murdered" by Jubelum and resurrected a Hiram Abiff. Yours in truth,

C. R. S.

FALLING FROM GRACE.

KISHWAUKEE, Ill., June 24, 1879.

RESPECTED EDITOR OF CYNOSURE:—I have heretofore given my hearty approval of your paper; have said that its pages gave me more satisfaction than any other I read. It is true, in the meantime, a sentiment may have been advanced occasionally that I did not accord with; but such sentiment has not been advanced in an offensive manner, nor with an intention to make converts. Such have passed out of memory without difficulty. I cannot say as much of a paragraph of a sermon in the issue of June 19, page 4th, under the division, "This change is once for all." The most part of your readers are with me in believing most seriously that man is a moral agent—in a state of probation—and that Christianity does not in this world take him out of that state. God will keep the watchful, believing Christian from sin. But in this state of trial all are liable to sin from constitution and circumstances. See Heb. 12: 1: "Let us lay aside every weight and the sin that doth so easily beset us." Now, sin indulged tends to blind the mind and harden the heart. In this there is no exception. Now, when we hear men quote the Bible to prove that Christians who have repented and believed and built on the Rock, cannot, or, if you please, will not, again sin, we don't like it. See Matt. 24: 12: "And because iniquity shall abound the love of many shall wax cold"—"Leave their first love," "Let another take their crown." If even the pastor of Wheaton church doubts this let him read Rev. 2d and 3d chapters.

I can explain my views on this subject best by recalling some of the past. After the Cynosure had been published a year or so a Mr. H., a Freemason preacher said to me, "The paper is a proselyting affair. It is intended to bring other Christians into the Congregational church." "No," I replied, "it is a united effort of Christians to overturn Freemasonry, and in the paper there is no attempt at proselyting or injuring those of another name. All Christians who are joined in this enterprise, work in harmony with each other."

With the evidence before me now, can I retain this same confidence? Sir the great curse of the Christian church is to-day that she is full of backsliders. The voice of God to such is "Return unto me and I will return unto you saith the Lord." But says the preacher, "They never had any grace from which to fall." Or that nothing can separate between them and the love of God in Christ Jesus. For this see Is. 59: 2: "But your iniquities have separated between you and your God, and your sins have hid his face from you that he will not hear." I presume it is asking rather too high that persons who sincerely detest the paragraph in question yet must help to spread abroad its sentiments through society for its fatal injury. For shame! let not the man who writes or preaches such stuff ever say anything against any course of conduct, for if God deals with men without regard to their responsibility no wretched sinner is in danger. The benevolence of God will bring them all safe home.

The preacher is very unfortunate in his quotations: First, referring us for proof of his proposition to the sacredness of marriage which is for during life, or till death shall part. It is a saddening truth that many whom God hath joined are put asunder by fornication or adultery.

Again he must be hard driven to quote Heb. 6: 4-6, because in that case the fall was so low that they could never rise again, "Or to renew them again unto repentance seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh and put him to an open shame." This was no ordinary case of backsliding, but extraordinary.

From the recollection of years gone by I believe Burkitt comments on the passage thus: When any of the Hebrew converts to Christianity became remiss, the opposers of Christ and his people would persuade or hire them on public occasions to get upon a platform and blaspheme Christ; say he was an imposter, and that all they had professed of his faith was a lie. James the Less was killed with a club because he would not do it. This after all his great gifts of the Holy Spirit, and so contrary to their convictions, amounted to the unpardonable sin. They crucified Jesus afresh and put him to an open shame, from which they could never be renewed to repentance. How lordly does this sentence sound: "This continual furbishing up old professors of religion which is the constant winter work of so many churches, is largely time thrown away. This slight wash that is put on old metal will wear off before the summer comes in." Answer: Many so ill-treated know by joyful experience that they that wait on the Lord shall renew their strength. They shall mount up with wings as eagles, they shall run and not be weary, and walk and not faint. Isa. 40:31. With one slash of the pen my friend fancies he has cleared the churches of his footstool of what he disapproves, yet those who do not backslide, but hold fast and do not deny the faith grow stronger by these despised gatherings, and find themselves able to meet the conflicts of the world and the temptations of the devil. We would let those who entertain this bad divinity of the sermon referred to know that we are highly pleased to look back and see that when we were brought to repentance we dug deep to find the rock, Christ Jesus, and when we found him, we have built all our hopes for time and eternity upon him. Now in the way of his commandments, see Rom. 8:38,39, "For I am persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature shall be able to seperate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

Some few thoughts by way of conclusion: First, I do not intend otherwise than by proper means to try to control the religious views or behavior of the pastor of the Wheaton church, to God he is amenable. Secondly, we do not intend to quail at the bulls of any man while we have the blessed privilege to search the Records of Life for ourselves, and ask God who giveth liberty to all (who ask in faith) and upbraideth none, even those who have not rubbed their backs against a college wall. Thirdly, I will not conceal my mortification at finding this wretched paragraph of a sermon in the much prized Cynosure. Why, my dear friends, it is more than fifty years behind the times. If its sentiments were received, what God has done for the religious world for more than a half century is at one fell swoop thrown in the shade. Fourthly, what can be done to remedy existing wrongs. It is certain the gross attempt to palm destructive error on the people in our paper will not soon be forgotten. But the deepest wounds when the injurer withdraws the injuries will most cordially be forgiven. Because God for Christ's sake has forgiven us.

But while the work of humiliation is going on, let the intimation be recalled that those that believe that there is a dangerous possibility of falling from grace, think they can be for God one day and for the devil the next and so on continually vibrating between heaven and hell. This false charge I have heard for the last fifty years, never heard Christians of any kind use the ideas or language.

Yours for Gospel truth,

GEO. SOVEREIGN.

OUR MAIL.

Wm. A. Bartlett, El Paso, Ill., writes:

"I still have strong faith in the final accomplishment of the result for which the reform was inaugurated. Not, however, because it is making as rapid and successful strides, and bearing down almost all opposition, as most if not all of the friends of the reform may desire, but because of the sure footing, the slow and permanent foundations that are being laid in its progress, and the uncompromising spirit manifested by its converts, and by their shown determination under God not to lay aside their armor until their victory is won. All indicating to my mind that it is the working of a wonder-working God, who will in his own proper time say to the waves of secrecy, of lodgism, that have borne sway so long for evil; 'Thus far, and no further.'"

A. E. Alexander, M. D., Malona, Miss., writes:

"I have ever been an opponent of secret societies. There is but little notice of them taken here by outsiders. Some are opposed but nothing is said. If I could command the means sufficient I would make an effort to create a stir amongst them. I saw a newspaper statement of the number of lodges in Illinois not long since, which was great. I then came to conclude that you were not making much headway against them, did not know but you had died out. I am pleased to learn that you are yet living and at work. We are a bankrupt people here, nearly all in debt, and can't pay."

You see some encouraging statistics in regard to the decline of Masonry in the Cynosure of July 10.

Mrs. M. Tapley, Columbus, Miss., writes:

"A member of one lodge among which tracts have been distributed, says that so few meet there that 'there is no fun in it.' And I believe that many have been there for the last time. What the world needs is a true understanding of the real designs and influence of secret orders. I find many real good conscientious Christians who think they ought not to throw their influence against them because they know but little about them, and are not yet convinced that they are wrong. They will take quite a different stand when they learn the truth. I would very much like to hear something from my sisters in Christ upon this reform work and Southern missions. I want especially to know that they are becoming more and more interested in the evangelization of the colored people."

Ladies, please write your views for "Our Mail."

B. T. Johnson, Waupun, Wis., writes:

"I am anxious to see the new book 'Freemasonry Illustrated,' and read it. I like the Cynosure much. Yes, it grows better and better. I read every word of it."

C. R. Small, Wabash, Ind., sends for "Freemasonry Illustrated," and writes:

"I cannot afford to do without information on so important a subject of reform as the one advocated in the Cynosure."

Henry Ashley, Evansville, Ind., writes:

"So far as I know I am fighting this devil of Freemasonry alone here, but by the help of the Lord I intend to keep battling along. I feel sure that some of the young men have got their eyes open. I pray the good Lord to give his blessing on all the workers and the work, until the church of Christ at last shall be free from this curse."

H. F. Johnson, Pella, Ia., writes:

"I get your paper regularly. I think it is the best paper I ever read. When I was nineteen years old I made up my mind, that I would join the lodge when I became of lawful age; but I have changed my mind.

"May God bless your paper wherever it goes."

Jeremiah Chadwick, Smithport, Pa., writes:

"Some like to read the Cynosure who dare not take it. I can find no one to subscribe. Masonry and the M. E. Church have closed the mouths of churchmen and the world, that they dare not condemn popular sins, and secrecy in particular. The U. B. Church in this vicinity is reticent touching this reform. The preachers dare not read the rule on secrecy in the congregations. God bless the N. C. A. in her work of faith and labor of love. We cannot do without the Cynosure."

John Swickard, Hope, O., writes to Pres. Blanchard:

"I am as much opposed to secrecy as you are. If I knew how I would take the lead in rooting up the abomination of secret combinations. I am satisfied that secrecy is a curse to the nation, a curse to good morals, and a greater curse to all churches that tolerate it. Ever since Masonry murdered Wm. Morgan, I have been opposed to the abomination of that order. Shame on church members that belong to secrecy and then profess religion. 'Be not equally yoked together with unbelievers,' is the word of God. 'Come out from among them and be ye separate' I will soon be 73 years old and am quite feeble. I find some cold shoulders turned to me, but what of that; I have a good many friends, too. I wish I knew how to get a lecturer here. I would do my part. We can have a church in our town, Albany. I live sixteen miles southwest of Utica, Licking Co., O. Can you not send us a man to lecture? I will wait with patience. Yours to oppose all sin, intemperance and secrecy not excepted. I hope the Lord will help his people to labor on till the powers of darkness are driven from the earth. Go on, and may the good Lord bless your good cause."

Will Bro. Richey communicate with Mr. Swickard on this subject? If any readers of the above can aid in regard to lectures or furnish a lecturer, please send word to Mr. Swickard.

Darwin Brooks, Shrewsburg, Mass., writes:

"I am doing all I can in spreading your publications over the whole region around. I take two copies of the Cynosure and send them through the mails in all directions. Also several other of your publications."

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JULY 17, 1879.

The General Congregational Association of Illinois.

Rev. Edward Anderson of Quincy, Ill., read a paper on "The Church and the Lodge," before the State Congregational Association which met at Princeton, May 28th last. The article was a comparison or contrast of the church with the lodge, in which the inferences were so strongly in favor of the lodge that brethren humorously observed, "If these things are so we had better all join the lodge and let the church slide." A committee, of which Prof. Hyde of the Theological Seminary, Chicago, was chairman, made a complimentary report flattering to the writer, but dissenting from the doctrines of Anderson's paper, in which the Advance followed suit, and intimated that some time or other it would have something to say on the subject of secret societies. This is the third or fourth time General Howard has hinted that he held opinions on secretism which would sometime be given to the world. In a letter to Mr. Isaac Preston, rejecting a brief and mild apology and defense of myself against the abuse which the Advance has from time to time published against me, the General says squarely that when the Masonic question has become a national one the Advance will speak.

Well, this article "Church and Lodge" is printed almost entire in the Voice of Masonry the leading lodge organ in the United States, perhaps in the world, and its writer wears the "blushing honors" given him by Professor Hyde and the Advance, with just enough of dissent to make him popular with the lodge. I have no personal acquaintance with Rev. Mr. Anderson. I am told that he is the son of Dr. Rufus Anderson, long Secretary of the American Board; that he is reformed from intemperate habits into which he had fallen while a colonel and that now he is pastor of a leading Congregational church in Quincy; a Freemason, and an advocate of his order as in many respects a model for and superior to the churches, which he soundly berates in the Voice of Masonry thus. He says: "The various lodges and other orders of the country are full of men who pay for the privilege of admission to them, taking upon themselves a solemn and binding obligation and paying their dues regularly year after year." Mr. Anderson reproaches the churches with this fact thus: "Here you see that if men will not come into the church, there are places to which they will go, and in which they will work and give."

He then professes to show by figures that the secret orders in Quincy paid "in beneficences" last year $26,872.44, against $11,600.52 by all the churches, synagogues included: and then lest he should be suspected to prefer his lodge to his church he puts in this caveat: "I don't know that it is needful for me to argue questions of right and wrong in relation to secret societies, nor really does it matter. They exist," etc.

Mr. Anderson then gives at length what he supposes to be the reasons why men shun the church and go to the lodge, thus: "It is because brothers there are kind to his failings, and long-suffering to his weaknesses and quick to help him if he falls," etc.; and he adds: "It is a suggestive fact that on my lately going as a comparative stranger to Springfield, by way of exchange, I found a notification (not solicited by me) had been sent in advance to Masons, Odd-fellows, Knights of Pythias and Druids, with the request that attentions should be paid to me; and yet I am not a Druid, nor an affiliated Mason or an Odd-fellow."

But if we should quote the whole article it is of the same stuff, and our readers will note that this minister is not "an affiliated Mason!" What could Masons do for him more or he for them if he was? The lodge does not want his presence, but his influence to draw members and money from his church.

Now I remind the Congregational ministers of Illinois, who are not even unaffiliated Masons as yet; and I especially notify the Congregational members who take the Advance and support their Theological Seminary and their pastors, to give them instruction as to their duty between "The church and the lodge," that eighty Congregationalists signed a petition to the programme committee last year for an essay on the reform side of this question, and their request was refused! This year, with no petition but his own, this Freemason is permitted to read this ungodly attack on the church in contrast with the lodge, and he is complimented by Prof. Hyde and made a hero by The Voice of Masonry."

What I wish to ask is, if this game goes on, how long will it be before every honest, God-fearing Congregational minister who cannot conscientiously join the lodge, will be excluded from all the principal Congregational churches in the State, as effectually as they now are from the churches at Quincy and Springfield? Pardon me, brethren, for this appeal to your selfishness. I ask you as one who has walked with you in love for many years, whether you do not see that unless God appears for you, the disintegration and destruction of your churches is inevitable, and only a question of time?

Garrison and Gates.

The Western New Yorker of Warsaw, N. Y., publishes a letter of William Lloyd Garrison to Mrs. Gates, widow of the late Hon. Seth M. Gates whose record in Christian reforms is among the noblest. Mr. Gates was very active in private and public life in opposing slavery, and stood with Stevens, Sumner and men of that stamp on the floor of Congress. Mr. Garrison's tribute is well deserved. Can any reader give us Garrison's position on the lodge question? His letter is as follows:

BOSTON, April 1, 1879.

MRS. S. M. GATES:

Dear Madam—I am much obliged to you for the printed biographical sketch of the life and philanthropic labors of Mr. Gates. It was a well-deserved tribute to his memory, and I read it with the deepest interest and the warmest admiration. Indeed he was made up of such grand elements, that to think of him, is at once to be reminded of the portraiture of Abdiel, drawn by Milton in his "Paradise Lost:"

"So spake the seraph Abdiel, faithful found
Among the faithless, faithful only he;
Among innumerable false, unmoved,
Unshaken, unseduced, unterrified,
His loyalty he kept, his love, his zeal;
Nor number, nor example with him wrought
To swerve from truth, or change his constant mind,
Though single. From midst them forth he pass'd
Long way through hostile scorn, which he sustained
Superior, nor of violence feared aught;
And, with retorted scorn, his back he turn'd
On those proud towers, to swift destruction doomed," Ecce Homo, drawn to the life! For such was Seth M. Gates, bold for the truth, uncompromising for the right, faithful to a sensitive and an enlightened conscience, devoid of all fear of the adversary and his machinations, strong in the conflict of freedom with oppression, serene and confident in the midst of fiery trials and deadly perils, untainted by selfish considerations, choosing to be popularly misunderstood and maligned rather than to be false to his conviction of duty to God, his fellow men and his country, patriotic in the purest sense of the term, and noble in his aims and aspirations. It matters little to what extent he may be honorably and gratefully remembered by posterity; as he did not have that "fear of man which bringeth a snare," so he was utterly regardless of human applause if it could be purchased only by debasing his manhood. He sought no other reward than was to be found in having acted well his part at a period of universal recreancy to the principles of freedom, justice and humanity, and in "giving the world assurance of a man."

I remain, Madam,
Very respectfully yours,
WM. LLOYD GARRISON.

—The Wesleyan last week gave some wonderful statistics of the lodge in the Empire State which we must find room to reproduce. The net loss of the Masonic lodges of that State last year was 3,128.

—Elder Browne bids highest for the State Convention of Wisconsin and secures it for Evansville, Sep. 2–4, next.

—A grand Masonic celebration of "St. John's day" was held in Eau Claire, Wis., last 24th June. Among the Masons present from Menomonie were R. J. Flint, editor of the Menomonie News, and one of the most persistent persecutors of Rev. W. W. Ames of the Menomonie Baptist church; also R. C. Bierce, the prosecuting attorney who took his case before the court in Menomonie last fall, but was under the necessity of withdrawing it.

—Common courtesy allows more severe criticisms from age. Such is Father Sovereign's privilege this week. All who are interested in the disputed points mentioned in his letter are requested to read again the objectionable sermon and they will agree with us that the criticisms are written with more haste than judgment. As we read it, the passage (which Father Sovereign incorrectly attributes to the pastor of the "Wheaton Congregational church") has but one sentence, in which Prof. Blanchard's use of the term "backslidden" is probably more general than he intended. Upon this the strictures of this letter seem to be based, rather than the whole passage. If we understand Father Sovereign's argument it leaves a soul vibrating between a state of spiritual life and spiritual death; and makes God, who certainly has before him in a moment the whole life of a sinner, past and future, when he forgives him, play fast and loose with immortal souls. We do not believe such views are entertained by him, but presume the letter was sent without waiting for revision.

—Bro. Day, Corresponding Secretary of the Michigan State Association, writes with some despondence about their State lecture fund. An appeal was made through the Cynosure and the Wesleyan. In response nine pledges, aggregating $50, have been received. Bro. Day thinks his plan a failure, and asks for suggestions. In the first place, speaking from experience, the call should have been followed up with one or more short appeals for several weeks. But advertising, however good, is not to be depended upon. Last fall an invitation was sent personally to nearly every friend in Illinois whose names could be had to aid their State work. Not enough, even then, was subscribed. The best plan is to see men and talk with them face to face. Next to this is a letter in your own hand; after that go to the press. It is more work by the old way, but more sure.

Our New England Correspondence.

NORTHERN SUPPORT OF THE SOUTHERN EXODUS.

Gen. T. W. Conway, formerly the energetic superintendent of freedmen in Louisiana, and of schools under the Freedmen's Bureau, has just addressed a public meeting in this city upon the Southern exodus, and in exposition of his plan of raising the blockade of the Mississippi, by a chartered steamer with barges to receive the colored men at the points where they are assembled on the river. He very graphically described the situation on the banks of the Mississippi. The planters, supported by the press and public sentiment of the State, were denying the negroes the right of departure and travel; the steamboats as public carriers were afraid to take them, by reason of threats from the whites; the national government could or would do nothing; and it therefore became the duty of philanthropic citizens to see to it that the freedmen were not hindered from going and coming like other people on the public highways. The right to travel unmolested must be restored and preserved for them. He had come to Massachusetts in their behalf, as a matter of course, for here liberty and republicanism were cradled, and here the flying fugitives had been harbored of old. Here had the doctrine of the equality of all men the strongest hold upon the people; and whenever a cry for aid has been heard from the South, whether caused by an overflow, by the yellow fever, or by an effort to get away from bondage and injustice, it has met a cordial and generous response from Massachusetts.

He then rehearsed the story of the exodus, and said that he knew from personal observation that the steamboats refused to transport the colored people, who line the river banks, because they were threatened with the loss of business and even with violence. He had this not only from the refugees, but from passengers, from boat officers and from the owners themselves. Gen. Conway further read from the Enquirer that the negroes are not allowed to go from one parish to another without a pass, as was the custom in the days of slavery, and asked what would be the result if an attempt was made to enforce such a rule here on the men who work in the shops and factories. And yet the men who are thus treated are as free as any here in Massachusetts, under the law. The method adopted of arresting negroes for trumped up debt was also described, and the speaker stated that he had been shown a petition by twenty-five of the most prominent merchants of St. Louis asking that if no other means could be devised to stop the exodus that the fare be raised so high that the people cannot afford to pay it, and thus keep them at home. They are ready to work, and at the headquarters in St. Louis we have applications for 5,000 from Indiana, 2,100 from Illinois, 1,200 from Pennsylvania, and he had received assurance that Illinois alone would gladly welcome 20,000 to its farms. The plan proposed to get them North is to send a boat which will bring them, and this is what strikes terror to the people of the South. Of the $10,000 wanted, he said one gentlemen in Pittsburg has pledged $5,000, another in Boston $1,000, and the success of the efforts to raise subscriptions have been such that he is to start Friday morning for Cincinnati to perfect arrangements for a boat to proceed down the river and test the question whether the Mississippi is a great national highway, or the property of the white people of the Southern States, to see if slavery is ended in fact, or only on paper. The problem about to be solved, he said, is one which is worthy of the largest attention, of our most earnest prayers, and hearty co-operation.

A brief address on the general aspect of the question was made by Edward Earle Allen, followed by resolutions offered by Rev. Henry T. Cheever, which were adopted by the meeting.

A similar meeting was held last week in Tremont Temple, Boston, at which Wendell Phillips made a very forcible address, and also Rev. H. M. Turner, LL.D., of Georgia. The latter had seen many men cut down in the South, and he himself, (a colored man) had run before the bloody Ku-Klux as a fox before hunters. These men who are now flying from the South are not paupers. But the trouble is that the negroes, from dire experience, have lost faith in the power of the nation to protect them where they are and where they were born. Hence they fly to Kansas. In Georgia, he said, land-owners have pledged themselves not to sell a rood of land to a negro, except for church-building. The speaker referred to the old negro idea that they were to have each forty acres and a mule, and said the negro was right, and the nation ought to have given them to the men whom it made free with only the air they breathed and their hands they could call their own. He told the entire North it might try to ignore the negroes, but it could never do it. God has the destiny of the negroes in his hand. Every time the North tries to push them out they will come back till it wants them for another war. The Southerners are plotting rebellion again and we shall want the negroes to help put them down. The South will certainly try again for its independence and the curse of another rebellion will fall from God upon the North, if we leave the negroes to be trampled upon and their guaranteed rights to be ruthlessly run over.

General Conway's personal record is a marked one. He was the youthful pastor of a Baptist church on Staten Island, when Sumpter was fired upon—he at once offered himself as chaplain to a New York regiment; was afterward made Superintendent of Freedmen by General Banks in Louisiana, and in that capacity and as chaplain he solemnized the marriage of 3,000 colored men at once in Brashear, Louisiana, several of whom he has lately met among the refugees from that State. Under the Freedmen's Bureau he was given the military rank of Brigadier General. He afterward was wounded and very narrowly escaped fatal poisoning at the hands of the bloody Ku-klux in New Orleans, while exercising the office of Superintendent of Schools. He has since returned to the ministry in New Jersey. But the burden seems to have been laid upon him to undertake the raising of the Mississippi blockade as a service of humanity in the interest of the freedmen. Let him be effectively backed by Northern sympathy and substance, and he will be shortly found to have achieved the best work of his eventful life hitherto.

Wisconsin State Convention.

The necessary correspondence and preliminary arrangements having been completed, the next annual meeting of the Wisconsin Anti-secrecy Association has been fixed at Evansville, Rock county, on the Chicago and St. Paul line of the Northwestern railroad, September 2-4, 1879.

Wisconsin friends: When you read this notice don't begin to enumerate the difficulties in the way of your getting there, or dwell too long on the unfavorableness of the time, etc., but say, "God willing, I will be there."

No call was ever more imperative and no duty ever more clearly defined in the providence of God. Think for a moment of the situation, of what you have seen with your own eyes and known of your own knowledge. Ancient paganism modernized and set up in the churches and pulpits of your own State. Truly a "wonderful and a horrible thing is committed in the land," when the ministers of Christ's flock "mingle the cup of the Lord and the cup of devils" and then press it to the lips of your neighbors and your children and would fain compel you to drink the poisoned draft or expel you from the household of faith. Yea, more, these "wolves in sheep's clothing" would deny you the right to protest against such indignity offered to your Savior.

Who among you has not seen "justice turned away backward" by a hidden hand in the courts, "and judgment fallen in the streets at the feet of the image of the Masonic beast." If these and similar things that you have witnessed yourself do not move you, nothing that I can present will incite you to action. Do not let this opportunity to meet and interchange views on a matter of such vital importance pass unimproved. You owe it to yourselves; you owe it to your children; you owe it to your schools, your public and private interests; you owe it to your State, to the nation, and to the church, to dedicate the time set apart for this annual gathering to the cause of justice and the right. Will you recognize and meet the obligation? I trust you will, and that this gathering will surpass all previously held in your State, and that the cause will receive a new impetus and be carried forward a long way on the path to ultimate and complete triumph.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. L. J. Gleason, wife of Joseph Gleason, died at her home in Wheaton, Ill., on Friday, July 11. Mrs. Gleason has for some two years or more been an invalid, and at times her near death has been expected. During the past year she has partially recovered, so as to be able to attend the church at the College, of which she was a member, and when in health an active and zealous supporter. Of late her health had much improved. She attended divine worship and the communion service on the Sabbath before her death, and remarked to a friend who has occasionally sent his carriage to assist her to church, that she was now feeling so strong as hardly to need his kind services any longer. The next day a sudden attack prostrated her, and in so few days she passed peacefully into the glorious presence of her Lord, to whom her life on earth had been given. Mrs. Gleason was a member of the Ladies' Advisory Committee of the College ever since the opening of the ladies' hall in the new building. Both in the home which her cultivated taste had embellished and in the social circle of which she was an honored and loved member, children and friends "arise up and call her blessed."

—On the morning of the same day, Mrs. Elizabeth Grove, wife of Jacob Grove of Wheaton, also a member of the College church, passed to her rest with God. Mrs Grove was born, and married, and numbered herself among the people of God in England. Since removing to this country she has been known as a quiet, Christian woman whose graces were most observed in the order and contentment of her home. She was a sufferer for a number of years and was prevented thus from often attending the house of God, yet her love for that place and its people was no less strong. Her death was occasioned by her disease apparently fastening upon the brain, and though delayed for several weeks, was not unexpected. She was much of this time unconscious of all external circumstances, and could give no last token of affection to the husband and friends who attended her, but her blameless Christian life preserves to them the memory of the just.

Home Circle.

Hope on, Hope Ever.

Hope on, hope ever! though to-day be dark,
The sweet sunburst may smile on thee to-morrow;
Tho' thou art lonely, there's an eye will mark
Thy loneliness, and guerdon all thy sorrow!
Tho' thou must toil 'mong cold and sordid men,
With none to echo back thy thought or love thee,
Cheer up, poor heart! thou dost not beat in vain,
For God is over all, and heaven above thee—
Hope on, hope ever.

The iron may enter in and pierce thy soul,
But cannot kill the fire within thee burning;
The tears of misery, thy bitter dole,
Can never quench thy true heart's seraph yearning
For better things; nor crush thy ardor's trust,
That error from the mind shall be uprooted,
That truths shall dawn as flowers spring from the dust,
And Love be cherished where Hate was embruted.
Hope on, hope ever.

I know 'tis hard to bear the sneer and taunt,—
With the heart's honest pride at midnight wrestle;
To feel the killing canker-worm of want,
While rich rogues in their stolen luxury nestle;
For I have felt it. Yet from earth's cold Real
My soul looks out on coming things, and cheerful
The warm sunrise floods all the land Ideal,
And still it whispers to the worn and tearful
Hope on, hope ever.

Hope on, hope ever! after darkest night,
Comes, full of loving life, the laughing morning;
Hope on, hope ever! Spring-tide flush with light,
Aye crowns old Winter with her rich adorning.
Hope on, hope ever! yet the time shall come,
When man to man shall be a friend and brother;
And this old world shall be a happy home,
And all earth's family love one another.
Hope on, hope ever!

CO OPERATION AND SIMPLIFICATION.

What happiness it was, on a chilly October evening, to find myself before the blazing fire, in that sitting-room which like a faithful friend always remained the same, and to refresh my soul with the thought that beneath Aunt Judith's broad, motherly wing there was shelter and rest for me, and behind the crisp, curt manner, a wealth of tenderness for her motherless niece!

"Well, Aunt Judith," I said when preliminaries were over, "I suppose you know what I've come for. I want a little of the strong meat from your table, to live upon during the winter. I've had nothing but 'milk for the babes' since I was here before."

"What! With your father and his prodigious library in the house? O child!"

"I know I ought to be ashamed of myself," I returned penitently, "but I never have any time at home. How you ever manage to find time for all your reading and study is more than I can imagine."

"I don't find it, I provide it," replied Aunt Judith, with a glimmer of fun in her keen eyes.

"Provide time," I cried.

"Why yes, my child. Mrs. Diaz gives a very simple rule for providing time in her 'Papers Found in a Schoolmaster's Trunk.' You've read that little book, of course,"

"I think I have," I said hesitatingly; "but I haven't the most remote remembrance of any rule for providing time."

"Her rule consists of one word—simplification! That's easy to remember, and not very difficult to practice. Simplification in dress, sewing, housework and cooking, will give you time for reading, thinking, and for going about doing good, as our Savior did."

"Yes; but how can one practice it? You say it is easy. Please tell me how you do it, for instance. You dress nicely—I'm always proud to show you to my friends in town; your house is a pattern of order, your sewing always 'done up,' and your table fit for a king."

"Well, child, I'm all alone and can have my way, that's one thing; but, depend upon it, other people could simplyfy it if they thought so. Don't you know what Foster says in his 'Essays on Decision of Character?' 'When a firm, decisive spirit is recognized, it is curious to see how the space clears around a man and leaves him room and freedom.' Be sensible, independent, and decided, and people soon learn to say, 'O, it's her way!' and you are left to do exactly as you like. You say I dress nicely. I intend to. I don't mean to have my friends ashamed of me when I visit them; but I never spend, on an average, more than one hundred dollars a year on dress, and never buy more than one new dress besides my calicoes each year. Oh, of course you open your eyes! But a little management is all that is necessary. Buy a good material and plenty of it, and it will last a long time. A good black silk, for instance, is never out of fashion and always suitable. I buy an ample pattern, and it lasts me ten or twelve years, with occasional alterations and renewals by my dressmaker. Divide price by time, and how much does it cost each year?

"A good shawl—lace, Paisley, or even India—does not cost any more in the end than the innumerable wraps which vary in fashion each year, and take trimming, dressmaker's bills and time for selecting. I buy a good shawl once in ten or twenty years—a lace for summer, a Paisley for spring and fall, and have lately invested in a fur cloak for winter. These are not expensive for the time they last, and cost nothing for alteration. Our Savior gives us one simple rule in regard to dress. He says, 'Consider the lilies.' Now how does God dress the lily? He gives her one dress that lasts her all her life, and never goes out of fashion; the fabric is always beautiful, and is made up with exquisite taste skill, neatness and simplicity. To follow Christ's rule, then, I consider that our garments, should be few, tasteful, simple, neat, and if possible of materials durable and beautiful, and thus likely to remain in fashion.

"In regard to sewing, my one new dress I send to the dressmaker each year, who makes it according to the prevailing style, but never goes to extremes, and never puts on much trimming. It's the trimming that costs; and my dressmaker knows that I will never pay for having yards and yards of material cut up and made into ruffling and fluting. I do not object to one simple ruffle or fold, of course, but if more trimming is needed, I prefer to buy silk, velvet, fringe or lace, something that can be put on easily and will do to use again. The rest of my sewing I do in March and November, hire some needy seamstress to help me, if I cannot get through with it myself, and so have it 'done up' for the rest of the year.

"In regard to housework—I will have neatness and order; but to do this, it is not necessary, even with my limited income, that I should break my back, or give up all my time for reading and thinking. We need strength of body, not only for physical, but for mental and spiritual growth; therefore I consider it a religious duty not to overtax my body if can help it. There are plenty of poor women, needing help, who can wash, iron, scrub and sweep for me, while I reserve the right of cooking and keeping my house in order.

"In regard to cooking—substitute fruit for cake and pastry, and you simplify cooking and promote health. Milk, cream, eggs, wheat, oatmeal, bread, fruit, meat, and a few vegetables, constitute the chief articles of my diet. I believe that a good variety of wholesome food should be provided, and that it should be carefully and even daintily cooked; but I think that a great deal of time is wasted in unnecessary and unwholesome cooking."

"Oh dear," I sighed, "if I only had your firm, decisive spirit, I might hope to accomplish something; but I'm afraid I'm neither sensible, independent, nor decided."

"Of course you aren't," was the truthful rejoinder; "but sitting down and sighing over it won't help matters. You can make yourself so, if you choose. Have an aim in life! Have something worth living for, and make everything bend to it. You have a special taste for painting. If God has bestowed this gift upon you, you ought to cultivate it, even though it be a small one. It would be better for you to paint, and earn money to hire more of your sewing done. Thus you can cultivate this gift and help some needy seamstress at the same time. Remember, God has given you Elizabeth Winthrop to trim, prune and cultivate, just as I give my gardener a tree. Make some plan for simplification, which shall give you time to cultivate her growth and character—but hark! there's the baby crying!"

Did my ears deceive me? "The baby!" I repeated in much bewilderment—but she was gone!

In a few moments I heard her coming back, and was ready to pounce a question upon her the moment she opened the door.

"Do tell me what it means," I cried, "that there is a baby in this house!"

Aunt Judith calmly seated herself, folded her hands with composure, and, apparently without the slightest compunction, opened the broadside of another theory upon me.

"Well, child," she said, "I haven't reached my second childhood, and I haven't married a widower with nine children—so don't be alarmed, there will be no restriction of your liberties, nor mine either, which is more to the point! That baby simply means Co operatiue Housekeeping."

I gazed at my revered aunt in much bewilderment. "Co-operative housekeeping?" I repeated.

"Certainly. I'm enough in advance of the age to think that the thing can be done on a small scale, if not on a large one; and, if Mrs. Livermore's prophecy is true, 'the coming woman' will see more of it than we see. She (Mrs. Livermore) delivered a very sensible lecture here last winter, in which she spoke of those mothers who were obliged to neglect their children, and who found no time for reading, or culture of any kind, because of their housework. Then she mentioned some of the ways in which women's work might be lightened, without infringing at all upon the sacredness of home. Her idea was co-operation of some kind. I remember particularly the remark, that one stove could cook a dinner for ten as well as for five. She is an agitator, and of course her thought was in advance of the age; but it made quite an impression upon the thinking people of our village, of whom, you know, there are several. People have time to think and room to grow in a little village like this. In fact, statistics show that all our great men emanate from the country towns, not the cities."

Here she stopped a moment to take breath, and then proceeded:

"Well, that lecture made its due impression upon your cousin Grace, among others. Grace, you know, is blessed with beauty, brains, a husband and a baby; but her strength is not equal to her energy, and her income is limited. They paid an exorbitant rent for their house, but thought they could not afford to keep a girl; so Grace shouldered the baby and the housework, and was doing her utmost to ruin her health, when Mrs. Livermore appeared upon the scene, and presto! there was a change.

"Grace came to me a few days after the lecture with tears in her eyes:

"'Now, aunt Judith,' she said, 'please tell me what I ought to do. I do want to be a good wife and mother; but 'chill penury' sadly represses my 'noble rage.' How can I be a pattern mother, if I am obliged to neglect my baby for housework, and am so tired and nervous besides that I often have neither judgment nor patience? What sort of a companion am I to my husband, if the moment he sits down to read to me in the evening, I fall asleep from sheer exhaustion? Mrs. Livermore's suggestions about cooperation made a great impression upon me, and James and I are agreed in thinking that if we can devise any reasonable plan for cooperation or simplification, we will adopt it in the name of the baby and of culture.

"James came to me, too, that very evening, thoroughly stirred up on the subject. He is a sensible man and a devoted husband. 'Aunt Judith,' he said, 'I've been puzzling over the problem that Mrs. Livermore gave us to solve the other evening: 'How can the coming woman be relieved of some portion of her housework, and so find more time to give to the highest welfare of herself and her children?' Something ought to be done to relieve this fearful pressure on woman—the present way of living so evidently runs across God's ordination for her physical, moral, intellectual and spiritual well-being. She staggers and groans under burdens which she has no right, because no power, to carry. Something might be done by simpler lives, and ought, for these reasons, as well as to put an end to this shameful dishonesty born of extravagance, which is spreading desolation everywhere.'

(Concluded next week.)

Childrens' Corner.

How Tim Became a Farmer.

"Shine your boots? Five cents a shine. Shine your boots?

Tim had tried his best to get work, but no one wanted his boots cleaned. He wondered why it was. When mother was alive, how often had Tim begged her to let him set up as a boot-black! "They make lots of money," he would say. But she shook her head and said, "Keep on at school as long as you can; you're too young yet. As long as I'm spared I don't want you to try it."

But the poor hard-working woman had overtaxed her strength, taken a fever and died. Then Tim, left alone in the world, with nothing but a couple of much mended suit of clothes and five dollars, resolved to set up as a boot-black. For a whole week he had tried it. Some days he got two or three customers, but now for two days not one person had let him shine his boots. His five dollars were almost gone; what should he do? Tim was almost desperate, and in his desire for a job asked a lady that was passing if he could shine her boots. Perhaps she had little boys of her own, and made it a rule never to pass a poor boy without a kind word, for their sakes. At any rate, she stopped and said, "Not here, my boy; but if you will walk a ways with me, I'll let you clean them, for they are very muddy. Perhaps, though, you will lose some work by leaving your place?"

"No, indeed; I've not had a chance to-day."

"That's bad," said his new friend, "if you need the money very much, as I suppose you do. But you look so neat and nice, I think you have a good mother."

Tim tried to answer, but his throat swelled, and tears filled his eyes.

"There! there! Don't fret, dear; here's the house. Wait in the area, and the cook will let you in." Soon a pleasant-faced woman opened the lower door and told Tim to sit down by the kitchen fire. The kitchen was full of the odor of soup, and you know how that will make you hungry even long before dinner time. Tim, who had had no soup since his mother had last cooked his dinner, snuffed the air, and remembered sadly how good his mother's soup used to taste.

"Mary," called a voice that already sounded familiar, "give the boy a bowl of soup. I can't come down at once, but here are the shoes; he can clean them after he has eaten. Put plenty of bread in his soup, Mary.

"Shure, I was just longing to do it," muttered the girl, hastening to fill the bowl for Tim. "Here!" she said, "draw up to the table and eat."

Tim was too hungry to remember his mother's instructions as to washing his hands, but he did not forget to bow his head, saying the grace he had said at every meal since he first began to speak: "I thank thee, dear Lord, for this nice food; and help us to be thy good children, for Christ's sake."

Mary stood still in astonishment. "That's the first grace in this kitchen," she said to herself, "but I'm bound it shan't be the last. I've been a forgetful creature."

The soup finished, Tim polished the shoes; such nice buttoned boots he had never handled before. Just as he was giving the last touch to them, he heard some one come in, and saw the lady who had brought him standing talking with Mary.

"Thank you; they are very nicely done. But if you get only one customer a day, you'll not get on well. Who takes care of you, my boy? Try to tell me all about yourself. What is your name?"

"My name's Tim Titus, ma'am. Nobody takes care of me—nobody but God. Mother said he'd never forget me. Mother—mother died—last"—

But he could not tell of that. The lady's hand was on his shoulder, and she was drying his tears with her own handkerchief. "I've tried boot-blacking, but I don't believe I can get enough to do. O ma'am"—and the boy again broke down. He was so neat and clean that Mrs. Denny drew him close to her, soothing him as every mother knows how to soothe and comfort. But her heart was troubled for him. Truth to tell, she had no money to spare, and could do but little. She had only lately moved to the city, and had few friends there. What could she do to help him?

Suddenly, Mary, who had been looking on, full of sympathy, and remembering their country life and the plenty there, said, "Send him to the country."

Mrs. Denny's face brightened. "Why, that's a good idea, Mary! I do believe Mr. Ackerman would be glad of just such a boy. Would you drive cows and learn to milk and help about the house, Tim?"

"Indeed I would, ma'am, and take my brushes and black their boots for them."

"Once a week is all they black 'em," said Mary, with a laugh. So it was arranged that Tim should come back in the morning, and Mrs. Denny would give him a note to the farmer. She offered to pay his way, but Tim said he had two dollars left, and could buy his own ticket. Mrs. Denny was pleased with his honesty, and felt sure that such a boy would succeed.

The next day Tim was off for the country. All his treasures were easily packed in his mother's old bag. Mrs. Denny advised him to leave that at the depot when he reached Farrington, and walk out to the farm without it, as, if the farmer kept him, he could easily get it. Tim found the farm, and hearing voices at the back door walked round that way, and asked for Mr. Ackerman.

"He's in the barn," said a pleasant-looking girl. "What do you want?"

"I've a note for him."

"Well, go right over." Tim delivered his note. The farmer read it, and then, without saying a word, went on with his work. Tim felt rather discouraged, but seeing a pair of boots in one corner set to work and polished them. This took some time, for they had never been polished before, I fancy. Then Tim put up his brushes and slung his box on his back; he had better go back or try something else. The farmer was just going up to the loft, but as Tim slung his box he said, "Come here, my boy. You can work; I see that. Are you willing to work for a home?"

"Yes, indeed, sir."

"Got any clothes?"

"Two suits, sir."

"Any money?"

"One dollar and fifty cents."

"How much time do you expect to have to fool around?"

"Can't tell till I try to do the work."

The farmer was pleased with the bright, truthful face, and said, "You'll do. Go in the house and tell 'em to set you to work—chop wood, draw water, do anything till milking time."

So that was how Tim's boot-blacking ended. He lives on the farm still, but he is taller than I am. Mrs. Denny comes out to see her old friends sometimes, and is always as glad to see him as any of the rest; and, next to God, Tim loves the lady who let him shine her boots.—S. S. Visitor.

Nations without Fire.

According to Pliny, fire was a long time unknown to the ancient Egyptians; and when Thales, the celebrated astronomer, showed it to them, they were absolutely in rapture. The Persians, Phœnicians, Greeks, and several other nations acknowledge that their ancestors were without the use of fire, and the Chinese confess the same of their progenitors. Plutarch and other ancient writers speak of nations who at the time they wrote, knew not the use of fire or had just learned it. Facts of the same kind are also attested by several modern nations. The inhabitants of the Marian Islands, which were discovered in 1551, had no idea of fire. Never was astonishment greater than theirs when they saw it on the desert Magellan in one of their islands. At first they believed it was some kind of animal that fixed to and fed on wood. The inhabitants of the Phillipine and Canary Islands were formerly equally ignorant. Africa presents, even in our day, tribes in this deplorable state.—Ex

How to Cook Eggs for Breakfast.

For every egg take two tablespoonsful of bread crumbs, one ounce of butter and a little pepper and salt.

Put upon a flat plate of any kind half of the bread crumbs to be used, add half of the butter in small pieces over the bread crumbs; break over this the eggs, sprinkle over the top of the eggs the remainder of the bread crumbs, a little more pepper and salt, and put the remainder of the butter in small pieces over the top. Put into the oven to bake five minutes.

Apple Fritters.

Three or four large apples.

Three ounces of flour.

A little salt. One gill of tepid water.

One ounce of sugar.

The white of one egg.

One ounce of butter.

Pare and core the apples (with an apple corer) and cut in round slices one-half of an inch thick. Put in a bowl three ounces of flour; pour into the center of it an ounce of melted butter; add the gill of tepid water and mix well together. Now whip to a stiff froth the white of one egg, after putting into it a pinch of salt. Throw the white of the egg in beside the batter, mix lightly, throw in the apples; then with a fork put them one by one quickly into the hot lard; let them remain there three minutes each. When done throw for a minute on to white print paper to remove any adhering grease. Pile then on a plate and sprinkle over the sugar.

Stock-making.

Four or five pounds of the middle cut of the shin of the beef. Cut the meat into very small pieces, pour over cold water one pint to each pound of beef and one pint over. Allow it to come quickly to a boil; skim carefully. Throw in a spoonful of white and black pepper corns, a small piece of turnip, a large carrot, a small onion, a good piece of celery, a small tablespoonful of salt. Simmer for four or five hours as slowly as possible. This will keep in hot weather four or five days.

To Cook Oysters.

Twenty-five large oysters.

Three ounces of butter.

One and one-half ounces of flour.

One gill of cream.

A little pepper and salt.

A little grated nutmeg.

A grain of cayenne pepper.

Boil the oysters five minutes, strain them and cut them in rough pieces. Melt in a saucepan butter, add flour and cream. Boil two minutes. Then add a little pepper and salt and a little grated nutmeg and cayenne pepper. Delicious cold. Excellent for filling Dresden patties.

(A little onion chopped very fine is sometimes added.)

The Best Layers.

A correspondent of the Country Gentleman writes: After repeated experiments during the past twenty-five years in hatching chickens, I am fully convinced that fowls hatched in the month of July make better layers than those hatched at any other season of the year. Early hatched chicks commence laying in September, and continue until cold January weather, when they discontinue until spring. On the other hand, when hatched in July or August, they begin laying in February, and continue until October. I find July chickens will average fifty to seventy-five more eggs yearly than those hatched in March. My method, therefore, is to hatch one hundred chicks in August for my own use.

The light Brahmas have always been my most profitable and favorite fowl; but with great reluctance I am obliged, after three years' trial, to place the Partridge Cochins at the head of the list. As layers they excel any Asiatic breed I have ever known, and as market fowls they have no equal. They are very hardy, mature early, and make short-legged, yellow-fleshed, heavy-breasted fowls.

A boy seven years of age was seen to fall from a bulkhead into the Hudson river, June 2. After considerable delay a youth named Thos. Berry came to the rescue, and the spot where the boy sank was pointed out to him. By a plucky dive and a long swim under water he succeeded in recovering the boy, who had been in the water eight minutes and was apparently lifeless. A successful effort was made to resuscitate him, signs of returning consciousness appearing at the end of twenty minutes. The officers of the patrol of the water front pronounced this the most remarkable case of resuscitation after long submergence that had come within their knowledge, and it was put upon record as such. The happy issue should encourage hope and persistent effort in all similar cases. —Scientific American.

The Wadesboro (N. C.) Herald says that while two small children, living on Col. Henry W. Ledbetter's plantation, were out in the woods recently, they found what they supposed to be partridge eggs, and carried them home, cooked, and eat them. Soon after eating the eggs they were prostrated upon their beds with sickness, and died immediately. It seems that the eggs they had eaten were snake eggs.

If you are well, let yourself alone. One of the greatest errors of the age is, we medicate the body too much, the mind too little. More persons are destroyed by eating too much than by drinking too much. Gluttony kills more than drunkenness in civilized society. The best gymnasium is a woodyard, a clearing or a cornfield. A hearty laugh is known the world over, to be a health promoter; it elevates the spirits, enlivens the circulation, and is marvelously contagious in a good sense. Bodily activity and bodily health are inseperable. If the bowels are loose, lie down in bed, remain there and eat nothing until you are well. The three best medicines in the world are warmth, abstinence and repose.—Dr. Hall.

—President Blanchard preached on the religious necessities of our common schools in the College chapel at Wheaton on Sabbath evening. The discourse was suggested by the Normal Institute now in session in the College, which is attended by some hundred of the teachers of Northern Illinois. A course of valuable lectures on science and literature is provided in connection with the Institute by the five instructors. A special lecture on Literature and the Fine Arts was given by Rev. J. B. Walker, D.D., on Monday evening, and another will be given by A. H. Hiatt, M. D., of the College faculty, on Monday evening next.

—The Sabbath School of the College church, Wheaton, voted on Sabbath to send $12 00 from their collections now in the treasury to Rev. E. Tapley of Columbus, Miss., to assist him in his work among the freedmen churches.

REFORMED PRESBYTERIAN.

—In the Synod of the Covenanter church, which met in New York during the early part of June, the following resolutions, offered by Rev. J. S. T. Milligan of Kansas, were adopted:

Resolved, 1. That this Synod reiterates its testimony against the sin of secretism, as involving one of the most dangerous forms of idolatry on the one hand, and the securing if not encouraging of the grossest crimes on the other; false in principle and pernicious in influence, undermining society in every form of its organization, and in conflict with every divine obligation and inconsistent with the confidence that should underlie every natural and gracious relation.

2. That we pledge our influence and effort in every way consistent with our distinctive principles to the overthrow of this giant power for evil, and to aid the National Association in this important work.

3. That we direct our ministers and members to more active effort and to more hearty co-operation with the friends of anti-secrecy.

Also in the synodical sermon preached by Rev. C. D. Trumbull of Morning Sun, Iowa, occurs the following eloquent paragraph:

"While this spirit of skepticism is seeking to undermine and sap the foundations of the church, another evil spirit, no less malignant, is working secretly for the subversion of peace and order in the political world. It bears different names in different parts of the earth, and may in some things pursue different methods, but it is the same spirit. It assumes the name of Nihilism in Russia, of Socialism in Prussia, of Communism in France. Happy had it been for America if this evil spirit had never crossed the sea, but alas! the gaunt spectre may even now be seen stalking through the land. What mean those nightly drills in private halls in almost every city of every State? What mean these Sabbath parades of armed men? They mean that thousands in this land have imbibed the principles of Communism, and are only waiting a favorable opportunity to reduce them to practice. The riots of two years ago tell us plainly what they mean. We see this same spirit in the secret leagues and armed bands of the South, which control the ballot and secure the spoils. We see it in the thousands of lodges meeting in upper halls in every part of the land, their members bound by horrid oaths to advance their selfish ends, regardless of the public good.

"Such are the leading spirits which must needs be exorcised. Skepticism and secretism are captains of the host. If these can be cast out, the lesser spirits will soon go howling back to their dismal abodes."

—Prof. J. R. W. Sloane writes to our Banner describing the location selected at Beaver Falls for the literary institution of the denomination, over which Dr. H. H. George presides. The site is about a mile from the center of the town, on the west side of Beaver river. There is not a liquor saloon in the place, and railroad facilities are excellent. The country is healthy, and building material abundant. It is hoped that the change from Northwood, O., will be of great benefit to the institution.

FREE METHODIST.

—Bro. J. W. Hough of Winfield, Iowa, sends a long letter which will be presented next week, telling how the F. M. church of that place has been forbidden the further use of the public school building for their public worship. A Friend Quaker takes up their defense against the school board with great ability.

—The church lately established in Oberlin, O., holds its first quarterly meeting in Carpenter hall July 18 to 20th.

—The new church in Sycamore, Ill., has been dedicated to God. The organization was begun about five years ago and is yet financially weak, but with the assistance of business men in Sycamore who contributed nearly one-half the means, the expense of building and lot has been nearly all subscribed.

—The camp-meeting at Chili, N. Y., raised $72 for the mission at Lawrence, Texas.

CHURCH OF GOD.

—A member of this body writing from Maine in sympathy to Elder Lowman, editor of the Herald of Gospel Freedom of Rome City, Ind., says: "I think the Catholic Inquisition has got loose on you if you were dismembered for speaking agajnst secret societies, or any other abominable evil. It is not so here, thank God." If Elder Lowman will publish the post-office of his Maine brother there will be a rush for that corner of the continent where the lodge has not entered with proscription and persecution.

—An aged brother, John Dennis, of Madison, Me., writes to the same paper that there are ten preachers of the Church of God in that State, that he knows of no member of that church in the State connected with Freemasonry, but many are strongly opposed to the order. Bro. Hin- must get acquainted with these brethren.

—The Northern Indiana Eldership of this church which was formed from "dismembered" churches and preachers on account of their opposition to the lodge is continually being strengthened in the Lord. A large proportion of the preachers are earnest advocates of the higher Christian life.

MENNONITE.

—The first General Conference of the United Mennonites was held in Blair, province of Ontario, Canada, June 4th to 6th last. Elder Daniel Brenneman was re-elected to conduct the Gospel Banner at Goshen, Ind., in English and German, the English edition to be issued twice a month at the close of the present volume. It was decided that the printing establishment should be the property of the denomination. A new discipline was adopted and is being printed for general circulation. The principles of the United Mennonites include non-resistance in war; non-swearing of oaths; anti-secrecy; anti-rum and tobacco; adult baptism; open communion and feet washing.

CONGREGATIONAL.

—Prof. R. T. Morgan of the College and Summer School, Wheaton, preaches next Lord's day to the church in Lisle, Ill., Bro. O. S. Grinnell the regular supply, having gone to Michigan on a two weeks' visit to the church with which he labored two or three years ago.

—A council called by the church at Bloomingdale, Ill., to settle questions of difference regarding the sale of their church building, was mainly composed of members of the Elgin Association, and Dea. Dustin of Sycamore, a Knight Templar, presided.

—Rev. J. L. Fonda, a hard-working young home missionary on the frontier at Morris, Minn., has begun the building of a new stone church.

—Rev. George Thompson of Leland, Mich., attended the late Grand Traverse conference, preached one of the sermons, and led in the discussion of the subject, "Sunday and the Iron Foundries."

GERMAN BAPTIST (BRETHREN).

—Bro. H. R. Holsinger of the Progressive Christian was called to account for some statements in his paper by the standing committee of the "Dunker" church at the late annual meeting. He says he was once in a lodge, but after the initiation he left the order in disgust. He made some suggestions to the Brethren, arising from his experience, in an article entitled, "Is the standing committee a secret organizatian?"—thus:

"Perhaps it may not occur to every one, in what particulars the meetings of Standing Committee are like lodge meetings, hence we will present a few of the most prominent similarities.

1. It has a room to itself.
2. It has a door-keeper.
3. It holds its sessions with closed doors.
4. The representatives of the press are excluded.
5. It admits into its sessions only those of a certain degree, the third degree in the ministry. In this particular it reminds one of the degree of Royal Arch Masonry.
6. It has secrets of its own, which its members dare not reveal; at least so they tell us when we ask for reasons for certain of its doings.

Now in these six particulars the workings of our Standing Committees, are very similar to those of secret societies. And in view of this fact, and other facts set forth in the above, we call upon the more intelligent brethren who have been on the Standing Committee to answer the question contained in the head of this article."

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

—Rev. W. P. McNary of Bloomington, Ind., having been appointed home missionary to Indianapolis, his church decidedly object. At a meeting of the congregation held on the 1st inst. to consider the resignation, the feeling against acceptance was earnestly expressed by the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved, That we do not accept the resignation of our pastor, Rev. W. P. McNary, and that a committee be appointed to present Mr. McNary some of the reasons why we think it to be his duty to remain with us, and that we enter our most earnest and solemn protest to Presbytery that it do not dissolve the happy union between this people and its pastor.

UNITED BRETHREN IN CHRIST.

—Rev. David Ross, an aged minister of the U. B. church, dropped dead at Westfield, Ill., on the 3d inst., it is supposed from heart disease.

—The wife and daughter of Rev. N. E. Gardner of Coleta, Ill., narrowly escaped drowning during a late visit to Missouri. While crossing a stream in a wagon the "reach" broke and they were left in the box in a helplsss condition. They were rescued by a gentleman who providentially came to their assistance on horseback. The stream had swollen beyond the expectation of the driver.

—The controversy aroused by the circular of Rev. W. J. Shuey of Dayton is ably maintained in the Telescope by Rev. Halleck Floyd of Indiana, who is replying in detail to the three articles of the former. Bro. Hott of the Telescope has also a candid editorial drawn out by the discussion, which is being conducted in good spirit, and will do much toward strengthening the church in its advanced position.

GENERAL.

—It is said that devil-worship has been revived amongst the colored people who had been left to their own preachers, and that when discovered a child was about to be sacrificed.

—Prof. Francis L. Patton of the Chicago Presbyterian Theological Seminary, has declined his call to London.

—There are 300,000 colored Methodists in this country and they claim the privilege of electing one of their number bishop at the next General Conference.

—Dr. Robert Moffat, than whom no one is better informed on whatever concerns that part of the world says that "Mission work all over South Africa has been thrown back fifty years by the present war with the Zulus."

—The business men of Oberlin, Ohio, have a way of encouraging the prayer meeting most commendable and worthy of imitation everywhere. Most of them have regularly closed their places of business on Thursday evening for several years, for the purpose of enabling themselves and their clerks to attend the prayer meetings, held in the different churches on that evening.

—A dispatch to the St. Petersburg Daily News reports that dissenters from the Orthodox church, hitherto unrecognized by the state, are to have entire liberty of worship. This affects 12,000,000 Russian subjects. These dissenters are the sect known as "Old Believers." Other dissenters will remain under existing disabilities.

—Oscar Krauser was four years ago a convict in the Ohio penitentiary. He was convicted through the efforts of a baggage-master at Columbus, but he is now a missionary in Chili, South America, and is reported intensely enthusiastic in his work.

—During the summer months, the evangelists Pentecost and Stebbins will hold Gospel meetings every Sunday evening in the New Haven opera house. The churches in Salem are preparing for a series of similar meetings to be held in October.

—Notices were read in some of the Newark (N. J.) churches on a late Sabbath, requesting the congregation to read carefully the published lists of applicants for barroom licenses, and if they found the names of any persons known to them as keeping disorderly houses or violating the Sunday law, or as not bearing a good moral character, to appear before the Board of Excise and file their protests.

—Three elevated railway schemes are being agitated in Chicago. The following from the Christian Union shows what effect these roads may have on Sabbath worship: "Our worship last Sunday afternoon in Trinity church was rudely disturbed by the din of the Metropolitan railway trains, which rumbled by at brief intervals during the entire service, and several times took pains, as it seemed, to blow off steam directly under the great chancel window. This was the beginning of Sunday trains, and a prophecy of what Trinity and the other churches and the residents along the route are to look for in the future. It is seemingly indicative of a total abandonment of the old Sabbath idea, and evinces little concern on the part of the churches for a day of rest that they are found tacitly bargaining with the railroad company not to protest so long as trains are not run till after 12 o'clock noon."

—The fifty-fifth annual report of the American Sunday-School Union for the year ending May, 1879, shows the receipts during that time to have been $91,139.19. Of this amount $54,985.49 came from collections, and $25,689.43 from legacies. The expenditures were $69,772.58, leaving in the hands of the Treasurer a balance of $21,366.61. The work of the year may be briefly summarized, so far as it can be represented by figures. There have been 1,087 schools organized, containing 4,915 teachers and 39,769 scholars, while aid has been given to 2,718 schools already in existence; 5,521 addresses have been delivered, 2,137 Bibles and 6,668 Testaments have been distributed, and 14,140 families visited.

News of the Week.

—The Hon. William Allen, ex-Governor of Ohio, died suddenly at his home near Chillicothe, Ohio, last Friday morning. His illness was of very brief duration. He was in Chillicothe on Wednesday apparently in most excellent health and spirits. His first mention of illness was on Thursday morning, but he did not regard his condition as of sufficient consequence to receive attention until the afternoon. At 1:30 next morning he arose, suddenly staggered into a chair and died without a word. Governor Bishop has issued a proclamation eulogistic of the late ex-Governor, reciting his public services, and directing that the flags of the Capitol be displayed at half-mast, and closing the State offices on the day of the funeral.

—The New Orleans Times calls attention to three cases in which policemen have shot at negroes, and asks that the officers be indicted for shooting with intent to kill.

—At the mines at Bodie, Cal., last Thursday, occurred a terrible explosion of the powder magazine near the old Standard mine. The Incline works were blown to atoms, and everything near them leveled to the ground. The Summit works, a short distance off, were shattered to pieces, and many men killed. As far as heard from there are eight known to be dead, and over forty wounded, with the prospect that many of them will die from injuries. It is impossible to get particulars; everybody is excited, women and children crying and searching for the remains of loved ones. Probably many were blown into the air and their remains scattered broadcast. There were five tons of giant powder in the magazine which exploded. The shock was felt twenty miles away.

—The colored convention of Houston, Texas, last week adopted an address to the colored people of that State in which the negroes are urged to favorably consider schemes for emigrating to a State where the rights of every citizen are recognized, accorded and respected; are advised to practice the strictest economy and save their earnings, so that if it becomes absolutely necessary to migrate they may do so with expediency, and advised the appointment of commissioners in each county to look after the welfare of the colored people seeking new homes.

—St. Louis and many inland towns were suffering severely from heat last week and a number of fatal cases of sunstroke were recorded.

—A fatal case of yellow fever at Memphis last week caused a great scare, and the Southern cities are generally forming a quarantine against everything and everybody from that locality. Many have fled from the city.

—The largest number of Mormons which has arrived this year was landed at Castle Garden, New York, last week, from the steamer Wyoming. There were 607 adults who came in the steerage and 76 in the second cabin. Of this number 381 came from Scandinavia, 80 from Switzerland and Germany, and the others from England and Scotland. They were started for Utah on the 9th. Among the number was a young man 25 years old who gave his name as Brigham Young. He said he was no relative to the late head of the church at Salt Lake City. Most of them were farmers.

—Judge Ray of Memphis, died Sunday night at 9 o'clock, of yellow fever, and was buried almost immediately afterward in Elmwood Cemetery, under the auspices of the Masons. His son lies in a critical condition.

—Ten whites and five colored persons died from sunstroke Saturday in Charleston, S. C.

—Captain James C. Luce, who died last week, was commander of the steamship Arctic, lost with nearly all the passengers, Sept. 27, 1854. He is reported to have said that he never went to sleep afterward without a vision of the terrible catastrophe before his mind.

—China is getting into trouble with Russia. Advices from Orenburg dated the 28th of June confirm the report of preparations making by the Chinese to march on Kuldja. The ill treatment of Russian merchants on the frontier continues.

—A dispatch to the London Times from Calcutta, dated the 13th, reports that the King of Burmah has massacred twelve more persons.

—A fire at Irkutsk, Siberia, on the 4th, burned 400 houses. The officials of Tula have received letters threatening the burning of that town.

—The person who supplied the pistol to Alexander Solovieff, with which he attempted to assassinate the Emperor of Russia on the 14th of April, is a physician from Wiemar, Germany, who is also proved to have procured the poison with which Solovieff attempted suicide after his failure to kill the Czar, and to have owned the horse by means of which the assailants of Gen. Mesentsoff attempted to escape. A telegram from St. Petersburg authoritatively states that he has been sentenced to be hanged very shortly.

—Reports of the commercial agencies are encouraging. The failures during the first half of this year are 148 less in number and $28,000,000 less in amount than those of the corresponding period a year ago.

—M. DeLesseps stated at the last meeting of the Geographical society in Paris, that he does not think the total of the expense of the construction of the Darien Canal will exceed 250,000,000 francs. The difficulties of the work were not so formidable as those which had been overcome in the construction of the Suez canal, as a railway already existed along the course of the proposed Panama canal, with a large town at each extremity. DeLesseps states that the caution money, 2,000,000 francs, required by Venzuela, anent the Panama Isthmus canal, has already been paid.

—A Paris dispatch states that a decree has been published pardoning or reducing the punishment of 1,369 persons. The government has submitted a bill to the Senate to amnesty sailor and soldier deserters who have not been tried and sentenced. This applies to exiled communists who belonged to the army. It is estimated that the measure will affect 30,000 persons.

—Thousands of persons have been engaged several weeks on the works designed to cause the Oxus river in western Asia, to return to its ancient bed, so as to establish easy water communication between the Caspian Sea and regions bordering on Afghanistan.

LESSON XXX.—JULY 27.—VICTORY OVER DEATH.

SCRIPTURE.—1 Cor. 15:50 58.

COMMIT TO MEMORY VS. 54-57.

50 Now this I say, brethren, that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God; neither doth corruption inher-
51 it incorruption. | Behold, I shew yon a mystery: We shall not all sleep, but
52 we shall all be changed, | In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trnmpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorrup-
53 tible, and we shall be changed. | For this corruptible must be pnt on incorruption, and this mortal mnst put on immortality.
54 So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up
55 in victory. | O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? |
56 The sting of death is sin; and the
57 strength of sin is the law. | But thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory
58 throngh our Lord Jesus Christ. | Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, for as much as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord.

INTRODUCTION.

The Apostle lays the foundation for his proofs of the resurrection, in the historical fact that Christ rose from the dead. He then passed from the fact of the resurrection, to the manner of it, which he illnstrates by analogies from nature—as the seed sown, and the various kinds of bodies. He then asserts the existence, and declares some of the characteristics, of the spiritual body. The lesson shows the final victory over death.

SUGGESTIONS.

Resurrection is the central doctrine or truth of the Scriptures. It is the keystone of the arch of faith, and the ground of assurance. This wanting, there is no certainty or ground of hope; this proved there should be no question or doubt. There are evidences for those who desire to believe.

1. It is the necessity of man. Nothing else will fully meet and explain the enigma of life and death.

2. It is the desire of man. Nothing less will fully satisfy our cravings.

3. It is the promise of the Scriptures. The frequent references of the Old Testament were so strong that the Pharisees, the most numerous and powerful sect of the Jews, including the leading teachers and members of the Sanhedrim, were founded upon this doctrine (Acts 23: 6-8).

4. It was the positive and constant teaching of the Lord Jesus Christ (see John 5: 24; 6: 39, 40; 11: 25, etc.)

5. The instances of resurrection recorded in the Bible are direct, and must be believed if the rest of the book is believed (see 1 Kings 17: 19-24; 2 Kings 4: 32-35; Mark 5: 39-43; Luke 7: 12-15; John 11: 43, 44, etc).

6. The resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, if proved, establishes the truth of the doctrine, and as to this we may say—

(a) He foretold his own death in the very manner in which it occurred, with all the details of the shame and suffering and he also foretold the time of his own resurrection, and appointed a meeting with his disciples, resting all his promises upon the truth of this word (see Mat. 26, 27, etc).

(b) His death and burial were in exact and wonderful harmony with his words, and his resurrection is clearly established by the eleven appearances of Jesus that have been recorded.

(c). The church of Christ is built upon this doctrine, and its permanency and power is in itself a convincing proof.

It seems that false teachers had come to the church at Corinth and denied the resurrection. In answer to them, the Holy Spirit through Paul sent this chapter to demonstrate the truth. It is divided into three parts, as follows:

1. Whether there is any resurrection of the dead. This is answered by the historical fact of Jesus' resurrection (verses 1-34).

2. What will be the manner of the resurrection, or the nature of the bodies that will be raised up? This is declared and proven possible by the analogy of nature (verses 35-51).

3. What will become of those who are alive when the Lord returns? This is a matter of revelation. (Verses 51-54).

From this it appears that our futnre bodies may not be of the same nature as those we now have, yet we shall have a body, and it may be a material body, and identical with the one we now have, and that our personality will remain (verses 42-50). All will not sleep (die), but some will remain alive until the Lord returns, and then be changed (verses 23, 51, 52; 1 Thess. 4: 13-18.) There will be two resurrections. First, all those who "sleep in Christ." This will take place at his coming for his saints. Second, all the dead, those who do not sleep in Christ. This will occur after the thousand years are finished, when the final judgment occnrs (Rev. 20: 11-15).

Who have left this world without tasting death? (Gen. 5: 24; 2 Kings 2: 11.) Remember the "we" of this lesson and of 1 Thess. 4: 14-17, refers only to believers. The mystery of life and death will be explained when Jesus comes. How did Jesns win the victory? Who can say he conquered for me? What results should follow our belief in him? (verse 58.)

NOTES.

After speaking of "spiritual gifts," the greatest of which is charity, the apostle, in the chapter from which the lesson is taken, discusses the resurrection of the dead, which some teachers in Corinth had denied. After proving the fact of the resurrection (1 Cor. 15: 1-34), he teaches its nature, and shows with what kind of bodies the dead are to rise. The great objection to the doctrine, in the minds of those to whom he was writing, seems to have rested on the assumption that our future bodies are to be of the same nature with those we now have. Paul says this is a foolish assumption. Our future bodies may be material and identical with our present bodies and yet organized in a very different way. Matter admits of indefinite varieties in organization. As there is an immense diversity of matter in the vegetable productions of the earth, in the flesh of different orders of animals and in the sun, moon and stars, so there may be and the Scriptures tell us there must be, a great difference between our present and our future bodies (1 Cor. 15: 35-49. At this point in his argument the apostle makes an assertion, describes a change, celebrates a victory and enforces a lesson.

LESSONS.

1. Our bodies, as well as our souls, are to have a part in Christ's redemption.

2. The revelations of the Gospel satisfy our longings for immortality.

3. We will know and recognize each other in heaven.

4. We must be greatly changed before we are fitted for glory.

5. The doctrine of the resurrection should go far towards dellvering us from the fear of death, and in giving comfort when onr Christian friends die.

6. This doctrine should lead us to thankfulness, steadfastness and diligence.

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

BY PRESIDENT CHARLESS G. FINNEY, OF OBERLIN, OHIO

This is a most powerful argument against the Lodge by a truly great and good man who when a young man just before beginning the study of the law and before his convertion, was drawn into this Anti-Christian institution, and as he says on page seven "became a BRIGHT Mason." On the same page he says; "I was completely converted from Freemasonry to Christ." The most of this book was first published in a series of articles in the Independent which created such excitement that the publishers refused to insert the rest of the articles.

This book has already opened the eyes of multitudes to the evils of Freemasonry.

Topics of the Time.

The Sabbath question is taking an interesting prominence among the Jewish congregations of the country. Rabbi Koehler of Chicago, who is soon to remove to New York to take charge of the synagogue Beth El is understood to favor innovations upon the traditions of the elders in respect to services upon the first instead of the seventh day of the week. At the sixth council of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations held in New York a fortnight since, a resolution was adopted declaring that the means of obtaining a stricter observance of the seventh day Sabbath were beyond their reach; and a motion to define the Sabbath as the seventh day of the week was lost. This giving way of the formalities of centuries in favor of Christianity is a movement which must fill every Christian heart with the hope that not only may Christ's day, but his person and sacrifice may also be accepted by the descendants of those who slew him.

The reports of Monday morning from Memphis leave no doubt respecting the fatal presence of the yellow fever. On Sunday ten new cases were reported and there were five deaths. Quarantine is established against that city in every direction, while its inhabitants are fleeing by thousands, and its merchants removing their goods. The type of fever this year is not so malignant and yields more readily to treatment than last year. The fact also that most who remain will be those who have had the disease, will tend to shorten the course of the epidemic; and it is hoped that the vigorous measures that will be everywhere adopted, together with the general good health experienced in other cities of the South, will prevent any such disastrous results as last year. A few, however, among them Congressman Young, apprehend a general spread of the fever even to points farther north than were visited last year. He estimates the deaths last season from the epidemic at fifty thousand.

The tendencies of the French nation toward Protestant Christianity as told in our excellent English letter on the next page, are exciting deep interest throughout Christendom. There are yet many difficulties beside the papal power. The governmental system of France is entirely secular, a step in advance of the atheism of the republic superseded by the first Napoleon. The French system is brought out clearly in the pending struggle over the Jesuits, which is the great question at issue in Jules Ferry's educational bill. That bill passed the Delegates by a vote of 352 to 159; but an amendment prohibiting all religious orders from teaching was lost by a vote of 381 to 78. The popular branch of the French legislature thus records its hostility to the Jesuit order. In the Senate the anti-Jesuit clause is the only point of serious disagreement, and this is so strong that the government may have to postpone the discussion for several months. The reasons urged in support of the measure are that education is an affair of the state, whose sanction must be withheld from schools which openly aim at the overthrow of the Republic of France, teaching the supreme authority of the church in all matters political or ecclesiastical. The text-books of the priests have been found to contain such statements as that "the Inquisition never condemned any one to death; that feudalism was a beneficent institution, unjustly destroyed; and that in Protestant England bigamy is frequent, the wife is a slave to her husband, and children are commonly poisoned or sold"—and similar stupendous falsehoods may be found every week in the Romish papers of our own country.

This anti-Jesuit war in France resembles in its general principles that of Bismarck a few years ago against the same dark secret order. A correspondent of a London paper reports a conversation with a prominent French Republican, who gives in terse language the object of the educational bill: "Are you not stirring up a dangerous agitation in France with your anti-clerical bill on education?" "We cannot help it," was the reply. "Suppose 70,000 English youth belonging to the first families in the United Kingdom, and in training for the army, the navy, the civil service, or the bar, were in the hands of instructors who have the 'Priest in Absolution' for their breviary; would you not be of the opinion that by some means or another it would be indispensable to root up the evil? This is the case with us. 70,000 of our boys are in State schools, and an equal number in schools controlled by Jesuits. What is to be done except by shutting up the latter, if we do not wish to be ruled by sneaks within fifteen years?"

While these measures are agitating France, the German Chancellor has been maturing a policy over which the papal journals are in transports of triumphant delight, and viewed in whatever light it seems disastrous to the cause of peace and true religion. The immense armament of Germany, like Saul's armor on David, was weighing down the government and depleting its treasury. To maintain its expense Bismarck concluded to give up his free trade policy and adopt a tariff. To accomplish this political revolution he found the votes of the Ultramontanes in the German parliament were needed, and these were purchased by a truce over the celebrated Falk laws, by which the Jesuits were banished and a partial restoration of Romish power. Dr Falk has resigned his position in the ministry, held since 1872, and Bismarck expects to raise from the operation of his tariff laws some thirty million dollars a year. Dr. Falk was severe, and in enforcing civil marriage undoubtedly unreasonable; yet the failings of his system were not beyond remedy and were not to be compared with the crime of war. Nor were they so dangerous to Germany or hostile to Protestantism as a peace with Leo XIII. for which they have been exchanged.

We are glad to see that attention is being called to a notorious evil in a way that promises a reform. The reports of all public libraries year after year tell us that the works of fiction are more used than any other class of literature and almost entirely by boys and girls. Thus the benefactions of the wealthy and philanthropic are used to furnish a mental pabulum for young minds too often for their great injury. Mr. Charles Francis Adams, Jr., in a paper on "Fiction in Libraries," read lately before the American Library Association, though approving a moderate use of fiction for relaxation, says further: "A single doubt on the subject which more and more addresses itself to my mind is, whether furnishing any form of amusement or relaxation of this sort—for education it is not—is a proper function of the government. All of us trustees do it, but I am more and more inclined to doubt whether the purchase of general reading of trashy and ephemeral literature, especially works of fiction, is not an unjustifiable expenditure of public money."

Dr. Schlieman in his excavations on the plain of Troy, has unearthed several articles that are recognized by the Chinese minister at Berlin as undoubtedly of Chinese origin. On one of the vases is a Chinese inscription, and gauze and linen found with the vase are believed to be of Chinese manufacture. These discoveries prove, according to the embassador's theory, that there was traffic with western Asia by the Chinese twelve hundred years before Christ, if the very inhabitants themselves of those districts were not Chinese. Other discoveries have been made in Assyria of even greater interest to the Bible student. Mr. Russam of the Assyrian expedition has discovered at Nineveh remains of palaces built by Esar-haddon and Seunacherib. At Babylon, in a mound hitherto untouched, he discovered a palace of Nebuchadnezzar's, with rich enameled columns, beams of Indian wood, and every indication of having been a most splendid edifice. His excavation in the mound of Birs Nimroud, the site of the supposed Tower of Babel, prove to his satisfaction that the destruction of this great edifice was due, not to lightning or hostile attack, but to a volcanic eruption.

Is France Becoming a Protestant Nation?

BY REV. JOHN BOYES.

During the last two years the question at the head of this article has often been asked in spite of the known sentiments of Blanqui and other revolutionists who desire to see France altogether unchristianized. France, long downtrodden by the heel of the priesthood, is shaking off her stupor, and asserting her right to think and act in harmony with the progressive ideas of the age. Progress and Protestantism are really convertible terms. People who have been accustomed to regard France as the home of papacy and atheism—two strange extremes—are astonished to find the work of evangelization going so rapidly forward. In the large halls and theaters of Paris and of most of the provincial towns, evangelistic services are being held with mavellous success. For years perfect freedom has been enjoyed in Italy by all sections of the Christian church, and Protestantism is making its power felt most beneficially throughout that land. France has loitered behind, but seems now to be making earnest efforts to redeem her character and regain her liberty. The Paris Exhibition gave a favorable opportunity for a wide spread proclamation of evangelical truth; and the consolidation of the Republic has removed many of the obstacles to the spread of the Gospel which previously existed.

Perhaps as one reason for the rapid spread of Protestantism, we may mention that during the last few years scores of thousands of Bibles have been circulated, and one result of this liberal sowing of divine truth is that Christian churches have been formed in several localities; just as in Belgium it is known that not fewer than twenty Protestant churches have grown up of late years solely as the result of Bible circulation. In Paris Mr. McAll has established twenty-three stations for the preaching of the Gospel; while in the same city Miss de Broën, by means of her medical mission and domiciliary visitation is accomplishing a great work among the poorest and most degraded of the population. The interest which is taken in evangelistic work is surprising. A similar work is also in progress in Lyons, Marseilles and other important centers of population; while even throughout the country villages, the Gospel seems to be awakening the masses of the people to a new life.

The priests are naturally indignant, but the government is offering no opposition to the work. The representatives of the Reformed or Protestant faith in France are men of intellectual as well as spiritual strength; men of ability, of scholarship and of deep religious life, who are prepared to maintain their position in the present crisis. Mr. McAll is a true hero, and is manfully fighting the battle for Christ and his kingdom against the prestige of philosophy, and what is still worse, the priestism that for so long a time has crushed out the life of France.

M. Reveillaud says: "It is to day as it was in the times of the apostles, among the heathen population, and as it was in the sixteenth century in France itself, when the Gospel made so much progress that it seemed as if the entire country was to be conquered for the truth and the Gospel, if the massacres of St. Bartholomew had not come to stop the work which then had so magnificent a beginning. To-day we are in an age of reform. The opportunity to preach the Gospel, to announce the good news, has never before been so great, in our country. It is certain that religious liberty exists in France, if not completely in law, at least in custom. There are none of the obstacles on the part of the government which it was feared might exist. All the members of the present administration are favorably disposed to religious liberty."

We find there is a large bourgeois population which, while it does not rally around the cause of Protestantism, is enlightened and liberal, and is in a kind of quiescent sympathy therewith. M. Lorriaux says: "Throughout the whole of France the preacher of the Gospel may now go—in large and populous towns, in the poorest and most miserable parts of Paris, and in the smallest villages of the country, and he will everywhere find a listening audience and a favorable reception—sympathy, respect, and a vague, longing desire to know and possess the truth." Dr. Pressense, speaking of the evangelists that are missioning the towns and villages of the country, says: "They testify to the existence among the people of something more than a mere hostility to Catholicism, namely, to a sense of deep and real religious need. Wherever the good news is carried, eager crowds gather to receive it. A great responsibility thus rests upon our evangelical Protestantism. It realizes this, and is fully resolved to multiply its efforts for the extension of the Gospel mission. A committee has just been formed in Paris to arrange a series of conferences to be held in places of public resort, theatres, guildhalls, even in dancing saloons, where no other place offers. We are determined all to enroll ourselves as volunteers in this great crusade."

Other distinguished Frenchmen give similar testimony. While the reformed church as a whole have as yet no confession of faith and no disciplinary power, they are united in one body, and have the assurance of the President of the Republic that their rights shall be respected and their freedom secured.

We give these facts in order to indicate an answer to the question, "Is France becoming a Protestant nation?" Our reply is, "Yes."

Shrewsbury, Eng., June 26, '79.

Have Boys Inherent Rights that Men are Bound to Respect?

BY ENOCH HONEYWELL.

Yes. All conscientious men, and women too, who dare to think for themselves, know that they have just such rights. They know, too, that if we withhold these rights, we violate both natural and Gospel law, and thus stain our souls with guilt. Satan's agents have legions of traps and pitfalls now set, covered and baited in upper garrets to catch our innocent and unsuspecting young men. Millions of us know just what and where these pits and traps are, and yet most of us wilfully and wickedly refuse to show our youth their danger.

The excuse is, as some have said to me, "I don't want my barn burnt." Others don't want their business crippled or their names slandered. Thus our unenlightened young men are trapped, tongue-tied, and bound to clannish masters for life by reason of our wicked refusal to do them the justice that nature and nature's God commands us to do. I ask and urge every good man of the nation to show and explain to our grown boys the sly traps now set and baited for them in a thousand garrets. St. Paul, and also the late Wm. Lloyd Garrison, were both bold ice-breakers and leading reformers. Public opinion condemned both. They were stoned, jailed, scourged, fined, and slandered by wicked men, and even by such false churches as, in Garrison's day, riveted the chains on the poor slave by their fellowship and communion with slavery, that "sum of all villianies." Now the deeds of these world-wide reformers are—and rightfully—extolled to the skies, and their pure souls are doubtless in heaven. They faced the tiger in his den. And shall we cower before a sly clan when the freedom of our sons is at stake? They chose—as all consistent Christians now choose—to work on God's side in every reform, though a worldly church, together with big men and big multitudes were against them; Every man of culture knows, or can know, just what the penaltied orders are. They are open to the world, and published to all who will read them; and the truth of these publications is affirmed by a thousand honest ex-Masons, and some adhering ones. I entreat you then to tell—so far as you can reach them—the 5,000,000 young men of the nation just what oaths, death-penalties, and money swindling they will be victims of if they go into the secret, sword-guarded garrets to learn the pretended mysteries.

A very intelligent man in Hoopeston, Ill., has left the Masonic lodge and he says—what thousands already know—that every oath, penalty, &c., is out to the world and truthfully depicted. Will you, or any other honest man or woman, allow another young man to be lured into such garrets, and there be robbed of his money and his liberty, and be tongue-tied for life through your neglect? Ten words from you may save him from that bondage. I now entreat you, as you cherish your own self-respect and the rights of our youth, to carefully read this appeal, study your own heartfelt love for justice, and then act promptly, and may heaven bless all those who dare set their candle on the bushel—not under it.

You may say there are good Masons in the lodge: we grant it. So, too, there were good slaves and gentlemanly masters; yet slavery was the abhorent curse of the earth, and it doubtless dragged millions into future perdition. The inherent vice in an institution breeds the criminal. I once saw a man going to market with a gang of slaves, and heard him boast that he had just worn out three handfuls of withed whips on the back of one of his women! "And," said he, "I made the blood and mutton fly nicely." That Satanic brute acted under the shield of American law. He and the law were hail fellows, well met. Now that institution is shot through the heart, and the man that to-day would make "the blood and mutton fly" from a woman's back would be blasted by the anathemas of all Christendom. Morgan and others were also murdered by an institution chartered by the laws of our nation. Can laws make it right for me to mangle the back of an innocent woman, or to cut the throat and tear out the tongue of an innocent boy, merely because he tells how I have treated him? Will you let your sons be dragged, unwarned, into a system reeking with blood and murder, merely because a few good men have not yet left it? You know, or can know, that thousands of still better men have left it, and condemned it. If I should become a volunteer member in a band of thieves or murderers, and swear to do as they do, I then become a sharer in their crimes. Is it not so? The law would hold me as a particeps criminis in all the crimes of that den. So, too, the blood of a murdered Morgan virtually stains the skirts of every future member of the institution that authorized Mr. Vallance to push Morgan out of a boat, with a stone tied to his body, into the Niagara river on the night of September 19th, 1826.

The fact is already proven in Altay, N. Y., that not a single honest young man will join such a lodge after knowing just what is done inside of it. Is not human nature here the same as there? When you spread the light before your honest boys, their own honor and self-respect will save them, even in Alabama as well as in Altay.

Don't wait for the preachers; if they should dare to preach against popular sins in high places, such as slavery was, and Masonry is, they would be shut out of the pulpit. The laity are the leaders. The Rev. Wm. Fenton says: "While a student at the theological seminary, the other students would say to me: 'We know that you are right in regard to your views on Freemasonry, but we must not speak against it, because there are some Masons in all the Baptist churches and we cannot get places to preach if we speak against Masonry.'" Now, my friends, how much longer will you permit a sly enemy to rule your pulpits, tie your tongues, and entrap your free sons?

A Page of Anti-Masonic History.

Some twenty years ago Jonas Brown, an aged veteran now living at East Swanton, Vt., republished in pamphlet form the report of a committee of the Vermont Legislature made in 1833, in which the lodge oaths and penalties were very fully exposed. To the various attacks made on him by Masons Mr. Brown at length replied in a St. Albans paper; and, as the editor would not print it as a communication, he was obliged to insert it as an advertisement of which the following is a copy, set from the original:

TO THE PUBLIC.

Since there are false reports in circulation respecting a donation made to me by the Masonic lodge of St. Albans, when I was a member of that society, I feel called upon to give the facts in the case, and my views respecting the institution, its nature and bearing upon society, social, civil and religious.

Early in the year 1823, I was solicited to join the Masons, the institution being represented as a good and benevolent one, and called the handmaid of religion. Being young and poor and somewhat thoughtful upon the subject of religion, I was ready to follow the appearance of good, hoping to find both sympathy and aid in both temporal and spiritual things. I sent in my petition and was received. But alas; to my hurt. Instead of a good institution, I found a bad one; instead of benevolence, consummate selfishness; instead of a handmaid of religion, a wolf in sheep's clothing. I was disgusted with my first introduction to this ancient institution, handed down to posterity by the wise man Solomon. I was told that this was but the first step, that as I advanced I should understand more of its work and principles, which I confess was the truth, and about the only truth I ever found connected with the history of this beast, to whom is delegated the power of the dragon, that old spirit called the devil and Satan. And why should I, an ignorant young man, question this institution of the wise man, patronized by kings and emperors, presidents, senators, generals, ministers and laymen. And further, did I wish to speak and declare the nature of the beast, my tongue was tied by the strongest obligations, and my mouth sealed by the most horrid oaths, while before me glittered the two-edged sword of vengeance thirsting for my heart's blood. So trusting to future revelations I suffered myself again to be hoodwinked and led another step into the mysteries and fooleries of Masonry.

In the fall of 1825 I met with an accident which disabled me for many months. In the spring following, I think it was, I was told that if I would come to the lodge they would raise me to the sublime and honorable degree of Master Mason, and render me some assistance. With an eager eye toward the higher degrees, and the heaven-born principles to be revealed, I suffered myself to be raised. They voted me $25 to assist me in my poverty, which after deducting my fee and money paid in, left me $10. In the fall of this year the hidden things of darkness were brought to light by Morgan's revelation. Soon after this, having no fellowship with the works of darkness, I renounced the whole system, and in the spring following was expelled for unmasonic conduct.

This expulsion, as I suppose, was based upon the first principles of Masonry, that of denying what we know to be true. Though I did not reveal anything, yet I could not positively declare Morgan's revelation false, when I knew it to be true, so far as I was acquainted with the principles and oaths of Masonry. And now I would say that I believe the obligations of Masonry to be unrighteous, opposed to the laws of God and man, very dangerous to society, and consequently not binding upon any man. Its ceremonies are foolish, vain and blasphemous beneath the dignity of men. Now if I have violated the obligations of Masonry, I feel that I have obeyed my Savior. In coming "out from among them" I will have nothing to do with "the unfruitful works of darkness" except to "reprove them."

I am now an old man, and must soon stand before my judge, but have no fear of violated oaths upon this subject. I would exhort all who are in bondage to Masonry to come out from among them, and touch not the unclean things; and I hereby give my dying warning to the young: Receive not the mark of the beast—keep clear from Masonry—seek light—love the truth—fear God and keep his commandments.

Cheese Factories and the Christian Sabbath.

A REPORT FROM THE FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH, OBERLIN, O.

Some months ago the above subject was brought to the attention of the First Church of Oberlin. Statements were made to the effect that the common practice in the management of cheese factories in northern Ohio was to utterly ignore the Lord's Day. It being reported that some of her own members were implicated in the business, the church felt called upon to give the subject a more thorough investigation. Accordingly a committee was appointed, who, after visiting eleven factories in the vicinity, made an elaborate report, from which we here present the following condensed statement.

Taking the factories visited in numerical order, we give the number of patrons, the number of church members, and the number who withhold patronage on the Sabbath day.

Factories.	Patrons.	Church Members.	Observers of Sabbath.
1	9	3	3
2	44	1	0
3	13	5	0
4	37	4	0
5	15	7	0
6	18	4	1
7	25	13	3
8	34	6	2
9	18	5	4
10	63	8	2
11	35	8	4
11	311	63	19

Thus it appears (1) that all the factories visited run on the Sabbath as on other days. (2) That nearly one-fifth of the patrons are church members. (3) That a little less than one-third of these withhold their patronage on the Sabbath. These facts were obtained mainly from the manufacturers themselves, who in almost every case treated the committee courteously, granting them free access to their books, answering questions freely, and in some cases expressing a desire that such a change might be made as would allow them to observe the Lord's day like other men. The impression was made by some of those gentlemen, that in falling into the habit they had simply yielded to the pressure of worldly interests, against their better convictions; and they had the more readily done so because they had found so many professing Christians willing to do the same. In one factory the proprietor stated that he thought "by another year a change might be made, but that owing to existing arrangements it could not be effected this year." "The tone of his conversation," say the committee, "was such as to leave the impression that he would gladly welcome the reform. Some of the employes also expressed the wish that a reform might be accomplished even before another Sabbath." The wife of one proprietor wished that "there was a law against cheese factories running on Sunday." Another proprietor states that he has been in the business eight years, and that during eight months of each year he did not pretend to enter a Christian church; that the matter of keeping the Sabbath did not enter into the business at all, and that "when the whole thing was simmered down it was only a question of dollars and cents." Other features of the business in several places makes its disregard of the Sabbath especially glaring. Thus, one of the largest manufactories visited, running from four o'clock in the morning till ten o'clock at night, Sababths not excepted, is located within sound of the Christian worship of the little church of that place. And so for eight months of the year, though within stone's throw of the church, these men have practically no Sabbath. Another case worthy of special mention, is that of a factory "supported by fifteen patrons, seven of whom are church members," and all alike make no difference between the Sabbath and other days in conducting their business. Two of these church members run each a milk wagon on the Sabbath for the supply of factories, and one of these is the superintendent of the Sabbath-school of the place. Thus the spectacle is presented of a man teaching the children by word to reverence God's holy day, while by example he is teaching them to act in open violation of it. And what is still more heart-sickening, the school where the lesson of obedience to God's law is taught and the factory where the lesson of disobedience is taught, are only about the width of a street apart."

We regret to say it was found that five or six of the members of this church were among the forty-four professing Christians who did not withhold their patronage on the Sabbath day. Some of these, our own brethren, acted from reasons of personal convenience, some from reason of supposed profit, but all, doubtless, without having realized the inconsistency of their position, or the influence of the organized system of Sabbath desecration which they were helping to support.

Upon becoming possessed of these facts, the church promptly and unanimously took the ground that it must purge itself of all complicity in this evil. And we rejoice to say that this was not at all a difficult task. We talked with, in a Christian way, the members engaged in the business, all freely, and we believe heartily, gave it up. And as a church, we wish to put it on record now, that we cannot and will not countenance such a practice in any of our members.

Some of the reasons why we feel constrained not only to take this position as a church, but also to make these facts public are the following:

1. We regard the maintenance of the Lord's day divinely set apart as it is for religious purposes, as fundamental to the success of the Gospel. It is therefore of the very first importance that Christian churches plant themselves, once for all, in a right position in this matter. The struggle is to be a long one, and if the children of God will not hold sacred that day, it cannot be maintained at all. Furthermore, it is impossible to fulfill the true mission of a Christian church in the world, if even a few of its members be allowed to be implicated in any recognized wrong.

2. We regard this evil not only as an organized departure from the Christian view of the Sabbath, but also a violation of the laws of the State. It cannot be defended on the ground of "works of necessity and mercy" which the State laws except; and if defended on the ground of convenience to individuals the same plea may be urged with regard to several other branches of business. There is no more reason for a cheese factory being open on the Sabbath than for a meat market or a grocery store. The sanction, therefore, of a Christian church, should not be given, even by its silence, to the mere plea of convenience.

3. We regard the evil here considered as only one phase of a general and growing tendency all over the land, to subordinate the Christian Sabbath to secular and selfish uses—a tendency against which we think it the sacred duty of every church of Christ to brace itself.

4 A reform in this matter is a perfectly feasible thing, if Christian men and women will do their duty. In some parts of the State cheese factories are managed by Christian men who will not and do not open them on the Sabbath day; and the testimony of such men is, that the business conducted on the Sabbath-keeping principle is profitable; and that no one is a loser by such arrangements. This is a demonstration of the fact that good men can prosper in that business, whether as patrons or proprietors, as in other honorable callings, without compromising their principles; and that the present common habit is a piece of Sabbath desecration that is wholly gratuitous. The facts brought to light in this vicinity indicate that the blame rests most heavily upon the patrons rather than the manufacturers, and that the responsibility ultimately falls upon professing Christians. It belongs to them to take their stand on Christian ground, and inaugurate a Christian reform.

Relying upon these among other facts and reasons, and regretting our failure in the past we now take a new departure, and implore our sister churches of all denominations in northern Ohio, to join us in the work. The great attack of both theoretical and practical infidelity to-day is upon the Christian Sabbath. The churches must repel that attack. Let their aim be, first to purify themselves by Christian discipline, and then counteract and eradicate this needless and guilty custom from among us as a people. Surely at such a consummation all good men will thank God and take courage.

—Messrs. H. Osterberg, of New York, and Julien Barvis of Paris, representing capitalists, headed by Gen. Lloyd Aspinwall, of New York, have been for some time investigating the merits of a ship canal across the Florida peninsula. The site selected is from the mouth of the Swanee river, just north of Cedar Keys, on the Gulf side, in a nearly direct line to a point between Jacksonville and St. Augustine. The other will be used for some distance, though requiring improvement and a jetty system on the bar, which will reduce the distance to be canaled to about 100 miles. The country to be traversed is favorable for the work, being soft clay or calcareous matter, easily excavated by ordinary dredges.

Reform News.

Reformers of Wisconsin, Attention!

The annual meeting of the Wisconsin State Christian Association, opposed to secret societies, will (D. V.) be held at Evansville, Rock Co., on the 2d, 3d and 4th of September next, to commence at 3 P. M. on Tuesday with a prayer and conference meeting. It is expected that Eld. Rathbun will be present to work the degrees of Masonry. Rev. J. P. Stoddard, the National Agent and Lecturer, will also be present, with Rev. J. F. Browne, the State Lecturer of Illinois, and other able speakers.

Let all who love a pure Christianity, a republican government, impartial justice in our courts, an unshackled press, an unmuzzled pulpit, as opposed to the false and Christless worships of the lodges, the destructive influence of secret societies in church and state, come in person to this meeting, or cause to be represented there, their county and town associations, their churches, or other ecclesiastical bodies, that good square work may be done, which shall tell for God and humanity, and against all forms of oath-bound secret organizations.

As Wisconsin leads the van in the State meetings for 1879, our brethren of the other States are looking to us for a key-note. Let us, by our general attendance, our united faith and active work give them one that shall send a glad thrill of cheer and courage all along the line.

According to a report from J. H. Drummond, "Most Puissant Grand Commander," in the Voice of Masonry for July, we learn that "The suspensions within the last two years aggregate the enormous amount of one hundred and fifty thousand!" This same writer, who confesses that "the total membership has fallen off again," and this too in spite of their boasted additions in consequence of our opposition!

Let us see to it, God helping us, that the next ten years shows a reduction quadrupling that of the last decade. Scattered light will do it.

Dear Bro. K:—New Durham, N. H., has the oldest Free Will Baptist church ever organized. Here in 1780 the denomination commenced; and here, July 4th, I spoke to a full and attentive audience in the F. W. Baptist house of worship. I was most kindly entertained by the pastor and also by Eld. Edgerly, who has been a stanch Anti-mason ever since he entertained Bro. Stoddard. The Adventists had a meeting appointed for the same hour, but changed the time so as to be present at mine.

From here I went back to Center Strafford, preached for Bro. Kimball; went to Portland, Maine, thence to Sebago Lake, and thence by steamer to Harrison, where I met a most kind reception from Bro. and sister Jackson who are battling for reform against powerful and malign influences. I lectured at South Harrison, Bolster's Mills and at Harrison. The people were in the midst of their haying season and it was difficult to awaken a deep interest, except in the minds of those already interested. Our meeting at Harrison was disturbed by rowdyism for which the ministers and churches, rather than the rowdies are manifestly responsible. From the hills back of the town there is a fine view of the White Mountains. The house on the top of Mt. Washington can be distinctly seen, also several fields of snow; one in a mountain gorge that must be quite large in extent.

Sebago Lake, Long Pond, and Sorego River which connects them, constitute a most interesting feature in this part of Maine. The lake is about twelve miles long, and from four to eight wide. As our steamer reached its upper end it seemed impossible to guess where we were to go. But a little deep, crooked river, scarcely wide enough for two boats to pass, gave us access to Naples Bay and Long Pond, which are about a mile wide and nearly fourteen long, deep, clear and beautiful, and at their upper end shut in with high hills.

At this writing I am in the office of the Christian Mirror, Portland. I have called on Rev. C. S. Perkins, pastor of the Free Baptist church, who is fully in sympathy with our reform, but says that Portland is a pre-eminently Masonic city. I go from here to Boston, to spend some time in Massachusetts.

Yours in Christ,
H. H. Hinman.

Editors Christian Cynosure:—Having received an invitation from our friend and fellow soldier in the army of reform, Mr. Joseph H. Wilson, Turkey Run, Marshall county, West Va., eighteen miles distant, to pay him a visit and give secretism an airing, for the benefit of his community, Mr. Turney and I went out to his place on Saturday, the 21st of June last.

Mr. Turney lectured Saturday evening at a school-house in the neighborhood, and preached Sabbath morning at the Sand Hill M. E. church, and at 4 P. M. at Stuhl's Run church; which last having been sold for debt is now in private hands. The turn out on each occasion was reasonably good, though the houses were not filled. Order good. The secret society men, and there are many of them in the country, did not turn out extensively; though I was told that several Odd-fellows attended Saturday night, expecting only to see the tyled citadel of Hiram Abiff bombarded, but were much annoyed by a few shells, directed at their own camp. Sunday morning at Sand Hill church on Mr. Turney's making the grand hailing sign, an old gentleman sprang to his feet and "tortled." He had probably seen the like of that before.

After the Sunday evening discourse was over, one man remarked to me that he belonged to no secret society, but he hardly thought that kind of preaching suitable for Sunday. Just so: if we should wait for the fox to say it is a good time to be dug out we should wait long for his hide. The M. E. local preacher of the last place of preaching expressed himself as not in sympathy with the lodge; but he, prudent man, had no stomach for the fight, and so let it alone.

Brother Wilson told us of two robberies in open daylight lately committed by lodge men in his vicinity, who were identified and apprehended, and the clearest proof of guilt offered, but the Masonic justice refused even to commit them for a court trial. One case was the robbery of a young man of two hundred dollars by two of his neighbors, who, though wearing masks, were recognized. With the greatest effrontery the criminals appeared at the justice's, wearing the very clothes and riding the horses they had at the place of the robbery on the highway. But the Masonic 'Squire couldn't see it, and set them at liberty. Can nothing teach free men to cease voting for Masons and Odd-fellows for esquires and constables?

On our way to Mr. Wilson's, for the greater part of the way we followed the winding course of Wheeling creek, whose gloomy and precipitous bluffs made our way seem lonesome, but in the language of Ossian, "Like the memory of joys that are past, pleasant and mournful to the soul." But on leaving the creek and rising to the lands that lie just beyond the creek hills, we are permitted to look upon fine and well cultivated farms; and one of the finest of them is that of our esteemed friend, Mr. Joseph H. Wilson, himself.

The manners of the people is a singular blending of the unsophisticated traits of a new country, where all are good fellows well met, and the caste-marked and prejudiced but orderly characteristics of an old society.

A Macedonian Call.

Trenton, Mo., July 11, 1879.

Editor Cynosure:—While I may be infringing on your space I would like to say a few words in reference to secretism in this place.

It is a great stronghold for nearly all kinds of orders, and their influence can be seen in every department of business; and while we have a few earnest workers of both sexes, we all feel that our efforts are only feeble at best.

Could we only get the ice broken once by some means we think great good could be done. Why cannot we manage in some way to procure a good man to come and work Masonry for us and try to get the ball moving?

"Come over into Macedonia and help us."

Making a Start.

The readers of the Cynosure may be interested to know that I am getting somewhat established in my new home and my new field of labor. I have organized two Sabbath schools in our happy valley, and one Congregational church. The church is weak as yet, but there is good hope of growth. Thus far by a favoring Providence we are free from the popular evils of secretism and tobacco. We must now build, which will be hard on us, as we are few and poor; but we hope to be able to put up a church on a cheap plan in a few weeks.

On the Fourth of July I held a Sabbath-school picnic in a beautiful grove. We met under the shade of a large spreading walnut tree. The exercises were mostly by the Sabbath-school children. We had a very pleasant, and I hope a profitable time, and all went home well pleased. But the most noticeable thing about the occasion was that it was the first picnic ever held in this section of country. On the Fourth of July a year ago there was but one family within twenty miles of there; this year we had about a hundred people present. Thus far this beautiful valley has fully met my most sanguine expectations.

A Friend's Protest.

As noticed in our religious news last week the Free Methodist church of Winona, Iowa, which has been worshiping in the school-house of that place, lately received a notice that they might be soon locked out. The school board was reinforced against religion last spring by the election of a Freemason who is also a Quaker. The order of Friends in Winona is badly corrupted by the lodge, being the shelter for Masons, Odd-fellows, grangers and others. The notice of the directors is printed herewith and a reply by Nathan Thomas, a Friend, who is true to the principles of his society:

Winona, 5th Month, 11, 1879.

Friend Carl:—The school board has had under consideration for some time the manner in which many of your meetings at this school house have been conducted; and believing as they do that all religious organizations should be conducted in a spirit of religious charity, and so soon as that principle is departed from the seeds of discord and want of harmony is at once sown in the community, as has been the case in this vicinity since these meetings have been held here. The quiet order of the Society of Friends (near by) have been abused and vilified, and many uncharitable remarks have been indulged in, calculated to stir up feelings not commendable. Now it is the opinion of the board, and that opinion is widespread, that when the evil growing out of those meetings are fraught with evil instead of good, they should be discontinued. We would further say, that should those wielding an influence in your meetings, and who seem to be the parties complained of by their uncharitable remarks, conclude to quietly pursue the even tenor of their way, leaving others in the full enjoyment of their inalienable rights, we have no disposition to withhold the use of the house; but unless we have some assurance of that change our decision is unalterable, for we fully believe that more evil than good has so far been the result of those meetings.

Most respectfully,

Theo. Russell,
B. F. Fenton,
John R. Cooper.

Reply.

Fifth Month, 20, 1879.

To Benjamin Fenton, Theodore Russell and John R. Cooper:

Having seen a paper with your names to it, and directed to the pastor of the Free Methodist church, predicting to him as to the government of his meetings held in our school house; complaining against the moral bearing of said meetings; threatening to withdraw your privilege for the use of the house [I wish to reply.]

Now I have attended a good number of those meetings and have not seen or heard anything but civil and Christian behavior on the part of those who compose those Methodist meetings, in short I thought other professors here might learn from their serious deportment and exemplary manner; neither did I observe anything on their part but consistency with their discipline and order as a religious society recognized by and having a right to the common protection of our laws. But I have seen a considerable amount of disorderly and uncivil behavior, not of their society, in and about the meeting. I have heard friend Carl (the Free Methodist minister) reprove and try to restrain the same.

First, let us consider what the privilege of religious denominations are. Do not each have a common right to hold forth their conscientious opinions in their own way, so they keep the peace, doing unto others as they would have others do unto them; with free liberty to reason and discuss any or all moral or religious tenets of faith and practice, held by their neighboring associations; also to pass their judgment thereon amongst themselves, and not to be interfered with by others without their consent, thus leaving truth and reason at liberty to assail and defend any or all doctrines and practices, depending upon the wisdom and candor of the people to judge and choose for themselves? This is one of the God-given liberties of our American Constitution and State laws, for which our forefathers suffered and prevailed when they burst the united shackles of king and priestcraft, allowing free toleration of parties in religion, requiring all to keep the peace; otherwise the tongue, the pen and the press are free. Well, we expect more from the law of God than from the law of men; at least the former should exceed the latter. The religious body which does not keep its members civil and orderly toward others, is unworthy a name in the Christian family, not having done its first work.

Now as officers of law and active members of religious society, why should you lock your civil and religious neighbors out of their own house—or at least a house in which they have equal rights with yourselves—when no breach of the peace can be claimed? Why not come out honorably and defend your assailed institutions, according to true republican principles, by proving that you have the power of truth and conviction on your side (instead of flying to the secular power which cannot decide in religious controversy) thus you would show men that you were in the right, and your religion would be the victor, and so gain converts. Do not deceive yourselves; this stale and weak argument of force, of locks, bolts, prisons and fines have had their reign, and unless the lodge prevails, and we are going back again to the weak and beggarly elements, must not be used in truth's battles; for none who are made wise (which means free in Christ) will, or can use them; for they have no convincing power in religion, they can only make hypocrites.

Still further permit me to speak to you as members and officers in a religious association called Friends, one of you holding the highest post in the gift of the society. Who would have ever thought that the children of Fox, Penn and Barclay with their suffering coadjutors and reformers would have so fallen. Go follow them to their meeting-houses and places of worship; from thence to the magistrates, guarded by soldiers; thence to prison and the loss of all earthly inheritance, to banishment from home, cruel whippings, death on the gallows, listen to their soul-stirring appeals for mercy and justice, with liberty to worship God as the light in their conscience led them, unmolested so long as they kept the peace; mark their forgiving spirit, and hear them pray for their persecutors.

Let me say again, who would have thought their great-grandchildren would have so turned the tables as to find it necessary to use locks and civil authority to defend their religion against a civil, a religious, and a praying people. If there is not a birth of persecution here, then I am not acquainted with its species. Well, strange as it may seem, yet 't is true. Do not then blame those whom you deem your enemies, if they should show forth that you have lost the sword of the Spirit, and in your distress for a crumbling, Christless church, are gathering up the carnal power to defend it with. Heaven will bear witness to the line. When the final Judge is set, and the book of life is opened there will be found prayers ascended from the Free Methodist altar on your behalf. I was there one evening when a member of your church so outraged the Christian and the gentleman as to abuse some who took part in the religious exercises of the meeting, reviling and personating by name, when the man so assailed, instead of retaliating kneeled and prayed for all. I am aware that the skeptic who never prays will call this hypocrisy. But who art thou who judgest another man's servant. Sure the sword of the spirit is turning against you; be wise and surrender; submit to it or it will cut you off from God forever. Do not think to hide behind some tree or fig-leaf covering. You cannot stop the Word of the Lord; it will find you out. You may try to stop the mouths of those whom you hate for no other cause than that they have told you the truth, having themselves forsaken the sins in which you live, and are now reproving you. These are wielding the sword of the Lord which he has given them, and are therewith slaying you. Don't think you can lock it out of your meeting houses and school-houses, nor by putting the black coat on its bearer, by slandering them in the churches, in the groceries, at the base-ball clubs, and the social parties. O do not deceive yourselves by using Satan's armor! Lay it aside. You cannot conquer in this way. But be assured it is the Lord's work ye are opposing; so you cannot put it down. Or if he should permit you seemingly to triumph for a while, to more and more purify his servants, be it known to you we will not bow down to your idols and images, nor worship them, to wit: Universalism, Freemasonry, Odd-fellowship, with their kindred secretisms; but we hope through the Lord's help to be able to live sober, honest, and upright lives, let our enemies say what they may of us.

Some of you may say, you are not in those things; but you fellowship them and do their work, so you will be judged with them, which is just, for you turn your sword against the innocent. It has been for years that sin could not be rebuked in your church without a rebellion, running out of the house and much disorder if sin was touched, yet all this went unrebuked on your part; these are still fellowshiped and caressed whilst honest supporters of truth's testimonies have been driven away, also many tender ones. My heart aches whilst I write. Those rebellious youths who behaved basely towards the ancient and honorable, these are called the lambs by the will-be leaders, and the tender lambs are scattered (as to the church), but he who regards the sparrows will, if they are faithful, gather them home to his bosom.

Well, I thought I was done with you when I left, but as Paul's prayer for Israel, after the flesh, was that they might be saved, so is mine that all those nominal Friends may yet be gathered, and none be lost. There are none of God's children who say, I don't want to go to heaven if those whom I hate go there. There will be none requesting to have this one put in some other mansion. Nay, all this feeling must be burned up on this side of the first resurrection, else they must come under the power of the second death.

Your well-wishing friend,

Nathan Thomas.

How Shall the U. B. Church have Rest?

ELWIN, Ill.

EDITOR CYNOSURE: — There appeared some months ago a tract from the pen of Rev. W. J. Shuey of Dayton, Ohio, in which he suggests a substitute for our present law on secrecy, and other features of our church polity, which he seems to think, if adopted, would prove to be a perfect solution of the above inquiry.

All that the so-called modificationists ask is, (1) The admission of the minor orders, while they themselves would exclude the major, such as Freemasonry, Odd-fellowship, the Mollie Maguires, and similar orders. Yet they professedly regard all secret combinations as objectionable, and contrary to the spirit and simplicity of the Gospel. It is believed that the church of Jesus Christ is the Gospel church. How then can those to whom the preservation of the purity of the church is committed, admit that which they believe to be contrary to the spirit of the Gospel? But then the author of the proposed substitute may say that he is opposed to the admission of any, but would make the greater prohibitory and the lesser advisory. But why make fish of one and fowl of another, when all are contrary to the spirit and simplicity, and we may with equal propriety say, the letter of the Gospel?

It is true that Bro. Shuey does recommend an advisory rule respecting the non-oath-bound secret societies, "if there be any." I would suggest that we look after the observance of the rules of that character that we already have. We have an advisory rule on extravagance in dress, but it is difficult to discriminate between United Brethren and members of churches that have no such rule, or persons outside of all the churches, respecting dress. We also have a rule advising our people to receive cheerfully the preachers sent them by their respective conferences. Is it always observed? If not, is the rule enforced? If so, by what authority?

My observation is that an advisory rule, or law, is equivalent to no law at all. And it is unreasonable to suppose that preachers or members who will defiantly disregard a a prohibitory law would observe an advisory rule respecting the same thing. Therefore I contend that to enact an advisory law respecting secret societies of any class or grade is to virtually throw wide the door of the church to the reception of all the orders included under such law. And this may be the reason for so much clamor for an advisory rule.

The proposed substitute recommends pro rata representation and lay delegation in the General Conference, and also that two-thirds of the votes cast shall authorize a change in the constitution of the church. Now these principles sum up all that is involved in the present spirited agitation, and an overwhelming majority in this church are called upon to surrender the whole for the sake of "peace."

And these latter principles though supported as distinct issues, are unquestionably identified with the main issue (the secrecy question) for they were not introduced in the present contest, until after the advocates of modification were hopelessly defeated on the secrecy question, as a single-handed issue. If not a direct, there is an indirect corroboration of these principles. Between the time of the election of delegates to, and the sitting of the General Conference of 1873, there was undoubtedly an understanding between modification delegates, that they would not agitate the secrecy question direct, unless it should be forced upon them; but that they would strike for pro-rata representation, lay-delegation and the two-third vote for change of constitution. Those points once gained, the secrecy question would be a light task. It is a fact that a proposition of the above character was made through correspondence between delegates of the modification type, and if necessary the names of the parties can be given. It is unnecessary that I attempt to show up the relation of these principles to the secrecy question; but it is enough to know that nearly all of the old and populous conferences of of the East, are in favor of modification.

It is a fact that none of these issues, though they are professedly supported for the satisfaction and benefit of the laity of the church, were, either directly or indirectly, introduced by them; but by a restless, discontented ministry, unsolicited by the laity; and it is equally true, that nine-tenths of the secrecy and sympathy for it, that now exists in this church, is traceable to the recreant conduct of many of our preachers, both in their conversation and administration.

But let the source of its existence be what it may the thing is upon us, and it is for this church to say whether she will rise higher in point of moral purity, power and influence, or sink down into the depths of infamy and corruption, and make herself a stench in the nostrils of right-thinking men the world over.

I may at some future time make some suggestions on the proper way out of this dilemma.

The United Brethren Rule and the Good Templars.

AMBOY, Ill.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:— In your issue of July 3d is an article in defense of the law of the U. B. church on secrecy by J. S. Yaukey. By your permission I will add a few words in the same direction. All secret societies (so far as I know) place the ground for hope of future happiness on the fidelity with which the obligation of the fraternity is kept.

Let us take an illustration from the Good Templar's ritual. After the obligation is taken, an officer of the lodge says to the candidate (I quote from memory): "The Geod Templar's vow is recorded in heaven; as you hope for happiness in this world or the world to come, keep your vow." The purport of this language is, that the order of Good Templars have an official recognition in heaven. Their recorder is an officer before the throne, making up the records for the great judgment, when the dead shall be judged out of those things which are written in the books ("The vow is recorded in heaven"). This is blasphemous, and the balance of the sentence is substantially another Gospel, thus, "As you hope for happiness in this world and the world to come; keep your vow." That is, if the Good Templar keeps his vow, he may hope for heaven, and that independent of all the provisions of the Gospel, and if he does not keep his vow he need not hope for happiness in any other way, not even by repentance toward God and faith in Christ. This certainly is another Gospel, and Paul says, "But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel * * let him be accursed." (Gal. 1: 8).

Here are two reasons. each amply sufficient to justify the United Brethren rule on secrecy, or for closing the door of any church, that believes in salvation only through Jesus Christ, against all members of secret societies.

Review of "A Notice of Eld. J. Franklin Browne."

[The Warren (Ill.) Sentinel having printed a long personal attack on our Illinois lecturer, the following reply was written and sent to the editor, who had promised to print a rejoinder. Notwithstanding, this reply was ungenerously refused.]

The editor of Warren (Ill.) Sentinel in the issue of May 8, says in his "Notice of Eld. J. Franklin Browne," tha the "is one of the Anti-masonic lecturers . . . who have created more or less unpleasantness in different parts of the State," that he is one of those who "fatten most upon the enmity and ill-feeling they can create in neighborhoods where the charitable order of Freemasonry exists," that he belongs to a "small minority of men . . . . who in their published works assert their belief, in effect, that all societies and organizations, other than their own, are wrong and unnecessary," and who "not only oppose the Masonic order, but missionary, temperance and all other organizations of kindred nature," besides making many other false statements.

It is true that Anti-masonic lecturers "have created more or less unpleasantness in different parts of the State" for the secret orders, and they have done it in Warren. Evidently they have accomplished this for Mr. Gann, the editor of the Sentinel, who cannot bear to see the poor Masonic goat exposed to the scorn and detestation of a cruel public without feeling "more or less unpleasantness." All systems of veiled iniquity resent inquiry, and so Masonry, one of the chiefest of the "works of darkness" cherishes a great deal of "enmity and ill-feeling" towards those who expose and reprove it as the Apostle Paul admonishes Christians to do.

Mr. Gann charges Eld. Browne with belonging to a "small minority of men." It would be well to remember that Christ says, "Strait is the gate and narrow is the way that leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it." True reformers are ready to be of the few. This minority, however, consists of the membership of the United Brethren, German Baptists, Wesleyans, Free Methodists, United Presbyterians, Reformed Presbyterians and other denominations that stand with God squarely against the lodge, besides the thousands of other Christ and citizens who oppose secret societies, although not connected with organizations that do so, as is the case with many in Warren.

Mr. Gann says that Anti-masons "in their published works assert their belief, in effect, that all societies other than their own are wrong and unnecessary, and that is all that is needed for man's welfare." What Mr. Gann refers to by his first "that" is not easily told. Whether he means some one of the great denominations opposing the lodge, or the National Christian Association, or some one of the fourteen State Associations, we leave others to decide. But in the above quotation Mr. Gann shows a foolish disregard of truth. If he would read the Anti-masonic "published works" from which he professes to get his information, he might learn that Anti-masons are actively engaged in the promotion of temperance and Christian missions, and in favor of every work that advances truth and righteousness.

But Mr. Gann's most weighty argument is his attempt to draw salt tears from the readers of the Sentinel by inventing a picture representing a terrible Anti-mason savagely proclaiming to a poor Masonic preacher, "If you will not denounce your charitable brotherhood, your wife shall go hungry and barefoot from my door, and when your children cry for bread will I give them a stone, and you with your classical education will I see totter famished and in want," etc. Another moving appeal like that of Mr. Gann's may be found in Acts 19: 25-27 where Demetrius says to his fellow-craftsmen: "Sirs, ye know that by this craft we have our wealth. Moreover ye see and hear, that not alone at Ephesus, but almost throughout all Asia, this Paul hath persuaded and turned away much people saying that they be no gods which are made with hands: so that not only this our craft is in danger to be set at naught, but also that the temple of the great goddess Diana should be despised," etc. Mr. Gann sees that the Masonic craft "is in danger to be set at naught," that Masons are in danger of losing their control of our courts of law, our legislative bodies, and our churches, and he fears the coming of the time when a man's real worth and not his Masonic standing will decide his fitness for public office. "Our craft," thinks Mr. Gann, "is in danger to be set at naught," and so he tries to bolster it up by arguing that 'twould be murderous for Christians to refuse to support Masonic preachers. Why don't Mr. Gann denounce as murderous our missionaries who are doing all they can to get men to withdraw their support from preachers who hold up any other religion than that of Christ? Why don't he tell us of the "spirit of murder" that must fill the hearts of those Christian ministers who are doing their utmost to take away the employment of Roman Catholic priests, and thus compel those gentlemen "with their classical education" to "totter famished," etc.? If Mr. Gann's argument is true, then what a hardened wretch the Apostle Paul must have been to deliberately set about breaking up the business of Demetrius and his fellow-craftsmen, so taking from them their livelihood, and "in effect charging his hearers to starve women and children," simply because the heads of their families made shrines for Diana!

Mr. Gann says he "has never known Masons to advise the punishment of any class of people for mere opinions' sake, no matter what their profession." The profession of the "Latter Day Saints" is that polygamy is right, and accordingly they practice it. Shall we adopt Mr. Gann's reasoning, and say that it will never do to abolish polygamy in Utah, for we might thereby starve women and children, simply because the head of the family was a Mormon? According to Mr. Gann's talk, what a blood-thirsty wretch the Prophet Elijah must have been, who slaughtered on Mt. Carmel 850 priests, who were "by education and life-long experience fitted only for the ministry" of the sun-god, turning out their widows and orphans to shift for themselves. Masonry, which according to high Masonic authority is derived from sun-worship, would never have advised that those 850 priests should lose their lives simply because they taught men to worship the god of the sun. But God has decided differently (see Deut. 18:20 and Zech. 13:2, 3,) and Elijah did as God commanded in ridding the land of those false teachers, who were desroying the people. Paul did right in exposing the priests of Diana, even though he thereby ruined the business of Demetrius and his fellow-craftsmen. Our missionaries do right in getting men not to support false teachers, even though these teachers may thereby lose their living. What, then, is the duty of Christians in regard to supporting preachers who belong to the Masonic or any other anti-Christian institution? The Lord says, (2 John 9,) "Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God." If it be true that, speaking politically, a man who abides not in the doctrine of the Constitution of the U. S. is not a true and loyal American citizen, then what further proof of a man's disloyalty would be needed than to show that he holds to communism, for instance, or to any political doctrine not sanctioned by the Constitution? Now it is very clear that Masonry "abideth not in the doctrine of Christ," since it teaches other doctrines and another plan of salvation, and rejects Christ, and hence, as surely as the Bible is true, Masonry "hath not God," and Masonic preachers by upholding Masonry "abide not in the doctrine of Christ," and show themselves disloyal to him. The duty of Christians toward such preachers is plainly told in 2 John 10:11, where God says, "If there come any unto you and bring not this doctrine, [the pure doctrine of Christ] receive him not into your house, neither bid him God speed: for he that biddeth him God speed is partaker of his evil deeds." If Masonic ministers get in want and need charity, then it becomes the duty of Christians to relieve their distress, just as they should relieve Mormon preachers in distress; not in either case because they are preachers, but because they are fellow-men in need, and we should "do good unto all men." But Christians cannot countenance or support the preaching of Masonic ministers, nor "bid them God speed," because "he that biddeth them God speed is partaker of their evil deeds." "Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord." (2 Cor. 6: 17.) Let us "obey God rather than man."

OUR MAIL.

T. W. Copeland, Philadelphia, Penn., writes:

"I generally circulate the Cynosure among the oath-bound fraternity. They all testify to the murderous character of Freemasonry by saying the man who would expose the order could not live after so doing."

D. C. Jordan, DeSoto, Iowa, writes:

"Put me down as a worker in this reform during the war, or during my lifetime. Yours for more light and no compromise."

John Willdee, Selma, Ala., writes:

"My people need more morality, and the welfare of the race demands the destruction of whatever opposes its attainment. Notwithstanding the high claims of Masonry and Odd-fellowship to morality, daily experience proves them to be but lying pretenders. 'By their fruits ye shall know them.' I regret much that the pastor of the A. M. E. church is connected with the Odd-fellows, for he certainly seems to be a very good man. His connection with the order leads the people to think the institution harmless. You will do me a favor if you will inform me how the colored people got knowledge enough to set this order up among themselves, and whether it is the same among both colored and white. I think that if it can be made clear to the colored people that these secret institutions are a false religion, and it only squanders money to unite with them, they will be saved from a voluntary servitude."

The colored Masonic lodges got their charter originally from England, as no Grand Lodge in this country would recognize them as brethren. We believe the Odd-fellow lodges among the colored men are authorized from the same source, but have no positive information.

Thos. McLaury, Deposit, N. Y., writes:

"I wish to do all I can to advance the cause of reform."

Elder Joel H. Austin, Burlington, Iowa, orders a second copy of the Cynosure and writes:

"I find it almost impossible to get along with one copy, as I generally want to keep one for reference, and I want one to distribute. I frequently find those who have never seen the paper, and don't know as there is such an organization as one opposed to secret societies. I even find those who are opposed to secretism, and who think themselves almost alone, and some who think that Masonry is a terrible institution, and wonder that men dare unite to oppose it. I am made to feel that many feel it to be the terror of the land, and that it operates so stealthily that it is dangerous to oppose it, and that we as a nation and a people are in danger if we let it alone. We must make ourselves better known. I feel that we, at least in DesMoines county, have been very unfortunate in our organization. We have but one man, the Hon. S. A. Flanders, that is an active worker. My sympathy amounts to pity for ministers who are strong Anti-masons when there is no foe to fight, and who may be so good and clean, that they are afraid of raising a dust if anything is said against the institution. Their own churches being free they have quiet at home and let us poor fellows fight the battle of the Lord without them. If this reform work is of God, then God calls men to go and cry aloud, and he calls on men to sustain the work."

Warren Taylor, Milnersville, Ohio, writes:

"I have just successfully worked the first degree before one hundred men, and am following it up with three special lectures on different phases of the subject. The dust flies and the muttering thunder is ominous. But truth is mighty."

LESSON XXXI.—AUG. 3.—THE MINISTRY OF RECONCILIATION.

SCRIPTURE.—2 Cor. 5: 14-21.

14 For the love of Christ constraineth us; because we thus judge, that if one 15 died for all, then were all dead: | And that he died for all, that they which live should not henceforth live unto themselves, but unto him which died
16 for them, and rose again. | Wherefore henceforth know we no man after the flesh: yea, though we have known
Christ after the flesh, yet now hence-
17 forth know we him no more. | Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become 18 new. | And all things are of God, who hath reconciled us to himself by Jesus
Christ, and hath given to us the min-
19 istry of reconciliation; | To wit, that God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them; and hath committed unto us the word of reconciliation.
20 Now then we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us: we pray you in Christ's stead,
21 be ye reconciled to God. | For he hath made him to be sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in him.

SUGGESTIONS.

"The First Epistle to the Corinthians was written from Ephesus in the spring of A. D. 57, during Paul's third missionary tour. Soon after writing it he left Ephesus, going into Macedonia, where, either during the summer or autumn of the same year, he wrote the second epistle. It is supposed that it was written from Thessalonica or Philippi, but from which it is not certainly known."

He left Asia (2 Cor. 1: 8) and came by Troas (chap. 2: 12), and from thence sailed into Macedonia. At Troas he expected to meet Titus (chap. 2: 13) with intelligence from the church at Corinth, but the meeting took place in Macedonia (chap. 7: 5, 6), where he learned the effect produced by his first epistle (chap. 7: 7-16.) The report was favorable and the well-disposed had been humbled by his reproof, but his enemies were the more embittered. He intended visiting the church and wrote this second letter to comfort the true saints and make plain his own authority, and if possible win over his enemies.

Our lesson chapter is closely connected with the one last studied. From the doctrine of the resurrection in 1 Cor. 15, we may almost be said to pass to the experience of it in 2 Cor. 5. The trials and sufferings of chap. 4, called "light afflictions," lead us to look "not at the things which are seen," but to "the things which are not seen," even the eternal realities. Then we move, as it were, out of the old house into the new. This tent, our earthly tabernacle, is taken down. We seem to feel the cords loosen, and the tent-pins remove, and, while the covering is being folded away, the heavenly house seems to descend and cover us, that we may not appear naked (uncovered). And lest we should think the Apostle wished for death he declared that he did not. He was not desiring that unclothing, but rather the clothing upon. He did not look for death, but for the coming of his Lord, that in a moment he might be changed; putting off the old and putting on the new "in the twinkling of an eye."

From this he draws the lesson of this ministry. Because "we"—Christians and none others, "we" of verses 1, 2, 3, 6, 9, 10, and all the twenty-six "we's" of this precious chapter; we, who know that we have a building of God; we must all stand before the judgment seat of Christ, (not to be judged as to the question of life or salvation, for that is settled), but as to our stewardship or service rendered for Christ, to receive our reward. Therefore "we labor;" therefore "we are ambassadors for Christ;" and therefore "we beseech you to be reconciled to God."

A Curious and Interesting Question by a Lady.

"I have not read the "Image of the Beast," but have long held the opinion that Masonry is that image of popery. But what I want to know is, how the devil himself could make an image of a thing before that thing existed? for Baal was centuries before Roman Catholicism. How then is Masonry both Baal worship and the image of popery, which was centuries later? As well might an artist have drawn the picture of a man two hundred years before his great-grandfather was born. Please, Cynosure, answer and explain.

HANNAH D. CHAPMAN.

ANSWER.

The real Baal is the devil, the god of all idolatrous worships (See Deut. 32: 17, and 1 Cor. 10: 20); and from the serpent of Eden to the red dragon of the Apocalypse, Satan appears under a variety of forms. Being a spirit, he adapts himself to his times, his victims, and his work; and he is thus Baal to Syrians, a "beast" to Papists, its image to Freemasons.

"Coming events cast their shadows before." The Jews were puzzled to know how Christ could be the son of Mary, born at Bethlehem in their day, and at the same time have lived in the time of Abraham: And they said to him, "Thou art not yet fifty years old, and hast thou seen Abraham?" (John 8: 57.) He replied to them that he was before Abraham. He appeared to Joshua as "Captain of the Lord's host," as before he had appeared to Adam and Eve as the Lord walking and talking like a man in the garden. And whenever the infinite and eternal God appears more humano (in human form) he is Christ. In the stupendous visions of David, Ezekiel and Isaiah, he assumes mightier and more terrific forms of manifestation. But his appearings are always worthy of himself, in all holiness, goodness, and truth.

The devil, on the contrary, is a Proteus, hiding his hateful presence as thieves put on disguises; but in all shapes they are thieves.

Baal is a Syriac word, older, perhaps, than the Hebrew, and means "God," or "Lord," in general, without Christ. The word means nearly the same as the French infidels meant by the word "Deity," a nature god, such as Cain worshipped, or "Grand Architect," or creative force, a thing of the imagination of men, whose worships and "weak hopes" make their gods, as their fears make their goblins and devils. The devil looks over the false shrines of worship and the imaginary deities of men, and presents himself to the worship of men whenever and wherever he finds a soul on its knees, or in the act of worship, whether the false object of his homage be a fancied "deity" or "Baal;" an imaginary "architect," a living monkey, or a mitred priest with his stole on in confessional, or on his throne as cardinal or pope. Under each and all these forms he is a thief, and steals the soul's homage from the infinite and eternal God, who is only accessible through Jesus Christ, the one only "way," or "Mediator," by which a sinner can get back to his God.

"Thus he supports his cruel throne,
By mischief and deceit,
And drags the sons of Adam down
To darkness and the pit."

I hope this sister's question is answered, and several more questions vital to the subject and to our salvation. The man or mind which pours out its worship to a false object is lost for eternity unless rescued and brought back. And this reform furnishes the only true solution of the problem of the human condition. There are two systems, and but two. Christ is head of the one, and Satan the head of the other. "The things which the Gentiles [nations not Christian] sacrifice they sacrifice to devils, not to God." And while the devil was worshipped as the Syriac sun-god, or Baal, the prophet looked down through after ages and saw a persecuting "beast," or living force, followed by the lamb-dragon beast, or popery, and then a shadowy "image of the beast," and the devil was and is the vital power in them all.

Self-Ignorance.

O wad some power the giftie gie us
To see ourseis as others see us,
It wad frae monie a blunder free us,
And foolish notion. —BURNS.

Rev. W. J. Shuey says of his three close printed columns in the Religious Telescope (July 16 inst.): "The reader may justly ask: What has all this to do with the question under discussion? Simply nothing."

I propose to use this singular confession of a minister of Christ, and his article to which his confession refers, to illustrate a singular and almost universal phenomenon attending the spread of truth and the removal of error and abuse among men. It is boldly to accuse an opponent of the things of which the assailant is himself guilty. This was published in Portugal as one of the secret rules ("Secreta Monita") of the Jesuits; and whoever will take up a Romish paper, Catholic Review for instance, will see this rule boldly and constantly practiced. Take the following from Mr. Shuey's last:

"Demoralization seems to have seized Bro. Floyd. * * * He has suffered himself to fall into the Blanchard style of dealing in personal inuendoes rather than in dignified argument."

Now what is this but mere personal inuendoes" against Bro. Floyd and myself, of which Mr. Shuey seems utterly unconscious? Then a little on he drags out his brethren by the half dozen, and retails little picked up personalities such as these:

"When the first draft of that review of the tract came to the editor of the Telescope it was in the handwriting of W. O. Tobey, and bore the signatures of Dr. L. Davis, H. Floyd, W. Dillon and W. O. Tobey in the precise order in which they are here given."

With much more to the same effect. This publishing agent, honored and trusted by his brethren for fourteen years, leaves his counting-room and ledger, issues a private circular to some three hundred of his brethren, who, he thinks, may help break down the rule of his church against the "minor" secret lodges, and when this semi-clandestine circular is openly and fairly met and replied to by his brethren in the church organ, he learns from his Masonic foreman, or by other similar informants, and tells us who signed the article as originally uttered; gives their names, and (how important!) the order in which they were signed; and having filled three mortal columns with nothing but such "personalities," without, as he confesses, writing one word on "the question under discussion," charges "personality" on his brother Floyd as something so reprehensible and sinister that he must have caught the habit from myself! and this man talks of "dignified argument." Such for instance as this: "He (Bro. Floyd) appears to aim at little else than to cast sand into the eyes of the reader, and to smirch the name of his competitor [opponent] in this debate." And he fills up his three solid columns, printed at the expense of the subscribers, with like discourtesies and small disputations of irrevelant matters; which he has the candor to confess at the close, have nothing at all to do with "the question under discussion!" Let me not follow the example of his frailties, but entreat him as a brother to consider:

1. Whether the cool arrogance which he enjoys, while assailing his good brethren who are opposing the lodges, does not come from the same dark spirit which led Peter to "rebuke" Christ. (Mar. 8:32) Peter was evidently irritated because Christ was taking his cause where it would be unpopular and hard for his disciples to follow him.

2. To consider, in the second place, whether he is not making the heart of the righteous sad whom God hath not made sad. (Ezek. 13: 22.) When and where have you written anything so severe on the worst infidel Freemasons, as you are constantly writing against such men as Prof. Tobey, Dr. Davis, Bro. Floyd and others who seek to cast out false worships from the temple of God?

The last time I was in Cincinnati I went into the Masonic Temple to obtain a book of John D. Caldwell, a leading Freemason in Ohio. Perceiving that he took me for a Freemason, I told him I was not, but was opposed to the order. In our conversation which followed, this high official gentleman of the lodge remarked that Masons respected me for my sincerity; "For," said he, "you must be aware that we are disintegrating your churches!" This was both frank and true. The 400 Ohio lodges are "disintegrating" the churches. What are you doing or writing which excites their opposition or displeasure? Of all hollow things, his bravery is the most hollow who is bold to rebuke Christ's servants.

"Of all reformers with which earth is cursed
Those who reform reformers are the worst."

Epidemics.

Clean the streets. Dredge the river. Abolish the dram shops. Slaughter the dogs before they go mad. But don't forget that secret rings, and especially Freemasonry, are robbing more men of justice and screening more rascals from punishment by secret accomplices in the municipal administration of Chicago than all the victims of yellow fever a thousand times told. Chicago is ruled by ring-masters. Our Mayor has taken seven degrees, and has sworn to recognize and obey the distress sign of a brother Mason at the peril of his own life. Our Comptroller is an actual member of the Supreme Council of Scottish Rite Freemasons in the United States. Many of our city officials have taken a secret oath of mutual succor and aid in the lodge, which Rob. Morris says, "no law of the land can effect." This is the epidemic most to be dreaded. It is the "pestilence that walketh in darkness and wasteth at noonday;" which is sweeping through our city and over the whole land, infecting the hearts and perverting the administration of Democrats and Republicans alike. The lodge should be abated like any other public nuisance, and no man should be allowed to vote or hold an office who is bound, as every Freemason is, to prostrate his influence and use his authority in the defense or promotion of a brother of the order, "whether he be right or wrong."

—Enoch Honeywell, whose natural force seems not to abate with years, has been spending the past winter with his son, in Hoopeston, Ill. He returned during the early days of the month to Altay, N. Y., where he is laboring with the zeal of youth, though nearly 90, in the reform so near his heart. His sister, aged 93, is failing in health, and looking heavenward with hope.

—The incessant labor connected with his duties in the Normal Institute at Wheaton, have prevented Prof. Blanchard from supplying our readers with a sermon for two or three weeks. As the work of writing out these discourses after their delivery has been on his part without any hope of present reward, we cannot of course complain, but shall patiently hope that he will soon be able to resume the preparation of his sermons for the press. Meanwhile their place will be occasionally supplied by addresses appropriate for our columns and profitable to their readers.

—Rev. John Miller, the reform veteran of Wauseon, O., has just passed through a severe trial triumphantly. He has been compelled to defend himself in court against a blackmailing demand for $10,000—the first law-suit he ever had. The plaintiff was unable to find any witnesses outside her own family and the jury soon decided the case against her, though the opposing lawyers were Masons as were also several of the jury, and Father Miller's principles are pretty well known in Wauseon. But the case was so clearly an outrage that the popular voice was entirely against his calumniator, who found it convenient to leave the place soon after for some more congenial community.

—F. R. Hill of Oregon, an outspoken opponent of the lodge, has also been lately successful in a case in court where his opponent was a Freemason.

Lodge Notes.

—An Odd-fellow lodge has lately been organized at Oberlin.

—The lodge editor of the Inter-ocean lately advised a correspondent to join all the lodges he could, but if could not afford "so much mysticism choose the one whose members are the most respectable and virtuous" in the community. The lodge is so fond of comparing itself with the church, try it here. What conclusion would every one draw respecting the morality of the churches if the Inter-ocean should advise a friend to join "the most respectable and virtuous" church in town.

—At the 36th Grand Lodge meeting in Iowa, Mr. Parain was continued secretary; nine new lodges had been granted a dispensation and twice as many refused. The Iowa Masons are in a quarrel with the Grand Lodge of Scotland, which all the boasted brotherhood cannot smother—and all because the latter has granted charters in this country and got the money!

—Another secret insurance company has a "Grand Lodge" in Illinois. It is called "Independent Order of Mutual Aid," which may mean little or much, as you please. In any case it is a superfluity and a nuisance. If "mutual aid" means the ordinary assistance due to every human being comprehended in "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," then this attempt to enforce that command is a fraud. If it means such aid as Freemasonry affords it is still more a fraud, and one Masonic order is one too many.

Isaac Stearns.

This old Anti-masonic editor is dead. He died in Mansfield, Mass., his native town, on the 14th of June last, aged eighty-nine years and six months, lacking four days. Of his history we know but little personally, and therefore reprint from the Mansfield News the following sketch, which is evidently written by one who did not altogether sympathize with his reform views:

The subject of this sketch was descended from the Isaac Stearns who came to America in 1630 with Gov. Winthrop, and who was His Excellency's secretary. The Isaac just dead was the seventh of that Christian name and generation in this country. He had a literary turn and supplemented his common school education with reading and study, that years ago gave him the reputation of being the best scholar in Mansfield.

In early life he turned his attention to the development of the manufacturing interests of the town, which had been given an impetus throughout the country by the "embargo" and the subsequent war with England, and was an owner in what was called the "North Factory," and clerk of the company, which made cotton goods. The influx of foreign goods on the return of peace swept away many of these mills, among them this enterprise, leaving him seriously crippled financially. In 1818 he was married to Sarah Fillebrown, who survives him. They soon moved to Pawtucket and he engaged in the printing business, and finally became one of the editors and proprietors of the Providence Free Press, a violent Anti-masonic paper, which was continued after the Masonic excitement had subsided and until it financially swamped its proprietors.

In 1832, during the first cholera scare in this country, the family moved back to Mansfield.

Mr. Stearns was noted for his firmness and fearlessness in advocating what he considered right, and his pugnacious denunciation of what he believed wrong.

With him there was no middle ground, no degree in turpitude, no palliating circumstances; Calvinism with him went to seed when a boy.

He early espoused the anti slavery cause, and organized the "Mansfield Anti-Slavery Society." He procured C. C. Burleigh to lecture on the subject; which he did at East Mansfield, where there was disturbance by ringing of bells, etc. At the Center, in the old meeting house, Mr. Burleigh attempted to speak, but was effectually silenced by drums and horns; and, what is worthy of remark, the leaders of that riot afterward became the leaders in the Free Soil and Republican parties.

Soon after this Mr. Stearns published a book entitled "Right and Wrong in Mansfield," in which he printed the names of those openly in the mob—and those behind the scenes, including town officers and most prominent citizens. This created the most intense excitement and the author would probably have been lynched, but for the high esteem in which his wife was held, and regard for his children.

The anti-slavery cause becoming successful, Mr. Stearns returned to his early love, which, paradoxical as it may seem, was hatred for Masonry, and as his dotage came upon him nothing seemed to give him so much pleasure as to corner a "brother" and mercilessly criticize the fraternity. No one could be more provoking. On one occasion his thrusts were so exasperating, that a gentleman told him that if he was a younger man he would thrash him on the spot. "Ah," said the old man, "if I was younger you could not do it!"

He had an especial love for newspapers, and has left files of those he loved dating back many years. He kept a record of the weather for nearly fifty years. One year he represented the town in the legislature; but he was usually on the unpopular side.

He leaves a wife to whom he was indebted for preserving his home, and seven children, with a large number of grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Two of his sons were in the war of 1861, one of them dying from disease incident to exposure. Of the two remaining sons one of them is a physician in Milwaukee, Wis., and the other a clergyman in Cleveland, Ohio. M.

OBITUARY.

Died, at the residence of his father, C. R. Hagerty, 112 West Morgan street, Chicago, at 10 o'clock A. M. July 15, of consumption, H. B. Hagerty, in the 23d year of his age. The funeral services at the house were attended by a large number of friends, several of whom accompanied his remains to their last resting place at Rose Hill cemetery, where with two others, a brother and sister, they await the call of the last trump. In the death of Bro. Hagerty our cause will miss the earnest efforts of a devoted friend, who, though a great sufferer, was always cheerful and never shrunk from any duty which his strength would enable him to perform. When it was determined to open a free reading room in the N. C. A. building he was selected as the first superintendent, and the success of that enterprise is in no small degree due to his exertions. He continued in his position until failing health compelled a change, when with the advice of friends he went to Colorado, hoping to find benefit in that climate. But failing to regain his strength he returned to spend a few days with his relatives and numerous friends, and then pass quietly to that sleep which He giveth to his beloved. The family and relatives have the sympathy of all the friends who knew him, and others who read this article will join in the prayer that this affliction may be sanctified to the good of us who wait a little longer to carry on the battle from which our brother soldier has been released.

Grafts.

—No men are working with such energy, and with such success in gathering the children of our large cities into their schools, as the Jesuits of Rome. It ought to be an example as well as a source of alarm to our church that Rome counts 150,000 colored children in her schools in the South; 10,000 young men in her seminaries. 200 young colored men were recently sent to Rome to be educated for the priesthood; while it seems to be a burden almost too heavy for us to bear, to support a single school at Selma. Neglect in the training of the young is the point where our church is in the greatest danger at the present time. Let us not forget that if the children are lost all is lost.—M. A. Gault in Ref. Presbyterian.

—An edict went out from Secretary Sherman to the Republican party of Ohio, that questions of intemperance, religion and morality were to be excluded from politics, and the Cincinnati Gazette says: "If the question of temperance anti-temperance; Bible or anti-Bilbe; religion or anti-religion are to be dragged into the political arena, the results cannot fail to be damaging if not disastrous." But the ghost will not be laid and it is one of the most hopeful signs of the times that so many Christians dare to obey their conscientious convictions. The polished infidel, Judge Taft, was defeated in the Republican State Convention because of his infidelity.—The Trumpet.

—It is a fact that no real alive and earnest, and heartily enlisted man in any good work deems those who are called to lead in that work a hobbyist. It is a fact that when men are at heart opposed to reform and cannot meet and successfully combat the spirit or answer the arguments with which that reform is conducted, that, having nothing to say, they raise the scare-crow, shout after its advocate, "He rides a hobby! he rides a hobby!" * * * The truth is, every man who has a ruling passion to do good and glorify God which is the chief end of man, will manifest that ruling passion in making the moral evils of his age the object of his stern, uncompromising opposition and those things that in his heart he has learned to prize above rubies, as moral principles, the subject of his constant prayers, efforts and benedictions. In so doing, with a burning zeal for the glory of God, and the good of men, he will manifest to this cold, calculating, yet unthinking world, an enthusiasm in many a good work, that by the enemies of the truth will be regarded as bordering on fanaticism. He will be called a hobbyist. The world does not want the Christian to be in earnest in opposing its evils. Any manifestation of this earnestness is sure to be met with the belittling sneer, "He rides hobbies."—Sandy Lake News.

THE WORLD WOULD BE THE BETTER FOR IT.

If men cared less for wealth and fame,
And less for battlefields and glory;
If wri in human hearts a name
Seemed better than in song and story;
If men, instead of nursing pride,
Would learn to hate it and abhor it;
If more relied on Love to guide,
The world would be the better for it

If men dealt less in stocks and lands,
And more in bonds and deeds fraternal,
If love's work had more willing hands
To link this world to the supernal,
If men stored up Love's oil and wine,
And on bruised human hearts would pour it,
If 'yours' and 'mine' would once combine,
The world would be the better for it.

If more would act the play of Life,
And fewer spoil it in rehearsal;
If Bigotry would sheath its knife,
Till Good become more universal,
If custom, gray with ages grown,
Had fewer blind men to adore it;
If Talent shone for Truth alone,
The world would be the better for it.

If men were wise in little things—
Affecting less in all their dealings;
If hearts had fewer rusted strings
To isolate their kindly feelings;
If men, when Wrong beats down the Right,
Would strike together and restore it;
If right made might in every fight,
The world would be the better for it.

THE FAMILY CIRCLE.

CO-OPERATION AND SIMPLIFICATION.

(Concluded.)

"Very well said," I cried; "you talk like a man and a Christian. We women get up and moan and clank our chains occasionally, but we sit right down in them again, without the slightest effort to shake them off. Now if you can devise any solution to this terrible problem that can be carried out, the whole civilized world will be your debtor."

"I should be only too thankful to pioneer 'the whole civilized world' into this 'Land of Beulah,' he replied smiling, "but I am afraid that numerous experiments, and perhaps failures, must be the price of any thoroughly practical plan. I have been thinking of one plan, which works very well in Washington, and it seems to me might be attempted in smaller places. You remember my friend Dr. Strauss. He married and commenced practice in Washington, about a year ago. Last winter I had the pleasure of passing a day with him and his lovely wife. They had pleasant apartments in an agreeable location, and had their meals sent into them. Mrs. Strauss washed her pretty china herself at the breakfast table, while her husband and I chatted over the morning papers. Soon after breakfast we took a carriage and spent most of the day driving about to various places of interest, Mrs. Strauss accompanying us. We returned at four to find a delicious dinner smoking on the table five minutes after our arrival."

'Well,' I said, 'this is a most delightful arrangement. Pray are there many other families in Washington equally fortunate?'

"Oh, yes, indeed! The colored woman who provides our meals provides also for other families— from five to twenty, as the case may be. There are several other women also, who earn their living in the same way."

'How about the expense?'

'Well, the expense is moderate, very,' replied my host. 'It is a sort of co-operative affair, you perceive. If this woman provides for ten or twenty familes, purchasing supplies by the quantity, she is able to give each family a good variety, and to do the cooking, for only a trifle more than we could furnish and cook the same ourselves.'

'We thought at first we could not afford it,' said Mrs. Strauss, with charming frankness; 'so we took our apartments, and I cooked the meals myself by a gas stove; but I soon found that it cost only a little more to have my meals sent in; and I can earn the difference by embroidering neckties and fine laces, for which occupation I have a great fancy. Fanny (our colored woman) is really a better cook than I am, so our home is just as pleasant, and my husband thinks I have more time to devote to him, and am more agreeable because less tired.'

"I have been wishing ever since," continued James, "that there could be some such arrangement for Grace. Do you think we could inaugurate such a plan in this little town?"

"Well, I don't know, James. We might, possibly, if we could find a thrifty cook, and four or five sensible couples. But the wheat and the tares are always growing together in this world. If the wife has sensible ideas the husband may be a mule, who will neither be driven or led; or, on the other hand, the husband may be sensible, and the wife a goose. There aren't many who think as nearly alike as you and Grace; but I really think that more men than women could be found who would consent to such an arrangement. There are some men who are too selfish, exacting or penurious, to think of the comfort of their wives; but there are more women who put housekeeping first, and the culture of themselves and their children second. Now in home-life, I think it's very true that "man wants little here below," and that "little" is often a good meal and cheerful company. Let him come home to an orderly house, a cheery wife, well-trained children, and a good dinner, and he goes back to his business in a very short time, perfectly satisfied. He neither knows nor cares how often the windows are washed, and the paint cleaned. If the dinner is to his liking, it makes no difference who cooked it, and if his shirts and collars are washed and ironed to perfection, no matter who did it! Many a man would thankfully pay for having his cooking and scrubbing done, if he could come to an agreeable and sweet-tempered wife, instead of an overworked and peevish 'bundle of nerves.'

"Other women put common sense on the altar of fashion, and sacrifice it, with a great deal of mummery about the claims of society, and the necessities of their families. When sewing machines were invented we said: 'Now women can rest!' But no! Instead of finishing her child's dress with a broad hem around the bottom, Dora Viola must have fifteen ruffles, or forty-six tucks. The dear little girl, tired of play, and needing rest in mother's lap and a 'tory' is pushed away because the tucking or trimming for its little dress is incomplete. Oh, how sadly do such wives and mothers as these forget that 'the life is more than meat, and the body than raiment!'

'Yes,' said James, 'and if such women have company to tea, they think they must provide as if we had never eaten before, or could never eat again. And the principal variety is of cake and sweetmeats, which take so much time and labor that I often groan, as I sit down at a well-filled table to think how much of her time and strength my hostess has given to the concoction of dainties, which only set the stomach in a ferment. Now Grace is very sensible in these respects. She gives me simple but well-cooked food, with a great deal of fruit, and is wise about her housekeeping; but with the care of the baby, her strength is taxed too much even to do this."

"I know it is, James, and something ought to be done for her. Let us think it over, and see if we can't contrive some plan.

"After he went away I thought it over. First I tried to think of a first-class cook who would undertake to supply meals. Failing in this, another idea occurred to me. I said to myself,—here am I, alone in a great square house, with two large rooms each side of the front door, and a hall between, which is certainly wide enough to keep two families apart. I believe, also, that I know how to mind my own business. I am growing old and rheumatic, and feel the need of some help, and I don't see why Grace and I shouldn't divide the house, try co-operative housekeeping, and have a girl to help us both.

"Grace and James now pay a large rent, and hire their washing and ironing done. I could afford to give them part of this house at a moderate rent, the girl could do their washing and ironing, and I would share the expense of her wages and the fire; so, really, it would cost them no more to live, and Grace could have her work done for her.

"I proposed this plan to Grace and James, and after some deliberation they concluded to try the experiment for one year, at least. I have had the house altered a little (as I will show you by and by), so that both their dining room and mine open now into the kitchen, and there we have installed a domestic. There is a separate pantry for each, as we prefer to keep our supplies separate.

"We thought it best for the girl to have only one mistress, and that is Grace; while I act the part of eccentric boarder. My washing, ironing and sweeping are done for me, but I prefer to take my meals in my own dining-room. If I like the meals that are cooked, I take my portion and pay for it; if I choose to provide something else (and being an old maid, with crochets, I often do) I cook it myself by the same fire, but take care not to interfere with the arrangements of Miss Ann, who presides in the kitchen. She, however, is like Barkis, exceedingly 'willin,' and as I pride myself upon being too sensible to fret over little things, we work together nicely.

"In this arrangement there is only one man, and everything can bend to him. I don't know how it would work if there were two. Grace and I also think alike in most things, and are inclined to be reasonable. There, child, that's our plan for co-operative housekeeping," concluded my beloved aunt, briskly. "Now what do you think of it?"

"I think it's an excellent plan for you and Grace; but, perhaps you are not aware that you are exceptionally sensible and reasonable women."

"Well, well, I don't know about that; but I think some families ought to set an example—to start in the matter.

"Then James and I have succeeded in establishing a famous kitchen. You remember Adaline, who used to work for me so long ago, when my family was larger; well, she married a thrifty carpenter, and as they had no children they accumulated quite a respectable sum. Her husband died in the spring, and she came to me shortly after, saying that she was lonely, and wished to invest her money in a business of some kind which should take up her attention; 'but,' said she, 'I don't know what I'm fit for, unless it's cooking; that seems to be my forte.'

'Why, Adaline,' I exclaimed, you are the very woman I have been longing to find. According to my theories a first-class cook and a thrifty business woman, like you, is just what is needed to reform society. I wonder I hadn't thought of you before; for your bread, cake, pastry and doughnuts are always in demand at all our festivals. Now Liverpool is not such a very small town. We have three thousand inhabitants, and there are plenty of housekeepers that work too hard, I know. Let me go about among them and see if there are not quite a number who would like to have you make bread for them. Your bread is nicer than any Vienna bread I ever tasted. Have a room in your house fitted up for a first-class kitchen, and cook meals also through the hot weather. I don't doubt that you would make money, and you could manage such a business capitally.'

"She accepted my advice gladly, and began by making bread for a few families. They liked it so much that they recommended it to others; and now she has a good custom. People often engage her to make cake for company, and she supplies several families regularly with their meals. I urged her not to make a restaurant of her establishment; but to encourage home life by providing meals, only to be sent to people at their homes. Several ladies, and not a few gentlemen, have spoken to me of the establishment in the highest praise. One lady told me only yesterday that it was a great comfort to her to know that when she felt ill in the morning, all that she need do for dinner was to set the table, and a delicious meal could be placed upon it at just the hour she wished.

"If experiments must be tried before we can attain any practical results, 'in the name of advanced thought,' as Joseph Cook would say, do let them be tried, even though they prove failures! I would be thankful to know that there were co-operative stores all over the country; but far more would I rejoice to know that there were co-operative kitchens, laundries and dress-making establisments, so that women should have no further excuse for neglecting the higher interests of their families for the lower. The question is, For what are we put into this world? Is it to cover our bodies with knife-plaiting, ruffling, and tucking, and our tables with rich and unwholsome food? Is it to put all our energy into clear starching, fine ironing and incessant sweeping and dusting? Or is it to grow physically, mentally and spiritually?

"How those women who are entrusted with the charge of sweet little children can think it is of more importance that the house should be immaculately clean, and the child's dress ruffled, tucked and fluted, than it is that the child should have the companionship, instruction, sympathy and affection of the mother, is more than I can understand!

"And those wives who work upon their houses until every particle of dust and dirt has disappeared, and every grace of sweetness and vivacity is scrubbed out of themselves likewise, let them remember that they are constantly sacrificing the higher to the lower, and their husbands will soon find it out, and prefer more agreeable society. I believe, firmly, that woman's widest sphere of usefulness is in the home, and that she should make it the dearest and most delightful spot on earth; but to do this, she must have some plan for co-operation or simplification, which shall keep her body vigorous, her mind bright, and her soul turned toward the Son of Righteousness. Thus she may have judgment, patience, sympathy, vivacity, tact, and make her home a little heaven below."—Sunday Afternoon.

Childrens' Corner.

Carving a Name.

The children had been playing in the woods all the afternoon. They had been a band of gypsies for a while, when they made a fire and roasted some potatoes. Then they concluded to be Indians; they built a wigwam and shot a great quantity of imaginary game with their bows and arrows. After that they became civilized children once more, and played hide-and-seek among the bushes until they were tired enough to sit down and rest.

It never took Joe long to rest; and by and by he wandered away from the others, and finding a great smooth tree began to carve his name upon it as high as he could conveniently reach. It was slow cutting, and before he had finished it the others came to look at his work.

"Oh, cut my name too!" said Lily. "Won't you, Joe?"

"I haven't done my own yet."

"Well, you needn't cut it all; only make your first name, and then put 'Lily' under it," she coaxed.

"But, you see, I want my whole name, and real deep, too, so it will last for years and years," answered Joe.

"Never mind, Lily; I'll cut yours," said Fred, good-naturedly; and selecting another tree, he drew his knife from his pocket and began to carve the letters, while the little girl watched him.

"There! I've put mine where it will stay for one while," said Joe when he had completed his work.

"Fred has put his where it will stay too," said Aunt Lucy, who had been quietly looking on.

"Fred? I don't see where he has carved his name at all," answered Joe.

"Once upon a time—" began Aunt Lucy, leaning back against a tree.

"A story! a story!" laughed the children, gathering around her.

"Once upon a time," she repeated smilingly, "there was a very ambitious man. He knew that he must sometime die, but he did not want to be forgotten, so he determined to put his name where it would always last. Perhaps he began by carving it on a tree first; but the owner of the forest felled the tree, and his name was gone. Then he built a monument and graved his name on the top of it; but the lightning is drawn to high points, and his monument was shattered in a single night. Then he said, 'I will find the very highest and most solid mountain in all the world, and I will cut my name on its topmost rock, and then it will last.' So he traveled over oceans and plains, through towns and villages, to find the mountain. He passed tired people by the way, who asked him to help them; but he was too anxious about carving his name, and he would not stop. At last he found the highest mountain, and after long and toilsome climbing he cut his name on its top. Then an earthquake shook the mountain and tumbled great rocks from its summit to the valley below, and his name was swept away.

"Tired, disappointed and growing old, he said, 'It is of no use! Nothing on earth will last, and I will not try any more. I will be as happy as I can, and make others happy too, and think no more about my name.' So he began to help the poor, to feed the hungry and do deeds of kindness wherever he could, and people began to love him. One day a little girl said to him, 'I shall love you always for helping us so much; I'm sure I shall never forget you if I live a thousand years.'

"'But you will not live so long,' he answered, with a smile at the child who looked up to him so lovingly.

"'Yes, I shall—a great deal longer,' she said. 'Souls do not die, and I'm sure I'll remember in heaven, and I will remember you.'

"Then the man knew that he had now done what he had been trying to do for so long—put his name where it would not be forgotten; written it on something that could not be destroyed."

The children were silent, and after a minute Aunt Lucy added, thoughtfully, "But any one who had been living such a life of unselfish service to others—a true, good life—would have ceased to be anxious about his name by that time, because he would have learned to know the Lord, who says to all that serve him, 'The righteous shall be held in everlasting remembrance.'"

The Temperance Catechism.

"Now, children," said Mr. Knox to his class, "come close around me; I want to teach you a lesson."

So he taught them this lesson:

What is temperance?

It is the moderate use of such things as are good for food or for drink.

What more does it require?

Entire abstinence from such things as tend to our injury.

Are intoxicating liquors good for food or drink?

No, for 2,000 medical men have testified that they neither nourish the body, nor remove thirst, but are really injurious to persons in health.

What do we call the poison in intoxicating liquors?

Alcohol.

What liquors contain alcohol?

Distilled liquors, such as rum, gin, brandy and whisky; brewed liquors, such as porter, ale and beer; fermented liquors, such as wine and cider.

Is it wise and safe for us to use such drinks?

It is better to leave them untouched, for they are all injurious, and many thousands of precious souls are ruined by them every year in our country.

"And now," said he, "I will tell you a story.

"Once, in Africa, a boa-constrictor, which is an enormous serpent, captured a monkey; and as he coiled around and crushed the poor animal, its shrieks of pain were heard by its companions, and they all came near to see what was the matter and what they could do. Presently they all scampered off, then a noise was heard, and the monkeys were seen pushing at a rock that overhung the serpent. By and by they succeeded in starting it, and down it came, crushing the boa-constrictor beneath it.

"Now a single monkey could not have moved the rock, but the wise little creatures knew if all pushed together they would be able to move it, and thus destroy their common enemy.

"We too have a common enemy, very powerful, very dangerous. It is strong drink. One alone can not do much toward destroying it. But if we will all work together it can be done. And God will help us. He will make us strong; he will add his strength to ours, and by and by the great rock will move, and fall, and crush out the dreadful foe of intemperance.—Christian Worker.

A noble saying is told of a great man in the British House of Commons. This man had, by his own study and persevering industry, won his way to that high position. On one occasion, when an important debate was going on, he made a very able speech, which made a great impression on the house. A proud scion of the aristocracy was opposed to him, and very much offended that he had gained so much influence, and in trying to answer him he was mean enough to taunt him with his humble origin. Turning to him, he said, "I remember, sir, when you blacked my father's boots." "Well, sir," interrupted the other, "did I not do it well?" This was a noble response. He was of a very humble origin, but he was not ashamed of it. He learned to do everything, and to do it well, and this made him a great man.

An Historic Dog.

Among the ruins of Pompeii and Herculaneum the skeleton of a dog was found stretched over that of a child. It was conjectured on their discovery, that this dog, from his position, was attempting to save the child when the eruption of Vesuvius was fatal to the city. The opinion was confirmed by a collar which was found of curious workmanship; its inscription stated that the dog was named Delta, and he belonged to a man called Servinus, whose life he had saved on three occasions: first, by dragging him out of the sea when nearly drowned; then, by driving off four robbers who attacked him unawares; and lastly, by destroying a she wolf, whose cubs he had taken, in a grove sacred to Diana, near Herculaneum. Delta afterwards attached himself particularly to the only son of Servitus, and would take no food but what he received from the child's hand.

A farmer at Glenburn, Maine, purchased some supplies at Bangor, among which was a pint of whisky. To avoid breakage he placed the bottle in a box of rice, but found on reaching home that the bottle was broken and the rice saturated. He threw the rice behind his barn, and a big turkey soon paid his respects to it. In due time the turkey became dead drunk, and was found in that condition by the farmer, who thought that disease or poison had killed him. The bird was still warm and death evidently recent. The farmer would not eat him himself, but plucked him for market and left him on the table. The next morning he found the gobbler shivering naked on the roost, and looking on him with reproachful eyes.

Love crowns the heart, as flowers the brow.

THE FREEDMEN CHURCHES.

COLUMBUS, Miss.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I wish to say those who have prayed for the blessing of God upon the work among the freedmen of Columbus and vicinity, that their prayers have been heard. The work of God has been revived in their churches in Columbus, and quite a number have been hopefully converted. We have here a very efficient worker, Mrs. Merrill of Maine, who has done good distributing tracts, and who teaches Sabbath-school every Sabbath. She is doing much toward stirring up the people on the great necessity and importance of the work among the colored people. She and sister Hale conduct a weekly mother's meeting for the women. The ministers and Christians of Columbus have never before showed so much interest in this work. There is a very interesting school held near Caledonia at 4 o'clock every Sabbath afternoon, under the superintendence of Jas. Brownlee and S. B. Witherspoon. It is a very encouraging fact that the older Christians seem to be much concerned for the spiritual welfare of the young. The scholars are memorizing many Scripture verses.

The presence of the Spirit of God has been lately more manifest than usual at Pleasant Ridge church. There were eleven enquirers last Sabbath. I was with the Caledonia church last Sabbath and heard two very interesting discourses by colored ministers, Witherspoon and Brown, on the first verses of the lessons of the day; "Therefore being justified," etc. Their impassioned exhortations to disregard the frowns and scoffs of men and enjoy that glorious peace with God were truly delightful. One told how some would say that they could not do such and such duties; that men would trample upon them if they did. They would walk right over them. He showed how wrong it is to shrink from duty for present honor, and that we should be willing to wait, for our honor would come, and that now it is our duty to stand firm through all; looking forward to, and rejoicing in the hope of the glory of God.

Dear brethren and sisters in Christ, if any of you are shrinking from duty, or are discouraged and worn out by the persecutions and trials on your way, I wish you could have seen the joy that lit up the countenances of these men who so well know the meaning of poverty, persecution and contempt, as they looked forward rejoicing in hope of the glory of God. There will be honor enough in the world to come. Jesus says, 'Them that honor me will my Father honor."

I sent some tracts to an educated and very pious colored minister in one of our large Southern cities and urged upon him the duty of enlightening his race upon the danger of a second bondage to secret orders. He replied: "Concerning secret orders, I have only to say that one can scarcely meet any man here who does not belong to some one or other of these orders. They think it a great thing here, and having never learned what these orders meant, I had no idea that they were so exceeding sinful. I belong to none of them. I long for the communion of saints, and am a companion of them that fear God. If the terrible things stated in your tracts are true, then 'O my soul come not thou into their secret, unto their assembly, mine honor, be not thou united, for in their anger they slew a man.' "

I pressed this duty of saving the colored race from secret orders upon another prominent colored minister. His reply was: "Why, it would raise a war over my head right away." He had heard a celebrated clergyman in the North preach against secretism, and was convinced, but was not ready for the war. A devoted Christian lady recently admonished me kindly to stop circulating Anti-masonic tracts, and turn my whole attention to the other work. Her admonition fell like music on my ear, it was so kindly spoken, but I have found no one else to take my place, and feel that it is a work that should be done. I thanked her for her advice, and told her that if she would convince me that it was wrong I would stop immediately. If any one could prevail upon the editors of the papers for the colored people to advise their people against secret orders, it would keep many out of the lodge.

I still ask an interest in the prayers of Christians for the work here, and especially for Pleasant Ridge church and the Caledonia Sabbath-school, that they may enjoy a great outpouring of the Spirit of God.

MRS. ELI TAPLEY.

—Bro. J. P. Stoddard officiated at the funeral services at the residence of Mr. C. R. Hagerty last Wednesday afternoon. On Sabbath morning he preached in the College chapel at Wheaton at the request of Prof. C. A. Blanchard.

—Bro. A. Osgood of Lostant, Ill., writes that his hall in that place is devoted to Christian reform. Prof. E. D. Bailey of Wheaton, preaches in it every other Sabbath at 3 P. M. to the largest congregation in the place. On a table in the hall, free to all readers, is the Cynosure with tracts and other publications, proclaiming the truth as it is in Christ against the systems of pagan error.

CONGREGATIONAL.

—The First church at Oberlin, O., is fitting up a box of clothing for Rev. Mr. Emerson, a home missionary of Knox county, Nebraska. The necessitous condition of his family was presented by Mrs. Rev. Geo. Clark at the missionary meeting of the church, and the work of supply immediately begun.

—From the letter of Prof. Paul S. Feemster on another page it appears that he is at work in earnest for the establishment of Christianity in his new settlement as well as to secure a farm. Prof. Feemster's address is Pearlette, Meade Co., Kansas.

—Rev. George Huntington of Oak Park, near this city, has resigned after a nine years' pastorate, to accept the offer of the chair of Logic and Rhetoric in Carlton College, Northfield, Minn. His health is much impaired in constant labor with the Oak Park church with whom his relations have been of a very cordial character. Bro. Huntington in the last meeting of the Illinois Congregational ministers at Princeton, objected to the reading of Mr. Anderson's "Church and Lodge" paper, as leading to discussion, of which he had heard enough. We hope the new professor will enter Carlton College with a different temper. Secret societies are now prohibited there, but will soon enough find their way in if no opposition is made to them.

MENNONITE.

—Of the twenty-five Russian Mennonite villages in Manatoba an exchange says: "They are growing rich rapidly and prove the very best of citizens, settling all their disputes among themselves, and having in their colonies neither constable nor lockup.

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

—Rev. S. Collins for many years Superintendent of the U. P. Publishing House at Pittsburg, has retired. He will until October be in Xenia, Ohio. He says in a kind of farewell note to the churches: "It is now more than eleven years since my connection with the Board began. They have been years of care, of toil and unremitting attention. No "vacation" has ever been asked or offered. The interests of the Board have ever been paramount. Nothing of a worldly kind was allowed to interfere with these. The results have not been all that I could wish, or that some have expected, yet they have been beyond anything expected or contemplated at the beginning of this period.

"For the friendship and co-operation shown I would here return thanks. For my own shortcomings —including those for which I have been held rosponsible, whether mine or others—I ask forbearance. For the Board and all its interests and proper work, I ask the intelligent and hearty co-operation of all United Presbyterians. Let it have your favor. Do not burden it with debts to supply your libraries, and then attack it with jealousy and murderous criticisms, while crippling it with your dues unpaid from year to year. It has broken monopolies and cheapened your libraries. It furnishes a convenient medium for obtaining all needed books at a reduced rate. It has given you months, and some of you have taken years, of credit, for thousands of dollars, which you could not have had elsewhere. Then be kind, be just to your Board of Publication. It is doing your work. Help it; pray for it; commend it to others; pray for the right man to take charge of it; and pray for him when in charge of it. Let him know that he has something more than your criticism, your fault-finding—that you appreciate his efforts and his virtues, while recognizing his faults and imperfections."

—The Christian Instructor is especially severe on the publishers of Sabbath-school singing books; but there is much truth mingled with the severity. Read this:

"But the full demonstration of the spirit of Demetrius is to be found in those who, like him, are engaged in making shrines for use in the church. Whatever system of religion offers the most employment to artificers, will have the largest and most devoted number of hangers on; men who can make a living out of the church, or probably grow wealthy in manufacturing and bartering her merchandise. We see this exemplified in the department of Sabbath-school and musical literature. Men have grown rich in the publication of hymn-books; it has become a distinct branch of business. Thousands are engaged in manufacturing these shrines for —well, say worship, for charity sake. Let one raise his voice in a plea for a single and divine hymnal, and instantly the cry is raised, "Great is Diana of the Ephesians!" There is no copyright of the psalm-book."

—The same paper thinks the appointment of an elder from each church unsupplied with a pastor on the committee of supplies by the Mansfield, O., presbytery, looks like a step toward Congregationalism. Would it not sound better to drop the "ism" and say good sense?

BAPTIST.

—When the Second Baptist church at St. Louis was burned, the Hebrew Congregation Shaare Emieh placed their temple at the disposal of the Baptist society, who occupied it for many months. Having built a new church, on a recent Sunday the Christian congregation invited the Jewish congregation to worship with them. An immense crowd filled the church and thronged the street. After an organ voluntary, the reading of a psalm and the singing of a hymn, prayer was offered by Rabbi Sonnenscheim. The Baptist pastor made an address, at the conclusion of which he presented the Rabbi with a beautiful silver service. The Rabbi, in an eloquent reply, drew a graphic picture of the coming brotherhood of nations and of creeds, seeking the same God, and regarding each other as his children. Some parts and omissions in the service have aroused some of the St. Louis ministers to question the proceeding, and Dr. Boyd, the Baptist pastor finds some difficulty in clearing up the matter.

—The Baptist Weekly says that less than one half the Baptist churches of New York and New Jersey give anything for the support of the home and foreign missionary societies of the denomination.

UNITED BRETHREN IN CHRIST.

—A new denominational bookstore has been started in Harrisburg, Pa. Arrangements have been made to supply the church literature to the trade on the same terms as from Dayton. The Itinerant urges that the "ministers and people rally to the support of this worthy enterprise, and make it the headquarters of the eastern portion of the church."

—The Pacific Telescope prints a portrait of Rev. Daniel Shuck, the first bishop sent by the U. B. General Conference to the Pacific coast and who has more recently spent several years there.

—The same paper is giving part of its space to a discussion of Oddfellowship by two members of the church, one of whom renounced the order honestly when he was admitted, but the other yet defends the order, holding his membership in abeyance while he is known as one of the United Brethren.

MASONIC RELIGIONS.

—Max Mueller says: "Though 110,000,000 of human souls profess Brahminism, I do not shrink from saying that their religion is dying or dead."

—In France there are fifty unauthorized Roman orders which possess a total of 398 houses and 7,414 members. The most numerous order is that of the Jesuits, who have sixty houses and 1,497 members. The Capuchins have thirty-one houses and the Franciscans twenty-six.

—The American Messenger says: We have strange news from India that Colonel Olcott, who went with others from New York last December to further relations between the Theosophical Society and the Arya Samaj, has been offered by wealthy natives in Bombay a tabernacle in which he might conduct a revival of Buddhism. If this offer is accepted it will be a sad sight—an American citizen preaching heathenism in one of the great cities of India!

—Rev. Dr. Dean of Bangkok, Siam, writes to the Baptist Missionary Magazine of a heathen idol in human form in a temple there, 177 feet long, covered with gold from his crown to his toes, each of which is three feet long. There are hundreds of other temples in that city alone with their mammoth costly images and daily service. Heathen idolatry costs money, which is freely given.

—It was recently said that no new heathen temples were now building in Northwestern India, but a Presbyterian missionary writes home that the people are "still mad on their idols: almost every house has them; new temples are constantly being built in honor of these idols, and the religious bathing-places and assembly grounds are crowded." The Presbyterian converts in a province having a population of 7,000,000, number 300.

The American Book Exchange, beside the convenient and beautiful edition of Chambers "Encyclopedia of English Literature," publish several other works of standard merit. Among them is an "Encyclopedia of Universal Knowledge" in 20 volumes, 18,000 pages, all for $10.00, and said to be equal in all respects to any encyclopedia heretofore sold for several times that amount. Smith's Bible Dictionary, one of the best and most popular books of its kind, and Cruden's Concordance, unabridged, they sell at the remarkable price of $1.00. Sabbath-school teachers should avail themselves of this last offer. Rollin's Ancient History at $2.25, and Josephus' complete works at $2.00, are works just issued in large, fine type, strongly bound; also Robinson Crusoe for 55 cts. and Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress for 50 cts., in beautiful type and elegant binding. These books will be sent for the prices above, postage added, on application to the American Book Exchange, 55 Beekman St., New York.

A FEAT IN ENGINEERING.—Owing to the immense weight that they sustain, the iron shoes in which rest two of the spans of the railroad bridge at Easton, Pa., lately sunk about an inch, throwing the bridge out of grade. As it was certain that the depression would continue, from the fact that the inside masonry of the pier is less solid than the outside, an iron casting, weighing 7,000 pounds was recently successfully placed under the spans, in order to elevate them. The spans weigh 180 tons each. Hydraulic jacks were used. The spans were raised, the masonry redressed, the castings placed in position, and the spans lowered without the stoppage of a single train.

News of the Week.

—Many cases of sun-stroke were recorded early last week throughout the country. The thermometer was at 95 deg. in the shade in this city, while in New York, Milwaukee, and several other points an extreme temperature of 102 deg. was marked.

—Among the wheat transactions last week in New York was the sale of a lot of 1,000,000 bushels of No. 2 Chicago and Milwaukee spot wheat, to arrive soon. It will be taken to the United Kingdom. This is one of the largest lots ever exported, and the sale involves $1,120,000. It caused considerable discussion on the Produce Exchange, because this is the second time within ten days that such an amount has been sent abroad.

—A bad state of affairs is said to exist in the Northern or Bradford oil district of Pennsylvania; the tankage is already exhausted; not less than 7,000 barrels of crude petroleum are daily going to waste for want of storage; the production is so greatly in excess of the consumption that there is no call for the product. The Standard Oil company has commenced buying at 5 cents per barrel below the prices current in the Oil Exchange. The outlook for the oil country generally is thus gloomy.

—Lately a singular disease appeared among the girls employed in a tobacco factory in Jersey City. One of the girls, aged 19, began to complain of a terrible pain in her side. She fell to the floor unconscious, and after being taken home was seized with violent convulsions. Thirty of her companions were also taken sick. The physicians are giving the case their attention.

—The brig Shasta, bound to Chester, Pa., arrived in great distress twelve miles below Philadelphia, last week. Of nine men on board seven were down with yellow fever. Four deaths have occurred, the captain being among the number.

—Advices received from Cape Town, Africa, to July 1, by way of Madeira, announce that an envoy from Cetewayo reached Fort Napoleon on the 26th of June, bearing peace proposals and five tusks of ivory as a present. He wished to stop the advance of the second division, but was informed that peace proposals must be made to Lord Chelmsford, and that the advance would only be postponed on condition that former demands were acceded to.

—Energetic measures have been taken for suppressing opium in the province of Hupeh, China. The smoking dens have been closed, the opium shops abolished, and poppies rooted up throughout the farm districts. The provincial authorities pay the growers a small gratuity for every plant destroyed.

—Galt's News Letter, published at Kingston, Jamaica, in its issue of July 3, says: "We learn by the steamer Jamaican, that arrived here yesterday from Port Au Prince, that in consequence of a dispute in the House of Representatives, the brother of the President was shot by another member who took offense at language that had been used. M. Canal, though wounded in the arm, returned the fire and shot his opponent. There was then general firing in the house, and the populace and police outside fired into the building. The President of the Senate with others were shot down, and when the Jamaican left for this port the government troops were raking the streets with mitrailleuse."

The same paper in its issue of July 8, says: "By the arrival of the steamer Etna, from Port Au Prince, on Sunday, we learn that a serious fire occurred at that place Monday, the 30th ult. The fire originated from the discharge of shells in the town. Several blocks of buildings were burned, a number of lives lost, and many persons wounded, the inhabitants having taken refuge in the hills. A widespread revolution was considered imminent."

When the Etna left Port Au Prince the custom house was closed and all business suspended, and the place was still burning.

—A Roumanian dispatch announces that the Ministers have tendered their resignations, and the Chamber of Deputies immediately assembled for consultation. Previous dispatches stated the Ministers could not secure a majority in favor of the emancipation of the Jews which the powers urgently demand as a condition to their recognizing the independence of Roumania. It is believed if the Jews are not emancipated, Austria, Russia and Turkey, who have already recognized the independence of Roumania by appointing representatives at Bucharest, will recall them. It is feared any further attempt to coerce Roumania might be the commencement of renewed complications in Eastern affairs.

—A circular has been addressed to the bishops throughout the Catholic world, calling on them to promote a monster clerical pilgrimage to Rome for the next feast of the Epiphany.

—The Bonapartists of France have secured a new figurehead. Prince Jerome, who has all along been an avowed Republican, accepts the doubtful honor. A Paris dispatch says that a meeting of the party of appeal to the people (Bonapartist) Saturday adopted a resolution declaring that by the death of the Prince Imperial, Prince Jerome Bonaparte became the head of the Bonaparte family. It also decided to adhere to the plebiscitary principle. Another Paris special states that Prince Jerome Napoleon expressed great satisfaction when the resolution adopted by the meeting of Bonapartists was communicated to him.

—A correspondent at Berlin repeats the report there, that in consequence of the dubious future of parliamentary life in Germany, several liberals, including Von Benningsen, are preparing to retire to private life. The key of Bismarck's present policy toward the Vatican will be found in a recent speech, in which he said it was praiseworthy, under certain circumstances, to fight a quarrel out to the bitter end, but when ways and means presented themselves of toning down the asperbity of the conflict without affecting the principle at stake, he would not deem himself justified in neglecting such a proffered opportunity. In consequence of the retirement of Dr. Falk from the Ministry of Ecclesiastical Affairs, the ecclesiastical laws have been enforced with more leniency, and this may ultimately have the effect of procuring the recognition of the ecclesiastical laws by the Vatican.

Home and Farm.

Look at your Tongue.

A man can never be well or happy if his stomach is out of order; and dyspepsia, like hysteria, imitates the symptoms of innumerable disorders. But how, the reader may ask, can I tell whether the illness from which I think I am suffering be real or imaginary? At any rate, I should answer, look to your stomach first, and, pray, just take a glance at your tongue. If ever I was so far left to myself as to meditate some rash act, I should, before going into the matter, have a look at my tongue. If it was not perfectly clear and moist, I should not consider myself perfectly healthy, nor perfectly sane, and would postpone my proceedings, in the hope that my worldly prospects would get brighter. What does a physician discover by looking at the tongue? Many things. The tongue sympathizes with every trifling ailment of body or mind, and more especially with the state of the stomach. That thin, whitish layer all over the surface most likely indicates indigestion. A patchy tongue shows that the stomach is very much out of order indeed. A yellow tongue points to biliousness. A creamy, shivering, thick, indented tongue tells of previous excesses; and I do not like my friends to wear such tongues, for I sincerely believe that real comfort cannot be secured in this world by any one who does not keep his feet warm, his head cool, and his tongue clean.—The Family Doctor.

The largest cultivated wheat farm on the globe is said to be the Grondin farm, not far from the town of Fargo, Dakota. It embraces some 40,000 acres, both government and railway land, and lies close to the Red river. Divided into four parts, it has dwellings, granaries, machine shops, elevators, stables for 200 horses, and room for storing 1,000,000 bushels of grain. Besides the wheat farm, there is a stock farm of 20,000 acres. In seeding time, 70 to 80 men are employed, and during harvest 250 to 300 men. Seeding begins about April 9th and continues through the month, and is done very systematically, the machines following one another around the field, some four rods apart. Cutting begins about August 8th, and ends the fore part of September, succeeded by the threshing, with eight steam threshers.

Do not Burn a Horse's Hoof.—The Mirror and Farmer says: Never have a red-hot shoe put on the foot of a horse to burn it level. If you can find a blacksmith that is mechanic enough to level the foot without red-hot iron, employ him. The burning process deadens the hoof and tends to contract it. If you do not believe it, try a red-hot poker on your nail, and see if it does not prevent the growth.

Paralysis in Pigs.—Pigs are frequently subject to a partial paralysis of the nerves of the lumbar region, by which motion of the hind-quarters is rendered difficult or impossible. It sometimes results from inflammation of the covering membrane of the spinal cord, caused by exposure to cold. The remedy is to rub turpentine or mustard paste upon the loins, and to give a teaspoonful of saltpetre in the food once a day. Dry pens and protection from rains in the hot season are the best preventatives.

Cure for Colic in Animals.

A correspondent of the Massachusetts Ploughman gives the following cure for colic in horses, which is convenient at all times and easily applied. He says he has never known it to fail: Spread a teacupful, or more, of fine salt on the back of the animal over the kidneys and loins, and keep it saturated with warm water for twenty or thirty minutes, or longer if necessary. If the attack is severe, drench with salt water. I have a valuable bull, weighing nineteen or twenty hundred, which had a severe attack of colic a year ago last summer. I applied salt to his back as above, and it being difficult to drench, we put a wooden bit in his mouth, keeping it open about two inches, and spread salt upon his tongue, which, together with the salt upon his back, relieved him at once, and within a very short time equilibrium appeared fully restored. I have for several years past successfully applied this treatment to other animals in my herd.

A Long Procession.

"One hundred and fifty million bushels of grain at a single port!" Some striking figures are represented in the report of grain receipts at New York city alone. Reducing the 4,675,275 barrels of flour to its grain equivalent, and we find that during 1878 the canal and railroads delivered at this port no less than 149,270,128 bushels of grain of all kinds, against 98,637,058 bushels in 1877, a gain in round numbers of 50,000,000, or fifty per cent.!—a strong confirmation of our statements from time to time of the great crops of 1878. But few persons can have any adequate idea of even one million bushels. Here is a help to one's conception: Load this 150,000,000 bushels upon wagons, thirty bushels to each; arrange them in line, giving each team about 26 1 2 feet, and the line of teams carrying this grain would extend 25,000 miles, or clear around the world!—Agriculturist.

To make Something Good out of Corn Meal.—One cup of sour cream, one-half teaspoonful of the best soda, one-half cup of butter, one cup of sugar, three eggs, two-thirds cup of rye flour and meal enough to stir to a conveniently stiff batter, the seasoning prepared by the maker, steam until done and then place in a moderately hot oven long enough to dry.

Fit for a King.—Put a pint and a half of milk on to boil in a thoroughly clean saucepan; sweeten and flavor it with some orange flower water, or any other essence. Beat up the whites of eight eggs until they are quite firm and crisp like snow. Put a tablespoonful at a time into the boiling milk, turning them after a few seconds. Arrange on a pyramid on a deep dish. Let the milk get cool, then make a custard with the yolks, and pour round. The whites should be beaten in a cold place.

Ants.—To keep black ants out of the sugar barrel, draw a big mark with common chalk around the barrel, and the work is done. The small red ants (a real pest) are easily banished by a free use of cayenne pepper placed and blown into their resorts.

Discussion on Secret Societies,

By Elder M. S. NEWCOMER, and Elder G. W. WILSON.

This discussion was first published in a series of articles in the Church Advocate and afterward in pamphlet form. The Evangelical Repository reviewing it says; "This pamphlet consists of a series of articles originally published in the Church Advocate, Lancaster, Pa.

Elder M. S. Newcomer, opposes Secret Societies and especially Freemasonry, and Elder G. W. Wilson defends the system. We are free to say that Mr. Newcomer has thoroughly routed his opponent at every point. Mr. Wilson speaks by the book as he is a Royal Arch Mason."

Those who wish to know the character of Freemasonry, as shown by its own publications, will find many standard works in the following list.

No sensible Mason dares deny that such men as Albert G. Mackey, the great Masonic Lexicographer, and Daniel Sickels, the Masonic author and publisher, are the highest Masonic authority in the United States.

All the books advertised here are used by Masons, but Duncan's Ritual, Allyn's Ritual and Richardson's Monitor, are not publicly acknowledged as Masonic authority, because they tell too much.

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

BY PRESIDENT CHARLESS G. FINNEY, OF OBERLIN, OHIO

This is a most powerful argument against the Lodge by a truly great and good man who when a young man just before beginning the study of the law and before his convertion, was drawn into this Anti-Christian institution, and as he says on page seven "became a BRIONT Mason." On the same page he says; "I was completely converted from Freemasonry to Christ." The most of this book was first published in a series of articles in the Independent which created such excitement that the publishers refused to insert the rest of the articles.

This book has already opened the eyes of multitudes to the evils of Freemasonry.
